So she stode vp, and deckte herself with hir apparell, and wente in, and stode before him. And Holofernes hert was whole moued, so that he brent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: drynke now and sytt downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Iudith: Syr, I wil drynke, for my mynde is meryer to daye, than euer it was in all my life. And she toke and ate and dranke before him, the thinges that hir mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dranke more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his life.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A NOW when it was late in the night, his seruauntes made haist, euery mā to his lodginge. And Vagao shutt the chamber dores, and wente his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne.<sup>a</sup> So was Iudith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes, he laye vpon the bed all droncken, and of very dronkenness fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Iudith hir mayden, to stōde without before the dore, and to wayte. And Iudith stode before the bed, makynge her prayer with teares, and moued hir lippes secretly, and sayde. Strength me O LORDE God of Israel, and haue respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp thy cite of Ierusalem, like as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I maye perfourme the thinge, which I haue deuyd thorow the beleue that I haue in the.

33 And whan she had spoken this, she wente to the bedsteade, and lōwsd the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drew it out. Then toke she holde of the hairie lockes of his heade, and sayde: Strength me o LORDE God in this houre, and with that, she gaue him two strokes vpon the neck, and smote of his heade. Then toke she the canapy awaye, and rolled the deed body asyde. Immediately she gat her forth, and delyuered the head of Holofernes vnto hir mayden, and bad hir put it in hir walett.

And so these two wente forth together after their custome, as though they wolde praye, and so passed by the hoost, and came thorow the valley vnto the porte of the cite. And Iudith cried afarre of vnto f watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And whan they herde hir voyce, they called the elders of the cite together. And they came all to mete her, litle t greate, yonge t olde, for they thought not that she shulde haue come so soone. So they lighted candels, and gathered aboute hir euerichone: but she wente vp in to an hye place, and caused sylence to be proclaimed.

C Whan euery man now helde his tonge, Iudith sayde: O prayse the LORDE oure God, for he hath not despysed, ner forsaken them, that put their trust in him: and in me his honde mayden he hath perfourmed his mercy, which he promysed vnto the house of Israel: yee in my hāde this same night hath he slayne the enemy of his people.

And with that she toke forth the heade of Holofernes out of the walett, and shewed it them, sayenge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Assiriās, and this is the canapy, wherin he laye in his dronkenness: where the LORDE oure God hath slayne him by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the LORDE lyueth, his angell hath kepte me, goinge thither, remayninge there, and commynge hither agayne from thence. And the LORDE hath not suffred me his handmayden to be defyled, but without eny fylthynes of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: t f with greate victory, so that I am escaped, and ye delyuered. O geue thanks vnto him euerychone, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.<sup>b</sup>

So they praysed the LORDE altogether, and gaue thākes vnto him. And to her they sayde: The LORDE hath blessed the in his power, for thorow the he hath brought oure enemies to naught. D

And Ozias f chefe ruler of the people of Israel, sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the LORDE the hye God, aboue all wemen vpon earth.

Blessed be the LORDE the maker of heauen and earth, which hath gyded f a right to wounde and to smyte of the heade of the captayne of oure enemies. For this daye he hath made thy name so honorable, that thy prayse shall neuer come out of the mouth of mē, which shal all waye remembre f power of the LORDE: seinge thou hast not spared thine owne self, but put the in ieoperdy, consideringe the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped their fall before God oure LORDE. And all the people sayde: Amē, Amen.

Achior also was called, t he came. Then sayde Iudith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto whō thou gauest wytnes, that he wolde be auenged of his enemies, euen he hath this night thorow my hande smytē of the head of all the vnfaithfull. And that thou mayest se that it so is, beholde, this is f heade of Holofernes, which in his presumptuous pryde despysed the God of the people of Israel, and threatened <sup>ſ</sup> with destruction, sayenge :

 "whan the people of Israel is takē, I shall cause the also to be stickte with the swerde.
 Whan Achior sawe Holofernes heade, he fell downe vpon his face to the grounde for very anguish & feare, so <sup>ſ</sup> he swowned withall.
 But after that he was come agayne to himself, he fell downe before her & prayed her, sayēge:
 Blessed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Iacob: for all the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israel because of the.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IUDITH saide vnto all the people: Brethren heare me, Styck vp this heade vpon oure walles, and whan the Sonne aryseth, take euery man his weapon, and fall out violently:
 not as though ye wolde go besyde them, but to renne vpon them with violence. Whan the spyes in the tētes se this, they shall of neces-site be cōpelled to fle backward, and to rayse vp their captayne to the battyll. So whā their captaynes come in to Holofernes paulion, and fynde the deed body wrapped in the bloude, fearfulness shall fall vpon them: and whan ye perceauē that they fle, folowe them without all care, for God shal delyuer them vnto you, to be destroyed.

Then Achior seynge the power of God which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from his Heithenish beleue, and put his trust in God, and let him self be circumcided: and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israel, he and all his posterite vnto this daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they stickte vp Holofernes heade vpon the walles, and euery man toke his weapon, and so they wente out with an horrible crye. Whan the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tēt, came before his chamber, and made a greate russzhinge to wake him vp, because they thought with the noyse to haue raised him.
 For there durst not one of the Assirians knocke, go in, ner to open.

But whan the captaynes and prynces and all the chefe in the kynge of the Assirians hoost came together, they saide vnto the chamberlaynes: Go youre waye in, and wake him vp, for the myse are crepte out of their holes,<sup>a</sup> and darre prouoke vs vnto battayll.

Then wente Vagao in to his chamber, C stode before the bed, and clapped with his handes, for he thought he had bene slepyng with Iudith.

But whā he had herkened perfectly with his eares, and coude perceauē no sterynge, he wente nyer to the bed, and lift it vp, and then sawe he the deed body of Holofernes lyenge there without a heade, weltred in his bloude vpon the earth. Then cried he with loude voyce, and with wepyngē rent his clothes, and wente in to Iudiths tent, and founde her not: And so he leapt out vnto the people, and sayde: one womā of <sup>ſ</sup> Lewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame.

For lo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde, and hath no heade.

Whan the chefe of the assirians hoost herde that, they rente their clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and tremblinge vpō them, so <sup>ſ</sup> theyr myndes were sore afrayed. And there was an exceedyngē greate crye in the whole hoost.

The xv. Chapter.

NOW whan all the hoost herde that A Holofernes was headed, their mynde and counsell fell from them: and soch a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defende them selues by flyenge awaye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe their heades, left all behynde them, and made haist to escape from the Hebrues: for they herde, that they were haistinge to come after with their weapons, and so they fled by the wayes of the felde, and thorow all the fote pathes of the dales.

And whan <sup>ſ</sup> children of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and wente downe with trōpettes, blowingē and makynge a greate crie after thē. As for the Assirians, they had no ordre, and kepte not thē selues together, but fled their waye. Neuerthelesse the children of Israel fell vpon them with one company and ordre, and discomfited as many as they might gett. And Osias sent messaungers vnto all the cities and cōtrees of Israel.

So all the regions and euery cite sent out B their best men after them in harnesse, & smote them with the swerde, tyll they came to y vttemost parte of their borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came in to the tētes of the Assirians, and toke all that they which were fled, had left behynde them, and so they founde greате good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia from the battayll, toke with them soch thinges as had bene theirs: there was no nōbre of the catell, and of all costly Iewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hiest, they were all made riche of the spoyles of them. And Ioachim the Hye prest at Ierusalē, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they might se Iudith.

C Now when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her with one voyce, sayenge: thou worshippe of the cite of Ierusalem, thou ioye of Israel, thou honoure of oure people, thou hast done manly, and thy hert is comforted, because thou hast loued clenlynes and chastyte, & hast knowne no man but thine owne huszbande: therfore hath the hāde of the LORDE comforted the, and blessed shalt thou be for euer. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it.

In thirtie dayes coude the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of the Assirians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had bene his specially, (whether it were of golde, of syluer, precious stones, clothinge and all ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Iudith. And all the people reioysed, both wemen, maydens, and yonge people, with pipes and harpes.

The xvi. Chapter.

A THEN sange Iudith this songe vnto the LORDE: Begynne vnto the LORDE vpon the tabrettes, singe vnto the LORDE vpon the cymbals. O syng vnto him a new songe of thankesgeuyng, be ioyfull and call vpon his name. "It is the LORDE that destroyeth warres, euen the LORDE is his name. Which hath pitched his tentes in the myddest of his people, that he might deliuer vs from the hande of all oure enemies. Assur came out of the mountaynes in the multitude of his strength. His people stopped the water brokes, and their horses couered the valleys.

He purposed to haue brēt vp my londe, and to slaye my yonge men with the swerde.

B He wolde haue caryed awaye my children and virgins in to captiuyte, but the allmightie LORDE hurte him, and deliuered him in to the handes of a woman, which brought him to confucion. For their mightie was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Titan that slew him, nether haue the greате giauntes sett them selues agaynst him: but Iudith the daughter of Merari with hir fayre bewtye hath discomfited him, and brought him to naught. "For she layed awaie hir widdowes garment, and put on the apparell of gladnesse in the reioysinge of the children of Israel. She anoynted hir face, and bounde vp hir hayre in an hooe, to begyle him. Hir slippers rauyshed his eyes, hir bewtye captiuated his mynde, "with the swerde smote she of his neck. The Persians were astonnyed at hir stedfastnesse, and the Medes at hir boldnes. Then howled the armyes of y Assirians, whan my symple appeared, drye of thyrst. The sonnes of the daughters haue pearced C them thorow, and slayne them as fugityue childrē: they perysed in the battayll, for the very feare of the LORDE my God. Let us syng a songe of thākesgeuyng vnto the LORDE, a new songe of prayse wyl we syng vnto oure God. LORDE, LORDE, thou art a greате God, mightie in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shulde serue the, "for thou spakest but the worde, & they were made: thou sente thy sprete, & they were created, and no man maye withstonde thy voyce. The mountaynes shal moue from the foundations with the waters, the stony rockes shal melt before the like waxe. But they that feare the, shal be greате with y in all thinges. Wo vnto the people that ryse vp against my generacion, for the allmightie LORDE wyl auenge him self of them, & in the daye of iudgmēt wyl he yset them. For he shall geue fyre & wormes in to their flesh, that they maye burne and fele it for euermore.

D After this it happened, that after the victory all the people came to Ierusalem, to geue prayse and thankes vnto the LORDE. And whā they were purified, they offred all their brent sacrifices and their promysed offerynges.

The xi. Chapter after the Latyn.

In this chapter is describyed the dreame of Mardocheus.

<sup>a</sup> MARDOCHEUS the sonne of Iair, the sonne of Semei, " $\hat{y}$  sonne of Cisei of  $\hat{y}$  trybe of Ben Iamin a Iew: which had his dwellynge in Susis, a man of greate reputaciō,  $\alpha$  excellent amonge all them that were in the kynges courte (Neuerthelesse he was one of the presoners, whom <sup>a</sup>Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilō had caried awaye from Ierusalem vnto Babilon with Iechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the seconde yeare of the raigne of greate Artaxerses in the first daye of  $\hat{y}$  moneth Nisan, had this Mardocheus soch a dreame: He thought he herde a greate tēpest, horrible thonderclappes, erthquakes,  $\alpha$  greate vprour in  $\hat{y}$  londe:  $\alpha$   $\hat{y}$  he sawe two greate dragōs, ready to fight one agaist another. Their crye was greate. At the which roaing and crye all Heithen were vp, to fight agaynst  $\hat{y}$  righteous people. And  $\hat{y}$  same daye was full of darcnes  $\alpha$  very vnclaire, full of trouble  $\alpha$  anguysh, yee a greate fearfulness was there in all the londe. The righteous were amased, for they feared  $\hat{y}$  plage  $\alpha$  euell  $\hat{y}$  was deuysed ouer thē,  $\alpha$  were at a poynte with them selues to dye. So they cried vnto God, and while they were cryenge, the litle well grew in to a greate ryuer  $\alpha$  in to many waters. And with  $\hat{y}$  it was daye,  $\alpha$  the sonne rose vp agayne. And  $\hat{y}$  lowly were exalted, and deuoured the glorious and proude.

Now whan Mardocheus had sene this dreame, he awoke, and mused stedfastly in his hert, what God wolde do: and so he desyred to knowe all the matter, and his mynde was there vpon vntyll the night.

The xij. Chapter.

In this chapter is declared, how Mardocheus vttereth the treason of the two seruantes agaynst the kynge, and therefore doth the kynge rewarde him.

AT the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Thares the kynges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But whan he herde their deuyce, and had diligently considered their ymaginacions, he perceaued that they wente aboute, to laye their cruell <sup>a</sup>handes vpon the kynge Artaxerses: and so he certified the kinge therof. Then caused the kynge to examen <sup>f</sup> two gelded with tormentes. And whan they had graunted it, they were put to death.

BThis the kynge caused to be put in <sup>f</sup> Cronicles for an euerlasting remembraunce, and Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kynge commaunded, that Mardocheus shulde do seruyce in the courte, and for this faithfulnessse of his, he gaue him a rewarde. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holden in greate honoure and reputation in the kynges courte, vnder-toke to hurte Mardocheus <sup>g</sup> his people, because of the two chamberlaynes that were put to death.

The xiiij. Chapter

The copie of the commaundement, which kige Artaxerses (by the entisinge of Amā) sent out in to all countres, for the destruction of the Iewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

THE greate kynge Artaxerses which <sup>a</sup>raigneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and seuen and twētye londes, sendeth his frendly salutation vnto all the prynces and debytes of the countrees, which be subiecte vnto his dominion. Whan I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my dominion, my mynde was not with crueltye and wronge to exalte myself by the reason of my power: but purposed with equitye allwaye and gentylnes, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction, and wholly to set them in a peaceable life, and therby to brynge my kingdome vnto tranquylite, that men might safely go thorow on euery syde, and to renue peace agayne, which all men desyre. Now whan I axed my councelers, how these thinges might be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellēt in wysdome, whose good wyll, trueth <sup>g</sup> faithfulness hath oft bene shewed <sup>g</sup> proued (which was also <sup>f</sup> pryncipall <sup>g</sup> next vnto <sup>f</sup> kige) Amā by name, which certified vs, how <sup>f</sup> in all lōdes there was crepte in a rebellious folke, <sup>f</sup> made statutes <sup>g</sup> lawes agaynst all other people, <sup>g</sup> haue allwaye despyed the proclaimed commaundementes of kynges: and how that for this cause it were not to be suffred, that soch rule shulde contynue by you <sup>g</sup> not to be put downe. Seinge now we perceauē the same, that this people alone are contrary vnto euery man, vsynge straunge and other maner of lawes, <sup>g</sup> withstonde oure statutes and doinges, and go aboute to stablish shrewd matters, that oure kyngdome shulde neuer come to good estate and stedfastnes: Therefore haue we commaūded, that all they that are appoynted in wrytinge and shewed vnto you by Aman (which is ordered and set ouer all oure busynes, and the most pryncipall next vnto the kynge, and in maner as a father) shal with their wiues <sup>g</sup> children be destroyed and rote out with the swerde of their enemies and aduersaries: <sup>g</sup> <sup>f</sup> there shalbe no mercy shewed, <sup>g</sup> no man spared. And this shalbe done <sup>f</sup> xiiij. daye of the moneth called Adar) of this yeare, that they which of olde (and now also) haue euer bene rebellious, maye in one daye with violence be thrust downe in to the hell, to the intēt that after this maner, oure empyre maye haue peace and tranquylite.

But Mardocheus thought vpon all the workes and noble actes of <sup>f</sup> LORDE, <sup>g</sup> made his prayer vnto him, sayenge: O LORDE LORDE, thou valeaunt and allmightie kynge (for all thinges are in thy power, and yf thou wilt helpe and delyuer Israel, there is no mā that can withstōde ner lett the: for thou hast made heauen <sup>g</sup> earth, and what wonderous thinge so euer is vnder the heauen: thou art LORDE of all thinges, and there is no man, <sup>f</sup> can resist the O LORDE) Thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest LORDE, that it was nether of malyce, ner presumpcion, ner for eny desyre of glory, that I wolde not bowe downe myself ner worshippe yonder proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene cōtent, and <sup>f</sup> with good wyll, yf it might haue done Israel eny good, to haue kyst euē his fotesteppes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not sett the honour of a mā in the steade of the glorye of God, and because I wolde worshipe none but onely ȝ my LORDE. And this haue I done in no pryde ner presumption.

32 And therefore O LORDE thou God and kinge, haue mercy vpon thy people for they ymagyn how they maye bringe vs to naught, yee their mynde and desyre is to destroye and to ouerthrowe the people, that hath euer bene thine inheritaunce of olde. O despyse not thy porciō, which thou hast deliuered & brought out of Egipte for thine owne self. Heare my prayer, and be mercifull vnto thy people, whō thou hast chosen for an heretage vnto thyself. Turne oure complaynte and sorow in to ioye, that we maye lyue O LORDE, and prayse thy name. O LORDE, suffre not ȝ mouthes of them that praise the, to be destroyed.

All ȝ people of Israel in like maner cried as earnestly as they coude vnto the LORDE, for their death and destruccion stode before their eyes.

The xiiiij. Chapter.

Of the sorowe, complaynte and prayer of quene Hester.

33 QUENE Hester also beyng in the battayll of death, resorted vnto the LORDE, layed awaye hir glorious apparell, and put on the garmētes that serued for sighinge and mournynge. In the steade of precious oyntment, she scatred ashes and dōge vpon hir heade: and as for hir body, she humbled it, and brought it very lowe, All the places where she was wōte to haue ioye afore, those fylled she with ȝ hayre, ȝ she plucte out herself. She prayed also vnto the LORDE God of Israel with these wordes:

O my LORDE, thou onely art oure kynge, helpe me desolate womā, which haue no helper but ȝ, for my misery and destruccion is harde at my hande. Fro my youth vp I haue herde "out of the kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amōge all people (and so haue oure fathers of their fore elders) that they shulde be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, and loke what thou didest promise thē, thou hast made it good vnto thē.

Now well LORDE, we haue synned before B the, <sup>a</sup>therefore hast thou geuen vs in to the hādes of oure enemies, because we worshipped their goddes. LORDE thou art righteous. Neuertheles it satisfieth thē not, that we are in bytter and heuy captiuyte and oppressed amonge them, but thou hast layed their hondes vpon the hondes of their goddes: so that they begynne to take awaye, the thinge that thou with thy mouth hast ordered and appoynted: to destroye thyne inheritaunce, to shut and to stoppe ȝ mouthes of them that prayse the, to quēch the glory and worshipe of thy house and thine aulter, and to open the mouthes of the Heithen, ȝ they maye prayse the power & vertue of the goddes, and to magnifie the fleshly kynge for euer.

O LORDE, geue not thy cepter vnto thē C that be nothinge, lest they laugh vs to scorne in oure misery and fall: but turne their deuyce vpō them selues, and punysh him, that hath begonne the same ouer vs, and set him to an example. Thinke vpon vs O LORDE, and shew thy self in ȝ tyme of oure distres and of oure trouble. Strength me O thou kynge of goddes, thou LORDE of all power, geue me an eloquēt<sup>e</sup> and pleasaunt speach in my mouth before the Lyon. Turne his hert in to ȝ hate of oure enemye, to destroye him, and all such as consent vnto him. But deliuer vs with thy hande, and helpe me desolate woman, which haue no defence ner helper but onely ȝ. LORDE thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest that I loue not the glory and worshipe of the vnrighteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircūcyded and of all Heithen.

Thou knowest and wotest my necessite, ȝ D I hate the token of my preemynence & worshipe, which I beare vpon my heade, what tyme as I must shew my self and be sene, & that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, and that I weere it not whā I am quyet and alone by my self. Thou knowest also that I thy honde mayden haue not eaten at Amās table, and that I haue had no pleasure ner delyte in the kynges feast, that I haue not dronke the drynkofferings, and that I thy honde mayden haue had no ioye sens ȝ daie that I was brought hither vnto this daye: but onely in the O LORDE. The rv. Chapter.

Queene Hester appeareth before the kynge, with an heuy hert for the trouble of hir people, and God turneth the kynges hert.

AND vpon  $\hat{y}$  thirde daye it happened, that Hester<sup>a</sup> layed awaye  $\hat{y}$  mournynge garmētes, and put on hir glorious apparell, and decte herself goodly (after that she had called vpon God, which is the beholder  $\tau$  Sauoure of all thinges) toke two maydes with her: vpon the one she leane<sup>d</sup> hir self, as one  $\hat{y}$  was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of hir vesture. The shyne of hir bewtye made hir face rose coloured. The similitude of hir face was chearfull and amiable, but hir hert was soroufull for greate feare. She wente in thorow all the dores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sat vpon the trone of his kingdome, and was clothed in his goodly araye, all of golde, and sett with precious stones, and he was very terribble. He lift vp his face, that shone in the clearens, and loked grymly vpon her. Then fell the Queene downe, was pale and faynt, leane<sup>d</sup> hir self vpon the heade of the mayde that wente with her.

Neuertheles God turned  $\hat{y}$  kynges mynde, that he was gentle,<sup>b</sup> that he leape out of his seate for feare, and gat her in his armes,  $\tau$  helde hir vp tyll she came to herself agayne. He gaue her louynge wordes also,  $\tau$  sayde vnto her: Hester, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalt not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the comons, not the. Come nye. And with that he helde vp his golden wande, and layed it vpon hir neck, and embraced her frendly, and sayde: talke with me. Thē sayde she: I sawe the<sup>c</sup> (O lorde) as an angell of God,  $\tau$  my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clearesse. For excellent and wonderfull art thou (O lorde) and thy face is full of anyte. But as she was thus speakynge vnto him, she fell downe agayne for fayntnes: for the which cause the kynge was afraied, and all his seruantes comforted her.

The rvi. Chapter.

A copye of the commaundement, which kinge Artaxerses caused to be proclaimed in all the countrees of his domynion, for the wealth of the Iewes.

THE greate kynge Artaxerses, which raineth frō India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and xxvij. londes, sendeth vnto the prynces  $\tau$  rulers of the same londes, such as loue him, his frendly salutation. There be many, that for the sondrye frendshipes and benefites which are diuersly done vnto them for their worshipec, be euer  $\hat{y}$  more proude and hyc mynded, and vndertake not onely to hurte oure subiectes (for plenteous benefites maye they not suffre, and begynne to ymagin some thinge agaynst those that do them good, and take not onely all vnthankfulnes awaye fro men) but in pryde and presumption (as they that be vnmyndefull and vnthakfull for the good dedes) they go aboute to escape the iudgment of God,  $\hat{y}$  seyth all thinges, which (iudgment) hateth  $\tau$  punysheth all wickednes. It happeneth oft also,  $\hat{y}$  they which be set in office by the hyer power, and vnto whom the busynes and causes of the subiectes are comytte<sup>d</sup> to be handled, waxe proude, and defyle thē selues with sheddyng of innocent bloude, which bryngeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with false and disceatfull wordes and with lyenge tales, disceaue and betraye the innocent goodnes of prynces.

Now is it profitable and good, that we take hede, make search thereafter, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of olde, but the shamefull, vn honest, and noysome thinges, that the debites haue now taken in hande before oure eyes: and therby to be warre in tyme to come, that we maye make the kyngdome quyet  $\tau$  peaceable for all men, and that we might some tyme drawe it to a change: and as for  $\hat{y}$  thinge that now is present before oure eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the most frendly maner.

What tyme now as Aman the sonne of Amadathu  $\hat{y}$  Macedonayan<sup>d</sup> (a stranger verely of the Persians bloude, and farre from oure goodnes) was come in amōge vs as an aleaunt, and had optayned the frendshipe that we bearre towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hys honoure of euery man, as the next and pryncipall vnto the kynge, he coude not forbear him self from his pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure life.

C With manyfolde disceate also hath he desyred to destroye Mardocheus oure helper and preseruer, which hath done vs good in all thinges: and innocent Hester the like partaker of oure kyngdome, with all hir people. For his mynde was (whan he had takē them out of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persians vnto thē of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Iewes (which were accused of y wicked, y they might be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vse reasonable ⁊ right lawes, and that they be the children of the most Hye lyuyng God, by whom the kyngdome of vs and oure progenitours hath bene well ordred hither to. Wherefore, as for the letters and cōmaundementes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shal do well, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that set them vp and inuented thē, hangeth at Susis before the porte, with all his kinned, and God (which hath all thinges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruyng.

And vpon this ye shal publish and set vp D the copy of this letter in all places, that the Iewes maye frely and without hinderance holde them selues after their owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that vpō y xij. daye of y xij. moneth Adar they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of their anguysh and trouble wolde haue oppressed thē. For the God that governeth all thinges, hath turned to ioye, the daye wherin y chosen people shulde haue perished.

Morouer, amōge the hys solempne dayes that ye haue, ye shall holde this daye also with all gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good, for all soch as loue the prosperite of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruccion to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and lōdes that do not this, shal horribly perish and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be no more inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of y wilde beastes ⁊ foules.

The boke of Wysdome.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. I.

An exortaciō for iudges and rulers to loue wysdome. The sprete of wysdome hateth falsede, dissimulacion and Ypocrysie, rebuketh vnrighteousnesse and abhorreth wicked doers.

Chap. II.

The ymaginaciōs and thoughtes of the vngodly, how they geue thē selues ouer vnto synne, and persecute all vertue and trueth.

Chap. III.

The felicitye and health of godly people, though they be put here to trouble and heuynesse: Agayne, what sorow shall happen to the vngodly and their children.

Chap. IIII.

To lyue chaist & godly withall, is cōmendable. A dispraise of the wicked. The honoure of verteous age. The shamefull death of the vngodly.

Chap. V.

How the iust men shal stōde against the wicked, that haue put them here to trouble & what sorowe shall come vpon the vngodly. Agayne, what ioye shal happen to the righteous, which haue God himself for their defēce.

Chap. VI.

An exortacion vnto such as be in rule and aucto-rite, to receaue wysdome. A commēdacion of wysdome.

Chap. VII.

All men haue like intrāuce in to the worlde: yet who so calleth vpon God for wysdome, shal haue his desyre. The profit that cōmeth by wysdome passeth all other thinges.

Chap. VIII.

Wysdome shulde be receaued in youth. He that marieth himself vnto her, shall optayne loue of God and men.

Chap. IX.

A prayer vnto God for the gift of wysdome.

Chap. X.

What profit and good came by wysdome in the olde tyme.

Chap. XI.

How wysdome ledeth the righteous, & how the vngodly are punished thorow the mightie hande of God.

Chap. XII.

God is mercifull and suffreth longe, to the intent that synners shulde amende.

Chap. XIII.

Vayne are they that haue not the knowlege of the lyuyng God, but turne vnto the creatures: vnhappye are they that honoure ymages.

Chap. XIII.

The worshippinge of ymages. The power of God. Punyshment of them that make ymages, and of soch as worshipe them. How ymages came vp first. The honouringe of ymages is the cause, begynnyng, and ende of all myschefe.

Chap. XV.

The faithfull haue respecte vnto God and not vnto ymages.

Chap. XVI.

God punisheth the wicked, but defendeth the godly, & that by greate wonders.

Chap. XVII.

Of the greate darknesse in Egipte, and blyndnesse of the vngodly.

Chap. XVIII.

How God destroied the firstborne of Egipte. Gods people eate the easter lambe ioyfully, the Egiptians mourne. God punysheth the synners in the wilderness. Moses intreateth for the people.

Chap. XIX.

Like as the wicked are euer synnyng more and more, so doth the wrath of God neuer ceasse, tyll they be destroyed. Of them that were punished in the tyme of Loth.

The first Chapter.

A O SET youre affeccion vpō wysdome, ye that be iudges of the earth.<sup>a</sup> Haue a good opinion of the LORDE, & seke him in the synglenesse of hert.<sup>b</sup> For he will be foude of them that tempte him not, and appeareth vnto such as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they separate from God, but vertue (yf it be alowed,) refourmeth y vnwyse. And why? wysdome shall not entre in to a frowarde soule, ner dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy goost abhorreth fayned nurtoure, & withdraweth himself frō y thoughtes that are without vnderstandinge: & where wickednes hath the vpper hāde, he flieth from thence.<sup>c</sup> For the sprete of wysdome is lounge, gentle and gracious, and wil haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euell with his lippes. For God is a witnesse of his reynes, a true searcher out of his hert, and an hearer of his tonge.<sup>d</sup> For the sprete of y LORDE fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde, and y same that vpholdeth all thinges, hath knowledge also of the voyce.

B Therefore he that speaketh vnrighteous thinges, can not be hydd, nether maye he escape the iudgmēt of reprove. And why? inquisition shal be made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of his wordes shal come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punished. For the eare of gelousy heareth all thinges, and the noyse of the grudginges shal not be hydd. Therefore beware of murmuringe, which is nothinge worth, and refrayne youre tonge from slaūder.<sup>e</sup> For there is no worde so darck and secrete, that it shall go for naught: and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

C O seke not youre owne death in y erreure of youre life, destroye not youre selues thorow the workes of youre owne handes. For God hath not made death, nether hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they might haue their beyng: yee all the people of the earth hath he made that they shulde haue health, that there shulde be no destruccion in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shulde not be vpon earth (for righteousnesse is euerlastinge and immortall, but vnrighteousnes bringeth death.) Neuerthelesse, the vngodly call her vnto them both with wordes & workes, & whyle they thinke to haue a frende of her, they come to naught: for the vngodly that are confederate with her and take hir parte, are worthy of death.

The ij. Chapter.

FOR y vngodly talke & ymagin thus amonge them selues (but not right:)<sup>a</sup> The tyme of oure life is but short & tedious, & when a man is once gone, he hath nomore ioye ner pleasure, nether knowe we eny man y turneth agayne from death: for we are borne of naught, & we shal be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For oure breth is as a smoke in oure nostrels, & y wordes as a sparck to moue oure herte. As for oure body, it shalbe very aszshes y are quēched, & oure soule shal vanish as y soft ayre. Oure life shall passe awaye as y trace of a cloude, & come to naught as y myst y is dryuē awaye with the beames of y Sonne, & put downe with the heate therof. Oure name also shalbe forgotten by litle & litle, & no man shal haue oure workes in remembraunce.

For oure tyme is a very shadow y passeth awaye,<sup>b</sup> and after oure ende there is no returnynge, for it is fast sealed, so y no mā cōmeth agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye y pleasures y there are, & let vs soone vse y creature like as in youth. We wil fyll oure selues with good wyne & oymntment, there shal no floure of the tyme go by vs. We wil crowne oure selues with roses afore they be wythered. There shal be no fayre medowe, but oure lust shal go thorow it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptuousnes. Let vs leaue some token of oure pleasure in euery place, for y is oure porcion, els gett we nothinge. Let vs oppresse the poore righteous, let vs not spare the wyddowe ner olde man, let vs not regarde y heades y are gray for age. Let y lawe of vnrighteousnesse be oure auctorite, for y thinge y is feble is no-thinge worth. Therefore let vs defraude the righteous, & why? he is not for oure profit, yee he is cleane cōtrary to oure doinges. He checketh vs for offendinge agaynst y lawe, & slaundreth vs as transgressours of all nurture. He maketh his boost to haue  $\hat{y}$  knowledge of God, yee he calleth him self Gods sonne. He is the bewrayer of our thoughtes: <sup>a</sup> It greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his lyfe is not lyke other mens, his wayes are of another fashion. He counteth vs but vayne personnes, he withdraweth him self from oure wayes as from fylthynnes: he cōmendeth greatly  $\hat{y}$  latter ende of the iust,  $\tau$  maketh his boast  $\hat{y}$  God is his father. Let vs so then yf his wordes be true, let vs proue what shal come vpon him: so shal we knowe what ende he shal haue. For yf he be  $\hat{y}$  true sonne of God, <sup>b</sup> he will receaue him  $\tau$  delyuer him from the handes of his enemies. Let vs examine him with despitfull rebuke and tormentinge, that we maye knowe his dignite  $\tau$  proue his pacience. <sup>c</sup> Let vs condemne him with the most shamefull death: for like as he hath spoken, so shal he be rewarded.

Such thinges do the vngodly ymagyn,  $\tau$  go astraye, for their owne wickednes hath blynded them. As for the misteries of God, they vnderstonde them not: they nether hope for the rewarde of righteousness, ner regarde the worships that holy soules shall haue. For God created man to be vnderstroied, yee <sup>d</sup> after the ymage of his awne lickenesse made he him. <sup>e</sup> Neuerthelesse thorow enuye of the deuell came death in to the worlde, <sup>f</sup> and they that holde of his syde, do as he doth.

The iij. Chapter.

BUT the soules of  $\hat{y}$  righteous are in  $\hat{y}$  hande of God, <sup>g</sup>  $\tau$   $\hat{y}$  payne of death shal not touch thē. <sup>h</sup> In  $\hat{y}$  sight of  $\hat{y}$  vnwyse they appeare to dye,  $\tau$  their ende is takē for very destruccion. The waye of the righteous is iudged to be vtter destruccion, but they are in rest. And though they suffre payne before men, <sup>i</sup> yet is their hope full of immortallite. They are punished but in few thinges, neuerthelesse in many thinges shal they be well rewarded. For God proueth them,  $\tau$  fyndeth thē mete for himself: yee as the golde in the fornace doth he trye them,  $\tau$  receaueth them as a brentofferinge, and when  $\hat{y}$  tyme commeth they shalbe looked vpon.

The righteous shal shyne as the sparkes  $\hat{y}$  renne thorow the rede buszshe. <sup>j</sup> They shal iudge the nacions,  $\tau$  haue dominion ouer  $\hat{y}$  people,  $\tau$  their LORDE shal raigne for euer. They  $\hat{y}$  put their trust in him, shal vnderstonde the trueth, and such as be faithfull, wil agree vnto him in loue: for his chosen shal haue giftes  $\tau$  peace. <sup>k</sup> But the vngodly shalbe punyshed accordinge to their awne ymaginaciōs, for they haue despyed the righteous,  $\tau$  forsaken the LORDE.

Who so despyseth wysdome  $\tau$  nurture, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of soch, it is but vayne, their labours vnfrutefull, and their workes vnprofitable. Their wyues are vndiscrete, and their childrē most vngodly. Their creature is cursed. Blessed is rather  $\hat{y}$  baren  $\tau$  vndefyled, which hath not knowne the synfull bedd: she shall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is  $\hat{y}$  gelded, <sup>l</sup> which with his handes hath wrought no vnrighteousnesse, ner ymagined wicked thinges agaynst God. For vnto him shal be geuen  $\hat{y}$  speciall gift of faith, and the most acceptable porcion in  $\hat{y}$  temple of God. For glorious is the frute of good labour,  $\tau$  the rote of wysdome shall neuer fade awaye. As for  $\hat{y}$  childrē of adoutrers, they shal come to an ende  $\tau$  the sede of an vnrighteous bedd shal be rote out. And though they lyue lōge, yet shal they be nothinge regarded,  $\tau$  their last age shalbe without honoure. Yf they dye haistely, they haue no hope, nether shal they be spoken to in the daye of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnrighteous.

The iiij. Chapter.

OHOW fayre is a chaist generacion with vertue? The memoriall therof is immortal, for it is knowne with God and men. When it is present, mē take exāple thereat: and yf it go awaye, yet they desyre it. It is allwaie crowned  $\tau$  holden in honoure,  $\tau$  wyneth  $\hat{y}$  rewarde of the vndefyled battayll. But the multitude of vngodly childrē is vnprofitable, and the thinges  $\hat{y}$  are planted with whordome, shal take no depe rote, ner laye eny fast foundation, <sup>m</sup> Though they be grene in the branches for a tyme, yet shal they be shakē with the wynde: for they stonde not fast,  $\tau$ thorow the vehemence of the wynde they shalbe roted out. For the vnparfecte braunches shalbe broken, their frute shalbe vnprofitable & sower to eate, yee mete for nothinge. And why? all the children y are borne of the wicked, must beare recorde of the wickednesse agaynst their fathers & mothers, when they be axed. But though the righteous be ouertaken with death, yet shal he be in rest.

B Age is an honorable thinge: neuertheles it stondeth not only in the lenth of tyme, ner in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wysdome is the graye hayre, and an vndeified life is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amōg synners, he traslated him. Yee sodely was he taken away, to the intent y wickednesse shulde not alter his vnderstōdinge, & y ypocrisie shulde not begyle his soule. For y craftie bewitchinge of lyes make good thinges darck, y vnstedfastnesse also & wickednes of voluptuous desyre, turne asyde y vnderstōdinge of y symple. Though he was soone deed, yet fulfilled he moche tyme. For his soule pleased God, therefore haisted he to take him away frō amōg y wicked. This the people se, & vnderstode it not: they laye not vp soch thinges in their hertes, how y y louynge fauoure & mercy of God is vpō his saintes, & y he hath respecte vnto his chosen.

C Thus y righteous y is deed, cōdemneth the yngodly which are lyuinge: & y youth y is soone brought to an ende, y lōge life of y vnrighteous. For they se y ende of y wyse, but they vnderstode not what God hath deuysed for him, & wherfore y LORDE hath taken him a waie. And why? they se him & despyse him, therefore shall God also laugh thē to scorne: So y they thē selues shal dye here after (but without honoure) yee in shame amōg y deed for euermore. For without eny voyce shal he burst those y be puft vp, & remoue the frō y foundations, so y they shalbe laied waist vnto the hyst. They shal mourne, and their memoriall shall perishe. So they beyng afraied shall remembre their synnes, and their owne wickednesse shal bewraye thē.

The b. Chapter.

A THEN shal y righteous stonde in greate stedfastnesse agaynst soch as haue dealt extremely with thē, & takē awaye their labours. When they se it, they shalbe vexed with horrible feare, & shal wonder at the haistynesse of y sodane health: groninge for very distresse of mynde, & shall saye within them selues (hauynge inwarde sorow, and mournynge for very angush of mynde):

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derision, & iested vpō. We fooles thought their life very madnesse, & their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are counted amonge the children of God, & their porcion is amonge the sayntes. Therefore we haue erred from the waye of trueth, y light of righteousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, and the Sōne of vnderstōdinge rose not vp vpō vs. We haue weired oure selues in y waye of wickednesse & destruccion. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the LORDE, we haue not knowne it.

What good hath oure pryde done vnto vs? B Or, what profit hath the pompe of riches brought vs? All those thinges are passed awaye like a shadowe, & as a messaunger rennyng before: as a shippe y passeth ouer the wawes of the water, which whan it is gone by, the trace therof can not be founde, nether y path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde y flyeth thorow y ayre, & no man can se eny token where she is flowen, but only heareth the noyse of hir wynges, beatinge the light wynde, partinge the ayre thorow the vehemēce of hir goinge, & flyeth on shakynge hir wynges, where as afterwarde no tokē of hir waye can be fōude. Or like as whē an arowe is shott at a marck, it parteth the ayre, which immediatly cōmeth together agayne, so that a man can not knowe where it wente thorow. Euen so we in like maner as soone as we were borne, beganne immediatly to drawe to oure ende: & haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure owne wickednesse.

Such wordes shal they that haue synned, C speake in the hell: for the hope of the yngodly is like a drye thistell floure (or dust) that is blowne awaye with the wynde: like as thynne scomme y is scatred abrode with the storme: like as y smoke which is dispersed here & there with the wynde, & as y remembrance of a straūger y tarieth for a daie, & thē departeth.

But y righteous shal lyue for euermore:

their rewarde also is with the LORDE, ⁊ their remembrance with the Hiest. Therefore shal they receaue a glorious kyngdome ⁊ a beutifull crowne of the LORDES hande: for with his right hande shal he couer the, ⁊ with his owne arme shall he defende the. His gelousy also shal take awaye the harnesse, and he shal wapē ⁊ creature to be anēged of ⁊ enemies. He shal put on righteousnes for a brest plate, ⁊ take sure iudgment in steade of an helmet. The invynceible shyld of equite shall he take, his cruell wrath shal he sharpē for a speare, ⁊ the whole compase of the worlde shall fight with him agaynst the vnwyse.

The shal the thonder boltes go out of ⁊ lighteninges, ⁊ come out of the rayne bowe of the cloudes to the place apoynted: out of the hard stony indignacion there shall fall thick hailes, ⁊ ⁊ water of ⁊ see shal be wroth agaynst the, ⁊ the floudes shal renne roughly together. Yee a mightie wynde shal stōde vp agaynst them, ⁊ a storme shall scatter the abroad. Thus the vnrighteous dealing of the shal bringe all the lōde to a wyldernes, ⁊ wickednes shall ouerthrowe the dwellings of the mightie.

The vi. Chapter.

WYSZDOME is better then strength,<sup>a</sup> ⁊ a mā of vnderstādinge is more worth the one ⁊ is strōge. Heare therefore (O ye kinges) ⁊ vnderstonde: O lerne ye ⁊ be iudges of the endes of the earth. Geue eare ye ⁊ rule ⁊ multitudes, ⁊ delite in moche people. For the power is geuē you of the LORDE,<sup>c</sup> ⁊ the strēgth from the Hiest: which shal trie youre workes and search out youre ymaginaciōs: How that ye beyng officers of his kyngdome, haue not executed true iudgment, haue not kepte the lawe of righteousnes, ner walked after his will. Horribly ⁊ that right soone shall he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgmēt shal they haue ⁊ beare rule. Mercy is graūted vnto the symple,<sup>d</sup> but they that be in auctorite shalbe sore punyshed. For God which is LORDE ouer all, shall excepte no mās personne, nether shal he stande in awe of eny mans greatnesse: for he hath made ⁊ small and greate, ⁊ careth for all alyke. But the mightie shal haue ⁊ sorer punyshmēt.

Vnto you therfore (o ye kinges) do I speake, ⁊ ye maye lerne wyszdome and not go amysse:

for they ⁊ kepe righteousnes shalbe righteously iudged: and they ⁊ are lerned in righteous thinges, shal finde to make answere. Wherefore set youre lust vpon my wordes, ⁊ loue the, so shal ye come by nourtoure. Wyszdome is a noble thinge, ⁊ neuer faydeth awaie: yee she is easely sene of the that loue her, ⁊ founde of soch as seke her. She preuēteth them ⁊ desyre her, ⁊ she maye first shewe herself vnto the. Who so awaketh vnto her by tymes, shal haue no greate trauayle, for he shal fynde her syttinge ready at his dores. To thinke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstandinge: ⁊ who so watcheth for her, shalbe safe, ⁊ that soone. For she goeth aboute, sekyng soch as are mete for her, sheweth her self cherefully vnto them in their goynges, ⁊ meteth them with all diligēce. For ⁊ vnfaigned desyre of reformation is hir begynnynge: to care for nourtoure is loue, and loue is the kepinge of hir lawes. Now the kepinge of ⁊ lawes is perfeccion ⁊ an vn corrupte life, ⁊ an vn corrupte life maketh a man familer with God. And so the desyre of wyszdome ledeth to ⁊ kingdome euerlastinge. If youre delyte be the in royall seates ⁊ cepters (o ye kynes of the people)<sup>e</sup> set youre lust vpon wyszdome, ⁊ ye maye raigne for euer more. O loue the light of wyszdome, all ye ⁊ be rulers of the people. As for wyszdome, what she is, and how she came vp, I wil tell you, and will not hyde the misteries of God from you: but wil seke her out from ⁊ begynnynge of the natiuite, and brynge the knowlege of her in to light, and wil not kepe back the trueth. Nether will I haue to do with cōsumynge enuye, for soch a man shal not be partaker of wyszdome. But the multitude of the wyse is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kyng is the vpholdinge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thorow my wordes, and it shal do you good.

The vii. Chapter.

I MYSELF also am a mortall man, like as all other, ⁊ am come of ⁊ earthly generaciō of him ⁊ was first made, ⁊ in my mothers wōbe<sup>f</sup> was I fashioned to be flesh: In the tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in bloude, thorow the sede of man, ⁊ the cōmodious appetite of slepe. When I was borne, I receaued like ayre as other men, ¶ fell vpon the earth (which is my nature) crienge & wepinge at the first, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadlinge clothes, & brought vp with greate cares. For there is no kinge y<sup>e</sup> hath had eny other begynnynge of byrth.<sup>a</sup> All men then haue one intraunce vnto life, & one goinge out in like maner.

33 Wherefore I desyred, and vnderstandinge was geuē me: I called, & the sprete of wysdome came in to me. I set more by her thē by kingdomes & royall seates, & counted riches nothinge in cōparison of her.<sup>b</sup> As for precious stone I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, & syluer shal be counted but claye before hir sight. I loued her aboue wel fare & beutie, & purposed to take her for my light, for hir shyne can not be quenched. All good thinges came to me with her, & innumerable riches thorow hir hādes. I was glad in thē all, for this wysdome wēte before me, & I knew not y<sup>e</sup> she is the mother of all good thinges. Now as I myself lerned vnfaignedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, & hyde her riches from no man: for she is an infinite treasure vnto men, which who so vse, become partakers of the loue & frendshipe of God, and are accepted vnto him for the giftes of wysdome.

¶ God hath graunted me to talke wysely, & conueniēty to hādle the thinges y<sup>e</sup> he hath graciously lent me. For it is he, y<sup>e</sup> ledeth vnto wysdome, & teacheth to vse wysdome aright. In his hāde are we & oure wordes: yee all oure wysdome, oure vnderstandinge & knowlege of all oure workes. For he hath geuē me y<sup>e</sup> true sciēce of these thinges: so that I knowe how y<sup>e</sup> worlde was made, & the powers of y<sup>e</sup> elemētes: y<sup>e</sup> begynnynge, endinge & myddest of y<sup>e</sup> tymes: how the tymes alter, how one goeth after another, and how they are fulfilled: y<sup>e</sup> course of the yere: the ordinaunces of the starres: the natures & kindes of beastes: the furiousnesse of beastes: the power of y<sup>e</sup> wyndes: the ymaginacions of mē: the deuersities of yonge plantes: the vertues of rootes, & all such thinges as are secreete & not looked for, haue I lerned. For the workmaster of all thinges hath taught me wysdome. In hir is y<sup>e</sup> sprete of vnderstādinge, which is holy, manifolde, one onely, sotyll, curteous, discrete, quyk, vndeified, playne, swete, louynge the thinge y<sup>e</sup> is good, sharpe, which forbyddeth not to do well, gētle, kynde, stedfast, sure, fre: hauynge all vertues, circūspecte in allthinges: receauinge all spretes of vnderstādinge beige cleane & sharpe. For wisdome is neemblem thē all neēble thīges: she goeth thorow & attayneth to all thīges, because of hir clenness. For she is y<sup>e</sup> breth of y<sup>e</sup> power of God, & a pure cleane expressinge of y<sup>e</sup> clearnes of Allnightie God. Therefore can no vndeified thinge come in to her: for she is y<sup>e</sup> bryghtnes of y<sup>e</sup> euerlastige light, y<sup>e</sup> vndeified myrroure of y<sup>e</sup> maiesty of God, & y<sup>e</sup> ymage of his goodnesse. And for so much as she is one, she maie do all thinges: & beinge stedfast herself she renueth all, & amōge y<sup>e</sup> people cōveyeth she herself in to y<sup>e</sup> holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes & prophetes: for God loueth no mā, but him in whō wysdome dwelleth. For she is more beutyfull then the Sonne, and geueth more light then the starres, and the daye is not to be cōpared vnto her: for vpō y<sup>e</sup> daye cōmeth night. But wickednesse can not ouercome wysdome, and foolishnes maye not be with her.

The viij. Chapter.

WYSZDOME reacheth frō one ende to another mightely, & louigly doth she orde all thinges. I haue loued her and laboured for her euē fro my youth vp: I dyd my diligēce to mary my self with her, soch loue had I vnto hir beutie. Who so hath y<sup>e</sup> cōpany of God, cōmēdeth hir nobilyte, yee the LORDE of all thinges himself loueth her. For she is y<sup>e</sup> scolemastresse of y<sup>e</sup> nurtoure of God, & y<sup>e</sup> choser out of his workes. Yf a man wolde desyre riches in this life, what is richer then wisdome, y<sup>e</sup> worketh all thīges? (Thou wilt saye:) vnderstādinge worketh. What is it amōge all thinges, y<sup>e</sup> worketh more thē wysdome? Yf a man loue vertue & righteousness, let him labour for wysdome, for she hath greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernes & prudence, righteousness & strēgh, which are soch thinges as mē can haue nothinge more profitable in their life. Yf a mā desyre moch knowlege, she cā tell y<sup>e</sup> thinges y<sup>e</sup> are past, & discerneth thinges for to come: she knoweth y<sup>e</sup> sotiltes of wordes, & cā expōnde darke sentēces. She can tell of tokēs & wōderous thinges, or euer they come to passe, & the endes of all tymes & ages. So I purposed after this maner: I will take her vnto my cōpany, & comō lougly with her: no doute she shal geue me good coucell, & speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulesnes & grefe. For hir sake shal I be well and honestly taken amōge the comōs & lordes of ſ counsell. Though I be yonge, yet shal I haue sharpe vnderstandinge: so ſ I shal be maruelous in ſ sight of greate mē, & ſ faces of prynces shal wōder at me. Whā I holde my tōge, they shal byde my leysure: whā I speake, they shal loke vpō me: & yf I talke moch, they shal laye their handes vpō their mouth. Morouer, by the meanes of her I shal optayne immortalite, and leaue behinde me an euerlastinge memoriall, amōge thē ſ come after me. I shal set ſ people in ordre, and the nacions shalbe subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes shal be afrayed, whan they do but heare of me: amōge the multitude I shal be counted good, & mightie in battayll. Whā I come home, I shal fynde rest with her: for hir cōpany hath no bytternes, & hir felashipe hath no tediousnesse, but myrth & ioye.

Now whan I cōsidered these thinges by myself, & pondered them in my hert, how ſ to be ioyned vnto wysdome is immortalite, & greate pleasure to haue hir frendshipe: how ſ in the workes of hir handes are infinite riches: how that, who so kepeth company with her shalbe wyse: and that he which talketh with her, shal come to honour: I wente aboute sekyng, to gett her vnto me. For I was a ladd of a rype wytt, and had a good vnderstandinge.

But whan I grewe to more vnderstādinge, I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheles whan I perceaued that I coude not kepe myself chaist, excepte God gaue it me (as ſ was a poynte of wysdome also, to knowe whose gift it was) I stepte vnto the LORDE, and besought him, and with my whole hert I sayde after this maner:

The ix. Chapter.

GOD of my fathers, & LORDE of mercies, (thou ſ hast made<sup>b</sup> all thiges with thy worde, & ordeyned mā thorow thy wysdome, ſ he shulde haue dominio<sup>c</sup> ouer ſ creature, which thou hast made: ſ he shulde ordre ſ worlde acordinge to equite & righteousness, & execute iudgmēt with a true hert) geue me wysdome, which is euer aboute thy seate, & put me not out frō amōge thy children: for I thy seruau<sup>c</sup>t & sonne of thy handmayden, am a feble personne, of a shorte tyme, and to yōge to the vnderstandinge of iudgment and ſ lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfecte amōge the children of men, yet yf thy wysdome be not with him, he shal be nothinge regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a kynge vnto thy people, and the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast cōmaunded me to buylde a temple vpon thy holy mount, & an aluter in the cite wherin thou dwellest: a licknesse of thy holy tabernacle which thou hast prepared frō the beginnyng, and thy wysdome with ſ, which knoweth thy workes: which also was with ſ whan thou maydest ſ worlde, & knew what was acceptable in thy sight, & right in thy commaundementes. O sende her out of thy holy heauens and from the trone of thy maiesty, that she maye be with me, & labour with me: that I maye knowe, what is acceptable in thy sight. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thinges: and she shal lede me soberly in my workes, and preserue me in hir power. So shal my workes be acceptable, & then shal I gouerne thy people righteously, & be worthy to syt in my fathers seate. For what man is he, that maye knowe the counsell of God? Or, who can thinke what the will of God is? For the thoughtes of mortall men are miserable, & oure forecastes are but vncertayne. And why? a mortall and corruptible body is heuy vnto the soule, and the earthy mansion kepeth downe the vnderstandinge ſ museth vpon many thinges. Very hardly can we discern the thinges that are vpon earth, and greate labour haue we, or we can fynde the thinges which are before oure eyes: Who will then seke out the groūde of the thinges that are done in heauē? Oh LORDE, who cā haue knowlege of thy vnderstandinge and meaninge, excepte thou geue wysdome and sende thy holy goost frō aboue? that the wayes of them which are vpon earth maye be reformed: ſ men maye lerne ſ thinges that are pleasaunt vnto the, and be preserued thorow wysdome.

The x. Chapter.

A WYSZDOME preserved  $\text{ȝ}$  first mā, whō God made<sup>a</sup> a father of the worlde, whā he was created alone, brought him out of his offence, toke him out of the moulde of  $\text{ȝ}$  earth,  $\tau$  gaue him power to rule all thinges. When the vnrighteous wente awaye in his wrath from this wyszdome,  $\text{ȝ}$  brotherheade perished<sup>b</sup> thorow  $\text{ȝ}$  wrath of murthur. Agayne, whā  $\text{ȝ}$  water<sup>c</sup> destroyed  $\text{ȝ}$  whole worlde, wyszdome preserved the righteous thorow a poore tre, wherof she was gouerner herself. Morouer whā wickednes had gotten  $\text{ȝ}$  vpperhande, so  $\text{ȝ}$  the nacions were puffed vp with pryde, <sup>d</sup>she knewe  $\text{ȝ}$  righteous, preserved him faultlesse vnto God, and layed vp sure mercy for his children. <sup>e</sup>She preserved the righteous, whan he fled from the vngodly  $\text{ȝ}$  perished, what tyme as  $\text{ȝ}$  fyre fell downe vpon  $\text{ȝ}$  v. cities: Like as yet this daye the vnfrutefull, waist and smoking lōde geueth testimony of their wickednesse: yee the vnrpe and vntymely frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a tokē of a remembraunce of the vnfaithfull soule, there standeth a piler of salt. For all such as regarded not wyszdome, gat not only this hurte, that they knewe not the thinges which were good, but also left behinde them vnto mē, a memoriall of their foolishnes: so  $\text{ȝ}$  in the thinges wherin they synned, they coude not be hydd. But as for such as take hede vnto wyszdome, she shal delyuer them from sorowe.

C When the righteous fled because of his brothers wrath,  $\text{ȝ}$  wyszdome led him the right waye, shewed him  $\text{ȝ}$  kyngdome of God, gaue him knowlege of holy thinges, made him riche in his labours, and brought to passe the thinges that he wente aboute. In  $\text{ȝ}$  disceatfulness of such as defrauded him, she stode by him,  $\tau$  made him ryche. She saued him from the enemies, and defended him from  $\text{ȝ}$  disceauers. She made him stronge in battayll, and gaue him the victory,  $\text{ȝ}$  he might knowe, how that wyszdome is stronger then all thinges. <sup>f</sup>Whan the righteous was solde, she forsooke him not, but delyuered him frō synners. She wente downe with him in to the dongeon, and sayled him not in the bandes: <sup>g</sup>tyll she had brought him the cepter of  $\text{ȝ}$  realme, and power agaynst those that oppressed him. As for them that had accused him, she declared them to be lyers,  $\tau$  brought him to perpetuall worshipec.

She delyuered the righteous people and faultlesse sede, <sup>h</sup>from the nacions that oppressed them. She entred in to the soule of the seruauant of God, and stode by him in wonders and tokens agaynst the horrible kynge. She gaue  $\text{ȝ}$  righteous the rewarde of their labours,  $\tau$  led them forth a maruelous waye: on the daye tyme she was a shadowe vnto them, and a light of starres in the night season. <sup>i</sup>She brought them thorow the reed see, and caried them thorow the greате water. She drowned their enemies in the see, and brought them out of the depe. So the righteous toke the spoyles of the vngodly, and <sup>j</sup>prayed thy holy name (o LORDE) and magnified thy victorious hād with one acorde. For wyszdome openeth the mouth of  $\text{ȝ}$  domme,  $\tau$  maketh  $\text{ȝ}$  tonges of babes to speake.

The xi. Chapter.

SHE ordred their workes in the hādes of the holy prophet: <sup>k</sup>so  $\text{ȝ}$  they wente thorow  $\text{ȝ}$  wyldernes  $\text{ȝ}$  was not inhabited,  $\tau$  pitched their tētes in  $\text{ȝ}$  waist deserte. They stode agaynst their enemies,  $\tau$  were auenged of their aduersaries. <sup>l</sup>Whā they were thirstie, they called vpō  $\text{ȝ}$ ,  $\tau$  water was geuē them out of  $\text{ȝ}$  rok,  $\tau$  their thirst slokened out of  $\text{ȝ}$  harde stone. For by  $\text{ȝ}$  thinges, where thorow their enemies were punished, were they helped in their nede. For vnto the enemies thou gauest māas bloude in steade of luyng water. And where as they had scarcenesse in  $\text{ȝ}$  rebuke whan the children were slayne, thou gauest vnto thine awne a plenteous water vnloked for: declaringe by the thirst  $\text{ȝ}$  was at that tyme, how thou woldest bringe thine awne vnto honour,  $\tau$  slaye their aduersaries.

For whan they were tryed  $\tau$  noutrured with fatherly mercy, <sup>m</sup>they knowleged how the vngodly were iudged, and punished thorow  $\text{ȝ}$  wrath of God. These hast thou exorted as a father,  $\tau$  proued thē: but vnto  $\text{ȝ}$  other thou hast bene a boysteous kynge, layed hard to their charge, & condēd thē. Whether they were absent or present, their punyshment was alyke. For their grefe was dubble: namely, mournynge, and ſ remēbraunce of thinges past. But whā they perceaued ſ their punishmētes dyd thē good, they thought vpon the LORDE, & wondered at ſ ende. For at the last they helde moch of him, of whō in ſ out-castinge they thought scorne, as of an abiecte. Neuerthelesse ſ righteous dyd not so when they were thirstie: but euen like as ſ thoughtes of ſ foolish were, so was also their wickednes.

¶ Neuertheles thou hast ordred all thinges in measure, nōbre & weight. For thou hast euer had greate strēth & might, & who maye withstōde ſ power of thine arme? And why like as ſ small thynge ſ ſ balauce weyeth, so is ſ worlde before ſ: yee as a droppe of ſ morninge dew, that falleth downe vpon the earth. Thou hast mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: and makest the as though thou sawest not the sinnes of mē, because they shulde amende. For thou louest all the thinges that are, and hatest none of thē whō thou hast made: nether didest thou ordeyne or make eny thinge of euell will.

How might eny thinge endure, yf it wer not thy will? Or how coude eny thinge be preserued, excepte it were called of ſ? But thou sparest all, for all are thine, o LORDE, thou louer of soules.

The xij. Chapter.

O LORDE, how gracious & swete is thy sprete in all thinges? Therefore chastenest thou thē measurably that go wrōge, and warnest them, concernynge the thinges wherin they offende: thou speakest vnto them (o LORDE) and exortest thē to leaue their wickednes, and to put their trust in the. As for those olde <sup>a</sup>inhabiters of thy holy londe, thou mightest not awaye with them, for they commytted abhominable workes agaynst the: as wythcraft, sorcery and Idolatry: they slew their owne children without mercy: they ate vp mens bowels, and deuoured the bloude: Yee because of such abhominaciōs, myszbeleues & offeringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers: that ſ londe which thou louest aboue all other, might be a dwellinge for the childrē of God.

Neuertheles thou sparedest thē also (as mē) & sendedst ſ forerūners of thynne hoost, euē hornettes to destroye thē out by lytle & litle. Not ſ thou wast vnable to subdue ſ vngodly vnto ſ <sup>b</sup>righteous in battayll, or with cruell beestes, or with one rough worde to destroye thē together: But thy mynde was to dryue thē out by lytle & litle, geuinge thē time & place to amende: knowinge well, ſ it was an vnrighteous nacion & wicked of nature, & ſ their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a cursed sede from ſ begynnynge, & feared no mā: Yet hast thou pardoned their synnes. For who wyl saye vnto the: why hast thou done ſ? Or who wyl stōde agaynst thy iudgmēt? Or who wil come before thy face an auēger of vnrighteous mē? Or who wil blame ſ, yf ſ people perish, whō thou hast made? For there is none other <sup>c</sup>God but thou, ſ carest for all thinges: ſ thou mayest declare how ſ thy iudgmēt is not vnright. There dare nether kige, ner tyrāūt in thy sight requyre accōptes of them, whō thou hast destroyed.

For so moch thē as thou art righteous thy self, thou ordrest all thiges righteously, & <sup>d</sup>punishest euē hī ſ hath not deserved to be punyshed, & takest him for a straūger & an aleaunt in ſ lōde of thy power. For thy power is ſ beginnyng of righteousnes: and because thou art LORDE of all thinges, therfore art thou gracious vnto all. Whan men thinke  $\hat{y}$  not to be of a full strength, thou declarest thy power:  $\tau$  boldly deluyereest thou them ouer  $\hat{y}$  knowe  $\hat{y}$  not. But thou LORDE of power iudgeth quietly, and ordrest us with greате worshipec, for thou mayest do as thou wilt.

D By soch workes now hast thou taught thy people, that a mā also shulde be iust and lounge: and hast made thy childrē to be of a good hope: for euen when thou iudgeth, thou geuest rowme to amende from synnes. For in so moch as thou hast punyshed, and with soch diligence deluyered  $\hat{y}$  enemies of thy seruauētes, which were worthy to dye (where thorow thou gauest thē tyme  $\tau$  place of amēdement  $\hat{y}$  they might turne frō their wickednes) with how greате diligence then punyshest thou thine awne childrē, vnto whose fathers thou hast sworne  $\tau$  made couenaūtes of good promises? So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punyshest oure enemies dyuerse wayes: to  $\hat{y}$  intēt  $\hat{y}$  whā we punysh, we shulde remēbre thy goodnesse:  $\tau$  whan we oure selues are punyshed, to put oure trust in thy mercy.

E Wherefore where as men haue lyued ignoraūty  $\tau$  vnrighteously, thou hast punyshed thē sore, euē thorow  $\hat{y}$  same thinges that they "worshipped. For they wente astraye very lōge in  $\hat{y}$  waye of erreure,  $\tau$  helde  $\hat{y}$  beestes (which euē their enemies despyed) for goddes, lyuyng as children of no vnderstandinge. Therfore hast thou sent a scornfull punyshment amonge them, as amonge the childrē of ignoraunce. As for soch as wolde not be reformed by those scornes  $\tau$  rebukes, they felt the worthy punishmēt of God. For  $\hat{y}$  thinges  $\hat{y}$  they suffred, they bare thē vn-paciētly, beinge not contēt in them but vnwyllinge. And whan they perysht by  $\hat{y}$  same thinges that they toke for goddes, they knowledged then, that there was but one true God, whom afore they wolde not knowe: therfore came  $\hat{y}$  ende of their dampnacion vpon them.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A WAYNE are all men, which haue not  $\hat{y}$  knowlege of God: as were they that out of the good thinges which are <sup>e</sup>sene, knewe not him, that of himself is euerlastinge.

Nether toke they so moch regarde of the workes that are made, as to knowe, who was the craftesman of them: but some toke the fyre, some the wynde or ayre, some  $\hat{y}$  course of  $\hat{y}$  starres, some  $\hat{y}$  water, some toke Sonne and Moone, or the lightes of heauen which rule  $\hat{y}$  earth, for goddes. But though they had soch pleasure in their beuty, that they thought them to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowne, how moch more fayrer he is that made them. For the maker of beuty hath ordered all these thinges. Or yf they marueled at the power and workes of thē, they shulde haue perceaued therby,  $\hat{y}$  he which made these thinges, is mightier then they.

For by the greatnesse  $\tau$  beuty of the creature,  $\hat{y}$  maker therof maye playnely be knowne. B Notwithstandinge they are the lesse to be blamed, that sought God  $\tau$  wolde haue founde him, and yet myssed. And why? for so moch as they wēte aboute in his workes and sought after them, it is a toke, that they regarded and helde moch of his workes  $\hat{y}$  are sene: howbeit they are not wholly to be excused. For yf their vnderstandinge and knowledge was so greате,  $\hat{y}$  they coude discerne the worlde and  $\hat{y}$  creatures, why dyd they not rather fynde out  $\hat{y}$  LORDE therof?

But vnhappie are they, and amonge the deed is their hope, that call thē God which are but the workes of mens handes: golde, syluer and the thinge, that is founde out by connyng, the similitude of beastes, or eny vayne stone that hath bene made by hande of olde. <sup>d</sup>Or as whan a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the wodd, and pareth of the bark of it connyngly: and so with the one parte maketh a vessell to be vsed, and dighteth meate with the residue. As for the other parte that is left, which is profitable for nothinge (for it is a croked pece of wodd and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorow his vanite, and (acordinge to the knowlege of his connyng) he geueth it some proporcion, fashioneth it after the similitude of a man, or maketh it like some beest, straketh it ouer with reed and paynteth it, and loke what foule spot is in it, he casteth some coloure vpon it. Then maketh he a conueniēt tabernacle for it, setteth it in the wall and maketh it fast with yron, prouydinge so for it, lest it happē to fall: for it is well knowne, that it can not helpe it self: And why? it is but an ymage, and must of necessity be helped.

D Then gooth he and offreth of his goodes vnto it for his children and for his wife: he seketh helpe at it, he axeth counsell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it y<sup>e</sup> hath no soule: for health, he maketh his petition vnto him that is sicke: for life, he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon him for helpe, that is not able to helpe him self: ⁊ to sende him a good iourneye, he prayeth him that maye not go. And in all the thinges y<sup>e</sup> he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne eny thinge or to worke) he prayeth vnto him that can do no maner of good.

ture of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwyse. And why? the sekinge out of ymages is the beginnyng of whordome, and the bringinge vp of them is the destruction of life. For they were not from the begynnyng, nether shall they cōtinue for euer. The welthy ydilnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therefore shal they come shortly to an ende. Whē a father mourned for his sonne y<sup>e</sup> was taken awaye frō him, he made him an ymage (in all y<sup>e</sup> haist) of his deed sonne: ⁊ so begane to worshipec him as God, which was but a deed mā ⁊ ordered his seruantes to offere vnto him. Thus by processe of tyme ⁊ thorow lōge custome, this erreure was kepte as a lawe, ⁊ tyrāutes cōpelled mē by violēce to honoure ymages. As for those y<sup>e</sup> were so farre of, y<sup>e</sup> mē might not worshipec them presently, their picture was brought frō farre (like the ymage of a kyng whō they wolde honoure) to the intent that with greate diligence they might worshipec him which was farre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the singlar connyng of the craftsmen gaue the ignoraunt also a great occasiō to worshipec ymages. For the workman wyllyng to do him a pleasure that sett him a worke, laboured with all his connyng to make the ymage of the best fashion. And so (thorow the beuty of the worke) the comon people was disceaueid, in so moch that they toke him now for a God, which a litle afore was but honored as a man. And this was the erreure of mans life, whan men (ether for to serue their owne affeccion, or to do some pleasure vnto kinges) ascrybed vnto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Morouer, this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the greате warres of ignoraunce, those many and greате plagēs called they peace.<sup>e</sup> For ether they slewe their awne children and offred them, or dyd sacrifice in the night season, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte nether life ner marriage cleane: but ether one slewe another to death maliciously, or els greued his neyghboure with aduoutrie. And thus were all thinges myxte together: bloude, manslaughter, theft, dissimulacion, corrupcion, vnfaithfulnesse, sedicion, periury, disquietinge of good men, vnthakfulnes, defylinge of soules, chaunginge of byrth, vnstedfastnesse of mariage, mysordre of aduoutrie and vnclennesse. And why? the honouringe of abhominable ymages, is the cause, the begynnynge and ende of all euell. For they y worshipe Idols, either they are madd whā they be mery, or prophecie lyes, or lyue vngodly, or els lightly mansweare them selues. For in so much as their trust is in y Idols (which haue nether sole ner vnderstondinge) though they sweare falsely, yet they thinke it shal not hurte them.

Therefore commeth a greate plage vpon them, and that worthely: for they haue an euell opiniō of God, geuinge hede vnto Idols, swearinge vnjustly to disceauē, and dyspynginge righteousness. For their swearinge is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

The xvi. Chapter.

BUT thou (O oure God) art swete, longe sufferinge and true, and in mercy ordrest thou all thinges. Though we synne, yet are we thine, for we knowe thy strength. Yf we synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the, is perfecte righteousness: Yee to knowe thy righteousness and power, is the rote of immortalite. As for the thinge that men haue founde out thorow theyr euell science, it hath not disceaued vs: as the payntinge of the picture (an vnprofitable labour) and carued ymage, with diuerse colours, whose sight entiseth the ignoraunt: so that he honoureth and loueth the picture of a deed ymage, that hath no soule.

Neuertheles, they that loue soche euell thinges, are worthy of death: they that trust in them, they that make them, they that loue them, and they that honour them. The potter also taketh a tempereth soft earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fashion of a vessell, what so euer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for seruice, and some contrary. But where to euery vessell serueth, that knoweth y potter himself. So with his wayne labour he maketh a god of the same claye: this doth euen he, which a litle afore was made of earth himself, and within a litle whyle after (whan he dyeth) turneth to earth agayne.

Notwithstandinge, he careth not y more because he shal labour euer ner because his life is shorte: but stryuet to excell goldsmithes, y syluer smithes a copper smithes, and taketh it for an honour to make wayne thinges. For his hert is ashes, his hope is but vaine earth a his life is more vyle then claye: for so much as he knoweth not his awne maker, that gaue him his soule to worke, and brethed in him the breth of life. They counte oure life but a pastyme, and oure conuersacion to be butt a market, and that men shulde euer be gettinge, yee and that by euell meanes. Now he y of earth maketh frayle vessell and ymages, knoweth himself to offende aboue all other.

All the enemies of thy people and y holde them in subieccion, are vnwyse, vnhappye and excedinge proude vnto their owne soules: for they iudge all the Idols of the Heithē to be goddes,<sup>a</sup> which nether haue eyesight to se, ner noses to smell, ner eares to heare, ner fingers of handes for to grope: a as for their fete, they are to slowe to go. For man made them, and he that hath but a borrowed sprete, fashioned them. But no man can make a God like vnto him: for seinge he is but mortall himself, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. He himself is better then they whom he worshippeth, for he lyued though he was mortall, but so dyd neuer they. Yee they worshippe beestes also, which are most miserable: for compare thinges that can not fele vnto them, a they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beestes, that with his sight cā beholde eny good thinge, nether haue they geuen prayse ner thanks vnto God.

The xvi. Chapter.

FOR these and soch other thinges haue they suffred worthy punyshment, a thorow y multitude of beestes are they rote<sup>d</sup> out. In steade of the which punishmentes thou hast graciously ordred thine awne people, a geuen them their desyre that they lōged for: a new a straunge taist, preparinge them<sup>b</sup> quales to be their meate: to the intent y (by the thinges which were shewed and sent vnto them) they y were so gredy of meate, might be with-drawen euen from the desyre that was necessary. But these within shorte tyme were brought vnto pouerte, and taisted a new meate. For it was requisite  $\hat{y}$  (without eny excuse) destruccion shulde come vpō those which vsed tyrāny,  $\tau$  to shewe onely vnto the other, how their enemies were destroyed. For whan the cruel woodnesse of the beestes came vpon them, they perished thorow the stinges of the cruell serpentes.

B Notwithstōdinge thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a litle season,  $\hat{y}$  they might be reformed, hauynge a token of saluacion, to remembre the cōmaundement of thy lawe. For he  $\hat{y}$  cōuerted, was not healed by the thinge  $\hat{y}$  he sawe, but by THE, O sauoure of all. So in this thou shewdest thine enemies,  $\hat{y}$  it is thou, which deliuerest frō all euell. As for thē whan they were bytten with greshoppers and flyes,  $\hat{y}$  they died, for they were worthy to perish by soch: But nether the teth of dragons nor of venomous wormes ouercame thy children, for thy mercy was euer by them  $\tau$  helped thē. Therefore were they punyshed to remēbre thy wordes, but hastily were they healed agayne: lest they shulde fall in to so depe forgetfulness, that they might not vse thy helpe.

C It was nether herbe ner plaster  $\hat{y}$  restored thē to health, but thy worde (o LORDE) which healeth all thinges. It is thou (o LORDE)  $\hat{y}$  hast the power of life  $\tau$  death:  $\hat{y}$  thou ledest vnto deathes dore,  $\tau$  bringest vp agayne. But man thorow wickednes slayeth his owne soule,  $\tau$  when his sprete goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, nether maye he call agayne  $\hat{y}$  soule  $\hat{y}$  is takē awaye: It is not possible to escape thy hande. For  $\hat{y}$  vngodly  $\hat{y}$  wolde not knowe  $\hat{y}$ , were punyshed by  $\hat{y}$  strēth of thine arme:  $\hat{y}$  with straunge waters, hailes and raynes were they persecuted,  $\tau$  thorow fyre were they cōsumed. For it was a wonderous thinge that fyre might do more then water which quēcheth all thinges: but  $\hat{y}$  worlde is  $\hat{y}$  auēger of the righteous. Some tyme was  $\hat{y}$  fyre so tame,  $\hat{y}$  the beestes which were sent to punysh  $\hat{y}$  vngodly, brent not:  $\tau$   $\hat{y}$  because they shulde se  $\tau$  knowe,  $\hat{y}$  they were persecuted with the punyshmēt of God. And somtyme brent the fyre in the water on euery syde,  $\hat{y}$  it might destroye  $\hat{y}$  vnrighteous naciō of the earth. Againe, thou hast fed thine awne people with angels fode,  $\tau$  sent thē bred ready from heauē (without their labour) beyng very pleasaūt  $\tau$  well gusted. And to shewe thy riches  $\tau$  swetnesse vnto thy childrē, thou gauest euery one thy desyre, so  $\hat{y}$  euery man might take what liked him best. But the snowe  $\tau$  yse abode the violēce of the fyre,  $\tau$  melted not:  $\hat{y}$  they might knowe,  $\hat{y}$  the fyre burninge in the hale  $\tau$  rayne, destroyed  $\hat{y}$  frute of  $\hat{y}$  enemies:  $\hat{y}$  fyre also forgatt his strēth agayne,  $\hat{y}$   $\hat{y}$  righteous might be nourished. For  $\hat{y}$  creature  $\hat{y}$  serueth  $\hat{y}$  (which art  $\hat{y}$  maker) is fearse in punyshinge  $\hat{y}$  vnrighteous, but it is easy  $\tau$  gētle to do good, vnto soch as put their trust in the. Therefore dyd all thinges alter at the same tyme,  $\tau$  were all obediēt vnto thy grace, which is  $\hat{y}$  norse of all thinges, accordinge to  $\hat{y}$  desyre of thē  $\hat{y}$  had nede therof:  $\hat{y}$  thy childrē (O LORDE) whō thou louest,  $\hat{y}$  might knowe,  $\hat{y}$  it is not nature  $\tau$  the growinge of frutes  $\hat{y}$  fedeth mē, but  $\hat{y}$  it is thy worde, which preserueth thē  $\hat{y}$  put their trust in the. For loke what might not be destroyed with the fyre, as soone as it was warmed with a litle Sonne beame, it melted:  $\hat{y}$  all men might knowe,  $\hat{y}$  thanks ought to be geuen vnto  $\hat{y}$  before  $\hat{y}$  Sonne ryse,  $\tau$   $\hat{y}$  thy oughtest to be worshipped before  $\hat{y}$  daye sprynge. For  $\hat{y}$  hope of  $\hat{y}$  vnthankfull shal melt awaie as the wynter yse,  $\tau$  perishe as water,  $\hat{y}$  is not necessary.

The xlvj. Chapter.

GREATE are thy iudgmētes (o LORDE)  $\tau$  thy counceils can not be expressed: therefore men do erre,  $\hat{y}$  wil not be reformed with thy wysdome. For whan the vnrighteous thought to haue thy holy people in subieciō,  $\hat{y}$  they were bounde with the bandes of darcknes  $\tau$  longe night, shutt vnder  $\hat{y}$  rofe, thinkinge to escape  $\hat{y}$  euerlastinge wysdome. And whyle they thought to be hyd in  $\hat{y}$  darcknesse of their synnes, they were scatered abrode in  $\hat{y}$  very myddest of the darck coueringe of forgetfulness, put to horrible feare  $\tau$  wonderously vexed. For the corner where they were, might not kepe them from feare: because  $\hat{y}$  sounde came downe and vexed them: yee many terryble and straunge visions made them afraied.

B No power of the fyre might geue them light, nether might the cleare flāmes of the starres lightē ſy horrible night. For there appeared vnto thē a sodane fyre, very dredeful: At ſy which (whan they sawe nothings) they were so afayed, that they thought ſy thinge which they sawe, to be the more fearfull. <sup>a</sup> As for the sorcery & enchauntemēt ſy they vsed, it came to derisiō, and the proude wysdome was brought to shame. For they ſy promysed to dryue awaie the fearfulness & drede frō ſy weake soules, were sick for feare thē selues, and that with scorne. And though none of ſy wōders feared thē, yet were they afayed at the beestes which came vpon thē, & at ſy Hissinge of the serpētes: In so much that with trēblinge they swowned, & sayde they sawe not ſy ayre, which no mā yet maye escape.

C For it is an heuy thinge, whā a mans owne consciēce beareth recorde of his wickednes & condēpneth him. And why? a vexed & wounded consciēce, taketh euer cruell thinges in hāde. <sup>b</sup> Fearfulness is nothinge els, but a declaringe ſy a mā seketh helpe & defence, to answere for him self. And loke how much lesse the hope is within, the more is ſy vncertaynte of the matter, for the which he is punished. But they ſy came in ſy mightie night, slepte ſy slepe ſy fell vpō thē frō vnder & frō aboue: somtyme were they afayed thorow ſy feare of ſy wonders, & somtyme they were so weake, ſy they swowned withall: for an hastie & sodane fearfulness came vpon thē. Afterwarde, yf eny of thē had fallē, he was kepte & shutt in preson, but without chaynes. But yf eny dwelt in a vyllage, yf he had bene an hyrd or huszbandman, he suffred intollerable necessite: for they were all bounde with one chayne of darcknesse.

D Whether it were a blasynge wynde, or a swete songe of ſy byrdes amonge the thicke braunches of the trees, or the vehemence of haistie rünyng water, or greate noyse of ſy fallynge downe of stones, or the playenge & rünyng of beastes whō they sawe not, or ſy mightie noyse of roaring beestes, or ſy sownde ſy answereth agayne in the hye mountaynes: it made thē swowne for very feare. For all the earth shyned with cleare light, & no mā was hyndered in his laboure. Onely vpon thē there fell a heuy night, an ymage of darcknesse that was to come vpon them. Yee they were vnto them selues the most heuy & horrible darcknesse.

The xliij. Chapter.

NEUERTHELES thy sayntes had a <sup>a</sup> very greate light (and the enemies herde their voyce, but they sawe not the figure of them.) And because they suffred not ſy same thinges, they magnified the: and they ſy were vexed afore (because they were not hurte now) thanked the, and besought ſy (o God) ſy there might be a difference. Therefore had they <sup>a</sup> a burnynge piler of fyre to lede them in the vnknowne waye, & thou gauest them the Sonne for a fre gift without eny hurte. Reason it was, that they shulde want light & to be put in the preson of darcknes, which kepte thy childrē in captiuyte, by whom the vncorrupt light of the lawe of ſy worlde was for to be geuen. Whan they <sup>b</sup> thought to slaye <sup>a</sup> the babes of the righteous (one beinge laied out, and yet preserued to be leder vnto the other) thou broughtest out the whole multitude of the children, <sup>c</sup> and destroydest these in the mightie water. Of that night were oure fathers certified a fore, that they knowinge vnto what oother they had geuen credence, might be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued ſy health of the righteous, but the vngodly were destroyed. For like as thou hast hurte oure enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou callest a fore. For the righteous children of the good men offred secretly, & ordred the lawe of righteousness vnto vnite: ſy the iust shulde receaue good and euell in like maner, singinge prayes vnto ſy father of all men. Agayne, there was herde an vnconuenient voyce of the enemies, & a piteous crie for childrē that were bewayled. The master and the seruāut were punished alike, the meane man and the kynge suffred in like maner. For they all together had innumerable that dyed one death.

<sup>c</sup> Nether were ſy lyuynge sufficient to bury ſy deed, for in ſy twyncklinge of an eye, the noblest nacion of thē was destroyed. As oft as God helped thē afore, yet wolde it not make thē beleue: but in ſy destruccion of ſy first borne they knowledged, that it was ſy people of God. course, thy Allmightie worde (o LORDE) leapte downe fro heauē out of thy royall trone, as a rough mā of warre, in þy myddest of þy londe þy was destroyed: ⁊ þy sharpe swerde perfourmed thy straite cōmaundemēt, stādinge ⁊ fyllinge all thinges with death: yee it stode vpō þy earth ⁊ reached vnto the heauen. Then the sight of the euell dreames vexed them sodenly, and fearfulnessse came vpon them vnawarres.

D Then laye there one here, another there half deed half quyk, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed thē, shewed thē these thinges afore: so that they were not ignoraunt, wherfore they perished.

The tentacion of death touched the righteous also, and amonge the multitude in the wyldernesse there was insurreccion, but thy wrath endured not longe. For the faultlesse man wente in all the haist,<sup>a</sup> and toke the battayll vpon him, brought forth the weapē of his ministracion: euen prayer and þy cēsours of recōcilinge, set himself agaynst þy wrath, and so brought the misery to an ende: declaringe therby, that he was thy seruauant. For he ouercome not the multitude with bodely power, ner with weapēs of might: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed him, puttinge the in remembrance of the ooth ꝓ couenaūt made vnto the fathers. For whan the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddest, pacified the wrath, and parted þy waye vnto the luyunge. And why? <sup>b</sup>in his longe garinēt was all the beuty, and in the foure rowes of the stones was the glory of the fathers grauē, and thy maiesty was written in the crowne of his heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place, and was afraied of them: for it was only a tentacion worthy of wrath.

The xix. Chapter.

A<sup>c</sup> S for the vngodly, the wrath came vpō them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew before what shulde happē vnto them: how that (whan they had cōsented to lett them go, and had sent them out with greate diligence) they wolde repente, ⁊ folowe vpon them. For whan they were yet mournyng and makinge lamētacion by the graues of the deed, they deuysed another foolishnes: so that they persecuted them in their flience, whom they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessite also brought them vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thinges þy happened vnto them afore. But the thinge that was wantynge of their punyshment, was requysite so to be fulfilled vpon them with tormētes: that thy people might haue a maruelous passage thorow, and that these might fynde a straunge death.

B Thē was euery creature fashioned agayne of the new acordinge to the wyll of their maker, obeyenge thy commaundementes, þy thy children might be keppe without hurte. For the cloude ouersadowed their tentes, ⁊ the drye earth appeared, where afore was water: so þy in the reed see there was a waye without impediment, and the greате depe became a grene felde: where thorow all þy people wente that were defended with thy hande, seinge thy wonderous ⁊ maruelous workes. For as þy horses, so were they fedd, ⁊ leapte like lābes, prayinge the (o LORDE) which hadde delyuered them. And why? they were yet myndefull of the thinges, that happened whyle they dwelt in the londe: how the grounde brought forth flies in steade of catell, and how þy ryuer scrauled with the multitude of frogges in steade of fyszshes.

C But at the last they sawe a new creacion of byrdes, what tyme as they were <sup>d</sup>disceaued with lust, and desyred delicate meates. For whan they were speakinge of their appetite, the quales came vp vnto them from the see, and punyshmentes came vpon þy synners, not without the tokēs which came to passe afore by the vehemēce of þy streames: for they suffred worthely acordinge to their wickednesses, they dealt so abhominably ⁊ churlishly with straungers. Some receaued no vnknowne gestes, some brought the straungers in to bondage that dyd them good. Besyde all these thinges there were some, that not only receaued no straungers with their wylls, but persecuted those also,<sup>e</sup> and dyd thē moch euell, that receaued thē gladly. Therefore were they punyshed with blyndnesse, like as they that were couered with <sup>f</sup>sodane darcknesse at the dores of the righteous: so þy euery one sought þy intrance of his dore.

MANY and greate mē haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of y lawe, out of y prophetes & out of other that folowed thē. In the which thinges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctrine and wysdome: Therefore they that haue it & reade it, shulde not onely thē selues be wyse there thorow, but serue other also with teachinge and wrytinge.

After that my graundfather Iesus had geuen diligent laboure to reade the lawe, the prophetes and other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, and had wel exercised himself therin: he purposed also to wryte some thinge of wysdome and good maners, to the intēt that they which were wyllinge to lerne and to be wyse, might haue the more vnderstandinge, and be the more apte to lede a good conuersacion.

Wherefore I exorte you to receaue it louyngly, to reade it with diligence, and to take it in good worth: though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thinge that is wrytten in the Hebrue tonge, soundeth not so well whan it is trāslated in to another speache. Not only this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the prophetes, and other bokes sounde farre other wyse, than they do, whan they are spoken in their awne language.

Now in the XXXVIII. yeaere whan I came in to Egipte in the tyme of Ptolomy Euerges, and continued there all my life, I gat libertie to reade and wryte many good thinges. Wherefore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interpret this boke. And consideringe that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this boke, and to brynge it vnto light: that the straingers also which are disposed to lerne, might applye them selues vnto good maners, & lyue acordinge to y lawe of y LORDE.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. I.

All wysdome commeth of God, for he onely is wyse. The frute of Gods feare.

Chap. XVI.

The multitude of euell children is not good, for the grace of God is not amonge the vngodly. The pacience, mercy, and wysdome of God.

Chap. XVII.

How God made man, endewed him with giftes, openynge his wil & lawe vnto him: but chose Israel out of all people.

Chap. XVIII.

The wysdome of God and ordre of his workes, which no man maye comprehend. The dayes of man are shorte. God suffreth longe, rebuketh and teacheth all soch as wil receaue nurtoure.

Chap. XIX.

Many good lessons of wysdome.

Chap. XX.

Men ought to geue warnynge, to exorte and to rebuke: but not to be cruell, violent or malicious. Of sylence, and speakinge, & how to bewarre of lyes.

Chap. XXI.

All maner of synnes ought to be eschued. The difference of the wyse and foolish.

Chap. XXII.

A foole wyll not be reformed nor rebuked. Be faithfull vnto thy neighbour and frende.

Chap. XXIII.

A faithfull prayer vnto God, to preserue the mouth and tonge from noysome wordes and oother, & the hert from euell thoughtes. How greate abhominacion aduourty is.

Chap. XXIIII.

A commendacion of wysdome.

Chap. XXV.

There is nothinge better, then an honest verteous woman. Agayne, there is nothinge worse then an euell, vngodly, & frowarde woman.

Chap. XXVI.

A commendacion and prayse of a good honest woman, and how noysome an euell wyfe is.

Chap. XXVII.

Many goodly sentences.

Chap. XXVIII.

Men ought not to take vengeaunce, but euery man to forgeue his neighoure, & not to beare euell wil ner to stryue. What harme commeth of false tongues & slaundersers.

Chap. XXIX.

How mē shulde haue compassion and lende vnto their neighbours: and how they that borowe, ought to behaue them selues agayne. Of vnduysed suertieshipes. How euery man ought to be content with that he hath, and not to be chargeable vnto other.

Chap. XXX.

Who so loueth his children, teacheth them, nurtureth them and chasteneth thē. Health is a noble gift.

Chap. XXXI.

The misery of the cuetous. How one shulde behaue him self at the table, and be measurable in meate and drynke. What harme cometh of drynkinge to moch wyne.

Chap. XXXII.

To be set in rule & dignite, shulde not make a man proude and hye minded, but to feare, to be diligent and faithful vnto them, that are committed vnto him &c. with other good lessons.

Chap. XXXIII.

How God ought to be feared, & his lawe kepte. The difference of dayes and of men. The ordninge of children and housholde.

Chap. XXXIIII.

The hope of the vngodly is vayne: the righteous shalbe preserued, for he putteth his trust in God, which wil not be reconciled with offeringes, but with an innocent life.

Chap. XXXV.

The offeringe that pleaseth God is to kepe his comaundementes, to be thankfull, mercifull, and to ceasse from synne. God is the defender of wyddowes, fatherlesse, and oppressed, and heareth their prayer.

Chap. XXXVI.

An earnest prayer vnto God for helpe agaynst the enemies. The prayse of an honest woman.

Chap. XXXVII.

Of true & false frēdschipe. Good counsell ought to be sought at them, which are verteous and feare God, but first at God himself. Of wyszdome and sobernesse.

Chap. XXXVIII.

Phisicians and medicyns ought not to be despysed, but vsed as a gift of God: neuertheles God himself is first to be sought in all sicknesse. Men shulde be measurable in mourninge for the deed, & prepare them selues also vnto death. Euery workman ought to be diligent in his labour, and to please God with keepinge his comaundementes.

Chap. XXXIX.

A commédacion of Simeon the sonne of Onias.

Chap. LI.

A prayer of Iesus Syrac. Wysdome calleth the ignoraunt vnto her.

The first Chapter.

ALL wysdome cometh of God<sup>a</sup> the LORDE, & hath bene euer with him, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred  $\text{y}$  sonde of the see,  $\text{y}$  droppes of the rayne & the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the heyth of heauē,  $\text{y}$  bredth of the earth & the depenesse of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wysdome,<sup>b</sup> which hath bene before all thinges? Wysdome hath bene before all thinges, and the vnderstandinge of prudence from euerlastinge. (Gods worde in the heyth is the well of wysdome, and the euerlastinge cōmaundementes are the inraunce of her.) Vnto whom hath  $\text{y}$  rote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowne hir wyt? Vnto whom hath the doctrine of wysdome bene discovered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entraūce of her?

33 There is one: euē the Hiest, the maker of all thinges,  $\text{y}$  Allmightie,  $\text{y}$  kyng of power (of whom men ought to stonde greatly in awe) which sytteth vpon his trone, beinge a God of dominion: He hath created her thorow  $\text{y}$  holy goost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her: He hath poured her out vpon all his workes, and vpon all flesh acordinge to his gift: he geueth her richely vnto them that loue him. The feare of the LORDE is worshipe and triūphe, gladnesse & a ioyfull crowne. The feare of the LORDE maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe life. Who so feareth the LORDE, it shal go well with him at the last, & in the daye of his death he shal be blessed.

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: C loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it, for they se what wōderous thinges it doth.<sup>c</sup> The feare of LORDE is the begynnyng of wysdome, and was made with the faithfull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen wemen, and shalbe knowne of  $\text{y}$  righteous and faithfull. The feare of the LORDE is  $\text{y}$  right Gods seruyce, that preserueth and iustifieth the hert, and geueth myrth & gladnesse. Who so feareth the LORDE, shalbe happie: and whan he hath nede of comforte, he shal be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh rich, and bringeth all good with her. She fylleth the whole house with hir giftes, & the garners with her treasure. The feare of the LORDE is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace & health. He hath sene her & nombred her: knowlege and vnderstandinge of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne: and them that helde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

34 The feare of the LORDE is the rote of wysdome, and hir braunches are longe life. (In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstandinge and deuocion of knowlege, but wysdome is abhorred of synners.) The feare of the LORDE dryueth out synne, for he that is without feare, can not be made righteous, & his wilfull boldnes is his owne destruccion. A paciēt man wyl suffre vnto the tyme, and thē shal he haue  $\text{y}$  rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstōdinge wil hyde his wordes for a tyme, and many mēs lippes shal speake of his wysdome. In the treasures of wysdome is the declaracion of doctrine, but the synner abhorreth the worshipe of God. My sonne, yf thou desyre wysdome, kepe the commaundement, and God shal geue her vnto the: for the feare of the LORDE is wysdome ⁊ nurture, he hath pleasure in faith and louynge mekenesse, and he shal fyll the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaithfull to the feare of the LORDE, and come not vnto him with a dubble hert. Be not an ypocrite in the sight of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marek well these thinges, lest thou happen to fall and brynge thy soule to dishonoure, and so God discover thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacion: because thou woldest not receaue the feare of God, and because thy hert is full of faynednes and disceate.

The ij. Chapter.

A MY sonne, yf thou wilt come in to ⁊ seruyce of God,<sup>a</sup> stonde fast in righteousness and feare, ⁊ arme thy soule to tentacion: sattle thine hert, and be paciēt: bowe downe thine eare, receaue the wordes of vnderstondinge, and shrencke not awaye, whan thou art entysed. Holde the fast vpon God, ioyne thy self vnto him ⁊ suffre, that thy life maye encrease at the last. What so euer happeneth vnto the, receaue it: suffre in heynesse, and be pacient in thy trouble.<sup>b</sup> For like as golde and syluer are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable men in the fornace of aduersite. Beleue in God, and he shal helpe the: ordre thy waie a right, and put thy trust in him. Holde fast his feare, and growe therein. O ye ⁊ feare the LORDE, take sure holde of his mercy: shrencke not awaye frō him, that ye fall not. O ye that feare ⁊ LORDE, beleue him, and youre rewardes shall not be emptye. O ye that feare ⁊ LORDE, put youre trust in him, ⁊ mercy shal come vnto you for pleasure. O ye ⁊ feare ⁊ LORDE, set youre loue vpō him, ⁊ youre hertes shal be lightened.

B Considre the olde generacions of men (o ye children) and marek them well:<sup>c</sup> was there euer eny one confounded, that put his trust in the LORDE? Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsaken? Or whom dyd he euer despyse, that called faithfully vpō him? For God is gracious and mercifull, he forgeueth synnes in ⁊ tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them ⁊ seke him in ⁊ trueth. Wo be vnto him that hath a dubble hert, wicked lippes and euell occupied handes, ⁊ to the synner ⁊ goeth two maner of waies. Wo be vnto them that are lowse of hert, which put not their trust in God, and therefore shal they not be defended of him. Wo be vnto them that haue lost pacience, forsaken the right wayes, and are turned back in to frowarde wayes. What wyl they do, whan the LORDE shal begynne to vyset thē?

They that feare ⁊ LORDE, wil not mistrust his worde: and they that loue him,<sup>d</sup> wyl kepe his commaundement. They that feare the LORDE, wyl seke out ⁊ thinges that are pleasaunt vnto him: and they that loue him, shal fulfill his lawe.<sup>e</sup> They that feare ⁊ LORDE wil prepare their hertes, and hūble their soules in his sight. (They that feare the LORDE, kepe his commaundementes, and wil be pacient, tyll they se himself) sayenge: better it is for vs to fall in to the handes of ⁊ LORDE, then in to the hādes of men: for his mercy is as great as him self.

The iij. Chapter.

THE children of wysdome are a cōgregacion of the righteous, and their exercise is obedience and loue. Hearre me youre father (o my deare children) and do there after, that ye maie be safe. For the LORDE wil haue the father honoured of the children, and loke what a mother commaūdeth hir children to do, he wil haue it kepte. Who so honour-eth his father, his synnes shall be forgivenē him: and he that honoureth his mother, is like one that gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shal haue ioye of his owne children: ⁊ whan he maketh his prayer, he shal be herde. He that honoureth his father,<sup>f</sup> shall haue a longe life: ⁊ he that is obedient for ⁊ LORDES sake, his mother shal haue ioye of him.

B He that feareth the LORDE, honoureth his father and mother, and doth them seruyce, as it were vnto the LORDE himself. Honour thy father in dede, in worde and in all pacience, that thou mayest haue his blessing:<sup>g</sup> for the blessing of ⁊ father buyldeth vp the houses of the children, but the mothers curse roteth out the foundacions. Reioyce not whan thy father is reprovèd, for it is no honoure vnto the, but a shame. For the worshippe of a mans father is his awne worshippe, and where the father is without honoure, it is the dishonesty of the sonne. My sonne, make moch of thy father in his age, and greue him not as longe as he lyueth. And yf his vnderstandinge fayle, haue pacience with him, & despyse him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not be forgotten: and whan thou thy self wantest, it shall be rewarded the (and for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompensed with good, yee it shal be founded for the in righteousnes) and in the daye of trouble thou shalt be remembred: thy synnes also shall melt awaye, like as the yse in y<sup>e</sup> fayre warme wether.

C He y<sup>e</sup> forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that defyeth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, perfourme thy workes with louynge mekenesse, so shalt thou be loued aboue other men. <sup>a</sup> The greater thou art, the more hūble thy self (in all thinges) and thou shalt fynde fauoure in the sight of God. For greate power belongeth onely vnto God, & he is honoured of the lowly.

D An harde herte shal fayre euell at y<sup>e</sup> last (an hert that goeth two wayes, shal not prospere: & he that is frowarde of hert, wyll euer be the worse and worse.) A wicked hert shall be ladē with sorowes, and y<sup>e</sup> vngodly sinner wyll heape one synne vpon another. The counsell of the proude hath no health, for y<sup>e</sup> plante of synne shal be rotē out in thē. The hert of him y<sup>e</sup> hath vnderstandinge, shal perceaue hye thinges, and a good eare wil gladly herken vnto wysdome. An hert that is wyse & hath vnderstandinge, wyl abstayne from synnes, and increase in the workes of righteousnes. <sup>d</sup> Water quenchem burnynge fyre, & mercy reconcyleth synnes. God hath respecte vnto him y<sup>e</sup> is thankfull: he thinketh vpon him agaynst the tyme to come: so that whan he falleth, he shal fynde a stronge holde.

The iij. Chapter.

MY sonne, defraude not the poore of his almes,<sup>e</sup> and turne not awaye thine eyes from him that hath nede. Despise not an hongrie soule, and defye not the poore in his necessite: greue not the hert of him that is helpelesse, and withdrawe not the gift from y<sup>e</sup> nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, and turne not awaye thy face from the nedy. Cast not thine eyes asyde frō y<sup>e</sup> poore, y<sup>e</sup> thou geue him not occasion to speake euell of the. For yf he complayne of y<sup>e</sup> in the bytternes of his soule, his prayer shal be herde: euē he y<sup>e</sup> made him, shal heare him. Be curteous vnto y<sup>e</sup> company of the poore, humble thy soule vnto the elder, & bowe downe thy heade to a man of worshippe. Let it not greue the to bowe downe thine eare vnto the poore, but paye thy dett, and geue him a frendly answere, and y<sup>e</sup> with mekenesse.

B Deluyr him y<sup>e</sup> suffreth wrōge frō y<sup>e</sup> hāde of y<sup>e</sup> oppressoure,<sup>f</sup> & be not faint harted whā thou sittest in iudgmēt. Be merciful vnto y<sup>e</sup> fatherles as a father, & be in steade of an husbāde vnto their mother: so shalt thou be as an obediēt sonne of y<sup>e</sup> Hyst, and he shal loue the more thē thy mother doth. Wisdome bretheth life in to hir children, receaueth thē y<sup>e</sup> seke her, & wyll go before thē in y<sup>e</sup> waye of righteousnes. He y<sup>e</sup> loueth her, loueth life: & they y<sup>e</sup> seke her diligētly, shal haue greate ioye. They y<sup>e</sup> kepe her, shal haue the heretage of life: for where she entreth in, there is the blessinge of God. They that honour her, shal be y<sup>e</sup> seruantes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shal iudge the Heithē: and he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safely.

The shal she stablish him, bringe the right waye vnto him, make hi a glad mā, shewe him hir secretes, and heape vpon him the treasures of knowlege, vnderstandinge and righteousnes. But yf he go wronge, she shall forsake him, and geue him ouer in to the handes of his enemye.

D "My sonne, make moch of the tyme, eschue the thinge  $\hat{y}$  is. euell, and for thy life shame not to saye  $\hat{y}$  trueth. <sup>a</sup>For there is a shame  $\hat{y}$  bringeth synne, and there is a shame that bringeth worshipec and fauoure. <sup>c</sup>Accepte no person after thine owne will, that thou be not confounded to thine owne decaye. Be not ashamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersite,  $\tau$  kepe not back thy counsell whā it maye do good, nether hyde thy wysdome in hir beuty. For in the tōge is wysdome knowne, so is vnderstandinge, knowlege and lernynge in the talkinge of the wyse,  $\tau$  stedfastnesse in  $\hat{y}$  workes of righteousnes. In no wise speake agaynst the worde of treuth, but be ashamed of the lyes of thine owne ignorance. Shame not to confesse thine erreure, and submitte not thyself vnto euery man because of synne. Withstande not  $\hat{y}$  face of the mightie, and stryue not agaynst the streame. But for the trueth stryue thou vnto death, and God shal fight for the agaynst thine enemies. Be not haystie in thy tonge, nether slack and negligent in thy workes. Be not as a lyon in thine owne house, destroyinge thy housholde folkes, and oppressing them  $\hat{y}$  are vnder the. <sup>d</sup>Let not thine hande be stretched out to receaue, and shutt whan thou shuldest geue.

The 6. Chapter.

A TRUST not vnto thy riches, and saye not: tush, I haue ynough for my life. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeance and temptacion.) Folowe not the lust of thine owne hert in thy strength, and saye not: tush, how shulde I, or who wyl cast me downe because of my workes? for doutles God shal auenge it. And saye not: I haue committed mo synnes, butt what euell hath happened me? For the Allmightie is a pacient rewarder. <sup>e</sup>Because thy synne is forgeue  $\hat{y}$ , be not therfore without feare, nether heape one synne vpō another. And saye not: <sup>f</sup>tush, the mercy of the LORDE is greate, he shal forgeue my synnes, be they neuer so many. <sup>g</sup>For like as he is mercifull, so goeth wrath from him also, and his indignacion cōmeth downe vpon synners.

Make no tariēge to turne vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, <sup>h</sup> $\tau$  put not of frō daye to daie: for sodenly shal his wrath come,  $\tau$  in the tyme of vengeance he shal destroye  $\hat{y}$ . <sup>i</sup>Trust not in wicked riches for they shal not helpe in the daye of punishment and wrath. Be not caried aboute to euery wynde, and go not in to euery waye: for so doth the synner that hath a dubble tonge (Stonde fast in  $\hat{y}$  waye of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE) be stedfast in thy vnderstandinge, abyde by thy worde, and folowe the worde of peace and righteousnes. Be gōtle to heare  $\hat{y}$  worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, and make a true answer with wysdome. <sup>k</sup>Be swift to heare, but slowe and pacient in geuinge answer. Yf thou hast vnderstandinge, shappe thy neyghboure an answer: Yf no, laye thine hāde vpō thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete worde,  $\tau$  so cōfounded. Honoure  $\tau$  worshipec is in a mā wyse talkinge, but  $\hat{y}$  tōge of  $\hat{y}$  vndiscrete is his awne destrucciō. <sup>l</sup>Be not a preuy accuser as long as thou lyst, and vse no slaunder with thy tonge. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the thefe, and an euell name ouer him that is dubble tonged: but he that is a preuy accuser of other men, shalbe hated envyed and confounded. Se that thou iustifie the small and greate alyke.

The vi. Chapter.

BE not thy neyghbours enemye for thy frēdes sake: for who so is euell shal be  $\hat{y}$  heyre of rebuke  $\tau$  dishonoure,  $\tau$  who so euer beareth envye and a dubble tōge, offendeth. <sup>m</sup>Be not proude in the deuyce of thyne owne vnderstandinge, lest thy leaues wyther, and thy frute be destroyed,  $\tau$  so thou be left as a drye tre. B Yf thou gettest a frende, proue him first,<sup>a</sup> and be not haistie to geue him credence. For some man is a frende but for a tyme, and wyl not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some frende that turneth to enemyte, and taketh parte agaynst the: and yf he knowe eny hurte by the, he telleth it out. Agayne, some frende<sup>b</sup> is but a companyon at the table, and in the daye of nede he contynueth not. But a sure frende will be vnto  $\gamma$  enen as thyne owne self, and deale faithfully with thy household folke. Yf thou suffre trouble and aduersite, he is with the, and hydeth not him self from the. Depart fro thine enemies, yee and bewarre of thy frendes.

C A faithfull frende is a stronge defence: who so findeth such one, findeth a noble treasure. A faithfull frende hath no peare, the weight of golde and syluer is not to be compared to the goodnesse of his faith. A faithfull frende is a medicyne of life,  $\gamma$  they  $\gamma$  feare the LORDE, shal fynde him. Who so feareth the LORDE, shal prospere with frendes: and as he is himself, so shal his frende be also. My sonne, receaue doctryne fro thy youth vp, so shalt thou fynde wysdome tyll thou be olde. Go to her as one that ploweth, and soweth, and wayte paciētly for hir good frutes. For thou shalt haue but litle laboure in hir worke,<sup>c</sup> but thou shalt eate of hir frutes right soone. O how exceedige sharpe is wysdome to vnlearned men? an vnstedfast body wyl not remayne in her. Vnto soch she is as it were a twichstone,  $\gamma$  he casteth her from him in all the haist: for wysdome is with him but in name, there be but few  $\gamma$  haue knowlege of her. (But with them that knowe her, she abyde euē vnto  $\gamma$  appearinge of God.)

D Geue eare (my sonne) receaue my doctryne, and refuse not my counsell. Put thy fote in to hir lynckes, and take hir yock vpon thy neck: bowe downe thy shulder vnder her, beare hir patiently, and be not weery of hir bandes. Come vnto hir with thy whole hert, and kepe hir wayes with all thy power.

Seke after her, and she shalbe shewed the: and whā thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shal be turned to thy greate ioye. Then shal hir fetters be a stronge defence for the,  $\gamma$  hir yock a glorious rayment. For the bewtye of life is in her, and hir bandes are the couplinge together of saluacion. Yee a glorious rayment is it, thou shalt put it on, and the same crowne of ioye shalt thou weere.

E My sonne, yf thou wilt take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstandinge: and yf thou wilt applye thy mynde, thou shalt be wyse. Yf thou wilt bowe downe thine eare, thou shalt receaue doctryne: and yf thou delyte in hearinge, thou shalt be wyse. Stonde with  $\gamma$  multitude of soch elders as haue vnderstandinge, and consente vnto their wysdome with thine hert: that thou mayest heare all godly sermons,<sup>d</sup> and that the worthy sentences escape the not. And yf thou seist a man of discrete vnderstandinge, gett the soone vnto him, and let thy fote treade vpon the steppes of his dores. "Let thy mynde be vpon the commandementes of God, and be earnestly occupied in his lawes: so shal he establish thy hert, and geue  $\gamma$  wysdome at thine owne desyre.

The vij. Chapter.

D O no cuell, so shall there no harme happen vnto the. Depart awaye from the thinge that is wicked, and no mysfortune shal medle with the. My sonne, sowe no euell thinges in the forowes of vnrighteousnes, so shalt thou not reape the sevenfolde. Laboure not vnto man for any lordshipe, nether vnto the kynge for the seate of honour. Iustifie not thy self before God<sup>e</sup> (for he knoweth the hert) and desyre not to be reputed wyse in the presence of the kynge. Make no laboure to be made a iudge, excepte it so were,  $\gamma$  thou coudest mightily put downe wickednes: for yf thou shuldest stōde in awe of  $\gamma$  presence of the mightie, thou shuldest fayle in geuyng sentence. Offende not in  $\gamma$  multitude of the cite, and put not thyself amonge the people. Bynde not two synnes together,<sup>f</sup> for in one synne shalt thou not be vnpunished. Laugh no man to scorne in the heuynesse of his soule, for God (which seyth all thinges) is he that can bringe downe,<sup>a</sup> and set vp agayne. Accepte no lesynge agaynst thy brother, nether do the same agaynst thy frende. Vse not to make any maner of lye, for the custome therof is not good. Yf thou haue daughters, kepe their body, & shew not thy face cherefull to warde the. Marye thy daughter, and so shalt thou perfourme a weightie matter: but geue her to a man of vnderstandinge. Yf thou haue a wife after thine owne mynde, forsake her not: (but cōmitte not thy self to the hatefull.)

D <sup>f</sup>Honoure thy father from thy whole herte, and forgett not the sorofull trauaile that thy mother had with the: remembre that thou wast borne thorow them, and how cāst thou recōpense them the thinges that they haue done for the? STRYUE not with a mightie man, lest A thou chaunse to fall in to his hādes. Make no variaūce with a riche mā,<sup>m</sup> lest he happen to bringe vp an harde quarell agaynst ȝ. ### The ix. Chapter.

BE not gelous ouer ¶ wyfe of thy bosome, ¶ she shew not some shrewed poynte of wicked doctryne vpō the. Geue not the power of thy lyfe vnto a woman, lest she come in thy strength, and so thou be confounded. Loke not vpon a womā that is desyrus of many men, lest thou fall in to hir snares. Vse not the company of a womā that is a player and dauser, ¶ heare hir not, lest thou perish thorow hir tynsyng. Beholde not a maydē, that thou be not hurt in hir bewtye. <sup>a</sup> Cast not thy mynde vpon harlottes in eny maner of thinge, lest thou destroye both thy self and thine heretage. Go not aboute gasinge in euery layne of the cite, nether wādre thou abroad in the stretes therof. <sup>c</sup> Turne away thy face from a beautyfull woman, and loke not vpon the fayrnesse of other.

B Many a man hath perished thorow the bewty of ¶ women, for thorow it the desyre is kyndled as it were a fyre. (An aduouterous woman shalbe trodden vnder fote as myre, of euery one that goeth by the waye. Many a man wonderinge the bewtye of a straūge woman, haue bene cast out, for hir wordes kyndle as a fyre.) Sytt not with another mans wyfe by eny meanes, lye not with her vpon the bedd, make no wordes with her at ¶ wyne: lest thine hert consent vnto her, ¶ so thou with thy bloude fall in to destruction.

Forsake not an olde frende, for the new shal not be like him.

A new frende is new wine: let him be olde, ¶ thou shalt drynke him with pleasure. Desyre not ¶ honoure and riches of a synner, for thou knowest not what destruction is for to come vpon him. Delyte not thou in the thinge that the vngodly haue pleasure in: beinge sure, that the vngodly shal not be accepted vntyll their graue.

C Kepe the from the man that hath power to slaye, so nedest thou not to be afrayed of death. And yf thou comest vnto him, make no fawte, lest he happen to take awaye thy life. Remembre that thou goest in the myddest of snares, and vpon the bulworkes of ¶ cite. Bewarre of thy neyhboure as nye as thou canst, and <sup>e</sup> medle with such as be wyse and haue vnderstandinge. Let iust men be thy gestes, let thy myrth be in the feare of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy mynde, and let all thy talkynge be in the commandementes of the Hyest. In the handes of craftesmen shall the workes be commended, so shal the ¶ prynces of the people in the wyszdome of their talkynge. A man full of wordes is perious in his cite: and he that is temerarious and past shame in his talkinge, is to be abhorred.

The x. Chapter.

A WYSE iudge wil ordre his people with <sup>a</sup> discrecion, and where a man of vnderstandinge beareth rule, there goeth it well. <sup>i</sup> As the iudge of the people is himself, euē so are his officers: and loke what maner of man the ruler of the cite is, soch are they that dwell therein also. <sup>k</sup> An vnwise kinge destroyeth his people, but where they that be in auctorite are men of vnderstandinge, there the cite prospereth.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God, and whan his tyme is, he shal set a profitable ruler vpon it. In the hande of God is the power of man, and vpō the scribes shal he laye his honoure. Heithen is to be abhorred. "Because of vn-righteous dealinge, wronge, blasphemies and diuerse disceate, a realme shal be trāslated frō one people to another.

B There is nothinge worse then a cuvetous man. What prydest thou the, o thou earth and aszshes? There is not a more wicked thinge, then to loue moneye. And why? soch one hath his soule to sell: yet is he but fylthie dōge whyhe he lyueth.

And though the phisician shewe his helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusion it goeth after this maner: to daye a kynge, to morrow deed. For whan a man dyeth, he is the heyre of serpent, beastes and wormes. The begynnynge of mans pryde, is to fall awaye from God: and why? his hert is gone from his maker, for pryde is the original of all synne. Who so taketh holde therof, shalbe fylled with cursings, and at y last it shal ouer throwe him. Therefore hath the LORDE brought the cōgregacions of the wicked to dishonoure, and destroyed them vnto the ende.

C God hath destroyed the seates of proude prynces, and sett vp the meke in their steade. God hath wythered the <sup>o</sup>rottes of the proude Heithen, and planted the lowly amonge them. God hath ouerthrowne the <sup>o</sup>londes of the Heithen, and destroyed them out of the grounde. He hath caused them to wyther awaye, he hath brought them to naught, and made the memoriall of them to cease from out of the earth. (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and left the name of y humble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for man, nether wrothfulness for mens children. The sede of men that feareth God, shalbe brought to honoure: but y sede which transgresseth the commaundementes of y LORDE shalbe shamed. He y is the ruler amōge brethren, is holdē in honoure amōge them, and he regardeth soch as feare the LORDE.

D The glory of the riche, of the honorable and of the poore is the feare of God.

Despyse not thou the iust poore man, and magnifie not y rich vngodly. Greate is the iudge and mightie in honoure, yet is there none greater, then he y feareth God. Vnto y <sup>o</sup>seruaunt that is discrete, shal the fre do seruyce. He that is wyse and well nurtoured, wyll not grudge whan he is reformed, <sup>o</sup>an <sup>o</sup>ignoraunt body shal not come to honoure. Be not proude to do thy worke, and dispare not in the tyme of <sup>o</sup>aduersite. Better is he y laboureth, and hath plenteousnes of all thinges, then he y is gorgious, and wanteth bred.

My sonne, kepe thy soule in mekenes, and geue her hir due honoure. Who shal iustifie him, that synneth agaynst himself? Who wil honoure him, that dishonoureth his owne life? The poore is honoured for his faithfulness and trueth, but y rich is had in reputaciō because of his goodes. He that ordreth himself honestly in pouerte, how moch more shal he behaue himself honestly in riches? And who so ordreth himself vnonestly in riches, how moch more shal he behaue himself vnonestly in pouerte?

The xi. Chapter.

THE <sup>o</sup>wysdome of him y is brought lowe, shal lift vp his heade, and shal make him to sytt amonge greate mē. Com-mende not a man in his bewtye, nether despyse a man in his vtter appearaunce. The Bey is but a small beast amonge the foules, yet is hir frute excedeige swete. Be not proude of thy rayment, <sup>o</sup>and exalte not thyself in the daye of thy honoure: for y workes of the Hyst onely are wonderfull: yee glorious, secrete and vnkowne are his workes. Many tyrantes haue bene <sup>o</sup>fayne to syt downe vpo the earth, <sup>o</sup>y vnlickly hath worne y crowne. Many mightie mē haue bene brought lowe, and the honorable haue bene deluyered in to other mens handes. <sup>o</sup>Condemne no man, before thou haue tryed out the matter: and whan thou hast made enquisicion, then re-fourme righteously. Geue no sentēce before thou hast herde the <sup>o</sup>cause, but first let men tell out their tayles.

B Strue not for a matter that toucheth not thyself, and stonde not in the iudgment of synners. My sonne, medle not with many matters: <sup>o</sup>yf thou wyll be <sup>o</sup>riche, thou shalt not gett it: and though thou rennest thy waye afore, yet shalt thou not escape. some man is slouthfull, hath nede of helpe, wāteth strēth, and hath greate pouerte, and Gods eye loketh vpon him to good, setteth him vp from his lowe estate, and <sup>4</sup>lifteth vp his heade: so that many men maruell at him, and geue honoure vnto God.

C Prosperite and aduersite,<sup>1</sup> life and death, pouerte and riches come all of the LORDE. (Wysdome, nurtoure and knowlege of <sup>2</sup>ƿawe are with God: loue and <sup>3</sup>ƿayes of good are with him. Erroure and darcknes are made for synners: and they that exalte them selues in euell, waxe olde in euell.) The gift of God remayneth for the righteous, and his good wyl shal geue prosperite for euer. Some man is rich by luyngye nygardy, and <sup>4</sup>ƿ is the porcion of his rewarde, in that he sayeth: now haue I gotten rest, and now wyl I eate and drynke of my goodes myself <sup>5</sup>alone. And yet he considereth not, that the tyme draweth nye, <sup>6</sup>ƿ he must leaue all these thinges vnto other men, and dye himself. Stonde thou fast in thy couenant, and exercise thy self therin, and remayne in the worke vnto <sup>7</sup>ƿ age. Contynue not in the workes of synners, but put thy trust in God, and byde in thine estate: for it is but an easy thiȝe in <sup>8</sup>ƿ sight of God, to make a poore man riche, and that sodenly. The blessinge of God haisteth to <sup>9</sup>ƿ rewarde of the righteous, and maketh his frutes soone to florish and prospere. Saye not: what helpeth it me? and what shal I haue <sup>10</sup>ƿ why? Agayne, saye not: I haue ynough, how can I wante? When thou art in welfare, forget not <sup>11</sup>aduersite: and whan it goeth not well with the, haue a good hope, that it shal be better. For it is but a small thinge vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde euery mā accordinge to his wayes. The aduersite of an houre maketh one to forgett all pleasure, and whan a man dyeth, his workes are discouered. Prayse no body before his death, for a man shalbe knowne in his children.

E Bringē not euery man in to thine house, for the disceatfull layeth wayte dyuersly. Like as a partrich in a maūde, so is the hert of the proude: and like as a spyē, that loketh vpon the fall of his neghbour. For he turneth good vnto euell, and slaundreth the chosen. Of one sparck is made a greate fyre, and an vngodly mā layeth wayte for bloude. Bewarre of the disceatfull, for he ymagineth wicked thinges, to bringe <sup>1</sup>ƿ in to a perpetuall shame. Yf thou takest an aleaūt vnto <sup>2</sup>ƿ, he shal destroye the in vnquietnes, and dryue the from thine owne wayes.

The xij. Chapter.

WHAN thou wylt do good, knowe to <sup>1</sup>ƿ whom thou doest it, and so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefites. <sup>2</sup>Do good vnto the righteous, and thou shalt fynde greate rewarde: though not of him, yet (no doute) the LORDE him self shal rewarde the. He stōdeth not in a good case, that is allwaye occupied in euell, and geueth no allmes: for the Hyest hateth the synners, and hath mercy vpon them that shew the workes of repētaunce. Geue thou vnto such as feare God, and receaue not a synner: As for the vngodly and synners, he shall recompense vengeance vnto them, and kepe them to the daye of wrath. Geue thou vnto the good, and receaue not the synner: do well vnto him that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodly. Let not the bred be geuen him, that he be not mightier then thy self therin. For so shalt thou receaue twyse as moch euell, in all the good that thou doest vnto him: And why? the Hyest hateth synners, and shal rewarde vengeance to the vngodly.

B In prosperite a frende shal not be knowne, and in aduersite an enemye shal not be hyd. For whan a mā is in wealth, it greueth his enemies: but in heuynes and trouble a man shal knowe his frende. Trust neuer thine enemy, for like as an yron rusteth, so doth his wickednes. And though he make moch crouchingē and knelinge, yet kepe well thy mynde, and beware of him. Sett him not by <sup>1</sup>ƿ, nether let him sytt at thy right hādē: lest he turne him, gett in to thy place, take thy rowne and seke thy seate, and so thou at the last remembre my wordes, and be pricked at my sayenges.

C Bynde not two synnes together, for there shal not one be vnpunysched. Who wil haue pite of the charmer, that is stynged of <sup>1</sup>ƿ serpēt, or of all such as come nye <sup>2</sup>ƿ beastes? Thus ſhal he ſhame ſy in his meate, vntill he haue ſupte the cleane vp twye or thryſe, and at the laſt ſhal he laugh the to ſcorne. Afterwarde, when he ſeyth that thou haſt nothinge, he ſhal forſake the, and ſhake his heade at the.

B Bewarre, that thou be not diſceaued and brought downe in thy ſympleneſſe. (Be not to humble in thy wyſdome, leſt when thou art brought lowe, thou be diſceaued throw fooliſhnes.) Yf thou be called of a mightie man, abſent thy ſelf, ſo ſhal he call the to him the more oft. Preaſſe not thou vnto him, that thou be not ſhott out: but go not thou farre of, leſt he forgett the. Withdraw not thy ſelf frō his ſpeech, but beleue not his many wordes. For with moch cōmunicacion ſhall he tempte the, and (with a preuy mock) ſhall he queſtion ſy of thy ſecretes. The vnmereiful mynde of his ſhal marck thy wordes, he ſhal not ſpare to do ſy hurte & to put ſy in preſon. Bewarre, & take good hede to thy ſelf, for thou walkeſt in parell of thy ouerthrowinge.

(Now whā thou heareſt his wordes, make the as though thou werest in a dreame, & wake vp. Loue God all thy life longe, & call vpon him in thy nede.) Euery beaſt loueth his like, euen ſo let euery man loue his neghboure. All fleſh wil reſorte to their like, and euery man will kepe company with ſoch as he is himſelf. But as ſy wolfe agreeeth with the lambe, ſo doth the vngodly with ſy righteous. What felishiſſhe ſhulde an holy man haue with a dogg? How can the ryche and the poore agree together? The wilde aſſe is the lyons pray in the wilderneſſe, euen ſo are poore men the meate of the ryche. Like as the proude maye not awaye with lowlynnes, euen ſo doth the riche abhorre the poore. Yf a rich man fall, his frendes ſett him vp agayne: but when the poore falleth, his frendes forſake him. Yf a rich mā fall in to an erreure, he hath many helpers: he ſpeaketh proude wordes, and yet men iuſtifie him.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is punyſhed: yee though he ſpeake wiſely, yet can it haue no place. When the riche man ſpeaketh, euery body holdeth his tōge: and loke what he ſayeth, they prayſe it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man ſpeake, they ſaye: What felowe is this? and yf he do amysſe, they ſhal deſtroye him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no ſynne in his conſcience, and pouerte is a wicked thinge in the mouth of the vngodly. The hert of man chaungeth his countenance, whether it be in good or euell. A chearfull countenance is a tokē of a good hert, for els is it an harde thinge to knowe the thought.

The xiiij. Chapter.

BLISHED is the man, that hath not fallen with ſy worde of his mouth,<sup>a</sup> and is not pricked with the conſcience of ſynne. Happie is he that hath had no heuynes in his mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It becometh not a cuetous man and a nygarde, to be ryche: and what ſhulde a nygarde do with golde? He that with all his carefulnes heapeth together vnrighteously, gathereth for other folkes, and another mā shal make good chere with his goodes. He ŷ is wicked vnto him self, how shulde he be goode vnto other mē? How can soch one haue eny pleasure of his goodes? There is no thinge worse, then when one disfaouureth himself, ⁊ this is a rewarde of his wickednes. Yf he do eny good, he doth it not knowinge therof, and agaynst his will, and at the last he declareth his vngraciousnes. A nygarde hath a wicked eye, he turneth away his face, and despyeth his owne soule. "A couetous mans eye hath neuer ynough in the porcion of wickednes, vntyll the tyme that he wither awaye, and haue lost his owne soule.

B A wicked eye spareth bred, ⁊ there is scarcenesse vpō his table. My sonne, do good to thy self of ŷ thou hast, ⁊ geue ŷ LORDE his due offeringes. Remembre ŷ death tarieth not, ⁊ how ŷ the couenaunt of the graue is shewed vnto the: (for the conenaunt of this worlde shal dye the death.) "Do good vnto thy frende before thou dye, and accordinge to thy abylyte reach out thine hande, and geue vnto ŷ poore. Be not dispoyned of ŷ good daye, ⁊ let not ŷ porcion of ŷ good daie ouerpas the. Shalt thou not leaue thy traualles and labours vnto other men? In the deuydinge of the heretage geue and take, and sanctifie thy soule. Worke thou righteousnes before thy death, for in ŷ hell there is no meate to fynde. "All flesh shal fade awaye like grasse, ⁊ like a florishinge leaf in a grene tre. Some growe, some are cast downe: euen so is ŷ generacion of flesh and bloude: one commeth to an ende, another is borne.

C All transitory thinges shall fayle at the last, and the worker therof shal go withall. Euery chosen worke shall be iustified, and he ŷ medleth withall, shal haue honoure therin. Blessed is the man ŷ kepeth him in wysdome, and exerceyeth himself in vnderstandinge, ⁊ with discrecion shal he thinke vpon the fore knowlege of God. Which considereth ŷ wayes of wysdome in his hert, hath vnderstandinge in hir secretes, goeth after her (as one that seketh hir oute) ⁊ contynueth in hir wayes. He loketh in at hir windowes, ⁊ herkeneth at hir dores: He taketh his rest besyde hir house, ⁊ fasteneth his stake in hir wallles: He shall pitch his tent nye vnto hir hande, and in his tent shal good thinges rest for euermore: He shal sett his children vnder hir coueringe, ⁊ shal dwell vnder hir braunches. Vnder hir coueringe shal he be defended from the heate, and in hir glory shall he rest.

The xv. Chapter.

HE that feareth God, wil do good: and who so kepeth the lawe, shal optayne wysdome. As an honorable mother shal she mete him, and as a vyrgin shall she receaue him. "With ŷ bred of life and vnderstandinge shal she fede him, and geue him the water of wholsome wysdome to drynke. Yf he be constant in her, he shall not be moued: and yf he holde him fast by her, he shal not come to cofucion. She shall brynge him to honoure amonge his neighbours, and in the myddest of the congregacion shall she open his mouth. With the sprete of wysdome and vnderstādinge shal she fyll him, and clothe him with the garment of glory. She shal heape the treasure of myrth ⁊ ioye vpō him, and geue him an euerlastinge name to heretage. Foolish men wyll not take holde vpon her, but soch as haue vnderstandinge, wil mete her, for she is farre from pryde and disceate. Men that go aboute with lyes, wil not remembre her: (but men of trueth shall be founde in her, euen vnto the beholdinge of God.) Prayse is not semely in the mouth of ŷ vngodly, for he is not sent of ŷ LORDE. For of God commeth wysdome, ⁊ the prayse shall stonde by the wysdome of God, and shal be plenteous in a faithfull mouth, and the LORDE shal geue her vnto him.

B Saye not thou: It is the LORDES faute that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do ŷ thinge that God hateth. Saye not thou: he hath caused me to go wronge, for he hath no nede of the vngodly. God hateth all abhominacion of erreure, ⁊ they that feare God wyl loue no soch. "God made man from the begynnyng, ⁊ left him in the hande of his counsell. He gaue him his commaundementes and preceptes: yf thou wilt obserue the commaundementes, ⁊ kepe acceptable faithfulness for euer, they shal preserue ŷ. He hath "set water and fyre before the, reach out thine hande vnto which thou wilt. Before man is life and death, good and euell: loke what him liketh, shalbe geuen him. For the wysdome of God is greate and mightie in power, and beholdeth all men continually. The eyes of the LORDE are vpon them: that feare him, and he knoweth all the workes of man. He hath commaunded no man to do vngodly, nether hath he geuen eny man leue to synne.

The xvi. Chapter.

A DELYTE not thou in the multitude of vngodly children, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Trust not thou to their life, and regarde not their labours: for one sonne y<sup>e</sup> feareth God is better, the a thousande vngodly. And better it is for a man to dye without childrē, the to leaue behynde him soch children as are vngodly. For by one y<sup>e</sup> hath vnderstandinge, maye a whole cite be vpholden, but though the vngodly be many, yet shal it be waysted thorow them. Many soch thinges hath myne eye sene, and greater thinges then these haue I herde with myne eares. In the congregacion of the vngodly shal a fyre burne, and amonge vnfaithfull people shal the wrath be kyndled.

B The olde giātes obtayned no grace for their synnes, which were destroyed, trusinge to their owne strēgth. Nether spared he them, amōge whom Loth was a straunger: but smote them and abhorred them because of the pryde of their wordes. He had no pitie vpō them, but destroyed all the people, that were so stoute in synne. And for so moch as he ouersawe not the sixe hundreth thousande, that gathered them selues together in y<sup>e</sup> hardnesse of their hert: it were maruell yf one beyng hardnecked, shulde be fre. For mercy and wrath is with him: he is both mightie to forgeue, and to poure out displeasure. Like as his mercy is greate, euē so is his punyishment also, he iudgeth a man accordinge to his workes. The vngodly shal not escape in his spoyle, and the longe pacience of him that sheweth mercy, shal not byde behynde. All mercy shall make place vnto euery man accordinge to the deserynge of his workes, (and after the vnderstandinge of his pilgrimage.)

Saye not thou: I wyl hyde my self from God, for who wyl thinke vpon me from aboue? I shal not be knowne in so greate a heape of people, for what is my soule amonge so many creatures? Beholde, the heauen, yee the heauen of heauens, the depe, the earth and all that therin is, shall be moued at his presence: the mountaynes, the hilles and the foundations of the earth shal shake for feare, whan God vysiteth them. These thinges doth no hert vnderstonde, but he vnderstandeth euery hert, and who vnderstandeth his wayes? No man seyth his storme, and the most parte of his workes are secrete. Who wil declare the workes of his righteousnes? Or who shal be able to abyde them? for the couenaunt is farre from some, and the tryenge out of men is in the fulfillynge. He that is humble of hert, thinketh vpon soch thinges: but an vnwyse and erroneous man casteth his mynde vnto foolish thinges.

My sonne, herken thou vnto me, and lerne vnderstādinge, and marck my wordes with thine hert: I wyl geue the a sure doctrine, and planely shal I enstrucke the. God hath sett his workes in good ordre from the begynninge, and parte of them hath he sundered from the other. He hath garnyshed his workes from euerlastinge, and their begynnynge accordinge to their generacions. None of the hyndered another, nether was eny of them disobedient vnto his worde. After this, God looked vpō the earth, and fylled it with his goodes. With all maner of lyuinge beastes hath he couered the grounde, and they all shalbe turned vnto earth agayne.

The xviij. Chapter.

GOD shope man of the earth, and turned him vnto earth agayne. He gaue him the nombre of dayes and certayne tyme, yee and gaue him power of the thinges that are vpō earth. He clothed him with strength, and made him after his owne licknes. He made all flesh to stonde in awe of him, so that he had the dominion of all beastes and foules. He made out of him an helper like vnto him self, and gaue them discrecion and tonge, eyes and eares, and a hert to vnderstande, and filled them with instruccio[n] and vnderstandinge. He created for them also the knowlege of the sprete, filled their hert with vnderstandinge, and shewed them good and euell. He sett his eye vpon their hertes, declaringe vnto them his greate and noble workes: (that they shulde prayse his holy name together, reioyce of his wonders, and be tellinge of his noble actes.)

<sup>a</sup> Besydes this, he gaue them instructio[n], and the lawe of life for an heretage. He made an euerlastinge couenaunt with them, and shewed them his righteousnes and iudgmentes. They sawe his glory with their eyes, and their eares herde the maiesty of his voyce. And he saide vnto them: beware of all vnrighteous thinges. He gaue euery man also a commaundement concernynge his neighbour.

B Their waies are euer before him, and are not hyd from his eyes. <sup>b</sup> He hath sett a ruler vpon euery people, but Israel is † LORDES porcion. All their workes are as the Sonne in † sight of God, and his eyes are allwaye lokynge vpon their wayes. All their vnrighteousneses are manifest vnto him, and all their wickednesses are open in his sight. The mercy † a man sheweth <sup>c</sup> is as it were a purse with him, and a mans good dede preserveth him as the apple of an eye. At the last shall he awake, <sup>d</sup> and rewarde euery man vpon his heade as he hath deserved, and shal turne them together in to the nethermost partes of the earth. <sup>e</sup> But vnto them that wyll repent, he hath geue[n] the waye of righteousnes. As for such as be weake, he comforteth the[n], suffreth them, and sendeth them the porcion of † verite. O turne then vnto the LORDE, forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the LORDE, do the lesse offence, turne agayne vnto the LORDE, forsake thine vnrighteousnes, be an vtter enemy to abhominacion (lerne to knowe the righteousnes and iudgmentes of God, stonde in the porcion that is sett forth for the and in the prayer of the most hye God. Go in to the porcion of the holy worlde, with such as be lyuinge and geue thanks vnto God.)

C <sup>f</sup> Who wil prayse the LORDE in the hell? Abyde not thou in the erreure of the vngodly, but geue him thākes before death. As for † deed, thankfulness perisheth from him as nothinge. Geue thou thanks in thy life, yea whyle thou art lyuynge and whole shalt thou geue thanks, and prayse God and reioyce in his mercy. O how greate is the louynge kyndnesse of the LORDE, and his mercifull goodnes vnto such as turne vnto him? For all thinges maye not be in man: and why? the sonne of man is not immortal, and he hath pleasure in the vanyte of wickednes. What is more cleare the[n] the Sonne? yet shal it fayle. Or what is more wicked, then the thinge that flesh and bloude hath ymagined? and that same shall be reprobud. The LORDE seyth the power of the hye heauen, and all are but earth and aszshes.

The xviij. Chapter.

HE that lyueth for euermore, made all things together. <sup>g</sup> God only is righteous, and remaineth a victorious kynge for euer. <sup>h</sup> Who shalbe able to expresse the workes of him? Who hath sought out the grounde of his noble actes? Who shal declare the power of his greatnesse? Or, who will take vpon him to tell out his mercy? As for the wonderous workes of the LORDE, there maye nothinge be taken from them, nothinge maye be put vnto them, nether maye the grounde of them be founde out. But whan a man hath done his best, he must begynne agayne: and whan he thinketh to be come to an ende, he must go agayne to his laboure. What is man? Wherto is he worth? What good or euell can he do? <sup>i</sup> Yf the nombre of a mans dayes be almost an hundreth yeaer, it is moch.

Like as the droppes of rayne are vnto <sup>j</sup> see, and as a grauell stone is in comparison of the sonde: <sup>k</sup> so are these few yeaeres to the dayes euerlastinge. Therefore is † LORDE patient with them, and poureth out his mercy vpon them. He sawe and perceaued the thoughtes and ymaginacions of their harte, that they were euell: therefore heaped he vpon his mercifull goodnes vpon them, and shewed them the waie of righteousnes. The mercy that a mā hath, reacheth to his neighbour: but † mercy of God is vpon all flesh. He chasteneth, he teacheth and nourtureth: yea euen as a shepherde turneth agayne his flock, so doth he all them that receaue chastenyng, nurtoure and doctryne. Mercifull is he vnto

C My sonne, whan thou doest good, make no grudginge at it: and what so euer thou geuest, speake no discomfortable wordes. Shal not the dew coole the heate? Euen so is a worde better then a gift. Is not a frendly worde a good honest gift? <sup>b</sup> but a gracious man geueth them both. A foole shal cast a man in the tethe, and that roughly, <sup>c</sup> and a gift of the nygarde putteth out <sup>d</sup> eyes. Get the righteousnes before thou come to iudgmēt: Lerne before thou speake, and go to phisick or euer thou be sick: <sup>e</sup> examen and iudge thy self, before the iudgment come, and so shalt thou fynde grace in the sight of God. Humble thy self afore thou be sick, and in tyme of thy disease shewe thy conuersacion. Let not to praye allwaye, and stonde not in feare to be reformed vnto death, for the rewarde of God endureth for euer. Before thou prayest, prepare thy soule, and be not as one <sup>f</sup> tempteth God. Thynke vpon the wrathfull indignacion that shalbe at the ende, and the houre of vègeaunce, whā HE shal turne awaie his face. <sup>g</sup> Whan thou hast ynough, remembre the tyme of hunger: and whan thou art rych, thynke vpon the tyme of pouerte and scarcenesse.

D From the mornynge vntyll the euenynge the tyme is changed, and all such thynges are soone done in <sup>h</sup> sight of God. A wyse man feareth God in all thynges, and in the dayes of transgression he kepeth him self from synne. A discrete man hath pleasure in wysdome, and he that fyndeth her, maketh moch of her. They that haue had vnderstandinge, haue dealt wysely in wordes, haue vnderstonde the trueth and righteousnes, and haue sought out wyse sentēces and iudgements. <sup>i</sup> Folowe not thy lustes, but turne <sup>j</sup> from thine owne will. For yf thou geuest thy soule hir desyres, it shal make thine enemies to laugh the to scorne. Take not thy pleasure in greute voluptuousnes, <sup>k</sup> & medle not to moch withall. Make not to greate cheare of the thinge that thou hast womne by auantage: lest thou fall in to pouerte, and haue nothinge in thy purse.

The xix. Chapter.

A LABOURYNGE man that is geuen <sup>l</sup> vnto dronckennes, shall not be riche: and he that maketh not moch of small thynges, shal fall by litle and litle. <sup>m</sup> Wyne and women make wyse men rēnagates, and put men of vnderstādinge to reprove: and he that accompanieth aduouterers shal become a wicked man. Mothes and wormes shall haue him to heretage, yee he shall be sett vp to a greater example, and his soule shalbe roted out of the nombre. <sup>n</sup> He that is haistie to geue credence, is light mynded, and doth agaynst himself. Who so reioyseth in wickednes, shal be punished: he that hateth to be reformed, his life shalbe shortened: and he that abhorreth bablinge of wordes, quencheth wickednes. (He that offendeth agaynst his owne soule, shal repent it: and he that reioyseth in wickednes, shalbe punyshed.)

Rehearse not a wicked and churlish worde <sup>o</sup> twyse, and thou shalt not be hyndered. Shew thy secretes nether to frende ner foo, <sup>p</sup> & yf thou hast offended, tell it not out. For he shal herken vnto the and marck the: and whan he fyndeth oportunitie, he shall hate the. <sup>q</sup> Yf thou hast herde a worde agaynst thy neyghboure, lett it be deed within the: and be sure, thou shalt haue no harme therby. A foole trauaileth with a worde, like as a woman that is payned with bearinge of childe. Like as an arowe shott in a dogges thye, so is a worde in a foolers hert. <sup>r</sup> Tell thy frende his faute, lest he be ignoraunt, and saye: I haue not done it, or yf he haue done it, that he do it nomore. Reproue thy neyghboure, that he kepe his tonge: and yf he haue spokē, that he saye it nomore.

C Tell thy neyghboure his faute, for oft tymes an offence is made, and geue not credēce to euery worde. A man fallett somtyme with his tonge, but not with his will. <sup>s</sup> For what is he, <sup>t</sup> yf hath not offended in his tonge? Geue thy neyghboure warnynge, before thou threaten him, and geue place vnto the lawe of the LORDE. The feare of God is all wysdome, <sup>u</sup> & he that is a right wyse man kepeth the lawe. As for the doctrine of wickednes, it is no wysdome, and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandinge: it is but wickednesse and abhominacion & a blasphemynge of wyszdome. A symple man of small vnderstandinge that feareth God, is better then one that hath moch wyszdome, and transgresseth the lawe of the Hyst.

D A craftye sotell man can be wyse, but he is vnrighteous, and with giftes he wraysteth the open and manifest lawe. A wicked man can behaue himself humbly, and can douke with his heade, and yet is he but a disceauer within. He hydeth his face," and disguyseth it: & because he shulde not be knowne, he preuenteth the.

And though he be so weake that he can do the no harme, yet whan he maye fynde oportunitie, he shall do some euell. A man maye be knowne by his face, and one that hath vnderstandinge, maye be perceaued by the loke of his countenance. A mans garment, <sup>a</sup>laughter & goynge, declare what he is.

The xx. Chapter.

A SOME man reproveth his neyghboure oft tymes, but not in due season: 'Agayne, some man holdeth his tonge, and he is wyse and discrete. It is moch better to geue warnynge and to reprove, then to beare euell will: for he that knowlegeth him self openly, shalbe preserued from hurt and destruction. Like as whan a chamberlayne thorow desyre and lust defyleth a mayden, euen so is it with him that vseth violence and vnrighteousnes in <sup>y</sup> lawe: (O how good a thinge is it, a man <sup>y</sup> is reproveth, to shewe openly his repentance? for so shalt thou escape wyllfull synne.)

Some man kepeth sylence, and is founde wyse: but he that is not ashamed what he sayeth, is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tonge, because he hath not the vnderstandinge of the language: and some man kepeth sylence, waytinge a conuenient tyme.<sup>d</sup> A wyse man wyll holde his tonge tyll he se oportunitie, but a wanten and an vn discrete body shal regarde no tyme. He that vseth many wordes, shal hurte his owne soule: and he that taketh auctorite vpō him vnrighteously, shalbe hated.

Some man hath oft tymes prosperite in wicked thinges: Agayne, some man getteth moch, and hath harme and losse. There is some gift that is nothinge worth: Agayne, there is some gift, whose rewarde is dubble. Some man getteth a fall for beyng to proude, and some commeth to worshipe from lowe estate. Some man bieth moch for a litle pryce, and must paye for it seuenfolde.

A wyse man with his wordes maketh him self to be loued, but the fauours of fooles shalbe poured out. The gift of the vn wyse shal do the no good, for his eyes are seuen folde. <sup>f</sup>He shal geue litle, & saye he gaue moch: he openeth his mouth and crieth out, as it were one that crieth out wyne. To daye he lendeth, tomorow he axeth it agayne, and soch a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yee euen they that eate my bred, speake no good of me. O how oft, and of how many shal he be laughed to scorne? He taketh a more perous fall by soch wordes, then yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shal the falles of wicked men come haistely. In the mouth of him that is vntaught, are many vnconuenient and vnmeter wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be alowed at the mouth of the foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man synneth not, because he hath not wherewithall, and in this rest he shall be stynged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwyse bodies sake destroyeth he it, (and with acceptinge of personnes shal he vndoo himself.) Some man promiseth his frende a gift for very shame, and getteth an enemye of him for naught. A lye is a wicked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouth of the vnwyse. A thefe is better, then a man that is accustomed to synne, but they both shal haue destruction to heretage. The conditions of lyers are vn honest, and their shame is euer with them.

A wyse man shall brynge himself to honoure with his wordes, <sup>e</sup>and he that hath vnderstandinge shall be sett by amonge greate men. He that tyllth his londe, <sup>a</sup>shal increase his heape of corne: he that worketh righteousness, shall be exalted, & he that pleaseth greate men, shall escape moch euell. <sup>f</sup>Rewards and giftes blynde the eyes of the wyse, and make him domme, that he can not tell

The xxi. Chapter.

A MY sonne, yf thou hast synned, do it no more:<sup>a</sup> but praye for thy foresynnes, that they maye be for geuen the. Fle from synne, euen as from a serpent: for yf thou comest to nye her, she wyll bite the. The teth therof are as the teth of a lyon, to slaye the soules of men. The wickednes of man is as a sharpe two edged swerde, which maketh soch woundes that they can not be healed.

Stryfe and wrongeous dealinge shall waist awaye a mans goodes, & thorow pryde a rich house shalbe brought to naught: so the riches of the proude shalbe roted out. The prayer of the poore goeth out of the mouth,<sup>c</sup> and commeth vnto the eares, and his vengeance (or defence) shall come, and yf haistely. Who so hateth to be reformed, it is a token of an vngodly personne: but he that feareth God, wyl remembre himself. A mightie man is knowne asfarre of by his tonge, but he that hath vnderstandinge, perceaueth that he shal haue a fall.

B Who so buyldeth his house with other mens cost, is like one that gathereth stones in wynter. The congregacion of the<sup>d</sup> vngodly is like stubble gathered together, their ende is a flamme of fyre. The waye of the vngodly is sett with stones, but in their ende is hell, darcknes, and paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wyll holde fast the vnderstandinge therof, and the ende of the feare of God is wyszdome. He that is not wyse, wyll not be taught in good: but the vnwyse man aboundeth in wickednes: and where bytternes is, there is no vnderstōdinge. The knowlege of the wyse shall flowe like water that renneth ouer, and his counsell is like a fountayne of life.

C The hert of a foole is like a brokē vessell, he can kepe no wyszdome. When a man of vnderstandinge heareth a wyse worde, he shal commende it, and make moch of it. But yf a volupetuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behynde his back. The talkynge of a foole is like an heuy burthen by the waye: but to heare a wyse man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doute is in the congregacion, it is axed at the mouth of the wyse, and they shal pondre his wordes in their hertes. Like as a house that is destroyed, euen so is wyszdome vnto a foole: As for the knowlege of the vnwyse, it is but darck wordes. Doctryne is vnto him yf hath no vnderstandinge, euen as fetters aboute his fete, and like manicles vpon his right hande.<sup>e</sup> A foole lifteth vp his voyce with laughter, but a wyse man shall scarce laugh secretly.

D Lernynge is vnto a wyse man a fewell of golde, and like an armlett vpō his right arme. A foolish mans foote is soone in his neighbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at the personne of the mightie. A foole wyll pepe in at yf wyndow in to the house, but he that is well nouretured, wyll stonde without. A foolish man stondest herkenynge at the dore, but he that is wyse, wyll be ashamed.

The lippes of the vnwyse wylbe tellynge foolish thinges, but yf wordes of soch as haue vnderstandinge, shalbe weyed in the balaunce. The hert of foolis is in their mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in their hert. When the vngodly curseth the blasphemers, he curseth his owne soule.<sup>f</sup> A preny accuser of other men shal defyle his owne soule, and be hated of euery man: (but he that kepeth his tonge and is discrete, shall come to honoure.)

The xxiij. Chapter.

A SLOUTHFULL body is moulded of a stone of clai: he that toucheth him, must wash his handes agayne. A mysnurtored sonne is the dishonoure of the father. A foolish daughter shalbe litle regarded. A wyse daughter is an heretage vnto hir husbāde: but she that commeth to dishonesty, bringeth hir father in heuynes. A daughter that is past shame, dishonoureth both hir father and hir husbāde: the vngodly shal regarde her, but they both shal despise her. The playenge of Musick is not mete where heuynes is, euen so is the correcciō & doctryne of wyszdome euer vnpleasaunt vnto foolis.

B Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a potsherde together: as one that telleth a taylor to him that heareth him not, and as one that rayseth a mā out of an heuy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wyszdome, is euen as a man, which speaketh to one ŷ is a slepe. Whā he hath tolde his tayle, he sayeth: what is the matter? Whā one dyeth, lamentacion is made for him, because the light fayleth him: euē so let mē mourne ouer a foole, for he wanteth vnderstandinge. Make but litle wepinge because of the deed: for he is come to rest: but the life of the foole is worse then the death. <sup>a</sup>Seuen dayes do men mourne for him that is deed, but the lamentacion ouer the vnwyse and vngodly shulde endure all the dayes of their life.

C Talke not moch with a foole, and go not with him that hath no vnderstandinge. Bewarre of him, lest it turne the to trauaile, ⁊ thou shalt not be defyled with his synne. Depart from him, and thou shalt fynde rest, ⁊ shalt not be drawē backe in to his foolishnes. What is heuyen then leade? And what shulde a foole be called els, but leade? <sup>b</sup>Sōde, salt ⁊ a lōpe of yron is easier to beare, then an vnwyse, foolish, and vngodly man. Like as the band of wodd bounde together in the foundation of the house can not be lowsed, euē so is it with ŷ hert ŷ is established in ŷ thought of coucell. The thought of the wyse, shal nether feare ner be offended at eny tyme.

D Like as a fayre playstred wall in a winter house, ⁊ an hye buyldinge, maye not abyde ŷ wide ⁊ storme: euē so is a fooles hert afraied in his ymaginacion: he feareth at euery thinge, and can not endure. He that nypeth a mans eye, bryngeth forth teares: and he that pricketh the hert, bringeth forth ŷ meanyng ⁊ thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayeth them awaye: ⁊ he ŷ blasphemeth his frēde, breaketh ŷ frēdshiipe. though thou drewest a swerde at thy frende, yet displayre not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frende. Yf he speake sowerly, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together agayne: excepte it be so that thou blaspheme him, dysdayne him, opē his secretes and wounde him tratorously: for all soch thinges shal dryue awaye a frende.

E Be faithfull vnto thy neighoure in his pouerte, that thou mayest reioyse with him also in his prosperite. Abyde stedfast vnto him in ŷ tyme of his trouble, that thou maiest be heyre with him in his heretage. Like as the vapor and smoke goeth out at the ouen before ŷ fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynge go before bloudsheddinge. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyl not hyde my face from him, though he shulde do me harme. Who so euer heareth it, shal bewarre of him. Who shal set a watch before my mouth, ⁊ a sure seale vpon my lippes, ŷ I fall not with thē, ⁊ ŷ my tonge destroye me not?

The xxiij. Chapter.

O LORDE, father and gouernoure of my life, leaue me not in their ymaginaciō ⁊ counsell. Oh let me not fall in soch reprove. Who wyl kepe my thought with ŷ scourge, and the doctryne of wyszdome in myne herte? that he spare not myne ignoraunce, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignoraunces increase, that myne offences be not many in nombre, and that my synnes excede not: lest I fall before myne enemyes, and so my aduersary reioyse. O LORDE, thou father ⁊ God of my life, leaue me not in their ymaginacion. O let me not haue a proude lōke, but turne awaye all voluptuousnes from me. Take fro me the lustes of the body, let not the desyres of vncleennes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer in to an vnshamefast and obstinate mynde.

B Heare me (o ye children) I will geue you a doctryne, how ye shal orde youre mouth: who so kepeth it, shal not perish thorow his lippes, ner be hurt thorow wicked workes (As for the synner, he shalbe taken in his owne vanite: he that is proude and cursed, shal fall therein.) <sup>c</sup>Let not thy mouth be accustomed with swearinge, for in it there are many falles. Let not the namynge of God be continually in thy mouth: for like as a seruauent which is oft punyshed can not be without some sore, euen so what so euer he be ŷ sweareth and nameth God, shal not be cleane poured frō synne. A man that vseth moch swearinge, shalbe fylled with wickednes, and the plague shal neuer go from his house. Yf he begyle his brother, his faute shalbe vpon him: yf he knowlege not his synne, he maketh a dubble offence: and yf he sweare in vayne, he shall not be founde righteous, for his house shalbe full of plagues.

(God graunte y it be not founde in the house of Iacob.) But they y feare God, eschue all soch and lye not weltringe in synne. Vse not thy mouth to vn honest and fylthy talkynge,<sup>d</sup> for in it is the worde of synne. Remembre thy father and thy mother, whā thou art set amonge greate men: lest God forget y in their sight, and lest thou dotinge in thy custome, suffre rebuke, and wyshe not to haue bene borne, and so curse the daye of thy natiuite. The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemie,<sup>c</sup> wyl neuer be reformed all y dayes of his life. To synne twyse is to moch, but the thirde bringeth wrath and destruccion. An whote stomack can not be quenched, (euē like a burnynge fyre) tyll it haue swallowed vp somthiḡe: euē so an vchaste mā hath no rest in his flesh, tyll he haue kyndled a fyre.

D All bred is swete to an whoremonger, he wyl not leaue of, tyll he haue his purpose. A man that breaketh wedlock, and regardeth not his soule, but sayeth: Tush, who seyth me?<sup>d</sup> I am compassed aboute with darcknes, the walles couer me, no body seyth me: whom nede I to feare? The Hiest wyl not remembre my synnes. (He vnderstandeth not that his eyes se all thinges, for all soch feare of mē dryueth awaye the feare of God from him: for he feareth onely the eyes of men, and considereth not that the eyes of the LORDE are clearer then the Sonne, beholdinge all y wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokinge euen to mens hertes in secrete places. The LORDE God knewe all thinges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpon them all. The same mā shalbe opely punyshed in y stretes of y cite,<sup>c</sup> and shalbe chased abrode like a yonge horse foale: and when he thinketh leest vpon it, he shalbe takē. Thus shal he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstonde the feare of the LORDE. And thus shal it go also with euery wyfe y leaueth hir huszbande, and getteth enheretaunce by a straūge mariage. First, she hath bene vnfaithfull vnto the lawe of y Hiest:<sup>d</sup> Secōdly, she hath forsaken hir owne huszbande: Thirdly, she hath played y whore in aduouty, and gottē hir childrē by another man. She shalbe brought out of y cōgregaciō, and hir childrē shalbe loked vpō. Hir childrē shal not take rote: and as for frute, hir brāuches shal brīge forth none. A shamefull reporte shal she leaue behynde her, and hir dishonoure shal not be put out. And they y remayne, shal knowe, y there is nothiḡe better, thā y feare of God: and y there is nothiḡe sweter, then to take hede vnto the commaundementes of the LORDE. A greate worshiḡe is it to folowe y LORDE, for longe life shalbe receaued of him.

The xxiij. Chapter.

WYSZDOME shal prayse herself, and be A honoured in God, and reioyse in y myddest of his people: In the cōgregaciōs of the Hiest shal she open hir mouth, and tryumphe in y beholdinge of his power: In y myddest of hir people shal she be exalted, and wondred at in the holy fulnesse: In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe commended, and amonge soch as be blessed she shalbe prayed, and shal saye: I am come out of the mouth of y Hiest, first borne before all creatures. I caused y light y fayleth not, to aryse in the heauen, and couered all the earth as a cloude. My dwellinge is aboue in y heyth, and my seate is in the piler of the cloude. I my self alone haue gone rounde aboute the compasse of heauen, and pearced the grounde of y depe: I haue walked in the floudes of y see, and haue stonde in all landes: my domynion is in euery people and in euery naciō, and with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of all, both hye and lowe.

In all these thinges also I sought rest, and B dwellinge in some enheritaunce. So y creator of all thinges gaue me a commaundement: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and saide vnto me: Let thy dwellinge be in Iacob, and thy inheritaunce in Israel, and rote thy self amōge my chosen. <sup>c</sup>I was created from the begynninge and before the worlde, and shal not leaue of vnto the worlde to come. <sup>d</sup>In the holy habitaunce haue I serued before him, and so was I stablished in Sion. <sup>e</sup>In y holy cite rested I in like maner, and in Ierusalem was my power. I toke rote in an honourable people, euen in the porciō of y LORDE and in his heretage, and kepte me in y fulnes of the sayntes. I am sett vp an hye like a Ceder vpō Libanus, and as a Cypers tre vpon the mount Hermon: I am exalted like a palme tre in Cades, & as a rose plāted in Iericho: As a fayre olyue tre in the felde, & am exalted like as a plantayne tre by the water syde. I haue geuen a smell in the stretes, as ſ Cynamon and Balme, that hath so good a sauoure: yee a swete odoure haue I geuen, as it were Myrre of the best.

© I haue made my dwellings to smell as it were of rosyn, Galbanum, of Clowes and Incense, & as Libanus whan it is not hewē downe, & mine odoure is as the pure Balme. As the Terebynte haue I stretched out my braunches, and my braunches are the braunches of honoure and louynge fauoure. "As ſ vyne haue I brought forth frute of a swete sauoure, and my floures are ſ frute of honoure and riches. I am the mother of bewtye, of loue, of feare, of knowlege and of holy hope. In me is all grace of life and trueth: "In me is all hope of life and vertue. O come vnto me, all ye that be desyrous of me, and fyll youre selues with my frutes: for my sprete is sweter then hony, & so is my inheritaunce more then the honycombe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore. They that eate me, shal haue the more hunger: and they that drynke me, shal thyrste the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shal not come to confucion: and they that worke in me, shal not offende. They that make me to be knowne, shal haue euerlasting life.

All these thinges are the boke of life, the couenaunt of the Hyest, and the knowlege of the trueth. "Moses commaunded the lawe in the preceptes of righteounes for an heretage vnto the house of Iacob,<sup>a</sup> and cōmitted ſ promyses vnto Israel (Out of Dauid his seruānt HE ordered to raise vp a most mightie kinge, syttinge in the seate of honoure for euermore.) "This fylleth with wyszdome like as the floude of Phison, & as ſ floude of Tigris, whan the new frutes are a growinge.

© This bringeth a plenteuous vnderstandinge, like Euprates: " & fylleth it vp, as Iordane in the time of haruest. This maketh nurtoure to breake forth as the light, & as the water Gihon in ſ haruest. The first bath not knowne her perfectly, nomore shal the last seke out ſ grounde of her. For hir thought is fuller thē the see, and hir counsell is profounder then the greates depe.

I wyszdome haue cast out floudes. I am as a greates waterbroke out of ſ riuer. I am as the ryuer Dorix, and as a water condyte am I come out of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I wyl water the garden of my yonge plantes, and fyll the frute of my byrth. So my waterbroke became exceadinge greates, and my ryuer approached vnto the see. For I make doctryne to be vnto all mē as light as the fayre mornynge, and I shall make it to be euer the clearer. (I will pearse thorow all the lower partes of the earth, I wyl loke vpon all soch as be a slepe, and lighten all thē that put their trust in the LORDE.) I shal yet poure out doctrine, like as prophcey, and leaue it vnto soch as seke after wyszdome, and their generacions shal I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerlastinge worlde. Beholde, how that I haue not laboured for my self onely,<sup>a</sup> but for all them ſ seke after ſ trueth.

The xvj. Chapter.

THRE thinges there are, ſ my sprete<sup>a</sup> fauoureth, "which be also a lowed before God and men: The vnyte of brethren, the loue of neighbours, and man and wyfe that agree well together.<sup>i</sup>

Thre thinges there be which my soule hateth, and I vtterly abhorre the life of them: A poore man that is proude. A rich mā that is a lyar,<sup>k</sup> and an olde body that doteth and is vnchaste.

Yf thou hast gathered nothinge in thy youth, what wylt thou fynde thē in thine age? O how pleasānt a thinge is it, whā gray headed men are discrete, & whan the elders can geue good counsell? O how cōly a thinge is wyszdome vnto aged men? yee vnderstandinge and counsell is a glorious thinge. The crowne of olde men is to haue moch experience, & ſ feare of God is their worshipec.

There be ix. thinges, which I haue iudged in my hert to be happie, and the tenth wil I tell forth vnto men with my tonge. A man ſ whyle he lyueth, hath ioye of his children, and seith ſ fall of his enemies. and ſ̄ hath not bene faine to ſerue ſoch as are vnmete for him. Wel is him, ſ̄ ſyndeth a faithfull frende: ⁊ wel is him, which talketh of wiſdome to an eare ſ̄ heareth him. O how greate is he, ſ̄ ſyndeth wiſdome ⁊ knowledge? Yet is he not aboute him, that feareth the LORDE. The feare of God hath ſett itſelf aboute all thinges. Blessed is ſ̄ man, vnto whō it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whō ſhal he be lickened, ſ̄ kepeth it faſt? The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue, and the begynnyng of faith is to cleue faſt vnto it. The heuynes of the hert is all the punyſhment, and the wickednes of a woman goeth aboute all. All punyſhment ⁊ plage is nothinge in compariſon of the plage of the hert, euē ſo all wickednes is nothinge to the wickednes of a woman.

C What ſo euer happeneth vnto a man, is nothinge in compariſon of it, ſ̄ his euell willers do vnto him: and all vengeance is nothinge to the vengeance of the enemye. There is not a more wicked heade then the heade of the ſerpēt, and there is no wrath aboute ſ̄ wrath of a woman. "I wyl rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe houſe with a wicked wyfe. The wickedneſſe of a woman chaungeth hir face, ſhe ſhal moſſell hir cōtenaunce as it were a Beer, ⁊ as a ſack ſhall ſhe ſhewe it amonge the neighbours. Hir huſbande is brought to ſhame amōge his neighbours, ⁊ whā he heareth it, it maketh him to ſighe. All wickednes is but litle to the wickednes of a woman, ſ̄ porcion of the vngodly ſhal fall vpon her.

D Like as to clymme vp a ſondy waye is to ſ̄ fete of the aged, euē ſo is a wiſe full of wordes to a ſtill quyet man. <sup>b</sup> Loke not to narrowly vpon the bewtye of a woman, leſt thou be prouoked in deſyre towarde her. The wrath of a woman is diſhonoure and greate confuſiō. Yf a woman gett the maſtrie, then is ſhe contrary to hir huſbande. A wicked wiſe maketh a ſory hert, an heuy countenance and a deed wounde. "Of the woman came ſ̄ begynnyng of ſynne, and thorow her we all are deed. Geue thy water no paſſage, no not a litle, nether geue a wicked woman hir will. Yf ſhe walke not after thy hande, ſhe ſhall confounde the in the ſight of thy enemies. Cut her of then from thy fleſh, that ſhe do not allwaye abuſe the.

The xxi. Chapter.

H APPIE is the man that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nōbre of his yeares ſhalbe dubble. An honeſt woman maketh hir huſbande a ioyfull man, ⁊ ſhe ſhall fyll ſ̄ yeares of hiſ life in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gift, which ſhalbe geuen for a good porcion vnto ſoch as feare God. Whether a man be rich or poore, he maye haue euer a mery hert, ⁊ a chearful countenaunce. There be thre thinges ſ̄ my hert feareth, and my face is afrayed of the fourth. Treason in a cite, a ſediciouſe people, and noysome tonges, all theſe are heuyer then the death. But whan one is gelous ouer hiſ wife, it bryngeth payne and ſorowe vnto the hert: and a woman that telleth out all thinges, is a ſcourage of the tonge. Whan one hath an euell wife, it is euen as whan an vnlike pare of oxen muſt drawe together: he that getteth her, getteth a ſcorpion.<sup>a</sup> A dronken woman is a greate plage, for ſhe can not couer hir owne ſhame.

B The whordome of a woman maye be knowne in the pryde of hir eyes and eyelldes. "Yf thy daughter be not ſhamefaſt, holde her ſtraitly, leſt ſhe abuſe herſelf thorow ouermuch liberte. Bewarre of all the diſhoneſty of hir eyes, and maruell not yf ſhe do agaynſt the. Lik as one that goeth by the waye and is thyrſtie, ſo ſhall ſhe open hir mouth, and drynke of euery nexte water that ſhe maye gett.

By euery hedge ſhal ſhe ſyt her downe, ⁊ opē hir quyer againſt euery arowe. A louynge wyfe reioyſeth hir huſbande, and fedeth hiſ bones with hir wiſdome. A woman of few wordes is a gift of God, and to a well nurtured mynde maye nothinge be compared.

C An honeſt and manerly woman is a gyft aboute other giftes, and there is no waight to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it ſelf. Like as the Sonne whan it aryſeth, is an ornament in the hyc heauen of ſ̄ LORDE, ſo is a vertuous wiſe ſ̄ bewtye of all hir houſe. Like as the cleare light is vpon ſ̄ holy cādelſtick, ſo is the bewtye of the face vpō an honeſt body. "Like as the goldē pilers are vpon the ſockettes of ſyluer, ſo are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a cōſtant mynde. (Perpetual are the foundations that be laied vpon a whole ſtonye rocke, so are þy commaundementes of God vpon an holy woman.)

D There be two thinges þy greue my hert, and in the thirde is a displeasure come vpon me. When an experte man of warre suffreth scarcenes and pouerte, When men of vnderstandinge and wysdome are not set by: And when one departeth from righteousnes vnto synne. Who so doth soch, the LORDE hath prepared him vnto the swerde. There be two maner of thinges, which me thyneke to be herde and perylous. A marchaunt can not lightly kepe him from wronge, nether a tauerne himself from synne.

The xxiij. Chapter.

A BECAUSE of pouerte haue many one offended: and he that seketh to be riche, turneth his eyes asyde. Like as a nale in the wall sticketh fast betwixte two stones, euen so doth synne sticke betwixte þy byer and the seller. Yf he holde him not diligently in þy feare of the LORDE, his house shall soone be ouerthrowne. Like as when one sifteth, the fylthynes remaineth in the syue: So, remaineth there some vncleane thinge in the thought of man. The ouen proueth the potters vessell, so doth <sup>a</sup>tentacion of trouble trye righteous men. The tre of the felde is knowne by his frute, so is the thought of mā hert knowne by his wordes. Praise no mā excepte thou haue harde him, for a man is knowne by his wordes. Yf thou folowest righteousnes, thou shalt get her, and put her vpon þy as a fayre garment. (And thou shalt dwell with her, and she shall defende the for euer, and in þy daye of knowlege thou shalt fynde stedfastnesse.) The byrdes resorte vnto their like, so doth the trueth turne vnto them that be occupied withall. The lyon wayteth for þy praye: so do the synnes lurke vpon the workes of wickednes. The talkinge of him that feareth God, is nothinge but wysdome: as for a fooles, he chaungeth as þy Moone. Yf thou be amonge the vndiscrete, kepe thy worde to a conuenient <sup>b</sup>tyme, but amonge soch as be wyse, speake on hardely. The talkinge of fooles is abhominacion, and their sporte is voluptuousnesse and mysnurture. <sup>c</sup>Moch swearynge maketh the hayre to stonde vp, and to stryue with soch, stoppeth the eares.

The stryfe of the proude is bloudsheddynge, <sup>d</sup>their blasphemynge is heuy to heare. <sup>e</sup>Who so discouereth secretes, leseth his credence, and fyndeth no frende after his will. Loue thy frende, and bynde thyself in faithfulness with him: but yf thou bewrayest his secretes, thou shalt not get him agayne: For like as the mā is that destroyeth his enemye so is he also that dealeth falsly in the frendshipe of his neyghboure.

Like as one that letteth a byrde go out of his honde, can not take her agayne: Euen so thou, yf thou gene ouer thy frende, thou canst not get him agayne: Yee thou cast not come by him, for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Roo escaped out of the snare, for his soule is wounded. As for woundes, they maye be bounde vp agayne, and an euell worde maye be reconcyled: but who so bewrayeth the secretes of a frende, there is no more hope to be had vnto him.

He that <sup>f</sup>wyncketh with the eyes, ymagineth some euell, and no man shal take him from it. When thou art present, he shal hylie commende and prayse thy wordes: but at the last he shall turne his tayle, and slauder thy sayenge. Many thinges haue I hated, but nothinge so euell, for the LORDE himself also abhorreth soch one.

Who so casteth a stone an hye, it shal fall vpon his owne heade: <sup>g</sup>and he that smyteth with gyle, woundeth himself. Who so diggeth a <sup>h</sup>pytt, shal fall therin: and he that layeth a snare, shal be taken in it himself. Who so geueth a wicked noysome counsell, it shall come vpon himself, and he shall not knowe from whēce. The proude blaspheme and are scornfull, but vengeance lurketh for them as a lyon. They that reioyse at the fall of þy righteous, shal be taken in þy snare, anguysh of hert shall consume them before they dye. Anger and rigorousnes are two abhominable thinges, and þy vngodly hath them both vpon him.

thy neighbour the hurte that he hath done the, and so shal thy synnes be forgeuen the also, whan thou prayest. A man that beareth hatred agaynst another, how darre he desyre forgeuenesse of God? He that sheweth no mercy to a mā which is like himself, how darre he axe forgeuenesse of his synnes? Yf he that is but flesh, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wyl intreate for his synnes? Remembre the ende, ⁊ let enmyte passe, which seketh death and destruccion, and abyde thou in ⁊ commaundementes. Remembre ⁊ commaundement, so shalt thou not be rigorous ouer thy neighbour.

B Thynke vpō the couenaunt of ⁊ Hyest, and forgeue thy neighbours ignoraūce. Bewarre of strife, and thou shalt make ⁊ synnes fewer. For an angrie man kyndleth variaunce, and the vngodly disquyeteth frēdes, and putteth discorde amonge them that be at peace. The more wodd there is, the more vehement is the fyre: and the mightier ⁊ men be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer the strife endureth, the more it burneth.

C An haistie brawlinge kyndleth a fyre, and an haistie strife sheddeth bloude. Yf thou blowe the sparke: it shal burne: Yf thou spytt vpō it, it shal go forth, and both these go out of thy mouth. The <sup>a</sup>slaunderer and dubble tōgued is cursed, for many one that be frendes setteth he at variaunce. The thirde tonge hath disquieted many one, and dryuen them from one londe to another. Stronge cities hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowne the houses of greate men. The thirde tōge hath cast out many an honest woman, and robbed them of their labours. Who so harkeneth vnto soch, shal neuer fynde rest, and neuer dwell safely. The stroke of ⁊ rod maketh yedders, but the stroke of the tonge smyteth the bones in sunder. There be many that haue perished with the swerde, but many mo thorow the tonge.

D Wel is him that is kepte frō an euell tonge, ⁊ commeth not in ⁊ anger therof: which draweth not the yock of soch, and is not bōnde in the bondes of it. For the yock therof is of yron, and ⁊ bonde of it of stele. The death therof is a very euell death: hell were better for one, then soch a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and ⁊ flamme therof maye not burne thē. Soch as forsake the LORDE, shal fall therin: and it shal burne them, and no man shal be able to quench it. It shal fall vpon thē as a Lyō, and deuoure them as a leparde. Thou hedgest thy goodes with thornes: why doest thou not rather make dores and barres for thy mouth? Thou weiest thy golde and syluer: why doest thou not weye thy wordes also vpon the balance? Bewarre, that thou slyde not in thy tonge, and so fall before thine enemies, that laye wayte for the.

The xxij. Chapter.

WHO so wil shewe mercy, let him lende vnto his <sup>a</sup>neighbour: and he that is able, let him kepe the commaundement. Lende vnto thy neighbour in tyme of his nede, and paye thou thy neighbour agayne in due season. Kepe thy worde, ⁊ deale faithfully with him, ⁊ thou shalt allwaye fynde the thinge ⁊ is necessary for the. There haue bene many, that whan a thinge was lent them, rekened it to be founde: and made them traūayle and labour, that had helped them. Whyle they receaue eny thinge, they kysse the handes of soch as geue them, and for their neighbours good they hūble their voyce. But whan they shulde paye agayne they kepe it back, and geue euell wordes, and make many excuses by reason of the tyme: ⁊ though he be able, yet geueth he scarce the half agayne, and rekeneth ⁊ other to be founde. And yf he witholde not his moneye, yet hath he an enemye of him, and that vnderseued.

B He payeth him with cursinge and rebuke and geueth him euell wordes for his good dede. There be many one which are not glad for to lende, not because of euell, but they feare to lese the thinge that they lende. Yet haue thou pacience with the symple, and witholde not mercy from him. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, and let him not go emptye from the because of his necessite. Lese thy money for thy brother and neighbours sake, and burye it not vnder a stone, wher it rusteth and corrupeth. Gather thy <sup>c</sup>treasure after the commaundement of ⁊ Hyest, and so shal it bringe the more profit thē golde. Laye vp the almes in the hande of the poore, and it shal kepe the from all euell.<sup>a</sup> (A mans allmes is as a purse with him, and shal kepe a mans fauoure as the apple of an eye: and afterwarde shall it aryse, & paye euery man his rewarde vpon his heade.) It shal fight for the agaynst thine enemies, better then the shyld of a giaunte, or speare of the mightie.

C A good honest mā is suertye for his neyghboure, but a wicked personne letteth him come to shame. Forget not the frendshipe of thy suertye, for he hath geuē his soule for y. The vngodly despyseth y good dede of his suertye, & the vnthankfull and ignoraunt leaueth his suertie in daunger. (Some man promyseth for his neyghboure: & whan he hath lost his honesty, he shal forsake him.) Suertishipe hath destroyed many a ryche man, & remoued them as the waves in y see. Mightie people hath it dryuen awaye, and caused the to wandre in straunge countrees. An vngodly man transgressynge the commaundement of the LORDE, shal fall in to an euell suertishipe: and though he force himself to get out, yet shal he fall in to iudgment. Helpe thy neyghboure out after thy power, and bewarre, y thou thy self fall not in soch dett. <sup>b</sup> The chefe thinge that kepeth in the life, is water and bred, clothyng and lodginge, to couer the shame.

D Better is it to haue a poore lyuynge in a mans owne house,<sup>c</sup> the delicate fayre amōge the straunge. <sup>d</sup> Be it litle or moch y thou hast, holde the contēt withall (& thou shalt not be blamed as a vagabounde:) for a myserable life is it, to go from house to house: and where a mā is fremde, he darre not opē his mouth. Though one be lodged, and haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vnworthy, & heare many bytter rough wordes, namely thus: Go thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table (for thy self) and fede me also of that thou hast. Awaye thou straunger (so, that he regardeth his honoure nomore) my brother commeth in to my house, & so he telleth him the necessite of his house. These thinges are heuy to a man that hath vnderstandinge: namely, the forbyddinge of y house, & that the lēder casteth him in the teth.

The xii. Chapter.

WHO so loueth his childe, holdeth him still vnder correccion,<sup>e</sup> that he maye haue ioye of him afterwarde (and that he grope not after his neyghbours dores.) <sup>f</sup> He y teacheth his sonne, shall haue ioye in him, & nede not be ashamed of him amōge his aquantaice. Who so enfourmed & teacheth his sonne, greueth y enemye, and before his frendes he maye haue ioye of him. Though the father dye, yet is he as though he were not deed: for he hath left one behynde him that is like him. In his life he sawe him, & had ioye in him, & was not sory in his death, (nether was he ashamed before y enemies.) For he left behinde him an auenger agaynst his enemies, and a good doer vnto the frendes. For the life of childre he shal binde the woundes together, and his hert is greued at euery crye. An vntamed horse wylbe harde, and a wanton childe wylbe wylfull. Yf thou brynge vp thy sonne delicately, he shal make y afraied: and yf thou playe with him, he shal brynge the to heuynes. Laugh not with him, lest thou wepe with him also, and lest thy teth be sett on edge at the last.

Geue him not liberte in his youth, & excuse not his foly.<sup>g</sup> Bow downe his neck whyle he is yonge, hytt him vpon the sydes whyle he is yet but a childe, lest he wake stubburne, & geue no more force of y (and so shalt thou haue heuynes of soule.) Teach thy childe, & be diligēt therin, lest it be to thy shame. Better is the poore beyng whole & stronge, the a man to be riche, & not to haue his health. Health and welfare is aboue all golde, and an whole body aboue all treasure. There is no riches aboue a sounde body, & no ioye aboue the ioye of the hert. Death is better then a wretched life, or contynuall sicknes. The good thinges y are put in a close mouth, are like as whan meate is layed vpon y graue.

What good doth the offeringe vnto an Idoll? <sup>h</sup> For he can nether eate, taist ner smell. <sup>i</sup> Euē so is it also with the riche, whom God maketh seke: he seith it with his eyes, & groneth thereafter, and is euen as a gelded man, that lyeth with a vyrgyn and sygheth. <sup>j</sup> Geue not ouer thy mynde in to heuynes, & vexe not thy self in thine owne counsell. The ioye & chearfulness of the hert is the life of man, and a mans gladnes is the prolonginge of his dayes. Loue thine owne soule, and comforte thine hert: as for sorow and heuynes, dryue it farre from <sup>g</sup>,<sup>a</sup> for heuynes hath slayne many a man, and bryngeth no profit. Zele and anger shorten the dayes of the life: carefulness and sorow brynge age before the tyme. Vnto a mery hert euery thinge hath a good taist, that he eateth.

The xxi. Chapter.

A TRAUAYLE and carefulness for riches taketh awaye the slepe, and maketh the flesh to cōsume. When one lyeth and taketh care, he waketh euer vp, like as greate sicknes breaketh the slepe. The rich hath greate labour in gatheringe his riches together, and then with the pleasure of his riches he taketh his rest & is refreshed. But who so laboureth and prospereth not, he is poore: and though he leaue of, yet is he a begger. He that loueth riches, shall not be iustified: and who so foloweth corrupciō, shall haue ynough therof. Many one are come in greate mysfortune by the reason of golde, & haue founde their destruccion before them. It is a tre of fallynge vnto them that offre it vp, and all such as be foolish fall therein. Blessed is the rich, which is founde without blemish, and hath not gone after golde, ner hoped in money and treasures. Where is there soch one? and we shal commend him, and call him blessed, for greate things doth he amonge his people. Who so is tryed, & founde perfecte in soch thinges, shalbe commended and praised. Who might offende, & hath not offended? Who coude do euell, and hath not done it? Therefore shal his good be stablished, and the whole congregacion shal declare his allmesses. Yf thou sytt at a greate mans table, open not thy mouth wyde vpon it, and make not many wordes. Remember, that an euell eye is a shrew.

B What thinge created is worse then a wicked eye? therefore wetheth it before euery mā's face? Laye not thine hand vpon euery thinge that thine eye seyth, and stryue not with him in the dyshe.<sup>d</sup> Ponder by thy self what thy neighbour wolde fayne haue, & be descrete in euery poynte. Eate the thinge that is set before the, manerly, as it becommeth a man: and eate not to moch,<sup>e</sup> lest thou be abhorred. Leauē thou of first of all because of nurtoure, lest thou be he whom no man maye satisfie, which maye turne to thy decaye. Whā thou syttst amonge many men, reach not thine hāde out first of all. O how well contēt is a wyse man with a litle wyne? so <sup>g</sup> in slepe thou shalt not be seke therof, ner fele eny payne. A swete wholsome slepe shal soch one haue, and fele no inwarde grefe. He ryseth vp by tymes in <sup>g</sup> mornynge, and is well at ease in him self. But an vnsciable eater slepeth vnquyetly, and hath ache and payne of the body. Yf thou felest that thou hast eaten to moch, aryse, go thy waye, cast it of thy stomach, and take thy rest.

My sonne, heare me, and despyse me not: and at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue told the. In all thy workes be diligent and quicke, so shal there no sicknes happen vnto the. Who so is liberall in dealyng out his meate, many men shall blesse him and prayse him with their lippes: and the same is a sure token of his loue and faithfulness. But he <sup>g</sup> is faithfull in meate, the whole cite shall complayne of him: and that is a sure experiece of his infidelite and wickednes. Be not thou a wine bebbler, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. The fyre proueth <sup>g</sup> hard yron, euen so doth wyne proue the hertes of the proude, whan they be droncken.

Wyne soberly droncken, quyckeneth the life of mā.<sup>i</sup> Yf thou drynckest it measurably, thou shalt be temperate. What life is it, <sup>g</sup> maye contynue without wyne? Wyne was made from the begynnynge to make men glad (and not for dronkenes.) Wyne measurably dronkē is a reioysinge of the soule and body. But yf it be dronken with excesse, it maketh bytternes and sorowe vnto the mynde. Dronkēnes fylleth the mynde of the foolish with shame and ruyne, mynisheth the strēth, and maketh woundes. Rebuke not thy neighbour at <sup>g</sup> wyne; and despyse him not in his myrth. Geue him no despytefull wordes, and preasse not vpon him with contrary sayenges.

The xxxij. Chapter.

A YF thou be made a ruler, pride not thy self therin,<sup>a</sup> but be thou as one of the people. <sup>b</sup>Take diligent care for them, and loke well therto: and whan thou hast done all thy dewty, syt the downe, that thou mayest be mery with them, and receaue a crowne of honoure. Talke wysely & honestly, for wysdome becommeth the right well. Hynder not musyck. Speake not, where there is no audyence: and poure not forth wysdome out of tyme, at an importunyte. Like as the Carbuncle stone shyneth, that is set in golde, so doth a songe garnysh the wyne feast: and as  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  Smaragde that is set in golde, so is the swetnes of Musyck by  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  myrth of wyne.

B Thou yonge mā, speake that becommeth the, & that is profitable, and yet scarce whan thou art twyce axed. Comprehende moch with few wordes. In many thinges be as one that is ignoraunt, geue eare, and holde thy tonge withall. Yf thou be amonge men of hyer auctorite, desyre not to compare thy self vnto them: and whā an elder speaketh, make not thou many wordes therin. Before the thonder goeth lightenyng, and before nourtoure and shamesfastnesse goeth loue and fauoure. Stōde vp by tymes, and be not the last: but get the home soone, & there take thy pastyme, & do what thou wilt: so  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  thou do no euell, and defye no mā. But for all thinges geue thanks, vnto him that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

C Who so feareth the LORDE, wyl receaue his doctryne: and they that get them to him by tymes, shall fynde grace. He that seketh the lawe, shall be fylled withall: As for him  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  is but fayned, he wyl be offended therat. They that feare the LORDE, shal fynde the iudgment, & their righteousnes shalbe kyndled as a light. An vngodly man will not be reformed, but can helpe himself with the example of other in his purpose. A man of vnderstandinge despyseth no good counsell: but a wyld and proude body hath no feare. My sonne, do nothinge without advisement, so shal it not repēt the after  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  dede. Go not in the waye where thou mayest fall, ner where thou mayest stomble against the stone. Geue not thy self in to a laborious slypery waye, and beware of thine owne children. In all thy workes put thy trust in God from thy whole hert, for that is the kepinge of the cōmaundementes. Who so beleueth Gods worde, taketh hede to the commaundementes: & he that putteth his trust in  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  LORDE, shal wante nothinge.

The xxxij. Chapter.

THERE shall no euell happen vnto him A that feareth God: but whan he is in tentacion, the LORDE shall deliuer him. A wyse man hateth not  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  lawe, but an ypocryte is as a shyp in a raginge water. A man of vnderstandinge geueth credence vnto the lawe of God, and  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  lawe is faithfull vnto him. Be sure of the matter, then talke therof: Be first wel instructe, thē maiest thou geue answer. The hert of  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  foolish is like a cartwhele, and his thoughtes renne aboute like the axell tre. Like as a wyld horse that neyeth vnder euery one  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  sytteth vpon him, so is it with a scornefull frende. Why doth one daie excell another, seynge all the dayes of the yere come of the Sonne? The wysdome of the LORDE hath so parted them a sunder, and so hath he ordered the tymes and solemne feastes. Some of them hath he chosen and halowed before other dayes. And all men are made of the grounde, & out of the earth of Adam.

In the multitude of scyence hath  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  LORDE B sundered them, and made their wayes of dyuerse fashions. Some of them hath he blessed, made moch of them, halowed them, & claymed them to himself. But some of thē hath he cursed, brought thē lowe, & put thē out of their estate. <sup>c</sup>Like as  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  claye is in the potters hande, & all the ordrynge therof at his pleasure: so are men also in the hande of him  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  made thē, so that he maye geue them as it liketh him best. Agaynst euell is good, and agaynst death is life: so is the vngodly agaynst soch as feare God. Beholde thus all the workes of the Hyst, & there are euer <sup>d</sup>two agaynst two, and one set agaynst another. I am awaked vp last of all, as one that gathereth after in haruest. In the giftes of God and in his blessinge I am increased, & haue fylled my wyne presse, like a grape gatherer. <sup>e</sup>Beholde, how I haue not laboured onely for my self, but for all such as loue nurtoure and wyszdome.

C Heare me O ye greate men of the people, & harken with youre eares ye rulers of  $\gamma$  congregacion. Geue not thy sonne & wyfe, thy brother & frende power ouer the, wyle thou lyuest: & geue not away thy substance and good to another, lest it repent the, & thou be fayne to begg therfore thy self. As longe as thou lyuest & hast breth, let no man change the: For better it is thy children to praye the, then  $\gamma$  thou shuldest be fayne to loke in their handes. In all thy workes be excellent, that thy honoure be neuer stained. At the tyme whan thou shalt ende thy dayes, and fynish thy life, distribute thine inheretaunce. The fodder, the whyppe, and the burden belongeth vnto the Asse: Meate, correccion, and worke vnto the seruauant.

D Yf thou set thy seruauant to laboure, thou shalt fynde rest. But yf thou let him go ydel, he shal seke libertye. The yock and  $\gamma$  whyppe bowe downe the neck, but tame thou thy euell seruauant with bodes & correccion. Sende him to laboure, that he go not ydle: For Idylnesse bryngeth moch euell. Sett him to worke, for that belongeth vnto him and becometh him well. Yf he be not obedient, bynde his fete: but do not to moch vnto him in any wyse, & without discrecion do nothing. <sup>a</sup>Yf thou haue a (faithfull) seruauit, let him be vnto the as thine owne soule, for in bloude hast thou gotten him. Yf thou haue a seruauit, holde him as thy self, for thou hast nede of him as of thy self. Yf thou intreate him euell, and kepest him harde, and makest him to be proude, and to renne away from  $\gamma$ , thou canst not tell, what waye thou shalt seke him.

The xxxiiiij. Chapter.

A VNWYSE people begyle them selues with vayne and disceitfull hope, and fooles trust in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames, is like him that wil take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after the wynde: Euen so is it with the appearinges of dreames. Before the face is the licknes of a face. Who can be clensed of  $\gamma$  vnclane? Or what treuth can be spoken of a lyar? Soythsayenge, witchcraft, sorcery, and dreaminge is but vanyte: like as whan a womā trauayleth with chyld, and hath many fantasyes in hir herte. Where as soch visions come not of God, set not thine herte vpon them: For dreames haue disceaued many a mā, and they fayled, that put their truste therein.

The lawe shalbe fulfilled without lyes, & wyszdome is sufficient to a faithfull mouth. A wyse man  $\gamma$  is well instructe, vnderstandeth moch: & he  $\gamma$  hath good experiēce, can talke of wyszdome. He  $\gamma$  hath no experiēce, knoweth litle: & he  $\gamma$  erreth, causeth moch wickednes. Whan I was yet in erreure, I lerned moch also: yee I was so lerned, that I coude not expresse it all, and came oft in parell of death therouer, tyll I was delyuered from it. Now I se, that they which feare God, haue the right sprete: for their hope stōdeth in him, that can helpe thē. Who so feareth the LORDE, stōdeth in awe of no man, and is not afraied, for the LORDE is his hope and comforte.

Blessed is the soule of him  $\gamma$  feareth the LORDE: In whō putteth he his trust? who is his strēgh? For the eyes of the LORDE haue respecte vnto them, that loue him. He is their mightie proteccion, & strōge grounde: A defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote noone daye, a sucure for stomblynge, & an helpe for fallynge. He setteth vp the soule, and lighteneth  $\gamma$  eyes: He geueth health life, and blessinge. He that geueth an offeringe of vnrighteous good, his offeringe is refused: and the scornfull dealings of the vnrighteous please not God. <sup>b</sup>God hath no delyte in the offeringes of  $\gamma$  vngodly, nether maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacions. Who so bryngeth an offeringe out of  $\gamma$  goodes of  $\gamma$  poore, doth euē as one  $\gamma$  kylleth  $\gamma$  sonne before  $\gamma$  fathers eyes.

The bred of the nedefull is the life of the poore: he  $\gamma$  defraudeth him therof, is a man, of bloude. Who so robbeth his neghboure of his lyuinge, doth as greate synne as though he slew him to death. <sup>c</sup>He that defraudeth  $\gamma$  laborer of his hyre, is a bloude shedder. Whā one buyldeth, and another breaketh downe, what profit haue they then but laboure? Whan one prayeth, & another curseth, whose voyce wyl the LORDE heare? <sup>d</sup>He that washeth himself because of a deed body, & then toucheth the deed agayne, what doth his waszshinge? <sup>e</sup>So is it with a man that fasteth

B Geue no vnrighteous giftes, for soch wil not he receaue. Bewarre of wrongeous offeringes, for <sup>y</sup> LORDE is <sup>a</sup> a righteous iudge, <sup>q</sup> regardeth no mans personne: He accepteth not the personne of the poore, but he heareth <sup>y</sup> prayer of <sup>y</sup> oppressed. <sup>d</sup>He despyseth not <sup>y</sup> desyre of <sup>y</sup> fatherles, ner <sup>y</sup> wyddow, when she poureth out hir prayer before him. Doth not God se <sup>y</sup> teares, <sup>y</sup> renne downe <sup>y</sup> chekes of the wyddow? Or heareth he not the complaynte, ouer soch as make her to wepe? Who so serueth God after his pleasure, shalbe accepted, <sup>q</sup> his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. <sup>e</sup>The prayer of him <sup>y</sup> humbleth himself, goeth thorow <sup>y</sup> cloudes, tyll she come nye. She wyl not be comforted, ner go hir waye, tyll <sup>y</sup> hyest God haue respecte vnto her, geue true sentēce, <sup>q</sup> perfourme <sup>y</sup> iudgnēt. And <sup>y</sup> LORDE wil not be slack in cōmyng, ner tary longe: tyll he haue anyttē in sonder <sup>y</sup> backes of <sup>y</sup> vnmercyfull, <sup>q</sup> auenged himself of <sup>y</sup> Heithen: tyll he haue takē awaye <sup>y</sup> multi-

HAUE mercy vpon vs O LORDE, thou <sup>a</sup> God of all thinges. Haue respecte vnto vs (shew vs the light of thy mercies, <sup>q</sup> sende thy feare amōge <sup>y</sup> Heithē <sup>q</sup> straūgers, which seke not after the: <sup>y</sup> they maye knowe, how <sup>y</sup> there is no God but thou, and <sup>y</sup> they maye shew thy wonderous workes.) Lift vp thine hande ouer the outlādish Heithen, <sup>y</sup> they maye lerne to knowe thy might <sup>q</sup> power. Like as thou art halowed in vs before them, so brynge to passe, <sup>y</sup> thou mayest be magnified also in them before vs: <sup>y</sup> they maye knowe the, like as we knowe the. For there is none other God, but only thou O LORDE. Renue the tokens, <sup>q</sup> chaunge the wonderous workes. Shewe thine hāde and thy right arme gloriously. Rayse thy indignacion, <sup>q</sup> poure out thy wrath. Take awaye the aduersary, <sup>q</sup> smyte the enemye. Make <sup>y</sup> tyme shorte, remembre thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous workes maye be praysed. Let the wrath of the fyre consume them, that lyue so careles: and let them perish, that do thy people hurte. Smyte in sonder the heade of the prynces, that be oure enemies, and saye: there is none other but we.

B Gather all <sup>y</sup> trybes of Iacob together againe, <sup>y</sup> they maie knowe, how <sup>y</sup> there is none other God but only thou, <sup>y</sup> they maie shew thy wonderous workes, and be thy people <sup>q</sup> heretage, like as from the begynnyng. O LORDE haue mercy vpon the people <sup>y</sup> hath thy name, <sup>d</sup> <sup>q</sup> vpō Israel, whom thou hast lickened to a first borne sonne. O be mercifull vnto Ierusalē the cite of thy Sanctuary, <sup>y</sup> cite of thy rest. <sup>e</sup>Fyll Sion with thy vnspeakeable vertues, <sup>q</sup> thy people with thy glory. Geue wytnes vnto thy creature, whom thou maydest from the begynnyng, and rayse vp the prophecies <sup>y</sup> haue bene shewed in thy name. Rewarde them <sup>y</sup> wayte for the, <sup>y</sup> thy prophetes maye be founde faithfull. O LORDE heare the prayer of thy seruantes, accordinge to þy blessinge of Aaron ouer thy people: <sup>a</sup>that all they which dwell vpon earth, maye knowe, that thou art the LORDE the eternal God, which is from euerlastinge.

C The bely deuoureth all meates, yet is one meate better then another. Like as the tonge taisteth venyson,<sup>d</sup> so doth an hert of vnderstandinge marck false wordes. A frowarde hert geueth heuynes, but a man of experience listeth him vp agayne. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better then another. A fayre wife reioyseth hir huszbande, and a man loueth nothinge better. Yf she be louynge & vertuous withall, then is not hir huszbande like other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe and piler wher vpon he resteth. Where no hedge is, there the goodes are spoyled: and where no houszwife is, there y<sup>e</sup> frēdles mourneth. Like as there is no credence geuen to a robber, y<sup>e</sup> goeth from one cite to another: So is not y<sup>e</sup> inan beleued, that hath no nest, and must turne in, where he maye abyde in the night.

The xxxvij. Chapter.

A EUERY frende sayeth: I wil be frendly vnto him also. But there is some frende, which is onely a frende in name. Remayneth there not heuynes vnto death, whan a companion and frende is turned to an enemye? O most wicked presumption: Frō whence art thou spronge vp, to couer the earth with falsede & disceate? <sup>e</sup>There is some companion, which in prosperite reioyseth with his frēde: but in the tyme of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst him. There is some cōpanyon, that mourneth with his frende for the bely sake: but whan trouble commeth, he taketh holde of the shyld. Forget not thy frende in thy mynde, & thynke vpon him in thy riches. Euery counceiler bryngeth forth his counsell: Neuertheles there is some, y<sup>e</sup> counceleth but for his owne profit. <sup>a</sup>Beware of y<sup>e</sup> counceiler, & be aduysed afore wherto thou wilt vse him, for he wil geue coucell for him self. Lest he cast the lott vpon the, & saye vnto the: Thy waye and purpose is good, and afterwarde he stande agaynst the, and loke what shal become of the.

C And holde thy counsell fast in thine hert: for there is no man more faithful to kepe it, then thou thy self. For a mā mynde is somtyme more disposed to tell out, then seven watchmen that sytt aboue in an hyc place lokyng aboute them. And aboue all this praye the Hyeest, that he wil lede thy waye in faithfulness & trueth. Before all thy workes axe counsell first: and or euer thou doest eny thinge, be well aduysed. There be foure thinges that declare a chaunged hert, wherout there springeth euell & good, death & life, & a masterfull tonge that bableth moch. Some man is apte and well instructe in many thinges, and yet very vnprofitable vnto himself. Some man there is, that can geue wyse and prudent counsell, and yet is he hated, & contynneth a begger: for that grace is not geuē him of God, to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wiszdome, yet is he wise vnto himself, and the frute of vnderstōdinge is faithfull in his mouth.

B A wyse man maketh his people wyse, & y<sup>e</sup> frutes of his wiszdome fayle not. A wyse mā shal be plēteously blessed of God: & all they that se him, shal speake good of him. The life of man stondesth in y<sup>e</sup> nōbre of the dayes, but the dayes of Israel are innumerable. A wyse man shal opteyne faithfulness & credence amonge his people, & his name shalbe perpetuall. My sonne, proue thy soule in thy life: & yf thou se eny euell thinge, geue it not vnto her. <sup>a</sup>For all thinges are not profitable for all men, nether hath euery soule pleasure in euery thinge. Be not greedy in euery eatinge, and be not to haistye vpon all meates. For <sup>e</sup>excesse of meates bryngeth siknes, and glotony commeth at the last to an vmeasurable heate. Thorow glotony haue many one perished: but he that dyeteth him self temperatly, prolongeth his life.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

HONOURE the Phisician: honour him because of necessite. God hath created him (for of the Hiest commeth medecyne) and he shal receaue giftes of the kyng. The wysdome of the phisician bryngeth him to greate worshipec, and in the sight of the greates men of this worlde, he shalbe honorably taken. The LORDE hath created medecyne of the earth, and he that is wyse, wyl not abhorre it. <sup>a</sup>Was not <sup>y</sup> bytter water made swete with a tre? that men might lerne to knowe the vertue therof. The LORDE hath geuen men wysdome and vnderstandinge, <sup>y</sup> he might be honoured in his woderous workes. With soch doth he heale men, and taketh awaye their paynes: Of soch doth the Apotecary make a confection, yet can no man perforce all his workes. For of <sup>y</sup> LORDE commeth prosperous wealth ouer all <sup>y</sup> earth.

My sonne, despye not this in thy sicknes: but praye vnto the LORDE, <sup>c</sup> and he shal make the whole. Leaue of from synne, and orde thy handes a right: clēse thine hert from all wickednes. Geue a swete sauoured offrynge, and <sup>y</sup> fyne floure for a token of remembraunce: make the offrynge fatt, as one that geueth the first frutes, and geue rowme to the Phisician. For <sup>y</sup> LORDE hath created him: let him not go from the, for thou hast nede of him. The houre maye come, <sup>y</sup> the seke maye be helped thorow them, when they praye vnto <sup>y</sup> LORDE, <sup>y</sup> he maie recouer, and get health to lyue longer. He that synneth before his maker, shall fall in to the handes of the Phisician.

My sonne, brynge forth thy teares ouer the deed: and <sup>a</sup>begynne to mourne, as yf thou haddest suffred greate harme thy self: and the couer his body after a conuenient maner, and despye not his buryall. Enforce thy self to wepe, and prouoke thy self to mourne, and make lamentacion expeditly, <sup>c</sup> and <sup>y</sup> a daye or two, lest thou be euell spoken of: and then cōforte thy self because of the heynes. For of heynes cometh death, the heynes of <sup>y</sup> hert breaketh strength. Heynes and pouerte greueth the hert in tentacion and offence. Take no heynes to hert, dryue it awaye, and remembre the last thinges. Forget it not, for there is no turnynge agayne. Thou shalt do him no good, but hurte thy self. Remembre his iudgmēt, thine also shalbe likewise: vnto me yesterdaye, vnto the to daye. Let the remembraunce of the deed cease in his rest, and cōforte thy self agayne ouer him, <sup>e</sup> seynge his sprete is departed from him.

The wysdome of the scribe is at cōuenient tyme of rest: and he <sup>y</sup> ceaseth from exerceyse of labour, shalbe wyse. He that holdeth <sup>y</sup> plough, and hath pleasure in proddyng and dryuynge <sup>y</sup> oxen, and goeth aboute with soch workes, he can speake of oxen. He setteth his hert to make forowes, and is diligent to geue <sup>y</sup> kyne fodder. So is euery carpenter also a work master, that laboureth still night and daye: he carueth, graueth and cutteth out, and his desyre is in sondrye connyng thinges, and his hert ymagineth, how he maye conyngly cast an ymage, his diligence also and watchinge perfourneth the worke. The yronsmith in like maner bydeth by his stythe, and doth his diligence to labour the yron. The vapoure of the fyre brenneth his flesh, and he must fight with the heate of the fornace. The noyse of the Hammer soundeth euer in his eares, and his eyes loke still vpon the thinge <sup>y</sup> he maketh. He hath set his minde there vpon, that he wyl make out his worke, and therefore he watcheth, how he maie set it out, and brynge it to an ende.

So doth the potter syt by his worke, he turneth <sup>y</sup> whele aboute with his fete, he is diligent and carefull in all his doynge, and his labour and worke is without nombre. He fashioneth the claye with his arme, and with his fete he tēpereth it. His hert ymagineth how he maye make it pleasaunt, and his diligence is to clense the ouen. All these hope in their hādes, and euery one thinketh to be connyng in his worke. Without these maye not the cities be manteyned, inhabited ner occupied: yet come they not hie in the congregacion: they vnderstande not the coue-naunt of  $\hat{y}$  lawe: they can not declare equyte & iudgment: they can not fynde out the darck sentēces: but thorow them shal the creature of  $\hat{y}$  worlde be manteyned: their prayer concerneth onely the worke & labour of cōninge.

The xxxix. Chapter.

BUT he  $\hat{y}$  applyeth his mynde to vnderstande the lawe of God, doth diligently seke out  $\hat{y}$  wysdome of them of the olde tyme, & exercyseth him self in the prophetes. He kepeth  $\hat{y}$  sayenges of famous men, and preasseth to the vnderstandinge of darck sentēces of wysdome. He seketh out  $\hat{y}$  mysterye of secrete sayēges, and exercyseth him self therin cōtynually. He doth seruyce amonge greate men, & appeareth before the pryncē. He goeth in to a straunge countre, & trauaileth thorow it: loke what good or euell is amōge men, he proueth it & seketh it out. He purposeth in his hert, to resorte early vnto the LORDE  $\hat{y}$  made him, & to praye before the hiest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & prayeth for his synnes.

When the greate LORDE wil, he shalbe filled with the sprete of vnderstādinge,  $\hat{y}$  he maie then poure out wyse sentences, & geue thanks vnto the LORDE in his prayer. He shal ordre his deuyce, and lede his knowlege aright, & geue him vnderstandinge of secrete things. He shal shew forth the sciēce of his lerninge, & reioyce in the couenaunt of the lawe of the LORDE. The whole congregacion shal cōmende his wysdome, & it shal neuer be put out. The remembraunce of him shal neuer be forgotten, & his name shal contynue from one <sup>a</sup>generacion to another. His wysdome shalbe spoken of, & the whole congregacion shall openly declare his prayse. Whye he liueth, he hath a greater name thē a thousande besyde: & after his death, the same name remaineth vnto him. Yet wyll I speake of mo men of vnderstandinge, for I am full as the Moone.

Herkē vnto me (ye holy vertuous childrē) brynge forth frute, as the rose that is planted by the brokes of the felde, and geue ye a swete smell as Libanus. Florish as the rose garden, synge a songe of prayse. O geue thākes vnto God ouer all his workes. Geue glory and honoure vnto the LORDE, shew his prayse with youre lippes. Yee euen with the songe of youre lippes, with harpes & playenge, and in geuinge thanks vnto him, saye after this maner: <sup>a</sup>All  $\hat{y}$  workes of the LORDE are excedinge good, and all his commaundementes are mete and conuenient in due season.

A mā nede not to saie: what is  $\hat{y}$ ? what is that? for at tyme <sup>c</sup>conuenient they shal all be sought. At his cōmaundement  $\hat{y}$  water was as a wall, & at the worde of his mouth  $\hat{y}$  waters stode still. In his commaundement is euery thinge acceptable and reconcyled, and his health can not be minished. The workes of all flesh are before him, & there is nothinge hydd from his eyes. He seith from euerlastinge to euerlastinge, and there is nothinge to wonderfull or hye vnto him. A man nede not to saye then, what is this, or that? For he hath made all thinges to do good vnto man. His blessinge shall renne ouer as the streame, and moysture the earth like a floude of water. Like as he maketh the water for drouth, so shall his wrath fall vpon the Heithen.

The teth of wylde noysome beestes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the swerde are created also for vengeaunce, to the destruction of the vngodly. They shall be glad to do his commaundementes: and whan nede is, they shalbe ready vpon earth: and whan their houre is come, they shal not ouerpasse the commaundement of the LORDE.

Therefore haue I taken a good courage vnto me from the begynnynge, and thought to put these thinges in wrytinge, and to leaue the behynde me. " All ſ workes of the LORDE are good, and he geueth euery one in due season, and whan nede is, So that a man nede not to saye: this is worse then that. For in due season they are all pleasaunt and good: And therefore prayse the LORDE with whole hert and mouth, & geue thanks vnto his name.

The xl. Chapter.

A GREATE trauayle is created for all mē, and an heuy yock vpon all mens children, from the daye that they go out of their mothers wombe, tyll they be buried in (the earth) the mother of all thinges: namely, their thoughtes and ymaginacions, feare of the hert, counsell, meditations, longing and desyre, the daye of death: from the hyst that sytteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and most symple vpon the earth: from him that is gorgiously arayed, and weereth a crowne, vntyll him that is but homely and symple clothed. There is nothinge but wrath, zeale, fearfulness, vnquietnes, and feare of death, rigorous anger and stryfe. And in the night whan one shulde rest and slepe vpon his bedd, the slepe chaungeth his vnderstandinge and knowlege. A litle as nothinge is his rest, in ſ slepe as well as in the daye of labour.

B He feareth and is disquyted in the vision of his hert, as one that renneth out of a bat-tayll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh, and marueleth that the feare was nothinge. Soch thinges happen vnto all flesh, both man and best: but seuenefolde to the vngodly. Morouer death, bloudsheddinge, strife & swerde, oppression, honger, destruccion and <sup>b</sup>punishment: these thinges are all created agaynst the vngodly, and for their sakes came the floude also. All that is of the earth, shal turne to earth agayne: and all waters ebb agayne into the see. All brybes and vn-righteousnes shalbe put awaye, but faithfulness and trueth shal endure for euer. The substance and goodes of ſ vngodly shalbe dried vp and syncke awaye as a water floude, and they shall make a sounde like a greate thonder in the rayne.

C Like as the righteous reioyseth whan he openeth his hande, so shall the trasgressours be faynte, whan their goodes vanysh and consume awaye. " The children of the vngodly shal not optayne many braunches: and ſ vn-cleane rotes vpō the hye rockes shalbe roted out before the gras by the water syde & vpon the ryuer bankes.

Frendlynnes and liberalite in the increase and blessinge of God, is like a paradise & garden of pleasure: soch mercy also & kindnes endureth for euer. " To labour & to be content with that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt life: & that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget children and to repayre the cite, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is more worth thē they both. Wyne and mynstralsye reioyse the hert, but the loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

D Pypinge and harpinge make a swete noyse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thine eye desyareth fauoure and bewtie but a grene sode tyme rather thē they both. A frende and companion come together at oportunte, "but aboue them both is a wife that agreeth with hir huszbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but allmes shal deliuer more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good counsell is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporall substaunce and strength lift vp the mynde: but the feare of the LORDE more then they both. The feare of the LORDE wanteth nothinge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of ſ LORDE is as a pleasaunt gardē of blessinge, and nothinge so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers life, for better it were to dye thē to begg. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne luynghe how to vpholde his life, for he fedeth himself with other mens meate. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll beware therof. Beg-gynge is swete in the mouth of the vn-shamefast, but in his bely there burneth a fyre.

The xli. Chapter.

A O DEATH, how bytter is the remembrance of the, to a man that seketh rest and comforte in his substance and riches, vnto the man that hath nothinge to vexē him, and that hath prosperite in all thinges, yee vnto him that yet is able to receaue meate? O death, how acceptable and good is thy iudgement vnto the nedefull, and vnto him whose strength fayleth, ⁊ that is now in his last age, and that in all thinges is full of care and fearfulness; vnto him also that is in dispayre, and hath no hope ner pacience? Be not thou afrayed of death: remembre them ⁊ haue bene before the: and ⁊ come after ⁊: this is the iudgmēt of ⁊ LORDE ouer all flesh. <sup>a</sup>And why woldest thou be agaist this pleasure of ⁊ Hiest? Whether it be ten, an hundred, or a thousande yeares: death axeth not how longe one haue lyued.

B The children of the vngodly are abhominable children, and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. The inheretaunce of vngodly children shall come to naught, <sup>a</sup>and their posterite shal haue perpetuall shame and confucion. The children complayne of an vngodly father: and why? for his sake they are rebuked and despysed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) which haue forsakē the lawe of ⁊ hyst God: Yf ye be borne, ye shal be borne to cursynge: yf ye dye, ⁊ curse shal be youre porcion.

<sup>c</sup>All that is is of ⁊ earth, shal turne to earth agayne: so go the vngodly also out of ⁊ curse in to destruccion. The sorow of men is in their body: but ⁊ name of the vngodly shal be put out, for it is nothinge worth. Labour to get the a good name, for that <sup>a</sup>shall continue surer by the, then a thousande greate treasures of golde. A good life hath a nobre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

C My children, kepe wysdome in peace: for wysdome that is hyd and a treasure that is not sene, what profit is in the both? <sup>c</sup>A man that hydeth his foolishnes, is better then a man that hydeth his wysdome. Therefore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good, in all thinges and allwaie to be ashamed. True faith must proue and measure it.

Be ashamed of whordome before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge before the prynce and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregation and people: Of vnrighteousnes, before a companyon and frēde: Of theft, before ⁊ neighbours. As for the trueth of God and his couenaunt, <sup>f</sup>be not ashamed therof.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon the bred: Be ashamed to loke vpō harlottes: Be ashamed to turne away thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take ⁊ not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpon another mans wyfe, and to make many tryfflinge wordes with hir mayden, or to stonde by hir bedsyde. Be ashamed to vprade thy frēde: and whan thou geuest eny thinge, cast him not in the teth withall.

The xliij. Chapter.

R HEARSE not a thinge twyse, and disclose not the wordes, that thou hast herde in secrete. Be shamefast ⁊ well mannered in dede, so shall euery man fauoure the. Of these thinges be not thou ashamed, and accepte no personne to offende. Namely, of these thinges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the couenaunt, of iudgmēt: to brynge the vngodly from his vngodlines vnto righteousnes, and to make him a good man: to deale faithfully with neighbour ⁊ companyon: to distribute the heretage vnto ⁊ frendes: to be diligent to kepe true measure and weight: to be content, whether thou gettest moch or litle: to deale truly with temporall goodes in byenge and sellynge: to brynge vp children with diligence: to correcke an euell seruaunt: to kepe that thine is frō an euell wife: to set a lock where many handes are: what thou delyuerest and geuest out to be kepte, to tell it, and to weye it: to wryte vp all the out geuyng and receauynge: to enfourme ⁊ vnlernd and vnwyse: Of the aged, that are iudged of the yonge. Yf thou be diligēt in these thinges, truly thou shalt be lerned and wyse and accepted of all men.

fathers house: Or (when she commeth to the man) lest she behaue herself not right, or contynue vn frutefull. Yf thy daughter be wanton,* kepe her strately, lest she cause thine enemies laugh the to scorne, & the whole cite to geue ſ̃ an euell reporte, and so thou be fayne to heare thy shame of euery man, and be confounded before all ſ̃ people. <sup>b</sup>Beholde not euery bodies bewtye, & haue not moch dwellynge amonge women. For like as the worme and moth commeth out of clothinge, <sup>c</sup>so doth wickednes come of women.

C It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendly wife ſ̃ putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyl remembre the workes of the LORDE, and declare the thinge ſ̃ I haue sene. In ſ̃ wordes of ſ̃ LORDE are his workes. The Sōne ouerloketh all thīges with his shine, & all his workes are full of ſ̃ cleannes therof. Hath not the LORDE brought to passe, that his sayntes shulde tell out all his wōderous workes, which the all-mightie LORDE hath stablyshed? All thinges endure in his glory. He seeketh out the grounde of the depe and the hert, and he knoweth all their ymaginacion & wysdome. D For ſ̃ LORDE knoweth all scyence, and he loketh in to ſ̃ token of the time. He declareth the thinges ſ̃ are past and for to come, & discloseth thinges that are secrete. <sup>d</sup>No thought maye escape him, nether maye eny worde be hyd from him. He hath garnysed the hye excellent workes of his wysdome, and he is frō euerlastinge to euerlastinge. Vnto him maye nothinge be added nether can he be mynished, he hath no nede also of eny counsell. O how amiable are all his workes, & as a sparke to loke vpon? They lyue all, and endure for euer: and when so euer nede is, they are all obedient vnto him. They are all dubble, one agaynst another: he hath made nothinge<sup>e</sup> that hath faute or blemysch. He hath stablyshed the goodes of euerychone: and who maye be satisfied with his glory, when he seith it?

The xliij. Chapter.

A THE glory of the heyth, is the fayre and cleare firmament,<sup>f</sup> the bewtye of the heauen in his glorious cleannes. The sonne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in ſ̃

goinge out of it, a maruelous worke of the Hyest. At noone it burneth ſ̃ earth, and who maye abyde for the heate therof? Who so kepeth an ouen when it is hote, thre tymes more doth the Sonne burne vpon ſ̃ mountaynes, when it bretheth out the fyrie beames and shyneth: with the brightnes of it, it blyndeth the eyes. Greate is the LORDE that made it, and in his commaundement he causeth it to renne haistely.

<sup>g</sup>The Moone also is in all, and at conuenient season it sheweth the tymes, and is a token of the tyme. <sup>h</sup>The token of the solemne feast is taken of the Moone, a light that mynisheth and increaseth againe. The Moneth is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderously in hir chaunginge.

The armye of heauen also is in the Heith, B in the firmament of heauen it geueth a cleare and glorious shyne. This is the cleannes of the starres, the bewtiful apparell of heauen, the apparell that the LORDE lighteneth in the heyth. In his holy worke they continue in their ordre, and not one of them fayleth in his watch. <sup>i</sup>Loke vpon ſ̃ rayne bowe, and prayse him that made it: very bewtiful is it in his shyne. He compaseth the heauen aboute with his cleannes and glory, the handes of the Hyest haue beded it. Thorow his commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thonder of his iudgment to smyte hastely. Thorow his commaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes fle as the foules. In his power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and brokē the hayle stones.

The mountaynes melt at ſ̃ sight of him, the wynde bloweth accordinge to his wyll. The sounde of his thonder beateth ſ̃ earth, and so doth the storme of the north: the whirle wynde also lighteth downe as a feathered foule, casteth out and spredeth the snowe abroad: and as the greshoppers that destroye all, so falleth it downe. The eie marueleth at ſ̃ bewtye of the whytenesse therof, and the hert is afraied at the raine of it. He poureth out the frost vpon earth, like salt, and when it is frozen, it is as sharpe as the prycke of a thistle.

water, and putteth on  $\text{f}$  waters as a brest plate. He deuoureth the mountaynes, and burneth the wyldernesses: and loke what is grene, he putteth it out like fyre. The medycine of all these is, whan a cloude commeth hastily: and whan a dew commeth vpon the heate, it shalbe refrezshed agayne.

(In his worde he styllth the wynde,) In his counsell he setteth the depe, and (the LORDE) Iesus planted it. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of his pels and harmes: and whan we heare it with oure eares, we maruell therat. For there be straunge wonderous workes, dyuerse maner of nyce beestes and whall fishes. Thorow him are all thinges set in good ordre and perfourmed,  $\text{t}$  in his worde all thinges endure.

D I speake moch, but I can not sufficiently attayne vnto it, for he himself onely is the perfection of all wordes. We shulde prayse the LORDE after all oure power, for he is greate in all his workes. <sup>a</sup>The LORDE is to be feared yee very greate is he, and maruelous is his power. Prayse the LORDE, and magnifie him as moch as ye maye, yet doth he farre farre exceede all prayse. <sup>b</sup>O magnifie him with all youre power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able sufficiently to prayse him. <sup>c</sup>Who hath sene him, that he might tell vs? Who can magnifie him so greatly as he is? For there are hyd yet greater thinges thē these be: as for vs, we haue sene but few of his workes. For the LORDE hath made all thinges, and geuen wyszdome to such as feare God.

The xliiij. Chapter.

A commendacion of the olde vertuous fathers.

A LET vs commend the noble famous men, and the generation of oure fore-elders and fathers. Many more glorious actes hath the LORDE done, and shewed his greate power euer sens  $\text{f}$  begynnynge. The noble famous men raigned in their kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule. In their wyszdome and vnderstandinge, they folowed the counsell shewed in the prophecies.<sup>d</sup> They led the folke thorow the counsell and wyszdome of the scribes of the people. Wyse sentences are founde in their instruction.

They sought the swetenes and melody of Musick, and brought forth the pleasunt songes in scripture. They were riche also,  $\text{t}$  coude comforte and pacifie those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honorable men in their generacions, and were well reported of in their tymes. These haue left a name behynde them, so that their prayse shal allwaye be spokē of. Afterwarde there were some, whose remembrance is gone.<sup>e</sup> They came to naught and perished, as though they had neuer bene: and became as though they had neuer bene borne, yee  $\text{t}$  their children also with them.

Neuertheles these are louynge men, whose righteousnes shal neuer be forgotten, but contynue by their posterite. Their children are an holy good heretage: Their sede endured fast in  $\text{f}$  couenant. For their sakes shal their childrē  $\text{t}$  sede contynue for euer,  $\text{t}$  their prayse shal neuer be put downe. Their bodies are buried in peace, but their name lyueth for euermore. The people can speake of their wyszdome,  $\text{t}$  the congregacion can talke of their prayse. <sup>f</sup>Enoch walked right  $\text{t}$  acceptably before the LORDE: therfore was he trāslated for an example of amendemēt to  $\text{f}$  generacions. <sup>g</sup>Noe was a stedfast  $\text{t}$  righteous man:  $\text{t}$  in the tyme of wrath he became a recōcylinge. Therfore was he left a remnant vnto the earth, whan the floude came. <sup>h</sup>An euerlastinge couenant was made with him, that all flesh shulde perishe nomore with  $\text{f}$  water.

Abraham was a greate father of many people,<sup>i</sup> in glory was there none like vnto him. He kepte the lawe of the Hyest,  $\text{t}$  came in to a couenant with him. He set the couenant in his flesh,<sup>k</sup> and whan he was tempted, he was founde faithfull. Therfore swore God vnto him with an oath, that he wolde blesse all people in his sede, that he wolde multiplie and increase him as the dust of the earth, and to exalte his sede as the starres: yee and that his sede shulde haue  $\text{f}$  possession and inheritaunce of the londe from see to see, and from the ryuer vnto  $\text{f}$  borders of the londe.

With Isaac<sup>l</sup> dyd he stablish  $\text{f}$  same couenāut, for Abrahā his fathers sake. Yee  $\text{f}$  gracious blessynge and health of all men, and couenant dyd he stablysh with Isaac, and

The xlv. Chapter.

Moses beloued of God and mē, whose remembraunce is in hye prayse: 'him hath the LORDE made like in the glory of the sayntes, and magnified him so that the enemies stode in awe of him, thorow his wordes he dyd greate wonders. He made him greate in the sight of kynges, gaue him commaundement before his people, and shewed him his glorious power. He stablyshed him with faithfulness and mekenes,<sup>c</sup> and chose him out of all men. For he herde his voyce, and led him in the darcke cloude,<sup>d</sup> and there he gaue him the commaundementes, yee the lawe of life and wysdome, that he might teach Iacob the couenaunt, and Israel his lawes.

He chose Aaron his brother also out of ſ trybe of Leui,<sup>e</sup> exalted him, & made him soch like. An euerlasting couenaunt made he with him,<sup>f</sup> and gaue him the presthode in the people. He made him glorious in bewtifull araye, and clothed him with the garment of honoure. He put perfecte ioye vpo him, and gyrded him with strength. He deckte him with syde clothes and a tuncyle, with an ouerbody cote also and gyrdle. Rounde aboute made he him belles of golde, and that many: that whan he wente in,<sup>g</sup> the sounde might be herde, that they might make a noyse in the Sanctuary, and geue the people warnynge. The holy garment was wrought & broderd with golde, yalow sylke and purple. And in the brestlappe there was a goodly worke,<sup>h</sup> wherin was fastened light and perfectnesse.

Vpon ſ same also there was a worke fastened and set with costly precious stones, all bounde with golde: and this he brought in his mynistracion. The stones also were fastened for a remembraunce, after the twolue trybes of Israel. Vpon his mytre there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynes, a famous and noble worke, garnished, and pleasaunt to loke vpon. Before him were there sene no soch fayre ornamētes, and these it behoued hī allwaye to vse: There might none other put them on, but onely his children and his childers children perpetually. Daylie performed he his burntofferings two tymes.<sup>i</sup> Moses fylled his handes, and anoynted him with holy oyle.

This was now confirmed him with an euerlasting couenaunt, and to his sede, as ſ dayes of heauē: namely, that his childrē shulde allwaye mynistr before him, and perfourme the office of the presthode, and wyshe the people good in his name. Before all men luyunge chose he him, that he shulde offre before the LORDE, and make odours for a swete sauoure and remembraunce, that he shulde reconcyle the people of the LORDE with him agayne.<sup>j</sup> He gaue him auctorite also in his commaundementes and in ſ couenaūt, that he shulde teach Iacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enfourme Israel in his lawe.

Therefore there stode vp certayne agaynst him,<sup>k</sup> and had envye at him in the wyldernes: namely, they that were of Dathan & Abirams syde, and the furious congregaciō of Chore. This the LORDE sawe, and it displeased him, and in his wrothfull indignacion were they consumed. A greate wonder did he vpon them, and consumed them with the fyre. Besydes this, he made Aaron yet more honorable and glorious. He gaue him an heretage, and parted the first frutes vnto him.<sup>l</sup> Vnto him specially he appoynted the bred for sustenance (for the prestes ate of ſ offerynges of the LORDE) this gaue he vnto him & his sede. Els had he no heretage<sup>m</sup> ner porcion in ſ londe and with the people. For the LORDE himself is his porcion and enheritaunce.

The thirde noble and excellent mā is Phineas the sonne of Eleazer, which pleased the God of Israel,<sup>n</sup> because he had ſ zeale & feare of the LORDE. For whan the people were turned back, he put him self forth right soone, & that with a good wyll, to pacifie the wrath of the LORDE towarde Israel. Therefore was there a couenaūt of peace made with him, ſ he shulde be the principall amonge

The xlvij. Chapter.

MANLY & stronge in battail was Iesus <sup>f</sup> sonne of Naue,<sup>a</sup> which in steade of Moses <sup>f</sup> prophet was geuen to be capayne of the people (which acordinge vnto his name was a greate sauioure vnto the electe of God) to punysh the enemies, that rose vp agaynst Israel, <sup>f</sup> Israel might optayne their inheritance. O how greate, noble and excellent was he,<sup>b</sup> when he lift vp his hande, and drew out his swerde agaynst the cities? Who stode so manly before him? For the LORDE himself brought in the enemies.<sup>c</sup> Stode not the Sonne styll at his commaundement, and one daye was as longe as two? He called vpon the Hiest & most mightie, whā <sup>f</sup> enemies preassed vpon him on euery syde: and the LORDE herde him with the hayle stones. They smote <sup>f</sup> Heithenish people mightely, & in fallinge downe they slew all <sup>f</sup> aduersaries, so that the Heithē knewe his hooste, and all his defence, that the LORDE himself fought against them, for he folowed vpon the mightie men of them.

In the tyme of Moses also he and Caleb the sonne of Iephune,<sup>d</sup> dyd a good worke, which stode agaynst the enemies, withelde the people from synne, and styll'd <sup>f</sup> wicked murmuringe. And of sixe hundreth thousande people of fote, they two were preserued, when they were brought in to the heretage, namely, a londe that floweth with mylke & hony. The LORDE gaue strength also vnto Caleb,<sup>e</sup> which remayned with him vnto his age: so that he wente vp in to the hye places of the londe, and his sede conquered the same for an heretage: that all the childrē of Israel might see, how good a thinge it is, to be obedient vnto the LORDE. And the iudges or rulers (euery one after his name) whose hert wente not a whoringe, ner departed from <sup>f</sup> LORDE, and that forsake not the LORDE vnfaithfully, whose remembraunce hath a good reporte: Yee their bones florish out of their place, and their name shal neuer be chaiged.

Samuel the prophet beloued of the LORDE,<sup>f</sup> ordeyned a kinge, and anoynted the prynces ouer the people. In the lawe of the LORDE ruled he, and iudged the congregation, & the LORDE had respecte vnto Iacob. The prophet was founde diligent in his faithfulness: yee in his faithfulness was the faithfulness of the vision knowne. He called vpon <sup>f</sup> LORDE the mightie,<sup>g</sup> whā the enemies preassed vpon him on euery syde, what tyme as he offred the suckynge lambes. And the LORDE thondred from heauen, and mayde his voyce to be herde with a greate noyse. He discomfited the prynces of Tyre, & all the rulers of the Philistynes. Before his last ende he made protestacion in the sight of the LORDE & his anoynted, that he toke nether substance ner good of eny man, no not so moch as a shue: & no man might accuse him. After this he tolde, that his ende was at honde, and shewed the kynge also his ende and death: & from <sup>f</sup> earth lift he vp his voyce in the prophecie, <sup>f</sup> the vngodly people shulde perishe.

The xlvij. Chapter.

AFTERWARDE in the tyme of kynge <sup>a</sup> Nathan,<sup>a</sup> there rose vp a prophet called Nathan: For like as the fat is taken awaye from the offrynge, so was Dauid chosen out of the childrē of Israel. He toke his pastyme with the lyons as with kyddes, and with beares like as with lambes. Slew he not a giaunte when he was yet but yonge,<sup>h</sup> & toke awaye the rebuke from his people? what tyme as he toke the stone in his hande, & smote downe proude Goliath with the slynge? For he called vpon the hiest LORDE, which gaue him strength in his right hande, so that he ouerthrew the mightie giaunte in the battayll, that he might set vp the horne of his people agayne.

Thus brought he him to worshipe aboue all prynces, and made him to haue a good reporte in the prayse of the LORDE, <sup>f</sup> he shulde weere a crowne of glory. For he destroyed the enemies on euery syde,<sup>a</sup> roted out the Philistynes his aduersaries, ⁊ brake their horne in sunder, like as it is brokē yet this daye. In all his workes he prayd f̄ Hyest ⁊ Holiest, ⁊ ascribed the honoure vnto him. With his whole hert dyd he prayse and loue him that made him.<sup>b</sup> He set syngers also before the autler, and in their tune he made swete songes. He ordeyned to kepe the holy daies worshipfully, and that the solempne feastes thorow the whole yere shulde be honorably holdē, with praylinge the name of the LORDE, ⁊ with synginge by tymes in the mornynge in the Sanctuary.

C The LORDE toke away his synnes, and exalted his horne for euer. He gaue him f̄ couenaunt of the kyngdome, and the trone of worshiþe in Israel. After him there rose vp the wyse sonne called Salomon, <sup>c</sup>and for his sake he droue f̄ enemies awaie farre of. This Salomon reigned with peace in his tyme (for God gaue him rest from his enemies on euery syde, that he might buylde him an house in his name, ⁊ prepare the Sanctuary for euer) like as he was well istructe in his youth ⁊ fylled with wysdome and vnderstōdinge, as it were with a water floude. He couered and fylled the whole londe with similitudes and wyse prudent sentences.

D His name wente abrode in the lles, because of his peace he was beloued. All londes marueled at his songes, prouerbes, symilitudes, and at his peace, and at the name of f̄ LORDE God, which is called the God of Israel. <sup>d</sup>He gathered golde as tynne, ⁊ he had as moch syluer as leade. <sup>e</sup>He was moued in vnordinate loue towarde we men, and was ouer come in affection. He stayned his honoure and worshiþe, yee his posterite defyled he also, in bringinge the wrath of the LORDE vpon his children, and sorowe after his ioye: so f̄ his kyngdome was deuyded, ⁊ <sup>f</sup>Ephraim became an vn faithfull ⁊ an vn constant kyngdome. Neuertheles God forsoke not his mercy, <sup>g</sup>nether was he vtterly destroyed because of his workes, f̄ he shulde leaue him no posterite.

E As for f̄ sede f̄ came vpon him (which he loued) he brought it not vtterly to naught, but gaue yet a remnaunt vnto Iacob, and a rote vnto Dauid out of him. Thus rested Salomon with his fathers, and out of his sede he left behynde him a very foolishnes of the people, and soch one as had no vnderstōdinge: namely, <sup>h</sup>Roboā which turned awaye the people thorow his counsell, and Ieroboam f̄ sonne of Nabat, which caused Israel to synne, and shewed Ephraim the waye of vngodlynnes: In so moch that their synnes ⁊ myszdedes had the vpper hande so sore, that at the last they were dryuen out of the londe for the same: Yee he sought out ⁊ brought vp all wickednes, tyll the vengeance came vpon them.

The xliiij. Chapter.

THEN stode vp Elias the prophet<sup>k</sup> as a fyre, and his worde brēt like a creshett. He brought an hōger vpon thē and in his zeale he made them few in nombre. (For they might not awaye with the commaundementes of the LORDE.) Thorow the worde of the LORDE he shut the heauen, and thre tymes brought he the fyre downe. <sup>l</sup>Thus became Elias honorable in his wonderous dedes. Who maye make his boost to be like him? One that was deed raysed he vp from death,<sup>m</sup> ⁊ in the worde of f̄ Hyest he brought him out of the graue agayne. He cast downe kynges and destroyed them, and the honorable from their seate. Vpon the mount Syna he herde the punyshment, ⁊ vpon Horeb the iudgmēt of the vengeance. He prophecied recompensynge vnto kynges, and ordeyned prophetes after him. <sup>n</sup>He was taken vp in the storme of fyre, in a charett of horses of the LORDE. He was ordeyned in the reprouynges in tyme, to pacifie the wrath, to turne f̄ hertes of the fathers vnto the children,<sup>o</sup> ⁊ to set vp the trybes of Iacob agayne. Blessed were they that saw the, and were garnished in loue: for we lyue in life.

B Elias was couered in the storme, but Heliseus was fylled with his mouth. <sup>p</sup>Why he lyued he was afraied of no prynce, and no man might ouer come him. There coude no worde disceaue him,<sup>q</sup> ⁊ after his death his body prophecied. He dyd wonders in his life, ⁊ in death were his workes maruelous. For all this, the people amended not, nether departed they from their synnes: tyll they were caried awaye presoners out of the londe, and were

The trymbled their hertes and handes, so  $\text{y}$  they sorowed like a woman trauaylinge with childe. So they called vp $\text{o}$  the LORDE, which is mercyfull,  $\text{t}$  lift vp their hādes before him. Immediately the LORDE herde the $\text{e}$  out of heauen, and delyuered them by the hande of Esay.  $\text{c}$  He smote the hoost of the Assirians,  $\text{t}$  his angell destroyed the. For Ezechias had done the thinge that pleased the LORDE,  $\text{t}$  remayned stedfastly in the waye of Dauid his father. Which Esay was greate  $\text{t}$  faithfull in his visions.  $\text{d}$  In his tyme  $\text{y}$  Sonne wete backward,  $\text{t}$  he lengthened the kynges life. With a right sprete prophecied he, what shulde come to passe at the last:  $\text{t}$  to such as were soroufull in Sion he gaue consolacion, wherewith they might cōforte them selues for euermore. He shewed thinges  $\text{y}$  were for to come  $\text{t}$  secrete, or euer they came to passe.

The xliij. Chapter.

$\text{A}$  THE remembraunce of Iosias is like as when the Apotecary $\text{e}$  maketh many precious swete smellynge thinges together. His remembraunce shalbe swete as hony in all mouthes, and as the playenge of Musick by the wyne. He was appoynted to turne the people agayne,  $\text{t}$  to take awaye all abhominacions of  $\text{y}$  vngodly. He directed his hert vnto the LORDE,  $\text{t}$  in the tyme of the vngodly he set vp the worshipec of God agayne. All kynges (excepte Dauid, Ezechias  $\text{t}$  Iosias) cōmitted wickednes: for euen  $\text{y}$  kynges of Iuda also forsoke  $\text{y}$  lawe of God. For they gaue their horne vnto other, their honoure  $\text{t}$  worshipec also to a straunge people.

$\text{B}$  Therefore was the electe cite of the Sāc-tuary brent with fyre, and  $\text{t}$  the stretes therof laye desolate and waist: for they intreated

Jeremy euell, which neuertheles was a prophet ordeyned from his mothers wombe, $\text{e}$  that he might rote out, breake of,  $\text{t}$  destroye:  $\text{t}$  that he might buylde vp,  $\text{t}$  plante agayne. Ezechiel sawe the glory of the LORDE in a vision, which was shewed him vpon the charet of the Cherubins. For he thought vpon the enemies in  $\text{y}$  rayne, to do good vnto such as had ordred their wayes a right. And the bones of the twolue prophetes florish from out of their place: for they gaue comforte  $\text{t}$  consolacion vnto Iacob, and delyuered the faithfully. How shall we prayse Zorobabel, $\text{f}$  which was as a ringe in the right hande?

So was Iesus also the sonne of Iosedec: $\text{g}$   $\text{C}$  these men in their tymes buylde the house,  $\text{t}$  set vp the Sanctuary of  $\text{y}$  LORDE agayne, which was prepared for an euerlasting worshipec. And Nehemias $\text{h}$  is allwaye to be cōmended, which set vp for vs the walles $\text{i}$   $\text{y}$  were broken downe, made the portes  $\text{t}$  barres agayne, and buylde our houses of the new. $\text{j}$  But vpon earth is there no man created like Enoch, for he was taken vp from  $\text{y}$  earth. And Ioseph, which was lorde of his brethren,  $\text{t}$  the vpholder of his people: His bones were couered  $\text{t}$  kepte. Seth  $\text{t}$  Sem were in greate honoure amonge  $\text{y}$  people: and so was Adam aboute all the beastes, whā he was created.

$\text{S}$ YMON the sonne of Onias the hye prest, $\text{k}$   $\text{A}$   $\text{y}$  which in his life set vp the house agayne,  $\text{t}$  in his dayes made fast the tēple. The heyth of  $\text{y}$  temple also was founded of him, the dubble buyldinge,  $\text{t}$  the hye walles of the temple. In his dayes the welles of water flowed out, and were excedinge full as the see. He toke care for his people,  $\text{t}$  delyuered them from destruction. He kepte his cite  $\text{t}$  made it stronge, that it shulde not be beseged. He dwelt in honoure and worshipec amonge his people, and enlarged the inтраunce of the house and the courte. He geueth light as the mornynge starre in the myddest of the cloudes, and as  $\text{y}$  Moone when it is full. He shyneth as the Sonne in the temple of God. He is as bright as  $\text{y}$  rayne bowe in  $\text{y}$  fayre cloudes,  $\text{t}$  florisheth as the floures and roses in the sprynge of  $\text{y}$  yeare,  $\text{t}$  as the lilies by the ryuers of water: Like as the braunches vpon the mount Libanus in tyme of Sommer: as a fyre & incēse that is kyndled: Like as an whole ornament of pure golde, set with all maner of precious stones: and as an olyue tre that is frutefull: & as a Cypres tre which groweth vp an hye.

B When he put on the garment of honoure, & was clothed withall bewtye: when he wente to the holy altare, to garnysh the couerynge of the Sanctuary: when he toke ȝ porcions out of the prestes hande, he himself stode by the herth of the altare, and his brethren rounde aboute in ordre. As the braunches of Cedre tre vpon the mount Libanus, so stode they rounde aboute him. And as the braunches of the olyue tre, so stode all ȝ sonnes of Aaron in their glory. And ȝ he might sufficiently perfourme his seruyce vpon the altare, & garnysh the offrynge of the hyst God, he stretched out his hande and toke of the drynkofferynge, & poured in of the wyne: so he poured vpon the botome of the aluter a good smell vnto the hyst pryncce.

Then beganne ȝ sonnes of Aaron to synge, and to blowe with trompettes, & to make a greate noyse, for a remembraunce & prayse vnto the LORDE. Then were the people afrayed, & fell downe to the earth vpo their faces, to worshipe the LORDE their God, & to geue thanks to Allmightie God. They sunge goodly also with their voyces, so that there was a pleasaunt noyse in ȝ greate house of the LORDE. And the people in their prayer besought the LORDE the Hyst, that he wolde be mercyfull, tyll the honoure of ȝ LORDE were performed. Thus ended they their mynistracion and seruyce.

C Then wente he downe, and stretched out his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shulde geue praise & thanks out of their lippes vnto ȝ LORDE, and to reioyce in his name. He beganne yet once also to praye, that he might openly shew the thankesgeuyng before the Hyst, namely thus: O geue prayse & thanks (ye all) vnto the LORDE oure God, which hath euer done noble and greate thinges: which hath increased oure dayes from oure mothers wombe, and dealt with vs accordinge to his mercy: that he wyl geue vs the ioyfulness of hert, & peace for oure tymes in Israel. Which faithfully kepeth his mercy for vs euermore, & allwaye delyuereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people, that I abhorre fro my hert: as for the thirde, whom I hate, it is no people: They that syt vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philistynes, & the foolish people that dwell in Sichimis.

I Iesus the sonne of Sirac Eleazarus of Ierusalem, haue tokened vp these informacions and documētes of wysdome and vnderstādinge in this boke, and poured out the wysdome out of my hert. Blessed is he that exerciseth him self therin: and who so taketh soch to hert, shal be wyse. Yf he do these thinges, he shal be stronge in all. For the light of the LORDE ledeth him.

The li. Chapter.

A prayer of Iesus the sonne of Sirac.

I THANKE the O LORDE and kynge, and praise the O God my Sauoure. I wil yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper, & hast preserued my body from destruction, from ȝ snare of traytorous tōges, and from the lippes that are occupied with leyes. Thou hast bene my helper, from soch as stode vp agaynst me, and hast delyuered me after the multitude of thy mercy, and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast delyuered me from the roaringe of them, that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of ȝ handes of soch as sought after my life: from the multitude of them ȝ troubled me, & wente aboute to set fyre vpon me on euery syde, so ȝ I am not brent in the myddest of the fyre: From the depe of hell, from an vnclane tōge, from lyenge wordes, from the wicked kynge, and from an vnrighteous tonge. My soule shal prayse ȝ LORDE vnto death, for my life drew nye vnto hell.

They cōpased me rounde aboute on euery syde, & there was no mā to helpe me. I looked aboute me, yf there were eny man that wolde scoure me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy O LORDE, and vpon thy actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, ȝ thou delyuerest soch as putt their trust in the, and ryddest them out of ȝ handes of the Heithen. Thus lift I vp my prayer from the earth, and prayed for delyuerance from death. I called vpon the LORDE my father, that he wolde not leaue me without helpe, in the daye of my trouble

¶ in the tyme of the proude. I praysed thy name contynually, yeldinge honoure and thākes vnto it: and so my prayer was herde. Thou sauēdest me from destruccion, and deliueredest me frō ſ̄ vnrighteous tyme. Therefore wil I aknowledge and praise the, and magnifie ſ̄ name of the LORDE.

¶ Whā I was yet but yonge, or euer I wēte astraye, I desyred wyszdome openly in my prayer. I came therefore before the temple, ¶ sought her vnto the last. Then florished she vnto me, as a grape that is soone rype. My hert reioysed in her, then wente my fote the right waye, yee from youth vp sought I after her: I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I founde me moch wyszdome, and prospered greatly in her. Therefore wyll I ascrybe the glory vnto him, that geueth me wyszdome: for I am aduysed to do thereafter. I will be gelous to cleue vnto the thinge ſ̄ is good, so shal I not be cōfounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue bene diligent to be occupied in her. I lift vp myne handes an hye, then was my soule lightened thorow wyszdome, that I knowleged my foolishnes. I ordred my soule after her, she ¶ I were one hert from the begynninge, and I founde her in clenness. And therefore shal I not be forsaken.

My hert longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thorow her ſ̄ LORDE hath geuen me a new tonge, wherwith I wil praise him. O come vnto me ye vn lerned, ¶ dwell in ſ̄ house of wyszdome: withdrawe not youre selues from her, but talke ¶ comon of these thinges, for youre soules are very thirstie. I opened my mouth, and spake!<sup>a</sup> O come ¶ bye wyszdome without money, bowe downe youre neck vnder hir yock, and youre soule shall receaue wyszdome. She is harde at hande, ¶ is content to be founde. Beholde with youre eyes,<sup>b</sup> how that I haue had but litle laboure, and yet haue founde moch rest. O receaue wyszdome, and ye shall haue plenteousnes of syluer and golde in possession. Let youre mynde reioyse in his mercy, ¶ be not ashamed of his prayse. Wyrke his worke by tymes, ¶ be shal geue you youre rewarde in due tyme.

The ende of Ecclesiasticus, otherwyse called Iesus the sonne of Syrac.

The prayer of Azarias

and the songe of y<sup>e</sup> thre children after Theodotios translation: which wordes are wrytten in y<sup>e</sup> thirde chapter of Daniel after the olde text in Latyn.

AND they walked in the myddest of the flamme, praysynge God and magnifienge y<sup>e</sup> LORDE. Asarias stode vp, and prayde on this maner, Euen in the myddest of the fyre opened he his mouth, & saide: Blessed be thou (o LORDE God of oure fathers) right worthy to be praysed and honoured is y<sup>e</sup> name of thine for euermore: for thou art righteous in all y<sup>e</sup> thinges y<sup>e</sup> thou hast done to vs: Yee faithfull are all thy workes, thy wayes are right, & thy iudgmētes true. In all y<sup>e</sup> thinges y<sup>e</sup> thou hast brought vpon vs, & vpon the holy cite of oure fathers (euen Ierusalem) thou hast executed true iudgment: Yee acordinge to right and equity hast thou brought these thinges vpō vs, because of oure synnes.

For why? we haue offended, & done wickedly, departynge from the: In all thinges haue we trespassed, & not obeyed thy cōmaundementes, ner kepte thē, nether done as thou hast bydden vs, y<sup>e</sup> we might prospere. Wherefore, all y<sup>e</sup> thou hast brought vpon vs, & euery thinge y<sup>e</sup> thou hast done to vs, thou hast done them in true iudgment: As in delyueringe vs in to the hondes of oure enemies, amōge vngodly & wicked abhominacions, & to an vnrighteous kinge, yee y<sup>e</sup> most frowarde vpō earth. And now we maye not opē oure mouthes, we are become a shame & reprove vnto thy seruantes, & to thē y<sup>e</sup> worshipe the.

Yet for thy names sake (we beseke the) geue vs not vp for euer, breake not thy couenant, & take not away thy mercy from vs, for thy beloued Abrahams sake, for thy seruaut Isaacs sake, & for thy holy Israels sake: to whom thou hast spoken & promysed, y<sup>e</sup> thou woldest multiply their sede as y<sup>e</sup> starres of heauen, & as the londe y<sup>e</sup> lieth vpon y<sup>e</sup> see shore. For we (o LORDE) are become lesse thē eny people, & be kepte vnder this daye in all the worlde, because of oure synnes: So that now we haue nether prynce, duke, prophet, burnt-offerynge, sacrifice, oblatiō, incēse ner Sanctuary before the.

Neuerthelesse, in a contrite herte and an humble sprete let vs be receaued, y<sup>e</sup> we maie opteyne thy mercy. Like as in the burnt-offerynge of rammes & bullockes, and like as in thousandes of fat lammes: so let oure offrynge be in thy sight this daye, y<sup>e</sup> it maye please y<sup>e</sup>, for there is no cōfucion vnto them, y<sup>e</sup> put there trust in the. And now we folowe the with all oure hert, we feare the, & seke thy face. Put vs not to shame, but deale with vs after thy louynge kyndnesse, & acordinge to the multitude of thy mercies. Delyner vs by thy miracles (o LORDE) & get thy name an honour: that all they which do thy seruantes euell, maye be cōfounded. Let them be ashamed thorow thy Allmightie power, and let their strength be broken: that they maye knowe, how that thou only art the LORDE God, & honour worthy thorow out all the worlde.

And the kynges seruantes y<sup>e</sup> put them in, ceased not to make the ouen hote with wylde fyre, drye strawe, pitch & fagottes: so that the flamme wente out of the ouen vpon a xlix. cubites: yee it toke awaye, & brent vp those Caldees, y<sup>e</sup> it gat holde vpon besyde the ouen. But the angel of the LORDE came downe in to the ouen to Asarias and his felowes, & smote y<sup>e</sup> flamme of the fyre out of the ouen, & made the myddest of the ouen, as it had bene a coole wynde blowinge: so that the fyre nether touched them, greued them, ner dyd them hurte. Then these thre (as out of one mouth) praysed, honoured, and blessed God in the fornace, sayenge:

The story of Susanna,

Which is the xiiij. chapter of Daniel after the Latyn.

THERE dwelt a man in Babilō, called Ioachim:  $\hat{y}$  toke a wife, whose name was Susanna, ( $\hat{y}$  daughter of Helchias) a very fayre woman,  $\tau$  soch one as feared God. Hir father  $\tau$  hir mother also were godly people,  $\tau$  taught their daughter acordinge to  $\hat{y}$  lawe of Moses. Now Ioachim (hir huszbonde) was a greate rich man,  $\tau$  had a fayre orcharde ioyninge vnto his house. And to him resorted the Iewes comonly, because he was a man of reputacion amonge them. The same yeare were there made two iudges, soch as the LORDE speaketh of: All the wickednesse of Babilon, cōmeth from  $\hat{y}$  elders ( $\hat{y}$  is) from  $\hat{y}$  iudges, which seme to rule the people. These came off to Ioachims house,  $\tau$  all soch as had eny thinge to do in the lawe, came thither vnto them.

Now when the people came agayne at after noone, Susanna wente in to hir husz-bōdes orcharde, to walke. The elders seyng this, that she wente in daylie  $\tau$  walked: they burned for lust to her, yee they were almost out of their wittes,  $\tau$  cast downe their eyes, that they shulde not se heauē, ner remembre,  $\hat{y}$  God is a righteous iudge. For they were both wōnded with the loue of her, nether durst one shewe another his grefe. And for shame, they durst not tell her their inordynate lust,  $\hat{y}$  they wolde fayne haue had to do with her. Yet they layed wayte for her earnestly from daye to daye, that they might (at the leest) haue a sight of her. And the one sayde to  $\hat{y}$  other: Vp, let vs go home, for it is dyner tyme. So they wente their waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enqueringe out  $\hat{y}$  matter betwixte them selues: yee the one tolde  $\hat{y}$  other of his wicked lust. Thē apoynted they a tyme, whē they might take Susanna alone.

It happened also  $\hat{y}$  they spyed out a conueniēt tyme, when she wente forth to walke (as hir maner was)  $\tau$  no body with her, but two maydēs,  $\tau$  thought to wash her self in the garden, for it was an hote season: And there was not one person there, excepte the two elders,  $\hat{y}$  had hyd them selues, to beholde her. So she sayde to hir maydens: go fet me oyle  $\tau$  sope,  $\tau$  shut the orcharde dore,  $\hat{y}$  I maye wash me. And they dyd as she bad them,  $\tau$  shut the orcharde dore,  $\tau$  wente out them selues at a backe dore, to fet the thinge  $\hat{y}$  she had cōmaunded: but Susanna knewe not,  $\hat{y}$   $\hat{y}$  elders laie there hyd within. Now when the maydens were gone forth,  $\hat{y}$  two elders gat them vp,  $\tau$  ranne vpon her, sayenge: now, the orcharde dores are shut, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therefore consent vnto vs, and lye with vs.

Yf thou wilt not, we shall bringe a testimoniall agaynst the: that there was a yonge felowe with thee, and that thou hast sent away thy maydens from the for the same cause. Susanna sighed, and sayde: Alas, I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I folowe youre mynde, it wyl be my death: and yf I consent not vnto you, I can not escape youre hondes. Wel, it is better for me, to fall in to youre hondes without the dede doinge, then to synne in the sight of the LORDE: and with that, she cried out with a loude voyce: the elders also cried out agaynst her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde dore,  $\tau$  smote it open. Now when the seruantes of the house herde  $\hat{y}$  crie in  $\hat{y}$  orcharde, they ruszshed in at the back dore, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruantes were greatly ashamed, for why, there was neuer such a reporte made of Susanna. On the morow after came the people to Ioachim hir houszbonde, and  $\S$  two elders came also, full of myscheuous ymaginations agaynst Susanna, to bringe her vnto death,  $\tau$  spake thus before the people: Sende for Susanna  $\S$  daughter of Helchias, Iochims wife. And immediatly they sent for her. So she came with her father  $\tau$  mother, hir children  $\tau$  all hir kynrede. Now Susanna was a tender person, and maruelous fayre of face. Therefore the wicked men cōmaunded to take of the clothes from her face (for she was couered)  $\S$  at the leest, they might so be satisfied in hir beutie. Then hir frēdes, yee  $\tau$  all they  $\S$  knewe her, begāne to wepe.

These two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people,<sup>a</sup>  $\tau$  layed their hondes vpon  $\S$  heade of Susanna: which wepte, and loked vp towarde heauen, for hir herte had a sure trust in the LORDE. And the elders sayde: As we were walkinge in the orcharde alone, this woman came in with hir two maydēs: whom she sent awaye from her,  $\tau$  sparrd  $\S$  orcharde dores. With that, a yonge felowe (which there was hyd) came vnto her,  $\tau$  laye with her. As for vs, we stode in a corner of the orcharde. And whē we sawe this wickednes, we rāne to her:  $\tau$  perceaued,  $\S$  they had medled together. But we coude not holde him, for he was stronger then we: thus he opened  $\S$  dore,  $\tau$  gat him awaye. Now whē we had takē this womā, we axed her, what yōge felow this was: but she wolde not tell vs. This is  $\S$  matter,  $\tau$  we be witnesses of  $\S$  same.

The comon sorte beleued them, as those  $\S$  were the elders  $\tau$  iudges of the people,  $\tau$  so they condemned her to death. Susanna cried out with a loude voyce,  $\tau$  sayde: O euerlastinge God,<sup>b</sup> thou sercher of secretes, thou  $\S$  knowest all thinges afore they come to passe: thou wotest,  $\S$  they haue borne false wytnes agaynst me:  $\tau$  beholde, I must dye, where as I neuer dyd eny soch thinges, as these men haue maliciously inuented agaynst me. And  $\S$  LORDE herde hir voyce. For whē she was led forth to death,  $\S$  LORDE raised vp  $\S$  sprete of a yōge childe, whose name was Daniel, which cried with a loude voice: 'I am clene frō this bloude. Thē all  $\S$  people turned thē towarde him,  $\tau$  saide: What meane these wordes,  $\S$  thou hast spokē? Daniel stode in  $\S$  myddest of thē,  $\tau$  sayde: Are ye soch fooles (O ye childrē of Israel)  $\S$  ye cā not discerne? Ye haue here condēned a daughter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the trueth wherfore: Go syt on iudgment agayne, for they haue spoken false witenesse agaynst her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the haist. And the elders (that is, the principall heades) sayde vnto him: come sit downe here amonge vs, and shewe vs this matter, seynge God hath geuen the as greate honoure, as an elder. And Daniel sayde vnto them: 'Put these two asyde one from another and then shal I heare them. When they were put a sunder one from another, he called one of them, and sayde vnto him: O thou olde canckerde carle, that hast vsed thy wickednesse so longe: thine vngracious dedes which thou hast done afore, are now come to light. For thou hast geuen false iudgmentes, thou hast oppressed the innocent, and letten the gilty go fre, where as yet the LORDE saieth: 'The innocent and righteous se thou slaye not. Wel than, yf thou hast sene her, tel me, vnder what tre sawest thou them talkynge together? He answered: Vnder a Molbery tre. And Daniel sayde: very wel, Now thou leist euen vpon thine heade. Lo the messaunger of the LORDE hath receaued the sentence of him, to cut  $\S$  in two.

Then put he him asyde, and called for the other, and sayde vnto him: O thou sede of Canaan but not of Iuda: Fayrnesse hath disceaued the, and lust hath subuerted thine herte. Thus dealte ye afore with the daughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Iuda wolde not abyde youre wickednesse. Now tell me than, vnder what tre diddest thou take them speakeinge together? He answered: vnder a pomgranate tre. Then sayde Daniel vnto him: very wel, now thou leyst also euen vpō thine heade. The messaunger of the LORDE stondest waytinge with the swerde, to cut the in two, and to slaye you both.

With that, all the whole multitude gauē a greate shoutē, and prayسد God, which all-

The Helchias  $\text{t}$  his wife pray'd God for their daughter Susanna, with Ioachim hir huszbonde and all  $\text{y}$  kinrede: that there was no dishoneste founde in her. From that daye forth was Daniel had in greate reputacio in the sight of  $\text{y}$  people.

The ende of the story of Susanna.

The story of Bel,

which is the xiiiij. Chapter of Daniel after the Latin.

THERE was at Babilon an ymage, called Bel: and there were spent vpon him euery daye, xij. cakes, xl. shepe, and sixe greate pottes of wine. Him dyd the kynge worshipe himself, and went daylie to honoure him: but Daniel worship'd his owne God. And the kynge sayde vnto him: Why dost not thou worshipe Bel? he answered and sayde: "Because I maye not worshipe thinges, that be made with hondes, but the luyngge God, which made beauen and earth, and hath power vpon all flesh. The kynge sayde vnto him: thinkest thou not,  $\text{y}$  Bel is a luyngge God? Or seist thou not, how moch he eateth and drynketh euery daye? Daniel smyled, and sayde: O kynge, disceane not thyselfe: This is but made of claye within, and of metall without, nether eateth he euer any thinge.<sup>b</sup>

B Then the kynge was wroth, and called for his prestes, and sayde vnto them: Yf ye tell me not who this is, that eateth vp these expenses, ye shal dye: But yf ye can certifie me, that Bel eateth them, then Daniel shall dye,<sup>c</sup> for he hath spoken blasphemy agaynst Bel. And Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: let it so be, accordinge as thou hast sayde. The prestes of Bel were lxx. besyde their wyues and children. And the kynge wente with Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bels prestes sayde: Lo, we wil go out,  $\text{t}$  set thou  $\text{y}$  meate there (O kynge)  $\text{t}$  poure in the wyne: then shutt the dore fast, and seale it with thine owne signet: and tomorow when thou comest in, yf thou fyndest not, that Bel hath eaten vp all, we wil suffre death: or els daniel, that hath lyed vpon vs. The prestes thought them selues sure ynough, for vnder  $\text{y}$  altare they had made a preuy intrance,  $\text{t}$  there wente they in euer, and ate vp what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the kynge set meates before Bel. Now Daniel had comaunded his seruantes to bringe aszshes and these he sifted thorow out all the temple, that the kynge might se. Then wente they out,  $\text{t}$  sparre the dore, sealinge it with  $\text{y}$  kynges signet, and so departed. In  $\text{y}$  night came the prestes with their wyues and children (as they were wonte to do) and ate and dronke vp all. In the mornynge be tymes at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose,  $\text{t}$

Daniel with him. And the kynge sayde: Daniel, are the seales whole yet? He answered: Yee (o kynge) they be whole. Now as soone as he had opened the dore, the kinge loked vnto  $\text{f}$  altare, and cried with a loude voyce: Greate art thou o Bel, and with the is no disceate. Then laughed Daniel, and helde the kynge, that he shulde not go in, and sayde: Beholde the pauement, marcke well, whose fotesteppes are these? The kynge sayde: I se the fotesteppes of men, women and children.

D Therefore the kynge was angrie, and toke the prestes, with their wyues and childrē,  $\tau$  they shewed him  $\text{f}$  preuy dores, where they came in,  $\tau$  ate vp such thinges as were vpon  $\text{f}$  altare. "For the which cause  $\text{f}$  kynge slewe them,  $\tau$  delyuered Bel in to Daniels power, which destroyed him and his temple.

And in that same place there was a greate dragon, which they of Babilon worshipped. And  $\text{f}$  kynge sayde vnto Daniel: sayest thou,  $\text{f}$  this is but a god of metall also? lo, he liueth, he eateth  $\tau$  drinketh: so  $\text{f}$  thou cāst not saye, that he is no lyuinge God, therfore worshipe him. Daniel sayde vnto  $\text{f}$  kynge: I wil worshipe the LORDE my God,<sup>a</sup> he is  $\text{f}$  true lyuynge God: as for this, he is not the God of life. But geue me leaue (o kynge)  $\tau$  I shal destroye this dragon without swearde or staff. The kynge sayde: I geue  $\text{f}$  leaue. Then Daniel toke pitch, fatte, and hairie woll, and did seyth them together, and made lompes therof: this he put in  $\text{f}$  Dragōs mouth, and so  $\text{f}$  dragon barst in sonder: and Daniel sayde: lo, there is he whom ye worshipped.

E When they of Babylon herde that, they toke greate indignacion, and gathered them together agaynst the kynge, sayenge: The kynge is become a Iewe also, he hath destroyed Bel, he hath slayne  $\text{f}$  Dragon, and put the prestes to death. So they came to  $\text{f}$  kynge,  $\tau$  sayde: let us haue Daniel, or els we wil destroye the and thine house.

Now whan  $\text{f}$  kynge sawe, that they rushed in so sore vpon him,  $\tau$  that necessite constrained him,<sup>c</sup> he deliuered Daniel vnto them: which cast him in to the lyons denne, where he was sixe dayes. In the denne there were seuen lyons, and they had geuen them euery daye two bodies and two shepe: which then were not geuē them, that they might deuoure Daniel.

There was in Lewry a prophet called Abacuc, which had made potage, and broken bred in a depe platter, and was goinge in to the feldes, for to brynge it to  $\text{f}$  mowers. But the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto Abacuc: go cary the meate that thou hast in to Babilon, vnto Daniel, which is in  $\text{f}$  lyōs denne. And Abacuc sayde: LORDE, I neuer sawe Babilon: and as for the denne, I knowe it not. "Then the angel of the LORDE toke him by the toppe, and bare him by the hayre of the heade, and (thorow a mightie wynde) set him in Babilon vpon the denne. And Abacuc cried, sayenge: O Daniel thou seruānt of God,<sup>d</sup> haue, take the breakfast,  $\text{f}$  God hath sent  $\text{f}$ . And Daniel saide: O God, hast thou thought vpon me? wel, thou neuer faylest them that loue the. So Daniel arose,  $\tau$  ate: and the angel of the LORDE set Abacuc in his owne place agayne immediatly.

Vpon the seuenth daye, the kynge wente G to bewepe Daniel: and whan he came to the denne, he loked in: and beholde, Daniel sat in the myddest of the lyons. Then cried  $\text{f}$  kynge with a loude voyce, sayenge: Greate art thou, o LORDE God of Daniel:<sup>e</sup>  $\tau$  he drewe him out of the denne. As for those that were  $\text{f}$  cause of his destruccio,<sup>f</sup> he dyd cast thē in to the denne, and they were deuoured in a moment before his face.

After this, wrote the kynge vnto all people, kynreddes and tungen, that dwelt in all countrees, sayenge: peace be multiplied with you. My commaundement is, in all the domynion of my realme: that men feare and stonde in awe of Daniels God,<sup>g</sup> for he is the lyuynge God, which endureth euer: his kyngdome abydeth vncorrupte, and his power is euerlastinge.<sup>h</sup> It is he that can delyuer and saue: he doth wonders and maruelous workes in heauen and in earth, for he hath saued Daniel from the power of the Lyons.

The first Chapter.

AFTER that Alexander the sonne of Philippe, kynge of Macedonia wente forth of the londe of Cethim, and slewe Darius kynge of the Persias and Meedes: It happened, that he toke greate warres in honde, wanne very many stronge cities, and slew many kinges of  $\text{y}$  earth: goinge thorow to  $\text{y}$  endes of the worlde, and gettinge many spoyles of the people: In so moch,  $\text{y}$  the worlde stode in greate awe of him,<sup>a</sup>  $\text{a}$  therefore was he proude in his herte. Now whē he had gathered a mightie strōge hoost,  $\text{a}$  subdued  $\text{y}$  lōdes and people with their prynces, so that they became tributaries vnto hi: he fell sick. And whē he perceaued that he must nedes die, he called for his noble estates (which had bene brought vp with him of children)  $\text{a}$  parted his kyngdome amonge them,<sup>b</sup> whyle he was yet alyue. So Alexāder raygned xij. yeare, and then dyed.

After his death fell the kyngdome vnto his prynces, and they optayned it euery one in his rowme, and caused them selues to be crowned as kynges: and so dyd their childrē after them many yeares,  $\text{a}$  moch wickednesse increased in the worlde. Out of these came  $\text{y}$  vngracious rote, noble Antiochus  $\text{y}$  sonne of Antiochus the kynge<sup>c</sup> (which had bene a pledge at Rome)  $\text{a}$  he raigned in  $\text{y}$  Cxxxvij. yeare of the raigne of the Grekes.

In those dayes wēte there out of Israel wicked men, which moued moch people with their couēse,<sup>d</sup> sayēge: Let vs go  $\text{a}$  make a couenaut with the Heithen,  $\text{y}$  are rounde aboute vs: 'for sence we departed from them, we haue had moch sorow. So this deuoyce pleased them well, and certayne of  $\text{y}$  people toke vpon thē for to go vnto  $\text{y}$  kynge, which gaue them licence to do after the ordinaūce of the Heithen.<sup>e</sup> Then set they vp an open scole (at Ierusalem) of the lawes of the Heithē, and were nomore circumcised: but forsoke  $\text{y}$  holy Testamente, and ioyned them selues to  $\text{y}$  Heithē,<sup>f</sup>  $\text{a}$  were cleane solde to do myschefe.

So when Antiochus beganne to be mightie in his kyngdome, he wente aboute to optayne  $\text{y}$  londe of Egipte also, that he might haue the dominion of two realmes. Vpon this entred he in to Egipte<sup>g</sup> with a stronge hoost, with charettes, elephantes, horsmen  $\text{a}$  a greate nombre of shippes, and beganne to warre agaynst Ptolomy the kynge of Egipte. But Ptolomy was afrayed of him, and fled: and many of his people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wāne many strōge cities, and toke awaye great good out of the londe of Egipte.

And after that Antiochus had smytten Egipte, he turned agayne in the Cxliij. yeare  $\text{a}$  wente towarde Israel,<sup>h</sup> and came vp to Ierusalem with a mightie people: and entred proudly into  $\text{y}$  Sanctuary, and toke awaye the golden altare, the candilsticke and all  $\text{y}$  ornamētes therof: the table of the shewbred the pouring vessel, the chargers, the golden spones, the vafe, the crownes and golden apparel of the temple, and brake downe all. He toke also the syluer and golde, the precious Iewels, and the secreete treasures that he fōude. And when he had taken awaye altogether, caused a greate murthur of men, and so fulfilled his malicious pryde, he departed in to his owne londe.

Thus there arose greate heuinesse and misery in all the londe of Israel. The prynces and the elders of the people mourned, the yōge men and the maydens were defyled, and the fayre beutey of women was chaunged: the brydegrome and the bryde toke them to mournynge: the londe and those that dwelt therin, was moued: for all the house of Iacob was brought to confucion.

After two yeares the kynge sent his chefe treasurer vnto the cities of Iuda,<sup>i</sup> which came to Ierusalem with a greate multitude of people, speakēge peaceable wordes vnto thē, but all was disceate: for when they had geuen him credence, he fell sodely vpon the cite, and smote it sore, <sup>and</sup> destroyed moch people of Israel. And when he had spoyled the cite, he set fyre on it,<sup>j</sup> castinge downe houses and walles on euery syde. The women  $\text{a}$  their children toke they captiue, and led awaye their catell. Then buylded they the castel of Dauid with a greate and thicke wall, and with mightie towres, and made it a stronge holde for them. Besyde all this they sett wicked people and vngodly men to kepe it, stoared it with weapens and vytales: gathered the goodes of Ierusalem, and layed thē vp there: thus became it a theuysch castell.

And this was done to laye waite for the people that wente in to the Sanctuary, and for the cruell destruccion of Israel. Thus they shed innocent bloude on euery syde of y<sup>e</sup> Sanctuary, and defyled it: In so moch that the citesyns were fayne to departe, and the cite became an habitacion of straungers, beyng desolate of hir owne sede, for hir owne natyues were fayne to leaue her. Hir Sāctuary was clene waisted,<sup>a</sup> hir holy dayes were turned in to mournynge, hir Sabbathes were had in derision, and hir honoure brought to naught. Loke how greate hir glory was afore, so greate was hir confucion, and hir ioye turned in to sorow.

Antiochus also the kynge sent out a commission<sup>b</sup> vnto all his kyngdome, that all the people shulde be one. Then they left euery man his lawe, and all the Heithen agreed to the cōmaundement of kynge Antiochus: Yee many of the Israelites consented there vnto, offerynge vnto Idols, and defylyng the Sabbath. So the kynge Antiochus sent his messaungers with his commission vnto Ierusalem, and to all y<sup>e</sup> cities of Iuda: that they shulde folowe y<sup>e</sup> lawes of the Heithē, and forbad ether burntofferynge, meatofferynge or peaceofferynge to be made in the temple of God, & that there shulde no Sabbath ner hye feast daye be kepte: but commaunded, that the Sanctuary and the holy people of Israel shulde be defyled.

He commaunded also that there shulde be set vp on altares, temples and Idols: to offre vp swynes flesh and other vnclene beastes: that men shulde leaue their children vncircumcised, to defyle their soules with all maner of vncleennesse & abhominacions: that they might so forget the lawe, and chaūge all the holy ordinaunces of God: and that who so euer wolde not do acordynge to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, shulde suffre death. In like maner commaunded he thorow out all his realme, and sett rulers ouer the people, for to compell them to do these thynges, commaunding the cities of Iuda to do sacrifice vnto Idols.

Then wente the people vnto the Heithen by heapes, forsoke the lawe of the LORDE, and committed moch euell in the londe: yee and chaced out the secrete Israelites, which had hyd them selues in corners and preuy places. The xv. daye of the moneth Caslen, in the Cxlv. yeaere, set kynge Antiochus an abhominable Idol of desolacion vpon the altare of God, and they buylded altares thorow out all the cities of Iuda on euery syde, before the dores of the houses, and in the stretes: where they brent incense, and dyd sacrifice. And as for the bokes of the lawe of God, they brent them in the fyre,<sup>c</sup> and rente them in peeces. What so euer he was that had a boke of the Testament of the LORDE founde by hym, yee who so euer endeouored himself to kepe the lawe of the LORDE, the kynges commaundement was, y<sup>e</sup> they shulde put him to death. And thorow his auctorite they executed these thynges euery moneth, vpon the people of Israel that were founde in the cities.

The fyue and twentye daye of the moneth,<sup>d</sup> what tyme as they dyd sacrifice vpon the altare (which stode in the steade of the altare of the LORDE) acordinge to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, they put certayne women to death, which had caused their children to be circumcised: Not only that, but they hanged vp the children by the neckes thorow out all their houses, and slewe the circumcisers of them.

Yet were there many of the people of Israel, which determed in them selues, that they wolde not eate vnclene thynges: but chose rather to suffre death, then to be defyled with vnclene meates. So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly slayne. And this greate tyranny increased very sore vpon the people of Israel.

The ij. Chapter.

IN those dayes there dyd stōde vp one Matathias the sonne of Symeon the prest (out of the kynred of Ioaris) frō Ierusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of modin, and had v. sonnes: Ihō called Gaddis: Symon, called Thasi: Iudas, other wyse called Machabeus: Eleazer, other wyse called Abaron: and Ionathas, whose surname was Apphus. These sawe the euell, y<sup>e</sup> was done amonge the people of Iuda and Ierusalem. And Matathias sayde: Wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se this misery of my people, and y<sup>e</sup> piteous destruccion of the holy cite: ⁊ thus to syt so styll, it beyng deliuered in to the bondes of the enemies, "Hir Sanctuary is come in to the power of straungers, hir temple is, as it were a man ⁊ hath lost his good name. Hir precious ornamentes are caried awaye captiue, hir olde men are slayne in the stretes, and hir yonge men are fallen thorow the swearde of the enemies.

What people is it, that hath not some possession in hir kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of hir spoyle? All hir glory is taken awaye. She was a Quene, and now she is become an handmayde. Beholde our Sanctuary, oure bewtye and honoure is waisted awaye, and defyled by the Gentiles. What helpe it vs then to lyue? And Matathias rente his clothes, he and his sonnes, and put sackcloth vpon them, ⁊ mourned very sore.

Then came the men thither which were sent of kynge Antiochus, to compell such as were fled in to the cite of Modin, for to do sacrifice and to burne incense vnto Idols, and to forsake the lawe of God. So, many of the people of Israel consented and enclined vnto them, but Matathias and his sonnes remayned stedfast. Then spake the commissioners of kynge Antiochus, ⁊ sayde vnto Matathias: Thou art a noble man, of hye reputacion and greate in this cite, hauinge fayre children and brethren. Come thou therfore first, and fulfill the kynges commaundemēt, like as all the Heithen haue done, yee and ⁊ men of Iuda, and soch as remayne at Ierusalem: so shalt thou and thy children be in ⁊ kynges fauoure, and enriched with golde, syluer and greate rewards.

Matathias answered, and spake with a loude voyce: Though all nacions obeye the kynge Antiochus, and fall awaie euery man frō keepinge ⁊ lawe of their fathers: though they consente to his commaundementes, yet wil I ⁊ my sonnes and my brethren, not fall from the lawe of oure fathers. God forbyd we shulde: that were not good for vs, that we shulde forsake the lawe and ordinaunces of God,<sup>a</sup> and to agre vnto the commaundement of kynge Antiochus. Therefore we will do no soch sacrifice, nether breake the statutes of oure lawe, to go another waye. And whē he had spoken these wordes,<sup>c</sup> there came one of the Iewes, which openly in the sight of all, dyd sacrifice vnto the Idols vpon the aulter in the cite of Modin, accordinge to the kynges commaundement.

When Matathias sawe this, it grieved him at the herte, so that his raynes shoke withall, and his wrath kindled for very zele of the lawe. With that he gaue a skippe forth, and kyled the Iewe besyde the aulter: Yee and slewe ⁊ kynges commissioner, that compelled him to do sacrifice, ⁊ destroyed the aulter at the same time: soch a zele had he vnto the lawe of God, like as "Phinees dyd vnto Zambri the sonne of Salomi. And Matathias cried with a loude voyce thorow ⁊ cite, sayenge: Who so is feruent in the lawe, ⁊ wil kepe ⁊ couenaunt, let him folowe me. So he and his sonnes fled in to the mountaynes<sup>d</sup> and left all that euer they had in ⁊ cite. Many other godly men also departed in to the wyldernesse with their children, their wyues and their catell, and remayned there: for the tyranny increased so sore vpon them.

Now when the kynges seruantes and the hoost, which was at Ierusalem in the cite of David herde, that certayne mē had broken the kynges commaundement and were gone their waye to the wyldernesse in to secrete places, and that there were many departed after them: they folowed vpon them to fight agaynst them in the Sabbath daye, and sayde: Wyl ye yet rebell? Get you hence ⁊ do the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, and ye shal lyue. They answered: We wil not go forth, nether wil we do the kynges cōmaundement, to defyle ⁊ Sabbath daye.<sup>e</sup> Then beganne they to fight agaynst them neuerthelesse they gaue them none other answere, nether cast they one stone at them, ner made fast their prey places, but sayde: We wil dye all in our innocency, heauen ⁊ earth shal testifie with vs, that ye put vs to death wrongeously. Thus they fought agaynst them vpon the Sabbath, ⁊ slewe both men and catell, their wyues and their children, to the nombre of a thousande people.

When Matathias and his frendes herde this, they mourned for them right sore, and sayde one to another: Yf so be that we all do as oure brethre haue done, and fight not for oure lyues ⁊ for oure lawes agaynst the Heithen: then shall they the sooner rote vs out of the earth. So they cōcluded amonge theselues at the same tyme, sayenge: What soeuer he be that cometh to make battayll with vs vpon the Sabbath daye, we wyll fight agaynst him, & not dye all, as oure brethren <sup>y</sup> were murdered so haynously. Vpō this came the Synagoge of the Iewes vnto thē: stronge men of Israel, all such as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecucion, came to helpe them, and to stonde by them: In so moch that they gathered an hoost of men, and slewe the wicked doers in their gelousy, and the vngodly men in their wrath. Some of the wicked fled vnto the Heithen, and escaped.

Thus Matathias and his frendes wente aboute, and destroyed the altuers, and circumcised the children, that had not yet receaued circumcision: as many as they founde within <sup>y</sup> coostes of Israel: and folowed mightly vpon the children of pryde, and this acte prospered in their hondes: In so moch, that they kepte the lawe agaynst the power of the Gentiles and the kynges, and gaue not ouer their dominion vnto wicked doers.

After this when the tyme drew on fast, that Matathias shulde dye, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Now is pryde and persecucion increased, now is the tyme of destruction and wrathfull displeasure: Wherefore (o my sonnes) be ye feruent in the lawe, and ioperde youre lyues for the Testament of the fathers: call to remembraunce what actes oure fathers dyd in their tyme, so shall ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlasting name.

Remembre Abraham,<sup>a</sup> was not he founde faithfull in tentacion, and it was reckened vnto him for righteousnesse? Joseph in tyme of his trouble kepte the commaundement, and was made a lorde of Egipte. Phinees oure father was so feruent for the honoure of God, that he<sup>b</sup> optayned the couenaūt of an euerlasting presthode. Iosue for fulfillingge the worde of God, was made the captayne of Israel. Caleb bare recorde before the cōgregation, and receaued an heretage. <sup>d</sup>Dauid also in his mercifull kyndnesse, optayned the trone of an euerlasting kyngdome. <sup>e</sup>Elias beyngelous and feruent in the lawe, was taken vp in to heauē. <sup>f</sup>Hananiah, Asarias and Misael remayned stedfast in faith, and were delyuered out of the fyre. In like maner <sup>g</sup>Daniel beyngelentie, was saued from the mouth of the Lyons.

And thus ye maye conside thorow out all ages sens the worlde beganne,<sup>h</sup> that who so euer put their trust in God, were not ouer come. <sup>i</sup>Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodly man, for his glory is but donge and wormes: to daye is he set vp, and to morow is he gone: for he is turned in to earth, and his memoriall is come to naught. Wherefore (o my sonnes) take good hertes vnto you, and quyte your selues like men in the lawe: for yf ye do the thinges that are commaunded you in the lawe of the LORDE your God, ye shal optaine greate honoure therin.

And beholde, I knowe that your brother Symon is a man of wysdome: se that ye geue eare vnto him allwaye, he shall be a father vnto you. As for Iudas Machabeus, he hath euer bene mightie and strōge from his youth vp: let him be your captayne, and ordre the battayll of <sup>y</sup> people: Thus shall ye bryng vnto you all those that fauoure the lawe, and se that ye auenge the wronge of your people, and recompence the Heithen agayne, and applie your selues whole to the commaundement of the lawe. So he gaue them his blessinge, and was layed by his fathers: and dyed in the Cxlvj. yeare at Modin, where his sonnes buried him in his fathers sepulchre, & all Israel made greate lamentacion for him.

The iij. Chapter.

THEN stode vp Iudas Machabeus in his fathers steade,<sup>a</sup> and all his brethrē helped him: and so dyd all they that helde with his father, and fought with cherefulness for Israel. So Iudas gat his people greate honoure: He put on a brest plate as a giaunte, and arayed him self with his harnesse, and defended the hoost with his swearde. In his actes he was like a lyon, & as a lyons whelp roaringe at his praye. He was an enemie to the wicked,<sup>b</sup> and hnted them out: and brent vp those, that vexed his people: So that his enemies fled for feare of him, and all the workers of vngodlynnes were put to trouble:

soch lucke and prosperite was in his honde. This greued dyuerse kynges, but Iacob was greatly reioysed thorow his actes, and he gat him self a greate name for euer.

He wente thorow the cities of Iuda, destroyenge the vngodly out of them, turnynge away the wrath from Israel, and receauynge such as were oppressed: and the fame of him wente vnto the vttemost parte of y<sup>e</sup> earth. Then Appollonius (a prynce of Syria) gathered a mightie greate hoost of the Heithen  $\alpha$  out of Samaria, to fight agaynst Israel. Which when Iudas perceaued, he wente forth to mete him, fought with him, slewe him, and a greate multitude with him: the remnaunte fled, and he toke their substaunce. Iudas also toke Appollonius owne swearde, and fought with it all his life longe.

B Now when Seron (another prynce of Siria) herde saye, that Iudas had gathered vnto him the congregacion and church of the faithfull, he sayde: I will get me a name and a prayse thorow out the realme: for I will go fight with Iudas and them that are with him, as many as haue despised the kynges commaundement. So he made him ready, and there wente with him a greate mightie hoost of the vngodly, to stonde by him, and to be auenged of the childrē of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Iudas wente forth agaynst them with a small company. And when his people sawe such a greate hoost before thē, they sayde vnto Iudas: How are we able (beynge so fewe) to fight agaynst so greate a multitude and so stronge? seinge we be so weery, and haue fasted all this daye?

C But Iudas sayde: "It is a small matter for many to be ouer come with fewe: Yee there is no difference to the God of heauen, to deliuer by a greate multitude or by a small company:  $\beta$  for the victory of the battell stondeth not in the multitude of the hoost, but the strength commeth from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynst vs with a presumptuous and proude multitude: to destroye vs, oure wyues and oure children, and to robbe vs. But we will fight for oure lyues and for oure lawes, and the LORDE himself shall destroye thē before oure face: therefore be not ye afrayed of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes, he leapte sodenly vpon thē. Thus was Seron smytten, and his hoost put to flight, and Iudas folowed vpon them beyonde Bethoron vnto the playne felde: where there were slayne eight hundred men of them, and the residue fled in to the londe of the Philistynes. Then all the Heithen on euery syde were afrayed for Iudas and his brethern: so y<sup>e</sup> the rumoure of him came vnto the kynges eares, for all the Gentiles coude tell of the warres of Iudas.

D So whan kynge Antiochus herde these tidinges, he was angrie in his mynde: wherefore he sente forth and gathered an hoost of his whole realme, very stronge armies: and opened his treasury, and gaue his hoost a yeaes wagies in honde, commaundyng them to be ready at all tymes.

Neuerthelesse when he sawe, that there was not moneye ynough in his treasures, and that thorow the discorde and persecucion, which he made in y<sup>e</sup> londe (to put downe y<sup>e</sup> lawes that had bene of olde tyme) his customes and tributes of the londe were mynischd: he feared that he was not able for to beare the costes and charges eny lenger, ner to haue soch giftes, to geue so liberally as he dyd a fore, more then the kynges that were before him.

Wherefore he was heuy in his mynde, and thought to go in to Persides, for to take tributes of y<sup>e</sup> londe, and so to gather moch moneye. So he left Lysias (a noble man of the kynges bloude) to ouersee the kynges busynesses, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egipte: and to kepe well his sonne Antiochus, till he came agayne.

E Morouer, he gaue him half of his hoost and elephantes, committed vnto him euery thinge of his mynde, concernynge those which dwelt in Iuda, and Ierusalem: that he shulde sende out an army agaynst them, to destroye and to rote out the power of Israel and the remnaunt of Ierusalem: to put out their memoriall from that place, to set straungers for to inhabit all their quarters, and to parte their londe amōge them. "Thus the kynge toke the other parte of the hoost, and departed from Antioch (a cite of his realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the hundredth and xlvij. yeaer, and wente thorow the hye countrees.

"And Lysias chose vnto him Ptolomy the sonne of Doriminius, Nycanor and Gorgias mightie men, ⁊ the kynges frendes. These he sent with xl. thousande fote men and vij. thousande horsmen, for to go in to ȝe londe of Iuda, and to destroye it, as the kynge commaunded. So they wente forth with all their power, and came to Emmaus in to the playne felde. When the marchaūtes herde the runoure of them, they and their seruantes toke very moch siluer and golde, for to bye the children of Israel to be their bonde men. There came vnto them also yet moo men of warre on euery syde, out of Syria ⁊ the from the Palestynes.

¶ Now when Iudas and his brethrē sawe that trouble increased, and that the hoost drew nye vnto their borders: consideringe ȝe kynges wordes which he commaunded vnto the people: namely, that they shulde vterly waist and destroye them: They sayde one to another: Let vs redresse the decaye of oure people, let vs fight for oure folke and for oure Sanctuary. Then the congregacion were soone ready gathered to fight, to prae and to make supplicacion vnto God for mercy and grace.

As for Ierusalem, it laye voyde, and was as it had bene a wyldernes. There wente no man in nor out at it, and the Sanctuary was troden downe. The aleauntes kepte the castell, there was the habitacion of the Heithen. The myrth of Iacob was taken awaye, the pype ⁊ the harpe was gone from amonge them.

The Israelites gathered them together, and came to Maspha before Ierusalem: for in Maspha was the place where they prayed afore tyne. So they fasted that daye, and put sackclothes vpon them, cast aszshes vpon their heades, rente their clothes, and layde forth the bokes of the lawe (wherout ȝe Heithen sought the licknesse of their ymages) and brought the prestes ornaments, the firstlinges and the Tythes. They set there also the absteyners (which had fulfilled their dayes) before God, and cried with a loude voyce towarde heauen, sayenge: what shal we do with these? and whither shall we cary them awaye?

¶ For thy Sanctuary is troden downe and defyled, thy prestes are come to heynnesse and dishonoure: and beholde, the Heithen are come together for to destroye vs. Thou knowest what thinges they ymagyn against vs. How maye we stonde before them, excepte thou (o God) be oure helpe?

They blew out the trompettes also with a loude voyce. Then Iudas ordered captaines ouer the people: ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten. But as for soch as buylded them houses, married wyues, planted them vynyards, and those that were fearfull: he commaunded them euery man to go home, accordinge to ȝe lawe. So the hoost remoued, and pitched vpon the South syde of Emmaus.

And Iudas sayde: Arme youre selues, be stronge (o my children) make you ready agaynst tomorow in the mornynge, that ye maye fight with these people, which are agreed together to destroye vs ⁊ oure Sanctuary. Better is it for vs to dye in battayll, then to se oure people and oure Sanctuary in soch a miserable case. Neuerthelesse, as ȝe will is in heauen, so be it.

The iiii. Chapter.

THEN toke Gorgias fyue thousande men of fote, and a thousande of the best horsmen: and remoued by night, to come nye where ȝe Iewes hoost laye, and so to slaye them sodenly. Now the men that kepte the castell, were the cōueyers of them. Then arose Iudas to smyte the chefe and pryncipall of the kinges hoost at Emmaus, for the army was not yet come together. In the meane season came Gorgias by night in to Iudas tentes: ⁊ when he founde no man there, he sought them in the moūtaynes, and thought they had bene fled awaye because of him. But whē it was daie, Iudas shewed himself in ȝe felde with thre thousande men only, which had nether harnesse ner sweardes to their myndes.

But on the other syde, they sawe that the Heithen were mightie and wel harnessed, and their horsmen aboute them, and all these wel experte in fettes of warre. Then sayde Iudas to ȝe men that were with him: Feare not ye the multitude of them, be not afraied of their violence runnyng: remembre how oure fathers were deluyered in the reed see, when Pharao threatned them with a greate hoost. "Euen so let vs also crie now towarde heauen: and the LORDE shall haue mercy vpon vs, and remembre the couenant of oure fathers, yee and destroye this hoost before oure face this daye: And all Heithen shal knowe, that it is God himself, which delyuereth and saueth Israel.

B Then the Heithen lift vp their eyes: and when they sawe that they were commynge agaynst them, they wente out of their tentes in to the battayll: and they that were with Iudas, blew vpon the trompettes. So they <sup>a</sup>buckled together, and the Heithen were discomfited, and fled ouer the playne felde: but the hymnost of them were slayne. For they folowed vpon them vnto Assaremoth, and in to the felde of Idumea towarde Azot and Iamnia: so that there were slayne of them vpon a thre thousande men. So Iudas turned agayne with his hoost, and sayde vnto the people: Be not gredy of <sup>y</sup> spoyle, we haue yet a battayll to fight: for Gorgias <sup>q</sup> his hoost are here by vs in the mountaynes, but stonde ye fast agaynst oure enemies, and ouercome them: then maye ye safely take the spoyle.

C As Iudas was speakynge these wordes, there appeared one parte of them vpon the mount. But when Gorgias sawe that they of his partie were fled, and the tentes brent vp (for by the smoke they might vnderstonde what was done) they perceaynge this, were very sore afayed: and when they sawe also that Iudas and his hoost were in <sup>y</sup> felde ready to stryke battayll, they fled euerychone in to the londe of the Heithen.

So Iudas turned agayne to spoyle the tentes, where they gat moch golde and syluer, precious stones, purple <sup>q</sup> greate riches. Thus they wente home, and sunge a Psalme of thankesgeuyng and <sup>p</sup>rayed God in heauen: for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer: And so Israel had a greate victory in that daye.

Now all the Heithen that escaped, came and tolde Lysias euery thinge as it happened. Wherefore Lysias was sore afayed and greued in his mynde, because Israel had not gottē soch mysfortune as he wolde they shulde, nether as the kynge <sup>d</sup>commanded. The nexte yeaere folowinge, gathered Lysias thre score thousande chosen men of fote, and fyue thousande horsmen, to fight agaynst them.

So they came in to Iewry, and pitched their tentes at Bethoron, where Iudas came agaynst them with ten thousande men. And when he sawe so greate mightie an hoost, he made his prayer and sayde: Blessed be thou (o sauoure of Israel) which diddest <sup>d</sup>destroye the violent power of the giaunte, in the honde of thy seruauant Dauid, and gauest the hoost of the Heithē in to the honde of Ionathas (the sonne of <sup>f</sup>Saul) and of his weapen bearer.

Put this hoost now in to the honde of thy people of Israel, and let them be confounded in their multitude and horsmen. Make them afayed, <sup>q</sup> discomforth the boldnes of their strength, <sup>y</sup> they maye be moued thorow their destruccion. Cast them downe thorow the swearde of thy louers, then shal all they that knowe thy name, prayse the with thankesgeuyng.

So they stroke the batell, and there were slayne of Lysias hoost, fyue thousande men. Then Lysias seyng the discomfetyng of his men, and the manlynesse of the Iewes, how they were ready, ether to lyue or to dye like men: He wente vnto Antioche and chose out men of warre: that when they were gathered together, they might come agayne in to Iewry. Then sayde Iudas and his brethren: beholde, oure enemies are discomfited: Let vs now go vp, to clēse and to repayre the Sanctuary.

Vpon this, all the hoost gathered them E together, and wente vp vnto mount Sion. Now when they sawe the <sup>d</sup>Sanctuary laied waist, the aulter defyled, the dores brent vp, the shrubbes growinge in the courtes, like as in a wod or vpon mountaynes, yee and that the prestes Celles were broken downe: They rente their clothes, made greate lamentacion, cast aszshes vpon their heades, fell downe flat to the grounde, made a greate noyse with the trompettes, and cried towarde heauen.

Then Iudas apoynted certayne men to fight against those which were in the castel, till they had clensed the Sanctuary. So he chose prestes <sup>y</sup> were vndefyled, such as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they clensed the Sanctuary, <sup>q</sup> bare out the defyled stones in to an vncleane place. And for so much as the aluter of burnt offerynges was vnhalowed, he toke aduyement, what he might do withall: so he thought it was best to destroye it (lest it shulde happen to do them eny shame) for the Heithen had defyled it, & therfore they brake it downe. As for the stones, they layed them vp vpon the mountayne by the house in a conuenient place: till there came a prophet to shewe, what shulde be done with them.

f So they toke whole stones accordinge to the lawe,<sup>a</sup> and buylded a new aluter soch one as was before, and made vp the Sanctuary within and without, and halowed the courtes. They made new ornamentes, & brought  $\text{f}$  candilstickes, the aluter of incense, and the table in to the temple. The incense layed they vpon the aluter, & lighted the lampes which were vpon the candilstickes, that they might burne in the temple. They set the shewbred vpon the table, and hanged vp the vail, and set vp  $\text{f}$  temple, as it was afore. <sup>b</sup> And vpon the xxv. daye of the ix. moneth (which is called the moneth of Casleu) in the C.xlvij. yeare: they rose vp by tymes in the mornynge for to do sacrifice (accordinge to the lawe) vpon the new burnt offrynge aluter, that they had made: after the tyme and season that  $\text{f}$  Heithen had defyled it. The same daye was it set vp agayne, with songes pipes, harpes and cymbales.

5 And all the people fell vpon their faces, worshippyng and thankynge the God of heauen, which had geuen them the victory. <sup>c</sup> So they kepte the dedicacion of the aluter viij. dayes, offerynge burnt sacrifices and thankofferynges with gladnesse. They deckte the temple also with crownes and shyldes of golde, and halowed the portes and celles, and hanged dores vpon them. Thus was there very greate gladnes amonge the people, because the blasphemy of the Heithen was put awaye.

So Indas and his brethren with the whole cōgregation of Israel, ordered, that the tyme of the dedicacion<sup>d</sup> of  $\text{f}$  aluter shulde be kepte in his season from yeare to yeare, by the space of viij. dayes, from the xxv. daye of the moneth Casleu: yee and that with myrth and gladnesse.

And at the same tyme buylded they vp  $\text{f}$  mount Sion with hye walles and stronge towres rounde aboute: lest  $\text{f}$  Gentiles shulde come and treade it downe, as they dyd afore.<sup>e</sup> Therfore Iudas set men of warre in it, to kepe it: and made it stronge, for to defende Bethsura: that the people might haue a refuge agaynst the Edomites.

The b. Chapter.

IT happened also that when  $\text{f}$  Heithen A rounde aboute herde,<sup>f</sup> how that the aluter and the Sanctuary were set vp in their olde estate: it displeased them very sore, wherfore they thought to destroye the generacion of Iacob that was amonge them: In so much that they beganne to slaye and to persecute certayne of  $\text{f}$  people. <sup>g</sup> Then Iudas fought against the children of Esau in Idumea, and agaynst those which were at Arabathane<sup>h</sup> (for they dwelt rounde aboute  $\text{f}$  Israelites) where he slewe & spoyled a greate multitude of the. He thought also vpon the malice and vnfaithfulnes of the children of Bean, how they were a snare and stoppe vnto  $\text{f}$  people, and how they layed waite for them in the hie waye: wherfore he shut them vp in to towers, and came vnto them, condemned them, and brent vp their towres, with all that were in them.

Afterwarde wente he agaynst the children of Ammon, wherof he founde a mightie power and a greate multitude of people, with Tymothy their captayne. So he stroke many battayls with them, which were destroyed before him. And when he had slayne them, he wanne Gazer the cite, with the townes belonginge therto, and so turned agayne in to Iewry. The Heithen also in Galaad gathered them together, agaynst the Israelites that were in their quarters, to slaye them: but they fled to the castel of Datheman, and sent letters vnto Iudas and his brethren, sayenge: The Heithen are gathered agaynst vs on euery syde, to destroye vs, and now they make the for to come and laye sege to  $\text{f}$  castel, whervnto we are fled, & Timothy is the captayne of their hoost: come therfore, and delyuer vs out of their hondes: for there is a greate multitude of vs slayne all ready. Yee and oure brethren that were at Tubin, are slayne and destroyed (wel nye a thousande men) and their wyues, their children and their goodes haue the enemies led awaye captiue.

Whye these letters were yet a readinge, beholde, there came other messaügers from Galilee, with rente clothes: which tolde euen the same tydings, and sayde, that they of Ptolomais, of Tirus and of Sidon were gathered agaynst them, and that all Galilee was fylled with enemies to destroye Israel. When Iudas and  $\text{f}$  people herde this, they came together (a greate congregacion)  $\text{a}$  to deuyse, what they might do for their brethren, that were in trouble and beseged of their enemies. And Iudas sayde vnto Symon his brother: chose  $\text{f}$  out certayne men, and go deliuer thy brethren in Galilee: As for me and my brother Ionathas, we wyl go in to Galaadithim. So he left Iosephus  $\text{f}$  sonne of Zachary, and Asarias, to be captaynes of the people and to kepe the remnaunt of the hoost in Iewry,  $\text{a}$  commaunded them, sayenge: Take the ouersight of this people, and se that ye make no warre agaynst the Heithen, vntill the tyme that we come agayne. And vnto Simon he gaue thre thousande men for to go in to Galilee, but Iudas himself had eight thousande in to Galaadithim.

Then wente Symon in to Galilee, and stroke dyuerse batels with the Heithen: whom he discomfited, and folowed vpon them vnto the porte of Ptolomais. And there were slayne of the Heithen almost iij. thousande men. So he toke the spoyles of them, and caried awaye the Israelites (that were in Galilee and Arbatis) with their wyues, their children and all that they had, and brought them in to Iewry with greate gladnesse. Iudas Machabeus also and his brother Ionathas, wente ouer Iordane, and traauayled iij. dayes iourney in the wyldernes: Where the Nebuthees met them, and receaued them louingly, and tolde the euery thinge that had happened vnto their brethren in Galaadithim, and how that many of them were beseged in Barasa, Bosor, Alimis, Casphor, Mageth and Carnaim (all these are stronge walled and mightie greate cities) and  $\text{f}$  they were kepte in other cities of Galaad also: and tomorrow they are apoynted to brynge their hoost vnto these cities, to take them and to wynne them in one daye.

 $\text{a}$  2 Mac. 8. c.

So Iudas and his hoost turned in all the haist in the wildernesse towarde Bosor, and wanne the cite, slewe all the males with the swearde, toke all their goodes, and set fyre vpon the cite. And in the night they toke their iourneye from thence, and came to the castell. And by tymes in the mornynge when they loked vp, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearynge laders and other instrumētes of warre, to take the castell and to ouer come them.

When Iudas sawe that the battayll beganne, and that the noyse therof wente vp and range in to the Heauen, and that there was so greate a crie in the cite: He sayde vnto his hoost: fight this daye for youre brethren. And so came behynde their enemies in thre companies, and blew vpon the trompettes, and cried in their prayer to God.

But as soone as Tymothis hoost perceaued that Machabeus was there, they fled from him, and  $\text{f}$  other slewe them downe right sore: so that there were kylled of them that same daye, almost eight thousande men. Then departed Iudas vnto Maspha, layed sege vnto it and wanne it, slewe all the males in it, spoyled it, and set fyre vpon it. From thence wente he and toke Casbon, Mageth, Bosor and the other cities in Galaad.

After this gathered Timothy another hoost, which pitched their tentes beyonde Raphon<sup>b</sup> beyonde the water. Iudas sent to spye the hoost, and they brought him worde againe, sayenge: All the Heithen that be rounde aboute vs, are gathered vnto him, and the hoost is very greate: Yee they haue hyred the Arabians to helpe them,  $\text{a}$  haue pitched their tentes beyonde the water, and are ready to come and fight agaynst the. So Iudas wente on to mete them.

And Timothy sayde vnto the captaynes of his hoost: when Iudas and his hoost come nye the ryuer: yf he go ouer first, we shall not be able to withstonde him: for why, he wil be to stronge for vs. But yf he darre not come ouer, so that he pitch his tente beyonde the water: then will we go ouer, for we shalbe stronge ynough agaynst him. Now as soone as Iudas came to the ryuer, he appoynted certayne scribes of the people, and commaunded them, sayenge: se that ye leaue none behynde vpon this syde of  $\text{f}$  ryuer, but let euery man come to the battayll. So he wente first ouer vnto them, and his people after him.

And all the Heithen were discomfited before him, and let their weapens fall, and ranne in to the temple that was at Carnaim. Which cite Iudas wanne, and brent the temple with all  $\frac{y}{y}$  were in it: So was Carnaim subdued, and might not withstode Iudas. Then Iudas gathered all the Israelites that were in Galaadithim, from  $\frac{y}{y}$  leest vnto the most, with their wyues and their children (a very greate hoost) for to come in to the londe of Iuda.

Wherfore Iudas commanded a proclamacion to be made thorow out the hoost, that euery man shulde kepe his ordre: and so they dyd their best like valeaunt men.

And Iudas beseged the cite all that daie and all that night, and so wanne it: where they slewe as many as were males, and destroyed the cite, and spoyled it, and wete thorow all the cite ouer them that were slayne. Then wente they ouer Iordane in to the playne felde before Bethsan. And Iudas helped those forwarde that came behynde, and gaue the people good exortacion all  $\frac{y}{y}$  waye thorow, till they were come in to the londe of Iuda. Thus they wente vp vnto the mount Sion, where they offred with myrth and thankesgeuyng:<sup>c</sup> because there were none of them slayne, but came home agayne peaceably.

Now what tyme as Iudas and Ionathas were in the londe of Galaad, and Symon their brother in Galilee before Ptolomais: Then Iosephus the sonne of Zachary and Asarias the captaynes, hearinge of the actes that were done and of the battells that were stroken, sayde: Let vs get vs a name also, and go fight agaynst the Heithen that are rounde aboute vs.

¶ So they gaue their hoost a commande-ment, and wente towarde Iamnia. Then came Gorgias and his men out of the cite, to fight agaynst them: Iosephus also and Asarias were chased vnto  $\frac{y}{y}$  borders of Iewry,  $\frac{y}{y}$  there were slayne  $\frac{y}{y}$  daye of  $\frac{y}{y}$  people of Israel ij. M. men: so  $\frac{y}{y}$  there was a greate misery amōge  $\frac{y}{y}$  people,  $\frac{y}{y}$  all because they were not obediēt vnto Iudas  $\frac{y}{y}$  his brethren, but  $\frac{y}{y}$  thought they shulde quyte them selues manfully. Neuertheles they came not of the sede of these men, by whom Israel was helped. But the men that were with Iudas, were greatly commended in the sight of all Israel and all Heithen, where so euer their name was herde vpō, and the people came vnto them bydding them welcome.

After this wente Iudas forth with his brethren, and fought agaynst the children of Esau, in the londe  $\frac{y}{y}$  lieth towarde the south where he wanne the cite of Hebron and the townes that lye besyde it: and as for the wallis and towres rounde aboute it, he brent them vp. Then remoued he to go in to the lōde of the Philistines, and wente thorow Samaria. At the same tyme were there many prestes slaine in  $\frac{y}{y}$  battayll, which wilfully  $\frac{y}{y}$  without adyusement wente out for to fight to get them honoure. And when Iudas came to Azot in the Philistynes londe, he brake downe their altares,<sup>c</sup> brent the ymages of their Idols, spoyled the cities, and came agayne in to the londe of Iuda.

The vi. Chapter.

¶ NOW when kynge Antiochus trauayled  $\frac{y}{y}$  thorow the hye countrees,<sup>a</sup> he herde that Elymas in Persia was a noble and plenteous cite in siluer and golde,  $\frac{y}{y}$  that there was in it a very rich temple: where as were clothes, cote armoures and shyldes of golde, which Alexander the sonne of Philippe kynge of Macedonia had left behynde him. Wherfore he wente aboute to take the cite and to spoyle it, but he was not able: for  $\frac{y}{y}$  citisēs were warned of it,  $\frac{y}{y}$  fought with him. And so he fled, and departed with greate heuynesse,  $\frac{y}{y}$

came agayne in to Babilon. Morouer there came one which brought him tidinges in Perside,<sup>a</sup> ⁊ his hoostes which were in the londe of Iuda, were dryuen awaye, and how that Lysias wente forth first with a greate power, and was dryuen awaye of the Iewes: how they had wonne the victory, and gotten greate goodes out of the hoostes that perished: how they had broken downe the abhominacion, which he set vp vpon the altare at Ierusalem,<sup>b</sup> and fenced the Sanctuary with hye walles, like as it was afore: yee and Bethsura his cite also.

So it chaunced, that when the kinge had herde these wordes, he was afrayed and greued very sore. Wherefore he layed him downe vpon his bed, and fell sicke for very sorowe: and all because it had not happened as he had deuysed. And there continued he longe, for his grefe was euer more and more, so ⁊ he sawe he must nedes dye. Therefore he sent for his frendes, & sayde vnto them: ⁊ slepe is gone fro mine eyes, for ⁊ very sorowe and vexaciō of herte ⁊ I haue. For when I cōsidre in my mynde ⁊ greate aduersitie ⁊ I am come vnto and the floudes of heuynesse which I am in, where as afore tyme I was so mery, and so greatly set by (by reason of my power) Againe, cōsideringe ⁊ euell ⁊ I haue done at Ierusalē, from whence I toke all ⁊ riches of golde and syluer ⁊ were in it, & sent to fetch awaye the inhabitours of Iewry without eny reason why: I knowe, ⁊ these troubles are come vpon me for the same cause. And beholde, I must dye with greate sorow in a straunge londe.

Then called he for one Philippe a frende of his, whom he made ruler of all his realme and gaue him the crowne, his robe and his ryng: that he shulde take his sonne Antiochus vnto him and brynge him vp, till he might raigne himself. So the kyng Antiochus dyed there, in the Cxlix. yere. When Lysias knewe that the kyng was dead,<sup>c</sup> he ordered Antiochus his sonne (whom he had brought vp) to raigne in his fathers steade, and called him Eupator. Now they that were in the castel (at Ierusalem) kepte in the Iewes rōunde aboute the Sactuary, and sought euer styll to do them harme, for the strengthenynge of the Heithen.

Wherefore Iudas thought to destroye them, and called all the people together, ⁊ they might laye sege vnto them. So they came together in the Cl. yere, and beseged the layenge forth their ordinaunce and instrumentes of warre. Then certayne of them ⁊ were beseged wente forth (vnto whom some vngodly men of Israel ioyned the selues also) and wente vnto the kyng, sayēge: How longe wil it be, or thou punysh and avenge oure brethren? We haue bene euer mynded to do thy father seruyce, to walke in his statutes, and to obeye his commaundementes: Therefore oure people fell from vs, and where so euer they founde eny of vs, they slewe them: and they haue not only medled with vs, but with all oure countrees: and beholde, this daye are they beseginge the castell at Ierusalem, and haue made vp the stronge holde in Bethsura: And yf thou doest not preuente them right soone, they wil do more then these, and thou shalt not be able to ouercome them.

When the kyng herde this, he was very angrie,<sup>d</sup> and called all his frendes, the captaynes of his fote men and of all his horse men together. He hyred men of warre also out of other realmes and out of the Iles of the see, which came vnto him. And the nombre of his hoost was an hundreth thousande fote men, and twente thousande horsmē, & xxxij. Elephantes wel exercised to battayll. These came thorow Idumea vnto Bethsura, and beseged it a longe season, and made dyuerse instrumentes of warre agaynst it. But the Iewes came out and brent them, and fought like men. Then departed Iudas from the castell at Ierusalem, and remoued ⁊ hoost towarde Bethzacarā ouer agaynst the kynges armie.

So the kyng arose before the daye, and brought the power of his hoost in to ⁊ waie to Bethzacaran, where the hoostes made them to the battayll, blowynge the trompettes.<sup>e</sup> And to prouoke the Elephantes for to fight, they shewed them the sappe of reed grapes and molberies. And deuyded the Elephantes amonge the hoost: so that by euery Elephante there stode a M. men wel harnesssed, and helmettes of stele vpon their heades: Yee vnto euery one of the Elephantes also, were ordered v. waited of the Elephante, goinge where so euer he wente, and departed not from him. Euery Elephante was couered with a ströge tower of wod, where vpon were xxxij. valeaunt men with weapens to fight, & within it was a man of Inde to rule the beest.

As for the remnaunt of the horsmen, he set them vpon both the sydes in two partes with trompettes, to prouoke the hoost, and to stere vp such as were slowe in the armye. And when the Sonne shone vpon their shyldes of golde and stele, the mountaynes glistered agayne at them, & were as bright as the creszshettes of fyre. The kynges hoost also was deuýded, one parte vpon the hie mountaynes, the other lowe beneth: so they wente on, takynge good hede, and kepyng their ordre. And all they that dwelt in the londe, were affrayed at the noyse of their hoost, when the multitude wente forth, and when the weapens snote together, for the hoost was both greate & mightie. Iudas also and his hoost entred in to the battayll, and slewe vj. C. men of the kynges armye.

Now when Eleasar the Sonne of Sauradyd se one of fy Elephantes deckte with the kynges badge, and was a more goodly beest thē the other: He thought fy kinge shulde be vpō him, and ioperde himself to deluyer his people, and to get him a perpetuall name.

Wherfore he ranne with a corage vnto the Elephante in the myddest of the hoost, smytynge them downe of both the sydes, and slewe many aboute him. So wente he to the Elephantes fete, and gat him vnder him, and slewe him: then fell the Elephante downe vpon him, and there he dyed. Iudas also and his men seinge the power of the kinge and the mightie violence of his hoost, departed from them. And the kynges armye wente vp agaynst them towarde Ierusalem, and pitched their tentes in Iewry besyde mount Sion. Morouer the kyng toke truce with them that were in Bethsura.<sup>a</sup>

But when they came out of the cite<sup>b</sup> (because they had no vytales within, and the londe laye vntyllid) the kyng toke Bethsura, and set men to kepe it, & turned his hoost to the place of the Sanctuary, and layed sege to it a greate whyle. Where he made all maner ordinaunce: handbowes, fyrie dartes, rackettes to cast stones, scorpions to shute arowes, and slynges. The Iewes also made ordinaunce agaynst theirs, and fought a longe season.

But in the cite there were no vytales, for it was the seuenth yeare of the warres, and those Heithen that remainyd in Iewry had eaten vp all their stoare. And in the Sanctuary were few men lefte, for the hunger came so vpon them, that they were scattered abroad euery man to his owne place.

So when Lysias herde, that Philippe<sup>c</sup> (whom Antiochus the kyng whyle he was yet lyuinge, had ordered to bringe vp Antiochus his sonne, that he might be kyng) was come agayne out of Persia and Media with the kynges hoost, and thought to optayne the kyngdome: He gat him to the kyng in all the haist and to the captaynes of the hoost, and sayde: we decrease daylie, and oure vytales are but small: Agayne, the place that we laye sege vnto, is very stronge, and it were oure parte to se for the realme. Let vs agre with these men and take truce with them, and with all their people, and graunte them to lyue after their lawe, as they dyd afore. For they be greued and do all these thinges agaynst vs, because we haue despyed their lawe. So the kyng and the prynces were content, and sent vnto them to make peace, and they receaued it. Now whē the kyng and the prynces had made an ooth vnto them, they came out of the castel, and the kyng wēte vp to mount Sion. But when he sawe that fy place was wel fenced, he brake the ooth that he had made, and commaunded to destroye the wall rounde aboute. Then departed he in all the haist, and returned vnto Antioche, where he founde Philippe hauynge dominion of the cite. So he fought agaynst him, and toke the cite agayne in to his hondes.

The vij. Chapter.

IN the Clj. yeare came<sup>d</sup> Demetrius fy sonne of Seleucus from fy cite of Rome with a small company of men, vnto a cite of the see coast, and there he bare rule. And it chaunced, that when he came to Antioch the cite of his Progenitours, his hoost toke Antiochus and Lysias, to bringe them vnto him. But when it was tolde him, he saide: let me not se their faces. So the hoost put them to death. Now when Demetrius was set vpon the trone of his kyngdome, there came vnto him wicked and vngodly men of Israel: whose captayne was Alcimus, that wolde haue bene made hye prest. These men accused the people of Israel vnto the kynge, sayenge: Iudas and his brethren haue slayne thy frendes, and dryuen vs out of oure owne londe. Wherefore sende now some man (to whom thou geuest credence) that he maye go and se all the destruccion, which he hath done vnto vs and to the kynges londe, and let him be punished with all his frēdes and fauourers.

3 Then the kynge chose Bachides a frende of his, which was a man of greате power in the realme (beyonde the greате water) and faithfull vnto the kynge: and sent him to se the destruccion that Iudas had done. And as for that wicked Alcimus, he made him hye Prest, and commaunded him to be auenged of the children of Israel. So they stode vp, and came with a greате hoost in to y londe of Iuda, sendinge messaügers to Iudas & his brethrē, & speakinge vnto them with peaceable wordes: but vnder disceate. Therefore Iudas & his people beleued not their saüge,<sup>a</sup> for they sawe y they were come with a greате hoost.

After this came y scribes together vnto Alcimus & Bachides, trustinge the best vnto them. And first, y Assideans requyred peace of them, sayenge: Alcimus y prest is come of the sede of Aarō, how can he disceau vs? So they gaue them louiēg wordes, & swore vnto them, and sayde: we wil do you no harme, nether youre frendes: and they beleued them. But the very same daye toke they lx. men of them, & slewe thē: accordinge to y wordes y are writtē: They haue cast y flesh of thy sanctes, & shed their bloude rōude aboute Ierusalē,<sup>b</sup> & there was nomā y wolde bury thē.

C So there came a greате feare and drede amonge the people, sayenge: there is nether treuth nor righteousnesse in them, for they haue brokē the appoyntment and ooth that they made. And Bachides remoued his hoost from Ierusalem, and pitched his tente at Bethzecha: where he sent forth, and toke many of them that had forsaken him: He slewe many of the people also, and cast them in to a greате pytt. Then committed he the londe vnto Alcimus, and left men of warre with him to helpe him, and Bachides himself wente vnto the kynge. And thus Alcimus defended his hie presthode, and all such as vexed Israel, resorted vnto him: In so moch that they optayned the lōde of Iuda, and dyd moch euell vnto the Israelites.

Now when Iudas sawe all the myschefe that Alcimus and his company had done (yee more then the Heithē them selues) vnto the Israelites: He wente forth rōunde aboute all the borders of Iewry, and punyshed those vnfaithfull rennagates, so that they came no more out in to the countre. So whē Alcimus sawe, that Iudas and his people had gotten the vpperhande, and that he was not able to abyde them: he wente agayne to the kynge, and sayde all the worst of them that he coude. Then the kynge sent Nicanor, one of his chefe prynces (which bare euell wyl vnto Israel) and commaunded him, that he shulde vtterly destroye the people.

So Nicanor came to Ierusalem with a greате hoost,<sup>c</sup> and sent vnto Iudas and his brethren with frendly wordes (but vnder disceate) sayenge: there shal be no warre betwixte me and you: I wil come with a few men, to se how ye do, with frenshepe. Vpon this he came vnto Iudas, and they saluted one another peaceably: but the enemies were appoynted to take Iudas by violence. Neuertheles it was tolde Iudas, y he came vnto him but vnder disceate: wherefore he gat him awaie from him, and wolde se his face nomore. When Nicanor perceaued y his counsell was bewrayed, he wente out to fight agaynst Iudas, besyde Capharsalama: Where there were slayne of Nicanors hoost, v. M. men: the residue fled vnto the castell of Dauid.

After this came Nicanor vp vnto moūt Sion: and the prestes with the elders of the people wente forth to salute him peaceably, & to shewe him y burnt sacrifices y were offered for the kynge. But he laughed thē to scorne, mocked thē, defyled their offerings, and spake diszdanedly, yee and swore in his wroth, sayenge: <sup>d</sup>Yf Iudas and his hoost be not deluyered now in to my hondes, as soone as euer I come agayne (and fayre well) I shal burne vp this house. With that, wente he out in a greате anger. Then the prestes came in, and stode before the aulter of the tēple, wepinge & sayenge: For so moch as thou (o LORDE) hast chosen this house,<sup>e</sup> that thy name might be called vpon therin, and y it shulde be an house of praier and peticion<sup>a</sup> vnto thy people: Be avenged of this mā & his hoost, and let them be slayne with  $\bar{y}$  swearde: remembre the blasphemies of them, & suffre them not to continue eny longer.

When Nicanor was gone from Ierusalem, he pitched his tente at Bethoron, and there an hoost met hī out of Siria. And Iudas came to Adarsa with iij. M. mē, & made his prayer vnto God, sayenge: O LORDE, because the messangers of kynge Senacherib blasphemed the, the angel wente forth, and slewe an Clxxxv. thousande of them: <sup>b</sup>Euen so destroye thou this hoost before vs to daie that other people maye knowe, how that he hath blasphemed thy Sanctuary: and punysh him, according to his maliciousnesse.

f And so the hoostes stroke the felde, the thirteinte daye of the moneth Adar: and Nicanors hoost was discomfited, and he himself was first slayne in the battayll. When Nicanors men of warre sawe that he was kylled, they cast awaye their weapens and fled: but the Iewes folowed vpon them an whole dayes iourney, from Adazer vnto Gazara, blowinge with the trompettes, and makinge tokens after them. So the Iewes came forth of all the townes there aboute, and blew to their hornes vpon them, and turned agaynst them: Thus were they all slayne, and not one of them lefte.

Then they toke their substaunce for a pray, and smote of Nicanors heade & his right honde (<sup>c</sup>which he helde vp so proudly) and brought it with them, and hāged it vp afore Ierusalem. Wherefore the people were exceedingly reioysed, and passed ouer that daye in greate gladnesse. And Iudas ordered, that  $\bar{y}$  same daye (namely the xij. daye of  $\bar{y}$  moneth Adar) shulde be kepte in myrth euery yeare. Thus the londe of Iuda was in rest a litle while.

The viij. Chapter.

A IUDAS herde also the fame of the Romanaynes, that they were mightie and valeaunt men, agreeable to all thinges that are requyred of them, & make peace with all men, which come vnto them, and how they were doughty men of strength. Besydes that, it was tolde him of their battayls & noble actes which they dyd in Galacia, how they had conquered them and brought them vnder tribute: and what greate thinges they had done in Spayne, how that with their wysdome and sober behauiour they had wonne the Mynes of syluer and golde that are there, and op-tayned all the londe, with other places farre from thē: how they had discomfited and slayne downe the kynges that came vpon them from the vttemost parte of the earth, and how other people geue them tribute euery yeare: How they had slayne and ouercome Philippe and Perses kynge of Cethim and other mo (in battayll,) which had brought their ordinaunce agaynst them: how they discomfited greate Antiochus kynge of Asia (that wolde nedes fight with them) hauyng an hundreth and xx. Elephantes, with horsmen, charettes, and a very greate hoost: how they toke him self alyue, and ordered him (with soch as shulde raigne after him) to paye thē a greate trybute, <sup>d</sup>ye and to fynde thē good suerties and plege: Besydes all this, how they had takē from him India, Media and Lydia (his best londes) and geuen them to kynge Eumenus. naunce of all their londe: to whom euery man was obedient, and y<sup>e</sup> there was nether euell will nor discencion amonge them.

Acordinge to these articles, the Romaynes made the bonde with the Iewes. Now after these articles (sayde they) yf eny of the parties wyll put to them, or take eny thinge from them: they shal do it with the consente of both: and what so euer they adde then vnto them or take from them, it shal stonde fast. And as touchinge the euell that Demetrius hath done vnto the Iewes, we haue wrytten vnto him, sayenge: Wherfore layest thou thy heuy yocke vpon the Iewes oure frendes and louers? Yf they make eny complaynte of the agayne vnto vs, we shall defende them, and fight with the by see and by londe.

The ii. Chapter.

IN y<sup>e</sup> meane season<sup>a</sup> when Demetrius herde that Nicanor & his hoost was slayne in the felde, he proceded further to sende Bachides and Alcimus againe in to Iewry, and those that were in the right wyng of his hoost, with them. So they wēte forth by the waye that ledeth vnto Galgala, and pitched their tentes before Mesaloth which is in Arbellis, and wanne the cite, and slewe moch people. In y<sup>e</sup> first moneth of the Clij. yeaere, they brought their hoost to Ierusalem, and rose vp and came to Berea, with xx. M. fote men, and ij. M. horsmen.

Now Iudas had pitched his tente at Laisa, with thre thousande chosen men. And when they sawe the multitude of the other army y<sup>e</sup> it was so greate, they were sore afrayed, & many conveyed them selues out of the hoost. In so moch y<sup>e</sup> there abode no mo of them but viij. C. men. When Iudas sawe that his hoost fayled him, and that he must nedes fight: it brake his herte, y<sup>e</sup> he had no tyme to gather them together: wherfore the man was in extreme trouble. Neuerthelesse he sayde vnto them, y<sup>e</sup> remayned with him: Vp, let vs go agaynst oure enemies, peraduanture we shal be able to fight with them. But they wolde haue stopp'd him, sayenge: we shall not be able, therefore let vs now saue oure lynes, and turne agayne to oure brethren, and then wil we fight agaynst thē, for we are here but fewe. And Iudas sayde: God forbyd, that we shulde fle from them. Wherfore yf oure tyme be come, let vs dye manfully for oure brethren, and let vs not stayne oure honoure. Then the hoost remoued out of the tentes, & stode agaynst them. The horsmen were deuyded in two partes: the slynge casters and the archers wente before the hoost, and all the mightie men were foremost in the felde. Bachides himself was in the right wyng of the batell, & the hoost drewe nye in two partes, and blew the trompettes. They of Iudas syde blew y<sup>e</sup> trompettes also, & the earth shoke at the noyse of the hoostes, and they stroke a felde from the morow till night. And when Iudas sawe y<sup>e</sup> Bachides hoost was strongest of the right syde, he toke with him all the hardy mē, and brake the right wyng of their ordre, and folowed vpon them vnto the mount Azot.

Now when they which were of the lefte wyng, sawe that the right side was discomfited, they persecuted Iudas and them that were with him. Then was there a sore battayll, for many were slayne and wounded of both the parties, Iudas also himself was kylled, and the remnaunt fled. So Ionathas and Symō toke Iudas their brother, and buried him in his fathers sepulchre in the cite of Modin. And all the people of Israel made greates lamentacion for him, and mourned longe, sayinge: Alas, that this worthy shulde be slayne, which delyuered f̃ people of Israel. As for other thinges pertainyng to f̃ battayls of Iudas, the noble actes that he did and of his worthynesse: they are not writtē, for they were very many.

C And after the death of Iudas, wicked mē came vp in all the coastes of Israel,<sup>a</sup> and there arose all such as worke vngodlynnesse. In those dayes was there a greates derth in the londe, and all the countre gaue ouer them selues ⁊ theirs vnto Bachides. So Bachides chose wicked men, and made them lordes in the londe. These sought out and made search for Iudas frendes, and brought them vnto Bachides: which auenged himself vpon thē with greates despite. And there came so greates trouble in Israel, as was not sens the time that no prophet was sene there.

Then came all Iudas frendes together, and sayde vnto Ionathas: For so moch as thy brother Iudas is deed, there is none like him to go forth agaynst oure enemies, agaynst Bachides, and such as are aduersaries vnto oure people. Wherefore this daye we chose the for him, to be oure pryncce and captayne to ordre oure batell. And Ionathas toke the gouernaunce vpon him at the same tyme, and ruled in steade of his brother Iudas. When Bachides gat knowlege therof, he sought for to slaye him: But Ionathas and Synon his brother, perceauynge that, fled in to f̃ wilderness of Thecua with all their company, and pitched their tētes by the water pole of Asphar.

Which when Bachides vnderstode, he came ouer Iordane with all his hoost vpon f̃ Sabbath daye. Now had Ionathas sent his brother Ihon (a captayne of the people) to praye his frendes the Nabuthites, f̃ they wolde lende them their ordinaunce, for they had moch. So the children of Iambry came out of Madaba, ⁊ toke Ihon ⁊ all f̃ he had, ⁊ wente their waye withall. Then came worde vnto Ionathas ⁊ Symon his brother, f̃ the children of Iambri made a greates mariunge, ⁊ brought f̃ bryde from Madaba with greates pompe: for she was daughter to one of the noblest prynces of Canaan. Wherefore they remembered the bloude of Ihon their brother, and wente vp, and hyd them selues vnder the shadowe of the mountayne.

So they lift vp their eyes, and loked: and beholde, there was moch a doo, ⁊ greates repayre: for the brydegrome came forth, ⁊ his frēdes and his brethren met them with tympanys, instrumentes of musick, and many weapēs. Then Ionathas and they that were with him, rose out of their skoukinge places agaynst them, and slewe many of them. As for the remnaunt, they fled in to f̃ mountaynes, and they toke all their substaunce. Thus the mariage was turned to mournyng, and f̃ noyse of their melody in to lamentacion. And so when they had auenged the bloude of their brother, they turned agayne vnto Iordane.

Bachides hearinge this, came vnto f̃ very border of Iordane with a greates power vpon the Sabbath daye. And Ionathas sayde to his company: let vs get vp, ⁊ fyght agaynst oure enemies: for it stondesth not with vs to daye, as in tymes past: Beholde, oure enemies are in oure waye, f̃ water of Iordane vpon the one syde of vs, with banckes, fennes and woddēs of f̃ other syde, so f̃ there is no place for vs to departe vnto. <sup>b</sup> Wherefore erie now vnto heauen, that ye maye be delyuered from the power of youre enemies. So they stroke the batell. And Ionathas stretched out his honde to smyte Bachides, but he fled backwarde. Then Ionathas and they f̃ were with him leapte in to Iordane, ⁊ swymmed ouer Iordane vnto him, ⁊ there were slayne of Bachides syde that daye, a thousande men.

Therefore Bachides with his hoost turned agayne to Ierusalem, ⁊ buylte vp f̃ castels ⁊ stronge holdes that were in Iewry, Iericho, Emaus, Bethoron, Bethel, Thānata, Phara ⁊ Thopo, with hye walles, with portes ⁊ with lockes: ⁊ set men to kepe them, f̃ they might vse their malice vpon Israel. He walled vp Bethsura, Gazara & the castell at Ierusalē also, & prouyded them with men & vytales: He toke also the chefest mens sonnes in the cowntre for pledges, and put them in the castell at Ierusalem to be kepte.

Afterwarde in the C.liij. yeaere in the seconde moneth, Alcimus cōmaunded, that ſ walles of the ynnmost Sanctuary shulde be destroyed, & the buyldinges of ſ prophetes also. And when he beganne to destroye thē, ſ thinges ſ he wēte aboute, were hyndered: for he was smytten with a palsey, & his mouth shut, so ſ he coude nomore speake ner commaunde eny of his house cōcerninge his busynesse. Thus dyed Alcimus in greate misery at the same tyme. And whē Bachides sawe ſ Alcimus was deed, he turned agayne to ſ kynge, & so the londe was in rest ij. yeaeres. Then all the vngodly men helde a councell, sayenge: Beholde, Ionathas and his cōpany are at ease, & dwell without care. Wherefore let vs brynge Bachides hither, & he shall take them all in one night.

So they wēte & gaue Bachides this councell, which arose to come with a greate hoost, & sent letters priuely to his adherentes which were in Iewry, to take Ionathas & those ſ were with him: but they might not, for the other had gotten knowledge of their deuyce. And Ionathas toke L. men of the cowntre (which were the ryngleders of them) & slewed them. Then Ionathas and Symon with their cōpany departed vnto the cite Bethbessen, which lieth in the wyldernes, and repayed the decaye therof, & made it stronge. When Bachides knewe this, he gathered all his hoost, and sent worde to them that were of Iewry. Thē came he and layed sege to Bethbessen, and fought against it a longe season, and made instrumentes of warre.

Now Ionathas lefte his brother Symon in the cite, and wente forth himself in to the cowntre, and came with a certayne nombre, and slewed Odares and his brethren and the children of Phaseron in their tentes: so ſ he beganne to be stronge, & to increase in power.

As for Symon and his company, they wente out of the cite, and brēt vp the instrumentes of warre, and fought agaynst Bachides, and discōfited him. And Bachides was sore vexed, because his councell and traualle was in vayne. Wherefore he was wroth at ſ wicked men (that gaue him counsell to come in to their londe) and slew many of them. Then purposed he with his company to go awaye in to his owne cowntre: wherof whē Ionathas had knowlege, he sent embassitours vnto him, for to make peace with him, & ſ he shulde deliuer him his presoners againe. To the which Bachides cōsented gladly, and dyd accordinge to his desyre: yee and made an ooth, that he shulde neuer do him harme all the dayes of his life. So he restored vnto him all the presoners that he had taken out of the londe of Iuda, and thē turned and wente his waye in to his owne londe, nether proceeded he eny further to come vnto ſ borders of Iuda. Thus Israel had no more warre. And Ionathas dwelt at Machmas, and beganne there to gouerne the people, and destroyed the vngodly men out of Israel.

The r. Chapter.

IN the C.lx. yeaere came Alexander ſ a sonne of noble Antiochus, and toke Ptolomais, whose citisens receaued him, and there he reigned. When Demetrius herde therof, he gathered an exceeding greate hoost, and wēte forth agaynst him to fight. Wherefore Demetrius sent letters vnto Ionathas with louynge wordes, and praysed him greatly. For he sayde: we wyll first make peace with him, before he bynde him selfe with Alexander agaynst vs: els he shall remembre the euell that we haue done against him, his brother & his people. And so he gaue Ionathas leue to gather an hoost, to make weapons, and to be confederate with him, and commaunded the pledges that were in the castell, to be deluyered vnto him.

Then came Ionathas to Ierusalem, and red the letters in the audience of all the people, and of them that were in ſ castell. And therfore were they sore afraied, because they herde, that the kynge had geuē him licence to gather an hoost. Thus were the pledges deluyered vnto Ionathas, which restored them to their elders. Ionathas also dwelt at Ierusalem, and begāne to buylde vp and to repayre the cite: commaunding the worke men, to wall it, and the mount Sion rounde aboute with fre stone, to be a stronge holde, and so they dyd. As for the Heithen that were in y castels which Bachides had made vp, they fled: so that euery man left the place, and wete in to his owne countre. Onely at Bethsura remainyd certayne of the Iewes, which had forsaken the lawe and cōmaundementes of God, for Bethsura was their refuge.

Now when kynge Alexander herde of y promises y Demetrius had made vnto Ionathas, and when it was tolde him of y batels and noble actes, which he and his brethren had done, and of the greate trauayles that they had taken: he saide: where shal we fynde soch a man? wel, we will make him oure frende, & be confederate with him. Vpon this he wrote a lettre vnto him, with these wordes: kinge Alexander saluteth his brother Ionathas. We haue herde of the, y thou art a valeaunt man, & mete to be oure frende: wherefore this daye we ordene the to be the hye prest of thy people, and to be called the kynges frende. (Vpon this, he sente him a purple clothinge & a crowne of golde) y thou mayest conside what is for oure profit, & kepe frendshipe toward vs.

C So in the vij. moneth of the C. lx. yere vpon the solempne feast daye of the tabernacles, Ionathas put the holy rayment vpon him. Then gathered he an hoost, & made many weapēs. Which when Demetrius herde, he was maruelous sory, & sayde: Alas, what haue we done, y Alexander hath preuented vs in gettinge the frendshipe of the Iewes, for his owne defence? Yet wil I wryte louingly vnto them also, yee & promise them dignities & rewardes, y they maye be of my syde. Wherypon he wrote vnto thē these wordes: Kinge Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto y people of the Iewes. Where as ye haue kepte youre couenaunt toward vs, & cōtinued in oure frendshipe, not enclinyng to oure enemies we were glad, when we herde therof. Wherefore remaine still & be faithfull to vs: & we shal wel recōpense you for the thinges, y ye haue done on oure partie: we shall release you of many charges, and geue you rewardes.

And now I discharge you & all y Iewes from tributes, I forgeue you the customes of salt, and release you of the crowne taxes, of the thirde parte of sede, and half of the frute of trees, which is myne owne dewty. These I leaue for you, from this daye forth: so that they shall not be taken of the londe of Iuda

D ner of the thre cities which are added ther vnto out of Samaria and Galilee, from this daye forth for euermore. Ierusalē also with all thinges belōginge therto, shal be holy and fre, yee y tithes & tributes shal pertayne vnto it. As for the power of y castell which is at Ierusalem, I remytte & geue it vnto the hye prest, that he maye set in it soch men, as he shall chose to kepe it. I frely deliyuer all the Iewes that are presoners thorow out all my realme: so that euery one of them shalbe fre from payenge eny tribute, yee euen of their catell.

All the solēpne feastes, Sabbathes, New mones, the dayes appoynted, the thre daies before and after the feast shall be fre for all the Iewes in my realme: so that in them no man shal haue power to do eny thinge, or to moue eny busynesse agaynst eny of them in eny maner of cause. There shal xxx. M. also of the Iewes be written vp in the kynges hoost, and haue their wages payed, as all other men of warre of the kynges shulde haue: and of them shalbe ordered certayne, to kepe the kynges stronge holdes: yee and some of them shalbe set out the kynges busynesse, that they maye faithfully deale with the same. The Iewes also shal haue prynces of their owne, & walke in their owne lawes, as the kyng hath commaunded in the londe of Iuda.

And the thre cities that are fallen vnto Iewry from the countre of Samaria and Galilee: shalbe taken as Iewry, and be vnder one: nether be subiecte to eny straunge lorde, but to the hye preste. As for Ptolomais and the londe pertayninge therto, I geue it vnto the Sanctuary at Ierusalem, for the necessary expēces of the holy thinges. Morouer, I will geue euery yere xv. M. Sycles of syluer out of y kynges checker (which pertayneth vnto me) to the worke of the temple: yee & loke what remaineth (which they y had oure matters in honde in tymes past, haue not payed) that same shal they geue vnto them also. And besydes all this, the v. M. sycles which they toke yearly of the rētes of the Sanctuary, shal belonge vnto the prestes that do seruyce.

Item, who so euer they be that fle vnto the temple at Ierusalem or within the liberties therof, where as they are fallen in to the kynges daunger for eny maner of busynes, they shall be pardoned, and all the goodes that they haue in my realme, shalbe fre. For the buyldinge also ⁊ repayinge of the worke of the Sanctuary, expenses shalbe geuen out of the kynges Checker: Yee and for the makinge of the walles rounde aboute Ierusalem, for the breakeinge downe of the olde, and for the settinge vp of the stronge holdes in Iewry, shal fy costes and charges be geuen out of the kynges Checker.

“But when Ionathas and the people herde these wordes, they gaue no credence vnto them, nether receaued them: for they remembred the greате wickednesse that he had done vnto Israel, and how sore he had vexed them. Wherefore they agreed vnto Alexander, for he was a prynce that had dealete frendly with them, and so they stode by him allwaye. Thē gathered kynge Alexāder a greате hoost, and brought his armye agaynst Demetrius. So fy two kynges stroke battayll together,<sup>b</sup> but Demetrius hoost fled, and Alexander folowed after and fell vpon them. A mightie sore felde was it, continuynge till the Sonne wente downe, and Demetrius was slayne the same daye.

¶ And Alexander sente embassitours vnto Ptolomy the kynge of Egipte with these wordes, sayenge: For so moch as I am come agayne to my realme, and am set in the trone of my progenitours, and haue gotten the dominion, ouer come Demetrius, conquered the londe, and striken a felde with him, so that we haue discomfited both him and his hoost, and syt in the trone of his kyngdome: Let vs now make frendshipe together, geue me thy daughter to wife: so shall I be thy sonne in lawe, and both geue the rewardes, and hir greате dignite. Ptolomy the kynge gaue answere, sayenge: Happy be the daye wherein thou art come agayne to the londe of thy progenitours, and set in the trone of their kyngdome. And now will I fulfill thy writynge: but mete me at Ptolomais, fy we maye se one another, and that I maye mary my daughter vnto the acordinge to thy desyre. So Ptolemy wēte out of Egipte with his daughter Cleopatra, ⁊ came vnto Ptolomais in fy Clxij. yeare: where kynge Alexāder met him, ⁊ he gaue Alexander his daughter Cleopatra, and married them at Ptolomais with greате worshipec, like as the maner of kynges is to be.

Then wrote kynge Alexander vnto Ionathas, that he shulde come and mete him. So he wente honorably vnto Ptolomais, ⁊ there he met the two kinges, and gaue them greате presentes of golde and syluer, ⁊ founde fauoure in their sight. And there came together agaynst Ionathas certayne wicked men and vngracious personnes of Israel, makynge complayntes of him, but the kynge regarded them not. As for Ionathas, the kynge commaunded to take of his garmentes, and to clothe him in purple: and so they dyd. Then the kynge appoynted him to syt by him, and sayde vnto his prynces: Go with him in to the myddest of the cite, and make a proclamacion, that no man complayne agaynst him of eny matter, and that no man trouble him for eny maner of cause.

So it happened that when his accusers sawe the worshipec which was proclaimed of him, ⁊ fy he was clothed in purple: they fled euerychone. And the kynge made moch of him, wrote him amonge his chefe frendes, made him a duke, and partaker of his dominion. Thus Ionathas wente agayne to Ierusalem with peace and gladnesse. “In the Clxv. yeare came Demetrius the sonne of Demetrius from Creta in to his fathers londe: wherof when Alexander herde tell, he was right sory, and returned vnto Antioche. And Demetrius chose<sup>d</sup> Appollonius (which had the gouernance of Celosyria) to be his captayne.

So he gathered a greате hoost and came vnto Iamnia, and sende worde vnto Ionathas the hye prest, sayenge: Darrest thou withstonde vs thy self alone? As for me, I am but laughed to scorne and shamed, because thou prouest thy strength agaynst vs in the mountaynes. Now therefore, yf thou trustest in thine owne strength, come downe to vs in to the playne felde, and there let vs proue oure strength together: thou shalt fynde, that I haue valeaunt men of warre with me: and shalt knowe who I am, ⁊ the other that stonde by me.

Which saye, that youre fote is not able to stonde before oure face, for thy fathers haue bene twyse chaced in to their owne londe. And now, how wylt thou be able to abyde so greате an hoost of horsmen and fotemen in the felde, where as is nether rocke, stone ner place to fle vnto?

When Ionathas herde the wordes of Appollonius, he was moued in his mynde: wherefore he chose x. thousande men and wente out of Ierusalem, and Symon his brother met him for to helpe him: And they pitched their tentes at Ioppa, but the cite kepte him forth, for Ioppa was an holde of Appollonius. Then Ionathas layed sege to it, and they that were in the cite, for very feare let him in: and so Ionathas wanne Ioppa. Appollonius hearinge of this, toke thre thousande horsmen, with a greate hoost of fote, and wente as though he wolde go to Azotus, & came Immediatly in to the playne felde: because he had so many horsmē, and put his trust in thē. So Ionathas folowed vpon him to Azotus, & there they stroke the battayll. Now had Appollonius left a M. horsmen behynde them pruely in the tētes. And when Ionathas knewe that soch waite was layed behynde them, they wēte rounde aboute the enemies hoost, and shot dartes at the people from the mornyng to the euenyng. As for Ionathas people, they kepte their ordre as he had commaunded them, & the enemies horses were euer labouringe.

3 Then brought Symon forth his hoost, and set them agaynst the fote men. For the horsmē were weery allready. So he discomfited them, and they fled. And they that were scatred in the felde, gat them to Azotus, and came in to the temple of Dagon their Idol, & they might there saue their lyues. But Ionathas set fyre vpon Azotus and all the cities rounde aboute it, & toke their goodes, "and brēt vp the temple of Dagon with all them that were fled in to it.

Thus were slayne and brēt well nye viij. thousande men. So Ionathas remoued the hoost from thence, and brought them to Ascalon: where & men of the cite came forth, and met him with greate worships. After this wente Ionathas and his hoost agayne to Ierusalem, with greate substaunce of good. And when kynge Alexander herde these thinges, he thought to do Ionathas more worships, & sent him a colar of golde, as the vse is to be geuen vnto such as are of the kynges nexte bloude. He gaue him also & cite of Accaron (with the londes belongynge therto) in possession.

The xi. Chapter.

a AND & kynge of Egipte gathered an hoost, <sup>a</sup> (like the sonde & lieth vpon the see shore) and many shippes: and wente aboute thorow disscate to optayne & kingdome of Alexāder, & to ioyne it vnto his owne realme. Vpon this he toke his iourneye in to Syria, & was letten in to the cities, and mē came forth to mete him: for kinge Alexāder had cōmaunded them so to do, because he was his father in lawe. Now when Ptolomy entred in to eny cite, he leste mē of warre to kepe it, and this he dyd thorow out all & cities. And when he came to Azotus, they shewed him the temple of Dagon and Azotus<sup>c</sup> that was brent vp, with the other thinges which were destroyed, the deed bodies cast abrode, and & graues that they had made by the waye syde, for such as were slayne in the felde: And tolde the kynge that Ionathas had done all these thinges, to the intēt they might get him euell will. But the kynge sayde not a worde therto.

And Ionathas met the kynge with greate honoure at Ioppa, where they saluted one another, and toke their rest. So when Ionathas had gone with & kynge, vnto the water that was called Eleutherus, he turned agayne to Ierusalem. Now Ptolomy had gotten the dominion of the cities vnto Seleucia vpon the see coast, ymaginyng wicked counceles agaynst Alexander, & sent embassitours vnto Demetrius, sayenge: Come, let vs make a bonde betwixe vs, so shall I geue the my daughter that Alexander hath, and thou shalt raigne in thy fathers kyngdome. I repente that I gaue Alexander my daughter, for he goeth aboute to slaye me. And thus he slaundred Alexander, because he wolde haue had his realme.

Thus he toke his daughter from him, gaue her vnto Demetrius, and forsoke Alexander, so that his malice was openly knowne. And Ptolomy came to Antioche, where he set two crownes vpon his owne heade: the crowne of Egipte and of Asia. In the meane season was kynge Alexander in Cilicia, for they that dwelt in those places, had rebelled agaynst him. But when Alexāder herde of this, he came to warre agaynst him. So kinge Ptolomy brought forth his hoost and met him with a mightie power, and chaced him awaye. Then fled Alexander in to Araby, there to be defended, and kynge Ptolomys honoure increased. And Zabdīel the Arabian smote of Alexanders heade, and sent it vnto Ptolomy. But the thirde daye after, died kynge Ptolomy himself: and they whom he had set in the stronge holdes, were slayne of those that were within  $\hat{y}$  cities. And Demetrius raigned in  $\hat{y}$  hundreth and seuen and sixtie yeare.

C At the same tyme gathered Ionathas them that were in Iewry to laye sege vnto the castell which was at Ierusalem, and so they made many instrumentes of warre agaynst it. Then wente there certayne vngodly personnes (which hated their owne people) vnto kynge Demetrius, and tolde him, that Ionathas beseged  $\hat{y}$  castell. So when he herde it, he was angrie, and Immediatly came to Ptolomais, and wrote vnto Ionathas, that he shulde not laye sege to the castell, but come and speake with him in all the haist. Neuerthelesse when Ionathas herde this he commaunded to besege it. He chose also certayne of the elders and prestes of Israel, and put him self in the parril, and toke with him golde, syluer, clothinge and diuerse presentes: and wente to Ptolomais vnto the kynge, and founde him gracious.

D And though certayne vngodly men of his owne people made complaintes vpon him, yet the kynge intreated him,<sup>a</sup> like as his predecessours had done before: and promoted him in the sight of all his frendes, confirmed him in the hye presthode with all the worships  $\hat{y}$  he had afore, and made him his chefe frende. Ionathas also desyred the kynge that he wolde make Iewry fre, with the thre head cities of Samaria<sup>b</sup> and the londes pertayninge therto: vpon this dyd Ionathas promyse him thre C. talentes. Where vnto the kynge consented, and gaue Ionathas wrytinge of the same, conteyninge these wordes: kynge Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto his brother Ionathas and to the people of  $\hat{y}$  Iewes. We sende you here a copy of the lette which we dyd wryte vnto oure elder Lasthenus, concerninge you, that ye shulde knowe it.

Kynge Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto Lasthenus his elder. For the faithfulness that oure frendes the people of the Iewes kepe vnto vs, and for the louynge kyndnesse which they beare towarde vs: we are determed to do them good. Wherefore we ordene all  $\hat{y}$  coostes of Iewry with the thre cities, Lyda and Ramatha (which are added vnto Iewry from Samaria)  $\tau$  all  $\hat{y}$  lodes pertayninge there vnto, to be frely separated for such as do sacrifice in Ierusalē: both concernynge the paymētes which the kynge toke yearly afore tyme,  $\tau$   $\hat{y}$  frutes also of the earth  $\tau$  trees. As for other tithes  $\tau$  tributes  $\hat{y}$  belonged vnto vs, we discharge thē therof from this tyme forth. In like maner we graūte vnto thē all the customes of salt and crowne taxes, which were brought vnto vs. And this fredome shal they haue firme  $\tau$  stedfast, frō this tyme forth for euermore. Therefore se  $\hat{y}$  ye make a copy of these oure letters, and delyuer it vnto Ionathas: that it maye be kepte vpon  $\hat{y}$  holy mount in a cōuenient place.

After this, when Demetrius the kynge sawe that his londe was in rest, and that no resistance was made him: he sent awaye all his hoost euery man to his owne place, excepte an armye of straungers, whom he brought from the Iles of the Heithen, wherfore all his fathers hoost had euell wyll at him. Now was there one Triphon<sup>c</sup> (that had bene of Alexanders parte aye) which when he sawe that all the hoost murmured agaynst Demetrius: he wente to Emacuel the Arabian (that brought vp Antiochus the sonne of Alexander) and laye sore vpon him, to delyuer him this yonge Antiochus: that he might raigne in his fathers steade. He tolde him also what greате euell Demetrius had done,  $\tau$  how his mē of warre loued him not:  $\tau$  so remayned there a lōge season.

And Ionathas sent vnto kynge Demetrius, to druye them out which were in the castell at Ierusalem and in the other refugies, for they dyd Israel greате harme. So Demetrius sent worde vnto Ionathas, sayenge: I wil not only do these thinges for the and thy people, but at tyme conueniēt I wil do both the  $\tau$  thy people greате worships. But now thou shalt do me a pleasure, yf thou wilt sende me men to helpe me: for all myne armye is gone for me. So Ionathas sent him iij. M. strounge men vnto Antioche, and they came vnto the kynge, wherfore the kynge was very glad at their commynge. But they that were of the cite (euen an Cxx. thousande mē) gathered them together,  $\tau$  wolde haue slayne the kynge, which fled in to his courte:  $\tau$  the citesyns kepte the stretes of the cite, and beganne to fight.

Then the kynge called for the Iewes helpe, which came vnto him all together, & wente abrode thorow the cite, and slewe the same daye an C. M. men: set fyre vpon the cite, gat many spoyle in that daye, and deliuered & kynge. So when the citesyns sawe that the Iewes had gotten their wyll of the cite, and they thein selues despoyned of their purpose: they made their supplicacion vnto the kynge, sayēge: Graunte vs peace, and let the Iewes ceasse from troubling vs and the cite, and vpon this they cast away their weapens. Thus they made peace, and & Iewes gat greate worships in the sight of the kynge, and in the sight of all that were in his realme, and were spoken of thorow out the kyngdome: and so they came agayne to Ierusalem with greate goodes.

So the kynge Demetrius sat in the trone of his kyngdome, and had peace in his lōde. Neuertheles he dyssembled in all that euer he spake, & with drewe himself from Ionathas, nether rewarded him accordinge to the benefites which he had done for him, but troubled him very sore. After this came Triphon agayne with yonge Antiochus, which reigned & was crowned kynge. Then there gathered vnto him all & men of warre, whō Demetrius had put away: these fought agaynst Demetrius, which fled & turned his backe. So Triphon toke the Elephantes, & wanne Antioche. And yōge Antiochus wrote vnto Ionathas, sayenge: I confirme the in thy presthode, & make & ruler of iij. countrees, & thou mayest be a frende of & kinges.

Vpon this he sent him golden vessel to be serued in, and gaue him leue to drynke in golde, to be clothed in purple, and to weere a colar of golde. He made his brother Symon also capayne, from the coostes of Tyrus vnto the borders of Egipte. Then Ionathas toke his iourney, & wente thorow & cities beyōde the water (of Iordane) and all the men of warre of Syria gathered thē vnto him for to helpe him. So he came vnto Ascalon, and they of the cite receaued him honorably: & from thence wente he vnto Gaza, but they wolde not let him in: wherfore he layed sege vnto it, burnynge vp and spoylinge the places that were aboute the cite.

And the citesyns of Gaza submytted thē selues vnto Ionathas, which made peace with them, but toke of their sonnes to pledge, sent thē to Ierusalē, & wente thorow the countree vnto Damascus. Now when Ionathas herde that Demetrius princes were come in to Cades (which is in Galilee) with a greate hoost, purposinge to put Demetrius out from medlinge in the realme: he came agaynst them, and lefte Symon his brother in the londe: which came to Bethsura, and layed sege to it a longe season, and discomfited them. So they desyred to haue peace with him, which he graunted them, & afterwarde put them out from thence, toke the cite, and set inē to kepe it. And Ionathas with his hoost came to the water of Genesar, & by tymes in the mornynge gat them to the playne felde of Azor.

And beholde, the hoostes of the Heithen met thē in the felde, & layed watch for thē in the mountaynes: so & when Ionathas came agaynst thē, the other (which were layed to watch) rose out of their places, & fought, & they that were of Ionathas syde, fled euery man: & there was not one of thē lefte, excepte Matathias the sonne of Absalomus, and Iudas the sonne of Calphi the capayne of the hoost. Thē Ionathas rente his clothes, layed earth vpō his heade, made his prayer, & turned againe to thē in & felde: where they fought together, and he put them to flight. Now when his owne mē & were fled, sawe this: they turned agayne vnto him, & helped him to folowe vpon all their enemies vnto their tentes at Cades. So there were slayne of the Heithen the same daye, iij. M. men, & Ionathas turned agayne to Ierusalem.

The xij. Chapter.

IONATHAS seyng that & tyme was mete for him, chose certayne men and sent them vnto Rome for to establish & to renew the frendshippe with thē. He sent lettres also vnto Sparta, and to other places in like maner. So they wēt vnto Rome and entred in to & counsell, & sayde: Ionathas & hye prest & the people of the Iewes sent vs vnto you, for to renew & olde frēdshipe and bonde of loue. Vpō this & Romaynes gaue thē fre pasportes, & mē shulde lede thē home in to & lōde of Iuda peaceably. And this is & copy of the lettres that Ionathas wrote vnto the Sparcians: Ionathas & hye prest with & elders, prestes, & the other people of & Iewes, sende gretinge vnto ſp̄ Sparciās their brethrē. There were lettres ſente lōge agoo vnto Onias ſp̄ h̄ye preſt, from Arius which than raignēd amonge you: that ye are oure brethren, as the wrytinge made thervpon ſpeciſieth. And Onias in- treated the embassitoure that was ſent, honorably, and receaued ſp̄ lettres: wherin there was mencion made of the bonde of loue & frendſhippe. But as for vs, we nede no ſoch wrytinges: for why, we haue the holy bokes of ſcripture in oure hondes to oure comforte. Neuertheſſe we had rather ſende vnto you, for the renuyng of ſp̄ brotherhode and frendſhippe: leſt we ſhulde be ſtraunge vnto you, for it is longe, ſens ſp̄ tyme ſp̄ ye ſent worde vnto vs. Wherefore in ſp̄ ſacrifices ſp̄ we offe & other ceremonies vpon ſp̄ h̄ye ſolempne dayes and other we allwaye remembre you without ceasynge (like as reaſon is, and as it becom- meth vs to thynke vpon oure brethren) yee and are right glad of youre prosperous honour.

And though we haue had greate troubles and warres, ſo that the kynges aboute vs haue foughten againſt vs: yet wolde we not be greuous vnto you ner to other of oure louers and frendes in theſe warres. For we haue had helpe frō heauē, ſo that we are delyuered, and oure enemies ſubdued. Wherefore we choſe Numenius the ſonne of Antiochus and Antipater the ſonne of Iason, and ſente them vnto the Romaynes, for to reneue the olde bonde of frendſhippe and loue with them. We commaunded them alſo to come vnto you, to ſalute you, and to delyuer you oure lettres, concerninge the renouacion of oure brother- hode. And now ye ſhal do right wel, to geue vs an anſwere there vnto.

And this is the copy of the wrytinge, which Arius the kyng of Sparta ſente vnto Onias: Arius kinge of the Sparciāns ſendeth gretynge vnto Onias the h̄ye preſt. It is founde in wrytyng, that the Sparciāns and Iewes are brethren, and come of the generacion of Abraham. And now for ſo much as this is come to oure knowledge, ye ſhal do wel, to wryte vnto vs of youre prosperite. As for vs, we haue wrytten oure mynde vnto you: Oure catell and goodes are yours and yours, ours. Theſe thinges haue we cōmaunded to be ſhewed vnto you.

Ieruſalem, & met thē in the lōde of Hemath, for he gaue them not ſpace to come in to his owne countre. And he ſent ſpyes vnto their tentes, which came agayne and tolde him, that they were appoynted to come vpō him in the night ſeaſon. Wherefore when the Sōne was gone downe, Ionathas cōmaunded his men to watch all ſp̄ night, & to be ready with weapens for to fight: and ſet watchmen rounde aboute the hoost. But when the aduerſaries herde that Ionathas was ready with his men to the battayll, they feared & were aſrayed in their hertes, & kyndled fyres in their tentes, brake vp, and gat them awaye. Neuertheles Ionathas and his company knewe it not till the morninge, for they ſawe the fyres burnynge.

Then Ionathas folowed vpon thē, but he might not ouertake them, for they were gone ouer the water Eleutherus. So Ionathas departed vnto ſp̄ Arabiās (which were called Zabadei) ſlewe them, & toke their goodes. He proceded furthur alſo, and came vnto Damascus, & wente thorow all that countre. But Simon his brother toke his iourney and came to Aſcalon and to the nexte ſtronge holdes: departinge vnto Ioppa, and wanne it. For he herde, that they wolde ſtonde of Demetrius partie: wherefore he ſent mē of warre in the cite, to kepe it. After this came Ionathas home agayne, & called the elders of the people together: and deuysed with thē for to buylde vp the ſtrōge holdes in Iewry, and the walles of Ieruſalem, to ſet vp an h̄ye wall betwixte the caſtell and ſp̄ cite, for to ſeparate it from the cite, that it might be alone, and that men ſhulde nether bye nor ſell in it.

Vpō this they came together for to buylde vp the cite: and for ſo much as the wall vpō the broke of the weſt ſyde (called Caphetheta) was fallen downe, they repayed it. And Symon ſet vp Adiada in Sephela, and made it ſtronge, ſettinge portes & lockes vpō it. Now when Triphon purpoſed to raigne in Asia, to be crowned, and to ſlaye the kyng Antiochus: he was aſrayed that Ionathas wolde not ſuffre him, but fight againſt him. Wherefore he wente aboute to take Ionathas, and to kyll him.

So he departed, and came vnto Bethſan. Then wente Ionathas forth againſt him to the battayll with fourtye thouſande choſen men, and came vnto Bethſan alſo. But whē Triphon sawe that Ionathas came with so greate an hoost to destroye him, he was afrayed: and therefore he receaued him honorably, commended him vnto all his frendes, gaue him rewardes, and commaunded his men of warre to be as obediēt vnto him as to himself.

And saide vnto Ionathas: why hast thou caused this people to take soch tranayle, seyng there is no warre betwixte vs? Therefore sende them home agayne, & chose certaine mē to waite vpon the, & come thou with me to Ptolomais: for I wil geue it the, with the other strōge holdes, men of warre and their officers: As for me, I must departe, this is only & cause of my cōynge. Ionathas beleued him, & dyd as he sayde, puttinge awaye his hoost, which wente in to f̄londe of Iuda. He kepte but iij. M. by him, wherof he sente ij. M. in to Galilee, & one M. wente with himself.

Now as soone as Ionathas entred in to Ptolomais, the citesyns sparred the gates of the cite, and toke him, and slewe all them with the swerde, that came in with him. Then sent Triphon an hoost of fote mē and horsmen in to Galilee and in to the greate playne felde, to destroye all Ionathas company. But when they knew that Ionathas was taken, and all they slayne that wayted vpon him: they toke counsell together, and came forth ready to the battayll. So when they which folowed vpon them. sawe, that it was a matter of life, they turned backe agayne. As for the other, they wente in to f̄londe of Iuda peaceably, & bewayled Ionathas, & them that were with him right sore. And Israel made greate lamentacion. Thē all the Heithen y were rounde aboute them, sought to destroye thē. For they sayde: now haue they no captayne, nor eny man to helpe them. Therefore let vs ouercome them, and rote out their name from amonge men.

The xiiij. Chapter.

NOWE when Symon herde that Triphon gathered a greate hoost, to come in to f̄londe of Iuda, and to destroye it: and sawe y the people was in greate fearfulnessse and care: He came vp to Ierusalem, and gathered the people together, & gaue thē exortacion, sayenge: Ye knowe what greate battayls I and my brethren & my fathers house haue stryken for the lawe & the Sāctuary, and what maner of troubles we haue sene: thorow occasion wherof, all my brethren are slayne for Israels sake, and I am left alone." And now let not me spare myne owne life in eny maner of trouble, for I am no better then my brethren: but wil avenge my people and the Sanctuary, oure children and oure wyues: for all the Heithen are gathered together, to destroye vs of very malice.

At these wordes the hartes of the people were kyndled together, so that they cried with a loude voyce, sayenge: Thou shalt be oure captayne in steade of Iudas & Ionathas thy brethren, ordre thou oure batell, & what so euer thou commaundet vs, we shall do it. So he gathered all the men of warre, makinge haist to fynish all the walles of Ierusalem, which he made stronge rounde aboute. Then sent he Ionathas the sonne of Absalomus with a fresh hoost vnto Ioppa, which droue them out y were in the castell, and remayned there himself. Triphon also remoued from Ptolomais with a greate armye, to come in to the londe of Iuda, and Ionathas with him in warde. And Simon pitched his tentes at Addus before the playne felde.

But when Triphon knewe that Symon stode vp in steade of his brother Ionathas, and that he wolde warre agaynst him: he sent messaugers vnto him, sayenge: Where as we haue kepte Ionathas thy brother, it is for money that he is owynge in the kynges accompte, concernynge the busynesse y he had in honde. Wherefore sende now an C. talētes of syluer and his two sonnes for suertie, that when he is lettē forth he shal not forsake vs: and we shal sende him agayne. Neuerthelesse Symon knewe, that he dyssembled in his wordes: yet commaunded he the money & children to be delyuered vnto him: lest he shulde be the greater enemye agaynst f̄people of Israel, and saye: because he sent him not the money and the children, therefore is Ionathas deed.

So Symon sent him the children and an hundred talents, but he dyssembled, & wolde not let Ionathas go. Afterwarde came Triphon in to the londe, to destroye it, and wente rounde aboute by the waye, y ledeth vnto Ador. But where so euer they wente, thither wente Symon and his hoost also. Now they that were in the castell, sent messaungers vnto Triphon, that he shulde make haist to come by the wyldernesse, and to sende them vytales: And Triphon made ready all his horsmen to come that same night. Neuerthelesse it was a very greate snowe, so that he came not in Galaadithim. And whē he drewe nye Baschama, he slewe Ionathas and his sonnnes there, and then turned for to go home in to his owne londe.

Thē sente Symon for to fet his brothers deed coarse, and buried it in Modin his fathers cite. So all Israel bewayled him with greate lamentacion, and mourned for him very longe. And Symon made vpon the sepulchre of his father and his brethrē a buyldyng hie to loke vnto of fre stone behynde and before: and set vp seuen pylers, one agaynst another (for his father, his mother and foure brethren) and set greate pilers rōude aboutē, with armes vpon them for a perpetuall memory, and carued shippes besyde the armes: y they might be sene of mē saylinge in the see. This sepulchre which he made at Modin, standeth yet vnto this daye.

Now as Triphō wente forth to walke with y yōge kyng Antiochus, he slewe him trayterously, and raigned in his steade, crowned himself kyng of Asia, and dyd moch euell in the londe. Symon also buylt vp the castels in Iewry, makynge them stronge with hie towres, greate walles, portes and lockes, and layed vp vytales in the stronge holdes. And Symon chose certayne men, and sente them to kyng Demetrius: to desyre him, y he wolde discharge the londe from all bondage, for Triphon had spoyled it very sore. Where vpon Demetrius the kyng answered him, ¶ wrote vnto him after this maner:

Demetrius y kige sendeth gretinge vnto Symon the hie prest his frende, with the elders and people of the Iewes. The golden crowne and precious stone y ye sente vnto vs, haue we receaued: and are ready to make a stedfast peace with you, yee and to wryte vnto oure officers, for to release you, concerninge the thinges wherin we made you fre: and the appoyntment y we make with you, shalbe firme and stable. The stronge holdes which ye haue buylded, shalbe youre owne. As for eny ouer sight or fawte committed vnto this daye, we forgeue it, and the crowne taxe that ye ought vs also. And where as was eny other tribute in Ierusalem, it shal now be no tribute: and loke who are mete amonge you to be in oure courte, let them be written vp, that there maye be peace betwixte vs.

Thus the yock of the Heithen was taken from Israel, in the hundreth and seuentie yeare. And the peple of the Iewes beganne to write in their lettres and actes on this maner: ¶ In y first yeare of Symon the hie prest, and prynce of the Iewes.

In those dayes wente Symon vnto Gaza, and beseged it rōunde aboute, where he set vp ordinaunce of warre. And wanne a towre, which he toke. So they that gat in to the towre leapte into the cite, which was in a greate feare: In so moch that the people of the cite rente their clothes, and clynmed vp vpon the walles with their wyues and children, besekynge Symon to be at one with them, sayenge:

O rewarde vs not after oure wickednes, but be gracious vnto vs, and we shal do y seruyce. Then Symon for very pite, wolde fight no more agaynst them, but put them out of the cite, and caused the houses (wherin the ymages were) to be clensed: and so entred the cite with Psalmes of prayse, geuinge thanks vnto the LORDE. So when he had cast all abhominaciōs out of the cite, he set soch men in it as kepte the lawe of God, and made the cite stronge, and builded a dwellinge place for himself.

Now when they in the castell at Ierusalem were kepte so strately, that they coude not come forth ner in to countre, and might nether bye ner sell: they were very hungrie, and many of them famished to death: In so moch that they besought Symon to be at one with them, which he graunted them. So he put them out from thence, and clensed the castell from fylthynesse. And vpon the xxiiij. daye of the seconde moneth in the Clxxj. yeare they entred in to it with thankesgeuyng and branches of palme trees, with harpes, crowdes, cymbals, and lutes, synginge psalmes and songes of prayse vnto God, for that the greate enemy of Israel was ouer come.

And Symon ordered that the same daye shulde be kepte euery yeare in gladnesse, and made stronge the hyll of the temple that was besyde the castell, where he dwelt him self with his company. Symon also perceauynge that Ihon his sonne was a mightie man of armes, made him captayne of all the hoostes, and caused him to dwell at Gaza.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IN the Clxxij. yeare gathered kynge Demetrius his hoost, and departed vnto Media, to gett him helpe for to fight agaynst Triphon. Now when Arsaces the kynge of Persia and Media herde, that Demetrius was entred within his borders: he sente one of his prynces to take him alyue, and to brynge him vnto him. So he wente and slewe Demetrius hoost, toke himselfe, brought him to Arsaces, which kepte him in warde. And all the londe of Iuda was in rest, so longe as Symon lyued: for he sought the wealth of his people, therefore were they glad to haue him for their ruler, and to do him worships allwaye.

Symon wanne the cite of Ioppa also for an hauen towne, and made it an intrauce in to the Iles of the see. He enlarged the borders of his people, and cōquered them more londe: He gathered vp many of their people that were presoners: he had the dominiō of Gaza, Bethsura and the castell, which he clensted from fylthines, and there was no mā that resisted him: So that euery man tyllid his grounde in peace, the londe of Iuda and the trees gaue their frute and encrease. The elders sat all in iudgment, and toke their deuyce for the wealth of the londe: the yonge men put on worships and harnesse vpon them. He prouyded vytayles for the cities, and made goodly stronge holdes of them: so that the fame of his worships was spoken of vnto the ende of ȝ worlde. For he made peace thorow out the londe, and Israel was full of myrth and ioye.

Euery mā sat vnder his vyne & fyge trees and there was no man to fraye them awaye. There was none in ȝ londe to fight agaynst them, for then the kinges were ouer come. He helped those that were in aduersite amonge his people, he was diligent to se ȝ lawe kepte: as for such as were vngodly and wicked he toke thē awaye. He set vp ȝ Sanctuary, & encreased the holy vessels of the temple.

When ȝ Romaynes and Sparcians had gotten worde, ȝ Ionathas was deed, they were right sory. But when they herde ȝ Symon his brother was made hye prest in his steade, and how he had wonne the londe agayne with the cities in it: they wrote vnto him in tables of laton, to renue the frendshipe & bonde of loue, which they had made afore with Iudas & Ionathas his brethrē. <sup>a</sup> Which writings were red before the congregacion at Ierusalem.

And this is the copy of the lettres, that the Sparcians sent: The Senatours and citesyns of Sparta sende gretinge vnto Simō ȝ greate prest with the elders, prestes, & ȝ other people of the Iewes their brethrē: Whē youre embassitours that were sente vnto oure people, certified vs of youre worships, honoure and prosperous wealth: we were glad of their cōminge, and haue written the earande which they spake before the counsell of the people: namely, that Numenius the sonne of Antiochus, and Antipater the sonne of Iason the Iewes embassitours are come vnto vs, for to renue the olde frendshipe with vs. Vpon this the people consented, that the men shulde be honorably intreated, and that the copy of their earande shulde be written in the speciall bokes of the people, for a perpetuall memory vnto the Sparcians: yee and that we shulde sende a copy of the same vnto Symon the greate prest.

After this dyd Symon sende Numenius vnto Rome, with a golden shyld of a thousande pounce weight, to confirme the frendshipe with them: which when the Romaynes vnderstode, they saide: what thākes shal we recompence agayne vnto Symon & his children? For he hath stablished his brethrē, and ouer come the enemies of Israel. Wherefore they graūted him to be fre. And all this wrote the Iewes in tables of laton, and naled it vnto the pilers vpon the mount Sion. The copy of the writinge is this:

The xviij. daye of ȝ moneth Elul in the Clxxij. yeare in the thirde yeare of Symon the hye prest, in the greate congregacion of ȝ prestes, rulers of the people, and elders of the countre at Asaramel, were these wordes openly declared:

For so moch as there was moch warre in oure londe, therefore Symon ȝ sonne of MATHATHIAS (come of the children of Iareb) and his brethren, put them selues in parell, and resisted the enemies of their people: that their Sanctuary and lawe might be manteyned, and dyd their people greate worshipe. Ionathas in like maner, after that he had gouerned his people and bene their hye prest: dyed, and lyeth buried besyde his elders.

After that wolde their enemies haue trodden their holy thinges vnder fote, destroyed their londe, and vtterly waisted their Sanctuary. Then Symon withstode them, and fought for his people, spent moch of his owne money, weapened the valeaunt men of his people, gaue them wages, made stronge  $\text{f}$  cities of Iuda, with Bethsura that lieth vpon the borders of Iewry, (where the ordinaunce of their enemies laye somtyme)  $\text{t}$  set Iewes there for to kepe it.

$\text{f}$  He made fast Ioppa also, which lieth vpon the see, and Gaza that bordreth vpon Azotus, (where the enemies dwelt afore) and there he set Iewes to kepe it: and what so euer was mete for the subduynge of the aduersaries, that layed he therein. Now whē the people sawe the noble actes of Symon, and what worshipe he purposed to do for them, his godly behauioure, and faithfulnessse which he kepte vnto them,  $\text{t}$  how he sought by all waies  $\text{f}$  wealth of his people, because he dyd all this, therefore they chose him to be their prynce  $\text{t}$  hye prest. And in his tyme they prospered wel by him, so  $\text{f}$  the Heithē were takē out of their londe:  $\text{t}$  they also which were in the cite of Dauid at Ierusalē in the castell (where they wente out and defiled all thinges that were aboute the Sanctuary, and did greate harme vnto clenlynes) and Symon put men of the Iewes in it, for the defence of the londe and the cite, and set vp the walles of Ierusalem.

$\text{e}$  And kynge Demetrius confirmed him in his hye presthode, made him his frende, and dyd him greate worshipe. For he herde that the Romyans called  $\text{f}$  Iewes their frendes, louers and brethren: how honorably they receaued Symons embassitours: how  $\text{f}$  Iewes and prestes consented that he shulde be their prynce and hye prest perpetually (till God raysed vp the true prophet) and that he shulde be their captayne, to care for the Sanctuary, and to set officers vpon the workes therof, ouer the londe, ouer the weapens, ouer the houses of defence, to make prouysion for the holy thynges, and to be obeyed of euery man, and all the writynges of  $\text{f}$  londe to be made in his name: that he shulde be clothed in purple and golde, and that it shulde be lauffull for none of the people nor prestes to breake eny of these thynges, to withstonde his wordes, ner to call eny congregation in the londe without him: that he shulde be clothed in purple, and weere a colar of golde: And yf there were eny which disobeyed or brake this ordinaunce, that he shulde be punyshed.

So all the people consented to alowe Symon, and to do acordinge to these wordes. Symon also himselfe toke it vpon him, and was contente to be the hye prest, the captayne and prynce of the Iewes and prestes, and to gouerne them all. And they commaunded to make this writinge in tables of laton, and to fasten it vnto the compasse of the Sanctuary in an open place: and to laye vp a copy of the same in the treasury, that Symon and his posterite might haue it.

The xii. Chapter.

$\text{M}$ OROUER, kynge Antiochus the sonne  $\text{a}$  of Demetrius sente lettres from the Iles of the see, vnto Symon the hye prest and prynce of the Iewes, and to all the people, conteyninge these wordes: Antiochus the kynge sendeth gretinge vnto Symon the hye prest and to the people of the Iewes. For so moch as certayne wicked men haue gotten the kyngdome of oure progenitours, I am purposed to chalenge the realme agayne, and to restore it to the olde estate.

Wherefore I haue gathered a greate hoost and made shyppes of warre: that I maye go thorow the countre, and be auenged of them which haue destroyed oure londe, and waysted many cities in my realme. And therefore now I make the fre also from all the tributes, wherof all kynges my progenitours haue discharged the, and from other customes (wher from they haue released the) what so euer they be: Yee I geue the leaue to smyte money of thine owne within thy londe. As for Ierusalem, I wil that it be holy and fre: and all the weapens and houses of defence which thou hast buylded and kepest in thine bondes, shal be thine. Where as eny thinge  $\text{b}$  is or shal be owynge vnto the kynge, I forgeue it the, from this time forth for euermore. And when we haue optayned oure kyngdome, we shal do the, thy people and the temple greate worshiþe: so that youre honoure shal be knowne thorow out þ̃ whole worlde.

In the Clxxiiij. yeaere wente Antiochus in to his fathers londe, and all the men of warre came together vnto him, so that fewe were left with Triphon. So the kyng Antiochus folowed vpon him, but he fled vnto Dora, which lieth by the see syde: for he sawe þ̃ there was myschefe commynge vnto him, and that his hoost had forsaken him. Then came Antiochus vnto Dora with an hūdreth & twentye thousande men of armes vpon fote, and eight thousande horsmen. So he compased the cite rounde aboute, and þ̃ shippes came by the see. Thus they vexed the cite by londe and by water, in so moch that they suffred no man to go in nor out.

C "In the meane season came Numenius (& they that had bene with him) from the cite of Rome, hauynge lettres written vnto the kynges and prouincies, wherin were conteyned these wordes: Lucius the Mayre of Rome sendeth gretynge vnto Ptolomy the kyng. The embassitours of the Iewes oure frēdes beinge sent from Symon the hye prest and from the people of the Iewes, came vnto us, for to renue the olde frendshipe and bonde of loue, and brought a shyld of golde weyenge a thousande pounce, which we were contente to receaue of them. Wherefore we thought it good to wryte vnto the kynges & prouincies, to do them no harme, nor to take parte agaynst thē, their cities ner countrees nether to mayntene their enemies agaynst them. Yf there be eny wicked personnes therfore fled from their cōtre vnto you, delyuer them vnto Symon the hye prest, þ̃ he maye punysh them accordinge to their owne lawe.

D The same wordes wrote the Romaynes also vnto Demetrius the kyng, to Attalus, Araba, Arsaces and to all regions: as Samsanes, to them of Sparta, Delo, Mido, Sydon, Caria, Samos, Pamphilia, Lyeia, Alicarnassum, and to þ̃ Rhodes: to Faselis, Co, Sida, Arado, Gortyna, Gnydum, to Cypros and to Cyren. And of euery lettre they sent a copy to Symon the hye prest and to the people of the Iewes. So Antiochus the kyng brought his host vnto Dora the seconde tyme, to take it: where he made diuerse ordinaūce of warre, and kepte Triphon in, þ̃ he shulde not come forth. Then Symon sent Antiochus two thousande chosen mē to helpe him with golde, syluer and other plenteous geer: Neuerthelesse he wolde not receaue them, but brake all þ̃ couenaunt which he made with Symon afore, & withdrewe himself frō him.

He sent Athenobius also a frende of his vnto Symon, for to reason with him, sayenge: Ye witholde fro me Ioppa and Gaza (with the castell that is at Ierusalē) which are cities of my realme, whose borders ye haue destroyed, and done greate euell in the londe, hauynge the dominaciō in many other places of my kyngdome. Wherefore delyuer now þ̃ cities which ye haue takē, with þ̃ tributes of þ̃ places þ̃ ye haue rule vpon without the borders of Iewry: Or els geue me fyue hūdreth talentes of syluer, yee and for the harme that ye haue done in the cities and for the tributes of the same, other fyue hundreth talētes. Yf no, we shal come and fight agaynst you.

So Athenobius the kynges frende came to Ierusalē, and when he sawe þ̃ greate worshiþe and honoure of Symō in golde, syluer and so greate plenty of ornamentes: he marveled, and tolde Symon as the kyng commaunded him. Then answered Symon and saide vnto him: <sup>b</sup>As for vs, we haue nether taken other mēs londe, ner witholdē them, but only oure fathers heretage, which oure enemies had vnrighteously in possession a certayne tyme. This heretage of oure fathers haue we challynged in processe of tyme. And where as thou cōplaynest concernynge Ioppa and Gaza, they dyd greate harme to oure people and in oure londe, yet wyll we geue an C. talentes for them.

F Neuertheles Athenobius answered him not one worde, but turned agayne wrothfully vnto þ̃ kyng, and tolde him all these wordes, and the greate dignite of Symon with all that he had sene, and the kinge was very angrie. In the meane tyme fled Triphon by shippe vnto Orthosaida. Then the kyng made Cendebeus captayne of the see coast, & gaue him an hoost of fote men and horsmen, cōmaunding him to remoue þ̃ hoost towarde Iewry, & to buylde vp the cite of Cedron, to make vp þ̃ portes, & to warre agaynst þ̃ people of the Iewes. As for the kyng he self, he folowed vpon Triphon. So Cendebeus came vnto Iamnia, & beganne to vexe þ̃ people, to treade downe Iewry, to "take the people pre-soners, to slaye the ⁊ to buylde vp Cedron:

where he set horsmē ⁊ other men of warre, that they might come forth and go thorow the stretes of Iewry, like as the kynge had commaunded him.

The xvi. Chapter.

THEN came Ihon vp from Gaza,<sup>a</sup> and tolde Symon his father, what Cendebeus had done amonge their people. Vpon this called Symon two of his eldest sonnes, Iudas ⁊ Ihon, and sayde vnto them: I and my brethren ⁊ my fathers house, haue euer from oure youth vp vnto this daye, foughten agaynst the enemies of Israel, ⁊ God gaue vs good fortune to deluyer Israel oft tymes. And now for so much as I am olde, be ye in steade of me ⁊ my brother, to go forth ⁊ fight for oure people, ⁊ the helpe of God be with you. So he chose xx. M. fightinge men of the cowntre, with horsmen also, which wente forth agaynst
Cendebeus and rested at Modin.

In the mornynge they arose, ⁊ wēte in to ⁊ playne felde: and beholde, a mightie greate hoost came agaynst thē, both of fote men ⁊ horsmen. Now was there a water broke betwixe them, ⁊ Ihon remoued the hoost towardes them. And when he sawe that the people was afrayed to go ouer ⁊ water broke, he wente ouer first him self: and the men
seyng this, folowed him.

Then Ihon set his horsmen ⁊ fote men in ordre, the one by the other, for their enemies horsmen were very many. But when they blewe vp the prestes troinpettes, Cendebeus fled with his hoost, wherof many were slayne, and the remnaunt gat them to their stronge holde. Iudas also Ihōs brother whas wōunded at ⁊ same tyme. And Ihon folowed still vpon ⁊ enemies,<sup>c</sup> till he came to Cedrō which he buylded. The enemies fled also vnto the towres ⁊ were in ⁊ felde of Azotus, ⁊ those dyd Ihon burne vp. Thus there were slayne
ij. M. men of them, ⁊ Ihon turned agayne peaceably in to Iewry.

And in the felde of Iericho was Ptolomy the sonne of Abobus made captayne: which because he had abundaunce of syluer ⁊ golde, (for he had maried the daughter of Symon the hye prest) waxed proude in his mynde, ⁊ thought to conquere the lōde, ymageninge falsed agaynst Symō ⁊ his sonnes, to destroye
thē. Now as Symon was goynge aboute thorow the cities, ⁊ were in ⁊ cōtre of Iewry, and carynge for them: he came downe to Iericho, with Matathias ⁊ Iudas his sonnes, in the Clxxvij. yeare, in ⁊ xj. moneth called Sabat. Then Ptolomy ⁊ sonne of Abobus receaued them (but with disceate) in to a stronge house of his called Doch, which he had buylded, where he made them a banquet.

So when Symon ⁊ his sonnes were mery ⁊ had dronken well, Ptolomy stode vp with his men (whō he had hyd there) ⁊ toke their weapens, entred in to the banquet house, ⁊ slewe Symon with his two sonnes, ⁊ certayne of his seruaūtes. Soch greate vnfaitful-nesse dyd Ptolomy in Israel, and recōpensed euell for good. Then wrote this Ptolomy ⁊ same vnto kynge Antiochus, requyringe him that he shulde sende him an hoost to helpe him: ⁊ so shulde he deluyer him the londe, with the cities ⁊ tributes of the same. He sent other men also vnto Gaza, for to take Ihon: ⁊ wrote vnto the captaynes to come to him, ⁊ he shulde geue them syluer, golde and rewards. And to Ierusalem he sent other, to take it and the Sanctuary.

Thē ranne there one before, ⁊ tolde Ihon in Gaza, that his father ⁊ his brethren were slayne, and how that Ptolomy had sent to slaie him also. Whē Ihon herde this, he was sore abaszshed, and layed hōdes of them that were come to destroye him, and slewe them:
for he knewe, that they wente aboute to kyll him.

As for other thinges concernynge Ihon: of his warres, of his noble actes (wherin he behaued him self manfully) of the buyldinge of walles which he made, and other of his dedes: They are written in the cronicles of his presthode, from the tyme forth ⁊ he was made hye prest after his father.

The first Chapter.

A THE brethrē of ſ Jewes which be at Ierusalem & in the londe of Iewry, wiſh vnto thoſe brethrē of ſ Jewes that are thorow out Egipte: good fortune, health and peace.

God the LORDE be gracious vnto you, & thinke vpon his couenaunt ſ he made with Abraham, Isaac & Iacob his faithfull ſeruauntes: and geue you all ſoch an herte, that ye maye loue and ſerue him, yee and perſourme his wyll with an whole herte and of a wyllinge mynde: He opē youre hertes in his lawe and in his commaundementes, ſende you peace: heare youre prayers, be at one with you, and neuer forſake you in tyme of trouble. This is heare our prayer for you.

What tyme as Demetrius raigned, in the Clxix. yeare, we Iewes wrote vnto you in ſ trouble and violence that came vpon vs. In thoſe yeares after that Iason departed out of the holy londe and kyngdome, they brent vp the portes, and ſhed innocent bloude. Then made we our prayer vnto ſ LORDE, and were herde: we offered, and lighted the candels, ſettinge forth cakes and bred. <sup>a</sup> And now come ye vnto the feaſt of tabernacles in the moneth Caſleu.

In the Clxxxviij. yeare ſ people ſ was at Ierusalem and in Iewry, the counsell and Iudas him ſelf, ſent this whoſome ſalutaciō vnto Ariſtobolus kyng Ptolomys maſter, which came of the generaciō of the anoynted preſtes: and to the Iewes that were in Egipte: In ſo moch as God hath deliyuered vs from greate pears, we thanke him hylie, In that we reſiſted ſo mightie a kyng. And why? he brought men out of Perſis by heapes, to fight agaynſt vs and the holy cite. For as he was in Perſis (namely, ſ captayne with the greate hoost) he periſhed in the temple of Naneas, beyng diſceaued thorow the deuyc of Naneas preſtes. For as he was purpoſed to haue dwelt there, Antiochus & his frēdes came thither, to receaue moch moneye for a dowry. So whē Naneas preſtes had layed forth ſ moneye, he entred with a ſmall company in to the compaſſe of the temple, and ſo they ſhut the temple.

C Now when Antiochus entred by openyng the preuy inтраunce of the temple, ſ preſtes ſtoned ſ captayne to death, hewed thē in peces that were with him, ſmote of their heades, and threwe them out. In all thinges God be prayſed, which hath deliyuered the wicked in to oure hondes.

Where as we now are purpoſed to kepe the purificaciō of the temple vpon ſ xxv. daye of the moneth Caſleu, we thought neceſſary to certifie you therof: that ye alſo might kepe the tabernacles feaſt daye, & the daye of the fyre, which was geuen vs when Nehemias offered, after that he had ſet vp ſ temple & the alter. For what tyme as oure fathers were led awaye vnto Perſis, ſ preſtes (which then ſought the honour of God) toke ſ fyre priuely from ſ alter, & hyd it in a valley, where as was a depe drye pyt: & therein they kepte it, becauſe the place was vnknowne to euery man. Now after many yeares when it pleaſed God, ſ Nehemias ſhulde be ſent from the kyng of Perſia: he ſent the childers children of thoſe preſtes (which had hyd the fyre) to ſeke it. And as they tolde vs, they founde no fyre, but thicke water.

D Thē cōmaunded he them to drawe it vp, & to brynge it him, & ſ offerynges withall. Now when ſ ſacrifices were layed on & ordred, the preſt Nehemias cōmaunded to ſprenkle them & the wod with the water. Whē this was done, & the tyme come ſ the Sonne ſhone, which afore was hyd in the cloude: there was a greate fyre kyndled, In ſo moch ſ euery man marueled. Now all the preſtes prayed, whyle the ſacrifice was a makyng. Ionathas prayed firſt, and ſ other gaue anſwere.

And Nehemias prayer was after this maner: O LORDE God maker of all thinges, thou fearfull & ſtrong, thou righteous & mercifull, thou ſ art onely a gracious kyng, onely lyberall, onely iuſt, Allmightie and euerlaſting, thou ſ deliyereſt Iſrael from all trouble, thou ſ haſt choſen the fathers & halowed them: receaue the offeringe for the whole people of Iſrael, preſerue thine owne porcion, & halowe it. Gather thoſe together, ſ are ſcattered abroad from vs: deliyer them ſ are vnder the Heithē bondage, loke vpon them which are deſpyſed & abhorred, ſ the Heithen maie knowe & ſe, how ſ thou art oure God: Punyſhe them ſ oppreſſe, and proudly put vs to diſhonour. Set thy people agayne in thy holy place, <sup>d</sup> like as Moſes hath ſpokē.

And the prestes songe Psalmes of thankesgeuyng, so lōge as the sacrifice endured.
Now when the sacrifice was brent, Nehemias commaunded the greates stones to be sprenkled with the <sup>resydue</sup> of the water. Which when it was done, there was kyndled a flamme of thē also: but it was consumed thorow the light, y shyned from the altar. So whē this matter was knowne, it was tolde the kynge of Persia, that in the place where the prestes (which were led away) had hyd fyre, there appeared water in steade of fyre, & that Nehemias & his company had purified the sacrifices withall. Then the kynge considerynge & ponderynge y matter diligently, made him a temple, to proue the thinge y was done.
And whē he founde it so in dede, he gaue the prestes many giftes & dyuerse rewardes: yee he toke them with his owne hōde, & gaue thē.
And Nehemias called the same place Nephthar, which is as moch to saye as a clensynge:
but many men call it Nephi.

The ij. Chapter.

IT is founde also in the writings of Ieremy the prophet, y he commaunded them which were caried away, to take fyre, as it is sayde afore. <sup>h</sup>He cōmaunded them also, y they shulde not forget the 'lawe & cōmaunde-mentes of the LORDE, & y they shulde not erre in their 'myndes, whē they se ymages of syluer & golde with their ornamentes. These & soch other thinges commaunded he them, & exorted them, that they shulde not lett the lawe of God go out of their hertes.

It is written also, how the prophet (at y commaundement of God) charged them, to take the tabernacle & the arke with them:
& he wente forth vnto the mountaine, where Moses clymmed vp, <sup>a</sup>& sawe y heretage of God. And when Ieremy came there, he founde an open caue, wherin he layed the tabernacle, y arke & the altar of incense, & so stopped the hole. There came certayne men together also folowinge him, to mark the place, but they coude not fynde it. Which when Ieremy perceaued, he reproued thē, sayenge: As for that place, it shalbe vn-knowne, vntill y tyme that God gather his people together againe, & receaue thē vnto mercy. Then shal God shewe them these things, & the maiesty of the LORDE shall appeare, & the cloude also, like as it was shewed vnto <sup>f</sup>Moses: & like as when Salomon desyred y the place might be <sup>e</sup>'sanctified, & it was shewed him.

For he beyng a wyse man, handled honorably & wysely: offerynge vnto God in y halowinge of the temple, when it was fynished.
<sup>h</sup>And like as when Moses prayed vnto the LORDE, the fyre came downe from heauen, & consumed the burnt offering: Euen so prayed Salomon also, & the 'fyre came downe from heauen, & cōsumed the burnt offering.
And Moses sayde: because the synofferynge was not eaten, therefore it is cōsumed. In like maner Salomon kepte the dedicacion (or halowynge) eight dayes.

In y Annotacions & wrytynges of * Ieremy, were these thinges put also: & how he made a lybrary, & how he gathered out of all coun-treies the boke of the prophetes, of Dauid, the epistles of the kynges, and of the presentes. Euen so Iudas also, loke what he lerned by experiēce of warre, & soch thinges as hath happened vnto vs, he gathered thē all together, & so we haue them by vs. Yf ye now desyre to haue the same, sende some body to fetch them vnto you. Where as we thē are aboute to celebrate the purification, we haue written vnto you. Therefore ye shall do well, yf ye kepe the same dayes. We hope also, that the God (which deluyered his people, & gaue them all y heretage, kyngdome, presthode & <sup>a</sup>'Sanctuary y he promised them in the lawe) shal shortly haue mercy vpō vs, & gather vs together from vnder the heauē in to his holy place: for he hath saued vs frō greates pears, & hath clenched the place.

As concernynge Iudas Machabeus & his brethren, the purification of the greates temple, the dedicacion of the altar, yee & of the warres y cōcerne noble Antiochus and <sup>a</sup>'Eupator his sonne, of the shyninges y came downe from heauen vpon those, which man-fully defended the Iewes. (For though they were but fewe, yet defended they the whole londe, droue away y enemies hoost, recovered agayne the temple, y was spoken of thorow restored agayne vnto the LORDE,  $\hat{y}$  was so mercifull vnto thē.) As touchinge Iason also of Cyren, we haue vnder takē cōpendiously to brynge in to one boke, the thynges  $\hat{y}$  were cōprehended of him in fyue. For we cōsideringe the multitude of the bokes, and how harde it shulde be for them  $\hat{y}$  wolde medle with stories and actes (and that because of so dyuerse matters) haue vnder taken so to cōprehende the stories: that such as are disposed to reade, might haue pleasure and pastyme therin: and that they which are diligent in such thynges, might the better thinke vpon them: yee and that who so euer red them, might haue profit therby.

¶ Neuwerthelesse we oure selues that haue medled with this matter for the shortenynge of it, haue taken no small labour, but greates diligence, watchynge and trauayle. Like as they that make a feast, wolde fayne do other men pleasure: Euen so we also (for many mens sakes) are very wel content to take the labour, where as we maye shortly cōprehēde, the thynges that other men haue truly wrytten.

For he  $\hat{y}$  buyldeth an house a new, must prouyde for many thynges to  $\hat{y}$  whole buyldinge: but he that paynteth it afterwarde, seketh but only what is comly, mete and conuenient to garnysh it withall. Euen so do we also in like maner. And why? He that begynneth to wryte a story for the first, must with his vnderstandinge gather the matter together, set his wordes in ordre, and diligently seke out euery parte: But he that afterwarde wyll shorten it, vseth few wordes, and toucheth not the matter at the largiest. Let this be sufficient for a prologe, now wyll we begynne to shewe the matter: for it is but a foolish thinge to make a longe prologe, and to be shorte in the story it self.

The iij. Chapter

¶ WHAT tyme as the holy cite was inhabited in all peace and wealth,  $\tau$  when the lawes were yet very well kepte. (For so was it ordered by Onias the hye prest and other godly men, that were enemies to wickednesse:) It came therto, that euen the kynges and  $\tau$ prynces thē selues dyd the place greates worshippe, and garnyshed  $\hat{y}$  temple with greates gifts: In so moch that Seleucus

kyng of Asia of his owne rentes bare all the costes  $\alpha$ belonginge to the seruyce of the offeringes. Then Symon of the trybe of Ben Iamin, a ruler of the temple, laboured to worke some myschefe in the cite: but the hye prest resisted him.

Neuwerthelesse when he might not ouercome Onias, he gat him to  $\alpha$ Appolonius the sonne of Thersa (which thē was chefe lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) and tolde him,  $\hat{y}$  the treasury in Ierusalem was full of innumerable money, and how that the comons goodes (which belonged not vnto the offeringes) were exceddinge greates also: yee and how it were possible, that all these might come vnder the kynges power.

Now when Appolonius had shewed the kyng of the moneye, as it was tolde him:  $\hat{y}$  kyng called for Heliodorus his stewarde, and sent him with a commaundment, to brynge him the sayde money. Immediately Heliodorus toke his iourney, but vnder a coloure, as though he wolde go thorow Celosyria and Phenices to vyset the cities, but his purpose was to fulfill the kynges pleasure. So when he came to Ierusalem, and was loungly receaued of the hye prest in to the cite: he tolde what was determed concernynge the moneye, and shewed the cause of his comynge: he axed also, yf it were so in dede. Then the hye prest tolde him, that there was soch money layed vp for the vpholdinge of weddowes and fatherlesse childre, and how that a certayne of it belonged vnto Hyrcanus Tobias a noble man: and that of all the moneye (which that wicked Symon had bewrayed) there were iiij. hundreth talentes of syluer, and ij. hundreth of golde: yee  $\tau$  that it were vnpossible for those mens meaninge to be disceaued, that had layed vp their moneye in the place and temple (which is had in worshipec thorow the whole worlde) for the mayntenance and honoure of  $\hat{y}$  same. Whervnto Heliodorus answered,  $\hat{y}$  the kyng had commaunded him in eny wyse, to brynge him the moneye.

So at the daye appoynted, Heliodorus entred in to the temple to ordre this matter. But there was no small feare thorow out the whole cite. The prestes fell downe before the aulter in their vestimentes, and called vnto heauen vpon him, which had made a lawe concernynge stuffe geuen to kepe,* that they shulde be safely preserued, for such as comitte them vnto keypyng. Then who so had loked the hye prest in the face, it wolde haue greued his herte: For his countenance and the chaunginge of his colour, declared the inwarde sorowe of his mynde. The mā was all in heuynesse, and his body in feare: wherby they that loked vpon him, might perceaue the grefe of his herte. The other people also came out of their houses by heapes vnto the comon prayer, because the place was like to come in to confucion. The women came together thorow the stretes, with hayrie clothes aboute their brestes.

D The virgins also that were kepte in, ranne to Onias, some to the walles, other some loked out at the wyndowes: yee they all helde vp their hondes towarde heauē, & prayed. A miserable thinge was it, to loke vpon the comon people, & the hye prest beyng in such trouble. But they besought Almightie God, that the gooddes which were committed vnto thē, might be kepte whole, for those that had deliuered them vnto their keypyng. Neuertheles the thinge that Heliodorus was determined to do, that perfourmed he in the same place, he him self personally beyng aboute the treasury with his men of warre. But the sprete of Almightie God shewed him self openly, so that all they which presumed to obeye Heliodorus, fell thorow ſ power of God in to a greате fearfulnessē & drede. For there apared vnto them an horse,<sup>b</sup> with a terrible man syttinge vpon him, deckte in goodly araye, and the horse smote at Heliodorus with his fore fete. Now he that sat vpon ſ horse, had harnessse of golde vpon him.

E Morouer there apared ij. fayre and beutiffull yonge men in goodly araye, which stode by him, scourged him of both the sydes, & gaue him many stripes without ceassing. With that, fell Heliodorus sodenly vnto the grounde. <sup>c</sup> So they toke him vp (beyngē compased aboute with greате darcknesse) and bare him out vpo<sup>d</sup> a beare. Thus he that came with so many runners and men of warre in to ſ sayde treasury, was borne out, where as no man might helpe him: and so the power of God was manifest and knowne. He laye still domine also by the power of God, destitute of all hope and life. And they praised the LORDE, that he had shewed his power vpon his place and temple, which a litle afore was full of feare & trouble: and that thorow the reuelacion of the Allmightie LORDE it was fylled with ioye and gladnesse.

The certaine of Heliodorus frēdes praied Onias, that in all haist he wolde call vpon God, to graunte him his life, which was geuyngē vp the goost. So the hye prest considered the matter, and lest the kynge shulde suspecte that the Iewes had done Heliodorus some euell: he offred an healthofferyngē for him. Now whē ſ hye prest had opteyned his petition, the same yonge mē in the same clothinge apared, & stode besyde Heliodorus, sayenge: Thanke Onias ſ hye prest, for for his sake hath ſ LORDE graunted the thy life:<sup>e</sup> therefore seyngē ſ God hath scourged ſ, geue f him prayse & thanks, and shewe euery man his might & power. And whē they had spoken these wordes, they apared nomore.

So Heliodorus offred vnto God, made greate vowes vnto him which had graūted him his life, thaked Onias, toke his hoost, & wētē againe to ſ kinge. Thē testified he vnto euery mā, of ſ greate workes of God, ſ he had sene with his eyes. And whē the kynge axed Heliodorus who were mete to be sent yet once agayne to Ierusalem, he sayde: Yf thou hast eny enemy or aduersary vnto thy realme, sende him thither, & thou shalt haue him punished, yf he escape with his life: for in ſ place (no doute) there is a speciall power & workinge of God. For he ſ dwelleth in heauē, vysiteth & defendeth ſ place: & all ſ come to do it harme, he punysheth & plageth thē. This is now ſ matter cōcerninge Heliodorus, & ſ keypyngē of ſ treasury at Ierusalē.

The iiii. Chapter.

THIS Symon now (of whom we spake <sup>a</sup> afore) beyngē a bewrayer of the money and of his owne naturall countre, reported the worst of Onias: as though he had moued Heliodorus vnto this, and as though he had bene a brynger vp of euell. Thus was he not ashamed to call him an enemy of ſ realme, that was so faithfull an ouerseer & defender of the cite & of his people: yee & so feruent in the lawe of God. But when the malice of Symon increased so farre, ſ thorow his frendes there were certayne manslaughter committed: Onias considered the parell  $\hat{y}$  might come thorow this strife, and how that Appollonius (namely the chefe lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) was all set vpon tyranny, and Symons malice increased the same: He gat him to the kyng, not as an accusor of the citesyns, but as one that by him self intended the comon wealth of the whole multitude. For he sawe it was not possible to lyue in peace, nether Symon to leaue of from his foolishnesse, excepte the kyng dyd loke therto.

B But after the death of Seleucus, when Antiochus (which is called the noble) toke  $\hat{y}$  kyngdome: Iason the brother of Onias laboured to be hye prest: For he came vnto the kyng, and promised him thre hundredth  $\tau$  lx. talentes of syluer,  $\tau$  of the other rētes lxxx. talentes. Besydes this he promised him yet an C.  $\tau$  L. yf he might haue  $\hat{y}$  scole of  $\hat{y}$  children, and that he might call them of Ierusalem Antiochians. Which when the kyng had graunted,  $\tau$  he had gotten the superiorite: he begāne immediatly to drawe his kinsmen to the custome of the Heithen, put downe the thinges, that the Iewes had set vp of loue, by Ihon the father of Eupolemius (which was sent embassitoure vnto Rome, for to make the bonde of frendshipe and loue.) He put downe all the Lawes  $\tau$  Liberties of the Iewes, and set vp wicked statutes. He durst make a fightinge scole vnder  $\hat{y}$  castell, and set fayre yonge men to lerne the maners of whores and brodels.

C This was now the begynnynge of the Heithenish  $\tau$  straunge cōuersacion, brought in thorow the vngacious and vnherde wickednesse of Iason (which shulde not be called a prest, but an vngodly personne.) In so moch, that the prestes were now nomore occupide aboute the seruyce of the aluter, but despyed the temple, regarded not the offrynges: yee gaue their diligece to lerne to fight, to wristle, to leape, to daunce,  $\tau$  to put at  $\hat{y}$  stone: not settyng by  $\hat{y}$  honour of  $\hat{y}$  fathers, but liked  $\hat{y}$  glory of the Grekes best of all: for the which they stroue periously, and were gredy to folowe their statutes, yee their lust was in all thinges to be like thē, which afore were their enemies  $\tau$  destroyers. Howbeit to do wickedly agaynst  $\hat{y}$  lawe of God, shal not escape vnpuynished: but of this we shal speake here after.

What tyme as the \*Olympiades sportes D were played at Tyrus (the kyng him self beinge presente) this vngacious Iason sent wicked men, bearinge from them of Ierusalem (which now were called Antiochians) iij. C. drachmas of syluer for an offerynge to Hercules. These had they that caried them, desyred vnder soch a fashiō, as though they shulde not haue bene offred, but bestowed to other vses. Neuertheles he that sent them, sent them to the intent that they shulde be offred vnto Hercules. But because of those that were present, they were geuen as to the makinge of shippes. And Appollonius the sonne of Nesteus was sent in to Egipte, because of the noble men of kyngye Ptolomy Philometor. Now when Antiochus perceaued  $\hat{y}$  he was put out from medlinge in the realme, he sought his owne profit, departed from thence, came to Ioppa,  $\tau$  then to Ierusalem: where he was honorably receaued of Iason  $\tau$  the cite,  $\tau$  was brought in with torche light and with greate prayse: and so he turned his hoost vnto Phenices.

After iij. yeare Iason sent Menelaus (the E fore sayde Symons brother)  $\hat{y}$  to beare the money vnto  $\hat{y}$  kyng,  $\tau$  to bringe him answer of other necessary matters. But he (when he was praysed of  $\hat{y}$  kyng for magnificence of his power) turned  $\hat{y}$  hye presthode vnto him self, layenge vp iij. C. talētes of syluer for Iason. So whē he had gotten cōmaundemētes from  $\hat{y}$  kyng, he came, hauinge nothinge  $\hat{y}$  becōmeth a prest, but bearinge  $\hat{y}$  stomach of a cruell tyrante,  $\tau$  the wrath of a wyld brute beest.  $\hat{y}$  Then Iason (which had disceaued his owne brother) seyng  $\hat{y}$  he him self was begyled also, was fayne to fle in to  $\hat{y}$  lōde of  $\hat{y}$  Ammonites,  $\tau$  Menelaus gat  $\hat{y}$  dominiō. But as for  $\hat{y}$  moneye  $\hat{y}$  he had promised vnto the kyng, he dyd nothinge therin, when Sostratus the ruler of  $\hat{y}$  castell requyred it of him. (For Sostratus was the man,  $\hat{y}$  gathered  $\hat{y}$  customes) wherfore they were both called before the kyng. Thus was Menelaus put out of  $\hat{y}$  presthode,  $\tau$  Lysimachus his brother came in his steade. Sostratus also was made lorde of the Cyprians.

It happened in  $\hat{y}$  meane season,  $\hat{y}$   $\hat{y}$  Thar- F sians  $\tau$  Malloccians made insurreciō, because they were geuen for a present vnto kynge Antiochus concubyne. Then came ſ kynge in all ſ haist, to still them agayne and to pacifie the matter, leauynge Andronicus there to be his debyte, as one mete therfore. Now Menelaus supposinge that he had gotten a right convenient tyme, stole certayne vessels of golde out of the temple, and gaue thē to Andronicus for a present: and some he solde at Tyrus and in the cities therby.

Which when Onias knewe of a suertye, he reproveth him: but he kepte him in a sanctuary besyde Daphnis, that lyeth by Antioche. Wherefore Menelaus gat him to Andronicus, and prayed him that he wolde slaye Onias. So when he came to Onias, he councelled him craftely to come out of the sanctuary. geuyng him his honde with an ooth (how be it he suspecte him) and thē he slewe Onias, without eny regarde of rightousnesse. For the which cause not only the Iewes, but other nacions also toke indignacion, and were displeased for the vnrighteous death of so godly a man.

¶ And when the kynge was come agayne from Cilicia, the Iewes and certaine of the Grekes wente vnto him, complainyng for the vnrighteous death of Onias. Yee Antiochus himself also was sory in his mynde for Onias, so ſ it pitied him, and he wepte, remembreinge his sobernesse and manerly behauoure. Wherefore he was so kyndled in his mynde, ſ he cōmaunded Andronicus to be striped out of his purple clothinge, and so to be led thorow out all the cite, yee and ſ vngracious man to be slayne in ſ same place, where he committed his wickednes vpon Onias. Thus ſ LORDE rewarded him his punysshment, as he had deserued. Now when Lysimachus had done many wycked dedes in ſ temple thorow the counsell of Menelaus, and the voyce came abrode: the multitude gathered thē together agaynst Lysimachus, for he had caried out now moch golde.

So when the people arose and were full of displeasure, Lysimachus armed iij. M. vnthrifites to defende him: a certayne tyraunte beyng the captayne, which was growen both in age and woodnesse. But when the people vnderstode the purpose of Lysimachus, some gat stones, some good stronge clubbes, and some cast aszshes vpon Lysimachus. Thus there were many of thē wounded, some beyng slayne, and all the other chased awaye. But as for ſ wicked churchrobber himself, they kylled him besyde the treasury. Of these matters therfore there was kepte a courte agaynst Menelaus.

Now when ſ kynge came to Tyrus, they made a cōplaynte vnto him of Menelaus, concerning this busynesse, and ſ embassitours were thre. But Menelaus wente and promised Ptolomy to geue him moch money, yf he wolde perswade the kynge. So Ptolomy wēt to the kynge in to a courte (where as he was set to coole him) and brughte him out of ſ mynde. In so moch ſ he discharged Menelaus frō ſ accusacions, ſ not withstandinge was cause of all myschefe: and those poore men (which yf they had tolde their cause, yee before the Scythians, they shulde haue ben iudged innocēt) thē he cōdēned to death. Thus were they soone punyshed, which folowed vpō ſ matter for ſ cite, for ſ people, and for ſ holy vessell. Wherefore they of Tyrus toke indignacion, and buried thē honorably. And so thorow ſ covetousnesse of them that were in power, Menelaus remayned still in authorite, increasinge in malyce, to the hurte of the citesyns.

The v. Chapter.

AT ſ same tyme Antiochus made him ready to go againe in to Egipte. Thē were there sene at Ierusalem (xl. dayes lōge) horsmē runnyng to and fro in the ayre, which had rayment of golde, and speares. There were sene also whole hoostes of mē weapened, and horses runnyng in an ordre, how they came together, how they helde forth their shildes, how ſ harnesssed men drew out their swardes, and shot their dartes. The shyne of ſ golde weapēs was sene, and of all maner of armure. Wherefore euery mā prayed, ſ those tokens might turne to good. Now whē there was gone forth a false rumoure, as though Antiochus had bene deed: Iason toke a M. mē, and came sodēly vpō ſ cite. The citesyns rāne vnto ſ walles, at ſ last was ſ cite taken, and Menelaus fled in to the castell.

As for Iason, he spared not his owne citesyns in the slaughter, nether considered he what greate euell it were, to destroye ſ prosperite of his owne kynsmen: but dyd as one that had gotten the victory of his enemies, and not of his frendes. For all this gatt he not the superiorite, but at the last receaued confucion for his malice, and "fled agayne like a vagabunde in to the londe of the Ammonites. Fynally (for a rewarde of his wickednesse) he was accused before Aretha the kynge of the Arabians: In so moch that he was fayne to fle from cite to cite, beyng despysed of euery man as a forsaker of the lawes, and an abhominable personne. And at f̄ last (as an open enemy of his owne naturall countre and of the citesyns,) he was dryuen in to Egipte.

Thus he f̄ afore put many out of their owne natyue londe, perished from home him self. He wente to Lacedemon, thinkinge there to haue gotten succoure by reason of kynrede. And he that afore had casten many one out vnburied, was throwen out himself, no man mournynge for him, ner puttinge him in his graue: so that he nether enioyed f̄ buriall of a straunger, nether was he partaker of his fathers sepulchre.

<sup>C</sup> Now when this was done the kinge suspecte, f̄ the Iewes wolde haue fallen from him: wherfore he came in a greate displeasure out of Egipte, & toke the cite by violence. <sup>b</sup> He cōmaunded his men of warre also, that they shulde kyll & not spare, but slaye downe such as with stode them, or clymmed vp vpon f̄ houses. Thus was there a greate slaughter of yonge men, olde men, women, children and virgins. In iij. dayes were there slayne lxxx. M. fourty thousande put in preson, & no lesse solde. Yet was he not cōtent with this, but durst go in to the most holy temple (Menelaus that traytoure to f̄ lawes & to his owne naturall countre, beyng his gyde) & with his wicked hondes toke f̄ holy vessell, which other kynges & cities had geuen thither for f̄ garnishinge & honoure of f̄ place: thē toke he in his hōdes vnworthely, & defyled them.

<sup>B</sup> So madd was Antiochus, that he considered not, how that God was a litle wroth for the synnes of them that dwelt in the cite, for the which soch confucion came vpon that place. And why? "yf it had not happened them to haue bene lapped in many synnes, this Antiochus (as soone as he had come) had sodenly bene punished, and shot out for his presumpciō: "like as Heliodorus was, whom Seleucus the kynge sente to robbe f̄ treasury. Neuertheles God hath not chosn the people for the places sake, but the place for the peoples sake: and therefore is the place become partaker of the peoples trouble, but afterwarde shall it enioye the wealth of them. And like as it is now forsaken in the wrath of allmighty God, so when the greate God is reconcyled, it shal be set vp in hye worshipec agayne.

So when Antiochus had taken a M. and viij. C. talentes out of the temple, he gat him to Antioche in all the haist, thinkinge in his pryde, that he might make mē sale vpon the drye londe, and to go vpon f̄ see, soch an hye mynde had he. He lefte debites there to vexe the people: At Ierusalem left he Philippe a Phrigian, in maners more cruell thē himself f̄ set him there: At Garisim he left Andronicus & Menelaus, which were more greuous to the citisyns then other. Now as he was thus set in malyce against f̄ Iewes, he sent Apollonius an hated prynce, with xxij. M. cōmaundinge him to slaye all those f̄ were of perfecte age, and to sell the womē, maydes & children. When he came now to Ierusalem, he fained peace, & kepte him still vntill f̄ Sabbath daye. And then he cōmaunded his men to take them to their weapens (for f̄ Iewes kepte holy daye) and so he slewe all them f̄ were gone forth to the open playe, runninge here and there thorow the cite with his men wapened, and murdered a greate nombre. <sup>f</sup> But Iudas Machabeus which was the tenth, fled in to the wyldernes, led his life there with his company amonge the wyld beestes and vpon the mountaynes: dwellinge there and eatinge grasse, lest they shulde be partakers of the fylthynesse.

The vi. Chapter.

<sup>A</sup> NOT longe after this, sent the kynge a messanger of Antioche, <sup>e</sup> for to compell f̄ Iewes to alre f̄ ordinaunces of f̄ fathers & the lawe of God, to defyle the temple f̄ was at Ierusalem, & to call it the tēple of Iupiter Olimpius: & f̄ they shulde be in Gazarim, as those which dwell at f̄ place of Iupiter the harberous. This wicked sediciō of f̄ vngodly was heuy vpon all f̄ people: For f̄ temple was full of voluptuousnes bebbinge & bollinge of f̄ Heithē, of ribaudes & harlottes together. The womē wente in to f̄ holy place, & bare in that was not lauffull. The aulter also was full of vnlauffull thinges, which  $\hat{y}$  lawe forbiddeth to laye vpō it. The Sabbathes were not kepte, the other solempne feastes of  $\hat{y}$  londe were not regarded. To be plaine, there durst no mā be a knowne that he was a Iewe.

In the daye of the kynges byrth they were compelled perforce to offre:  $\tau$  when  $\hat{y}$  feast of Bachus was kepte, they were cōstrayned to weere garlandes of yven, and so to go aboute for the honoure of Bachus.

B Morouer thorow the counsell of Ptolomy, there wente out a commaundement in  $\hat{y}$  nexte cities of the Heithen,  $\hat{y}$  they shulde intreate the Iewes in like maner: namely, to cōpell thē for to do sacrifice after  $\hat{y}$  lawes of  $\hat{y}$  Gentiles: and who so wolde not, to put them to death. "A piteous thinge was it to se. There were ij. women accused to haue circuncided their sonnes, whom when they had led rounde aboute the cite (the babes hanginge at their brestes) they cast them downe headlinges ouer the walles. Some  $\hat{y}$  were crepte in to dennes and had kepte the Sabbath, were accused vnto Philippe, and brent in the fyre: because that for the feare of God they kepte the commaūdement so stiffly, and wolde not defende them selues.

C Now I beseke all those which reade this boke, that they refuse it not for these falles of aduersite:  $\tau$  iudge the thinges ( $\hat{y}$  are happened) for no destruccion, but for a chastenyng of oure people. And why? Whē God suffreth not synners longe to folowe their owne mynde, "but shortly punysheth them, it is a tokē of his greate louynge kyndnes. For this grace haue we of God more then other people,  $\hat{y}$  he suffreth not vs longe to synne vnpunished like other nations, that when the daye of iudgment commeth, he maye punysh thē in the fulnes of their synnes. Yf we synne, he correcteth vs, but he neuer withdraweth his mercy frō vs:  $\tau$  though he punysh with aduersite, yeth doth he neuer forsake his people. But let this that we haue spokē now with few wordes, be for a warninge  $\tau$  exortaciō of  $\hat{y}$  Heithē. Now wil we come to the declaringe of the matter. Eleazar one of  $\hat{y}$  principall scribes, an aged mā  $\tau$  of a well-fauored cōtēnaūce, was cōstrained to gape with opē mouth  $\tau$  to eate swynes flesh.<sup>c</sup> But he desyringe rather to dye gloriously thē to liue with shame, offred himselfe willingly to  $\hat{y}$  martirdome. Now whē he sawe  $\hat{y}$  he must nedes go to it, he toke it paciētly: for he was at a poynte with himself,  $\hat{y}$  he wolde consente to no vnlauffull thyng for eny pleasure of life. They  $\hat{y}$  stode by beyng moued with pyte (but not a right) for  $\hat{y}$  olde frendshipe of the man, toke him asyde priuely, and prayed him  $\hat{y}$  he wolde let soch flesh be brought him as were lauffull to eate,  $\tau$  thē to make a cōtēnaūce as though he had eaten of  $\hat{y}$  flesh of  $\hat{y}$  sacrifice like as the kynge commaūded, for so he might be deluyered from death:  $\tau$  so for the olde frendshipe of  $\hat{y}$  man, they shewed him this kindnes. But he beganne to considre his discrete and honorable age, his noble and worshipfull stocke, and how  $\hat{y}$  frō his youth vp he had bene of an honest and good conuersacion, yee  $\tau$  how constantly he had kepte  $\hat{y}$  ordinaunces and lawes commaūded by God, wherfore he gaue them this answer, and sayde:

Yet had I rather first be layed in my graue. "For it becommeth not myne age (sayde he) in eny wyse to dyssemble, wherby many yonge personnes might thinke, that Eleazar beinge lxxx. yeare olde and ten, were now gone to a straunge life: and so thorow myne yporisy (for a litle tyme of a transitory life) they might be disceaue: by this meanes also shulde I defyle myne age,  $\tau$  make it abhominable. For though I were now deluyered from the tormentes of men, yet shulde I not escape the "honde of allmightie God, nether alyue ner dead. Wherfore I will dye manfully,  $\tau$  do as it becommeth myne age: Wherby I maie peraduenture leaue an exāple of stedfastnesse for soch as be yonge, yf I with a ready mynde  $\tau$  manfully dye an honest death, for the most worthy and holy lawes.

When he had sayde these wordes, immediately he was drawn to the tormētē. Now they that led him and were mylde a litle afore, beganne to take displeasure, because of the wordes  $\hat{y}$  he sayde: for they thought he had spokē them of an hye mynde. But whē he was in his martirdome, he mourned and sayde: Thou (O LORDE) which hast the holy knowlege, knowest openly: that where as I might be deluyered frō death, I suffre these sore paynes of my body: but in my mynde I am wel contente to suffre them, because I feare the. Thus this man dyed, leauynge  $\text{f}$  memoriall of his death for an example, not only vnto yonge men, but vnto all  $\text{f}$  people, to be stedfast and manly.

The vij. Chapter.

IT happened also that there were vij. brethren (with their mother) taken, & compelled by the kynge agaynst the lawe, to eate swynes flesh: namely with scourges and lethren whippes. And one of them which was  $\text{f}$  chefe, sayde: What sekest thou, and what requyrest thou of vs? As for vs, we are ready rather to suffre death, then to offende the lawes of God and the fathers. Then was the kynge angrie, and had heate cauldrons and brasen pottes. Which when they were made hote, immediatly he commaunded  $\text{f}$  tonge of him that spake first, to be cut out, to pull the skynne ouer his heade, to payre of the edges of his handes and fete: yee and that in the sight of his mother and the other of his brethren. Now when he was cleane marred, he commaunded a fyre to be made, & so (whyle there was eny breath in him) to be fryed in the caudron. In the which when he had bene longe payned, the other brethren with their mother exhorted him to dye manfully, saye: The LORDE God shal regarde the treuth, and comforte vs, like as Moses testifieth and declareth in his  $\text{f}$  songe, sayenge: and he wyl haue compassion on his seruantes.

B So whē the first was deed after this maner, they brought the seconde to haue him in derision, pulled the skynne with the hayre ouer his heade, and axed him, yf he wolde eate swynes flesh, or he were payned in  $\text{f}$  other membres also thorow out his body. But he answered boldly, and sayde: I will not do it. And so was he tormented like as  $\text{f}$  first. And whē he was euē at  $\text{f}$  geuynge vp of  $\text{f}$  goost, he sayde: Thou most vngacious personne puttest vs now to death, but the kynge of  $\text{f}$  worlde shall rayse vs vp (which dye for his lawes) in  $\text{f}$  resurreccion of euerlastinge life.

After him, was the thirde had in derision: and when he was required, he putt out his tonge, and that right soone, holdinge forth his hondes manfully, and spake with a stedfast faith: These haue I of heauē, but now for the lawe of God I despyse them: for my trust is, that I shall receaue them of him agayne. In so much that the kynge and they which were with him, marueled at the yonge mans boldnesse, that he nothinge regarded the paynes.

Now when he was deed also, they vexed the fourth with tormentes in like maner. So when he was now at his death, he sayde: It is better that we beyng put to death of mē, haue oure hope and trust in God, for he shal rayse vs vp agayne.  $\text{c}$  As for the, thou shalt haue no resurreccion to life.

And when they had spoken to the fifth, they tormētēd him. Then lokēd he vnto  $\text{f}$  kinge, & sayde: Thou hast power amōge mē (for thou art a mortall man also thy self) to do what thou wilt, but thinke not,  $\text{f}$  God hath forsaken oure generacion. Abyde the, tary styll a whyle, & thou shalt se the greate power of God, how he wil punysh the & thy sede.

After him they brought the sixte, which beyng at the poynte of death, sayde: Be not disceaue (o kynge) for this we suffre for oure owne sakes, because we haue offended oure God, & therfore marvelous thinges are shewed vpon vs. But thinke not thou (which takest in honde to stryue agaynst God) that thou shalt escape vnpunished.

This excellent mother (worthy to be well reported of, and had in remembraunce) sawe hir seuen sonnes dye in one daye, and suffred it paciētly, because of the hope that she had in God: Yee she exhorted euery one of them in especiall, and that boldly and stedfastly, with parfite wysdome, wakyng vp hir wuysh thought with a manly stonacke, and sayde vnto them: I can not tell how ye came in my wombe, for I nether gaue you breth ner soule, no ner life. It is not I  $\text{f}$  ioyned  $\text{f}$  mēbres of youre bodies together, but  $\text{f}$  maker of  $\text{f}$  worlde, which fashioned  $\text{f}$  byrth of mā, & begāne all thinges. Euen he also of his owne mercy shall geue you breath and life agayne, like as ye now regarde not youre owne selues for his lawes sake.

Now thought Antiochus that she had despyed him, therefore he let her go with hir reproues, and beganne to exorte the yongest sonne (which yet was left) not only with wordes but swore vnto him with an ooth, <sup>y</sup> he shulde make him a rich & welthy man (yf he wolde forsake <sup>y</sup> lawes of his fathers) yee and <sup>y</sup> he shulde geue him, what so euer were necessary E for him. But whē the yonge man wolde not be moued, for all these thinges, he called his mother, & counceled hir to saue hir sonnes life. And when he had exorted her with many wordes, she promised him, that she shulde speake vnto hir sonne. So she turned her vnto him (laughinge <sup>y</sup> cruell tyraunte to scorne) & spake with a bolde voyce: O my sonne, haue pite vpon me, <sup>y</sup> bare <sup>y</sup> ix. monethes in my wombe, that gaue the sucke, norished the and brought the vp vnto this age. I beseke the (my sonne) loke vpon heauen and earth and all that is therein, and conside, that God made them and mans generacion of naught: so shalt thou not feare this hangman, but suffre death stedfastly, like as thy brethren haue done: that I maye receaue the agayne in the same mercy with thy brethren.

$\text{b}$  Deut. 32. c.

Whyلة she was yet speakynge these wordes, the yonge man sayde: Whom loke ye for? Wherefore do ye tary? I wil not obeye the kynges commaundement, but the lawe that God gaue vs by <sup>a</sup>Moses. As for the that ymaginest all myschefe agaynst the Iewes, thou shalt not escape the honde of God: for we suffre these thinges, because of oure synnes.

F And though God be angrie with vs a litle while (for oure chasteninge & reformacion,) yet shal he be at one agayne with his seruantes. But thou. (O shame full & most abhominable personne.) Pryde not thy self thorow vayne hope, in beyng so malicious vpon <sup>y</sup> seruantes of God: for thou hast not yet escaped the iudgmēt of the God, which is all mighty, & seyth all thinges. My brethren <sup>y</sup> haue suffred a litle payne, are now vnder the couenaunt of euerlastinge life: but thorow the iudgment of God, thou shalt be punyshed righteously for thy pryde.

As for me (like as my brethrē haue done) I offere my soule & my body for <sup>y</sup> lawes of oure fathers, callinge vpon God, <sup>y</sup> he will soone be mercifull vnto oure people: yee & with payne & punyshment to make the graunte,<sup>b</sup> <sup>y</sup> he only is God. In me now & in my brethrē <sup>y</sup> wrath of allmighty God is at an ende, which righteously is fallē vpon all oure people. Then <sup>y</sup> kyng beyng kyndled in anger, was more cruell vpon him then vpon all <sup>y</sup> other, & toke indignaciō, <sup>y</sup> he was so lightly regarded. So this yonge mā dyed vndeified, & put his trust stil in <sup>y</sup> LORDE. Last of all after <sup>y</sup> sonnes, was <sup>y</sup> mother put to death also. Let this now be ynough spoken, concernynge <sup>y</sup> of-frynges, & extreme cruelnesse.

The viij. Chapter.

THEN Iudas Machabeus and they <sup>y</sup> were A with him, wēt pryuely in to <sup>y</sup> townes, called their kinsfolkes & frendes together, toke vnto them all such as contynued yet in the faith and lawe of <sup>y</sup> Iewes, and brought forth vj. M. men. So they called vpon the LORDE, <sup>y</sup> he wolde haue an eye vnto his people, which was troddē downe of euery mā: to be gracious vnto <sup>y</sup> tēple, <sup>y</sup> was defyled of the vngodly: to haue cōpassion vpon <sup>y</sup> destruction of the cite, (which was shortly like to be laied waist) to heare <sup>y</sup> voyce of <sup>y</sup> bloude <sup>y</sup> cried vnto him: to remēbre <sup>y</sup> most vnrighteous deathes of yonge innocent children, the blasphemies also done vnto his name, & to punysh thē. Now whē Machabeus had gathered this multitude together, he was to mightie for the Heithen (for <sup>y</sup> wrath of <sup>y</sup> LORDE was turned in to mercy) he fell vpon the townes and cities vnawarres, brent them, toke the most cōmodious places, & slewe many of the enemies. But specially he made soch chases by night, in so moch that his manlynesse was spoken of euery were.

B So when Philippe sawe that the man increased by litle and litle, and that the matter prospered with him for the most parte: he wrote vnto Ptolomy (which was a captayne in Celosiria & Phenices) to helpe him in <sup>y</sup> kynges busynes. Thē sent he Nicanor Patrocli (a speciaall frende of his) in all <sup>y</sup> haist,<sup>c</sup> & gaue him of <sup>y</sup> comon sorte of the Heithen no lesse than xx. M. harnessed men, to rote out <sup>y</sup> whole generacion of the Iewes, hauinge to helpe him one Gorgias a man of warre, which in matters concernynge battayls had greute experience. Nicanor ordered also the tribute (which the Romaynes shulde haue had) to be geuen vnto the kyng, out of the captiuyte of the Iewes, namely, ij. M. talentes. And immediately he sent to <sup>y</sup> cities of <sup>y</sup> see coast, requyringe thē for to bye Iewes to be their seruauntes & bonde men, promisyng to sell them lxxx. and ten for one talente: but he considered not the wrath of allmighty God, y was to come vpon him.

¶ When Iudas knewe of this, he tolde the Iewes y were with him, of Nicanors cōmyng. Now were there some of them fearfull, not trustinge vnto the rightousnes of God and fled their waye. But the other y remayned, came together & besought the LORDE, to delyuer thē frō y wicked Nicanor, which had solde thē or euer he came nye them: and though he wolde not do it for their sakes, yet for the couenaunt that he made with their fathers, & because they called vpon his holy & glorious name. "And so Machabeus called his men together, namely aboute vi. M. exorting them not to agree vnto their enemies, nether to be afrayed for y multitude<sup>b</sup> of their aduersaries cōmyng agaynst them vnrighteously: but to fight manly, consideringe y reprove that they had done to the holy place without cause, how they had despyed and oppressed the cite, yee and destroyed y lawes of the fathers. For they (sayde he) "trust in their weapons and boldnesse, but oure confidence is in the allmighty LORDE, which in the twinkle of an eye maye both destroye them that come agaynst vs, and all the worlde.

¶ He exorted them also to call to remēbraūce the helpe, that God shewed vnto their fathers: <sup>a</sup>as whē there perished an C. lxxxv. M. of Sennacheribs people: And of y battaill y they had in Babilō agaynst y Galacians: how y all the Macedonias y came to helpe thē, stode in feare; & how they beyng but only vj. M. slewe an C. & xx. M. thorow y helpe y was geuen them from heauen, wherby they also had receaued many benefites.

Thorow these wordes y mē toke good hertes vnto thē, ready to dye for the lawe & the cōtre. So he set vpon euery cōpany a captayne, one of his owne brethren: Simon, Ioseph and Ionathas: geuyng ech one xv. C. men. He caused Eszdras also to reade the holy boke vnto them, and to geue them a token of the helpe of God.

Then he himself beinge captaine in y fore front of the battayll,<sup>c</sup> buckled with Nicanor.

And God was there helpe, in so moch that they slewe aboute ix. M. mē & compelled y more parte of Nicanors hoost to fle, they were so wounded and feable. Thus they toke the money from those that came to bye thē, and folowed vpon them on euery syde. But whē the tyme came vpon them, they returned, for it was the Sabbath, and therfore they folowed nomore vpon them. So they toke their weapons and spoyles & kepte the Sabbath, geuyng thanks vnto the LORDE, which had delyuered them that daye, and shewed them his mercy. After the Sabbath they distributed the spoyles to the sicke,<sup>d</sup> to y fatherlesse, and to wyddowes, and the residue had they them selues with theirs. Whē this was done, and they all had made a generall prayer: they besought the mercifull LORDE to be at one with his seruauntes.

Of those also that were with Timotheus and Bachides, which fought agaynst them, they slewe xx. M. wanne hye and stronge holdes, and deuided moo spoyles: euer geuyng an equall porcion vnto y sicke, to y fatherles, to wyddowes & to aged persons. And when they had diligently gathered their weapēs together, they layed them all in conuenient places, & the remnaunt of y spoyles brought they to Ierusalem. They slewe Philarches that wicked personne, which was with Timotheus, and had vexed many Iewes. And when they helde the thankesgeuyng to Ierusalem for the victory, they brent those that had set fyre on the portes of the temple: namely Calisthenes, which was fled in to an house: and so they gat a worthy rewarde for their wickednesse. As for that most vngracious Nicanor, which had brought a thousande marchaūtes, to bye the Iewes, he was thorow y helpe of the LORDE brought downe, euen of them whom he regarded not: in so moch that he put of his glorious raymēt, fled by see, and came alone to Antioche with greate shame & dishonoure, which he gat thorow the destruccion of his hoost. Thus he y promysed the Romaynes to paye thē their tribute, when he toke Ierusalem: beganne now to saye planely, that God was y defender of the Iewes, & therfore not possible to wounde them, because they folowed y lawes which God had made.

The ij. Chapter.

AT the same tyme came Antiochus agayne with <sup>d</sup> dishonoure out of Persis. For when he came to Persepolis, and vndertoke to robbe the temple and to subdue the cite, the people ranne together and defended them selues, in so moch <sup>y</sup> he and his were fayne to fle with shane. And so after that flight, it happened, that Antiochus came agayne with dishonoure. But when he came to Eg bathana, he gat knowlege what was happened vnto Nicanor <sup>t</sup> Timotheus. Now as he was auauncing himself in his wrath, he thought he was able to auenge the iniury that was done to them, vpon the Iewes: and therefore commaunded to make ready his charet, haistinge on his journey without ceassing: the iudgmēt of God prouokynge him, because he had spokē so proudly, that he wolde come to Ierusalem, and make it a graue of the Iewes. But the LORDE God of Israel,<sup>b</sup> that seith all thinges, smote him with an invisible plage, which no man coude heale.

B For as soone as he had spoken these wordes, there came vpon him an horrible payne of his bowels, <sup>t</sup> a sore grefe of the tharmes. And <sup>y</sup> was but right: for he had martired other mens bowels with dyuerse and straunge tormentes, how be it he wolde in no wyse ceasse from his malice. Yee he was yet the prouder, and more malicious agaynst the Iewes: But whyle he was commaunding to make haist in the matter, it happened <sup>y</sup> he fell downe violently from the charet, so <sup>y</sup> it brussed his body, <sup>t</sup> dyd him greate payne.

And so he that thought he might commaunde <sup>y</sup> floudes of the see (so proude was he beyonde the condiciō of man) and to weye the hye mountaynes in a payre of scoales, was now brought downe to the grounde, <sup>t</sup> caried vpon an horszlytter, knowlegynge <sup>y</sup> manyfest power of God vpon him: so that <sup>y</sup> wicked body of his<sup>c</sup> was full of wormes, which in his payne fell quyeck out of his flesh: In so moch <sup>y</sup> his hoost was greued with the smell and styncke of him. Thus he that a litle afore thought he might reach to the starres of heauen, him might no man now abyde ner beare, for the vehemence of styncke.

lege of him self: for the punyshment of God warned him, <sup>t</sup> his payne increased euer more <sup>t</sup> more. And when he him self might not abyde his owne styncke, he sayde these wordes: It is reason to be obedient vnto God, <sup>t</sup> that a man desyre not to be like vnto him. This wicked personne prayed also vnto the LORDE, of whom he shulde haue obtained no mercy. And as for the cite that he came vnto so haistely, to brynge it downe to the grounde, <sup>t</sup> to make it a graue for deed men: now he desyreth to delyuer it fre. And as touchinge <sup>y</sup> Iewes, whom he had iudged not worthy to be buried, but wolde haue cast thē out for to be deuoured of the foules and wylde beastes, sayenge, that he wolde haue destroyed both olde and yonge: Now he promiset, to make thē like <sup>y</sup> citesyns of Athens. And where as he had spoyled the holy temple afore, now he maketh promyse to garnish it with greate giftes, to increase the holy ornāmes, and of his owne rentes to beare the costes and charges belonging to the offeringes: yee and that he wolde also become a Iewe him self, to go thorow euery place of the worlde, and to preach the power of God.

But when his paynes wolde not cease, (for D the righteous iudgmēt of God was come vpon him) out of a very despayre he wrote vnto the Iewes a lettre of intercession, cōteynninge these wordes: The kynge and pryncce Antiochus wyssheth vnto the vertuous citesyns of the Iewes, moch health and good prosperite.

Yf ye and youre children fare well, and yf all thinges go after youre mynde: we geue greate thanks. In my sicknesse also do I remembre you louyngly: for as I came out of Persia, and was taken with sore disease: I thought it necessary to care for the comon wealth. Nether despare I in my self, but haue a good hope to escape this sicknes.

But considerynge that my father led an hoost some tyme in <sup>y</sup> hyer places, <sup>t</sup> shewed who shulde raigne after him, that (yf there happened eny cōtrouersy, or eny harde thinge were declared,) they in the londe might knowe their chefe lorde, <sup>y</sup> there shulde be no insurreccion: Agayne, when I pondre by my self, how that all <sup>y</sup> mightie men and neighbours rounde aboute, are layēge waite, and loke but for oportunitie to do harme: I haue ordered that my sonne Antiochus shall raigne E

after me, whom I oft commended to many of you, when I was in the hyer kyngdomes, and haue wrytten vnto him as it foloweth hereafter. Therefore I praye you and requyre you, to remembre the benefites that I haue done vnto you generally and in especiall. For I hope that he shall be of sober & louynge behauioure, and yf he folowe my deuyce, he shal be indifferent vnto you.

"Thus that murthurer and blasphemor of God was sore smyttē: and like as he had intreated other men, so he dyed a miserable death in a straunge countre vpon a mountayne. And his body dyd Philippe (that wete with him) cary awaye: which fearynge the sonne of Antiochus, wente in to Egyp̄te to Ptolomy Philometor.

The r. Chapter.

MACHABEUS now & his company<sup>b</sup> (thorow the helpe of the LORDE) wanne the temple and the cite agayne, destroyed the aulters and chapels that the Heithē had buylded thorow the stretes:<sup>c</sup> clensed the temple, made another aulter of bricke stone, and after ij. yeaeres they offered sacrifices, set forth the incense, the lightes and shewe bred. When that was done, they fell downe flat vpon the grounde, and besought the LORDE, that they might come nomore in to soch trouble: but yf they synned eny more agaynst him, he him self to chasten them with mercy, and not to come in the bondes of those aleauntes and blasphemous men.

Now vpon the same daye that ſy straungers poluted the temple, it happened that on the very same daye it was clensed agayne:<sup>d</sup> namely, the xxij. daye of the moneth called Casleu. They kepte viij. dayes in gladnesse, like as in the feast of the tabernacles: remembreynge that not longe afore, they helde the feast of ſy tabernacles vpon the mountaynes and in dennes like beastes. And to ſy same token they bare grene bowes, branches and palmes before him that had geuen them good fortune to clense his place. They agreed also together, and made a statute, ſy euery yeaere those dayes shulde be solelymp kepte of all the people of the Iewes.

How Antiochus then (that was called the noble) dyed, it is sufficiently tolde. Now wil we speake of Nicanor the sonne of that wicked Antiochus, how it happened with him: and so with few wordes to comprehend the aduersite that chaused in ſy warres. When he had taken in the kyngdome, he made one Lysias (which had bene captayne of the hoost in Phenices and Syria) ruler ouer the matters of the realme. For Ptolomy that was called Macron, beyng a ruler for the Iewes (and specially, to syt in iudgment for soch wronge as was done vnto them) vndertoke to deale peaceably with them. For the which cause he was accused of the frendes before Eupator: and when he was suspecte to be a traytoure (because he had left Cypers, that Philometor had committed vnto him: and because he departed from noble Antiochus, that he was come vnto) he poisoned himself, and dyed.

Now when Gorgias was gouernoure of the same places, he toke straungers and vndertoke oft tymes to warre with ſy Iewes. Morouer the Idumeans that helde the strōge holdes, receaued those that were dryuen from Ierusalem, and toke in honde to warre also. But they that were with Machabeus, besought and prayed vnto the LORDE,<sup>e</sup> that he wolde be their helper: and so they fell in to the stronge holdes of the Idumeans, & wanne many places by strength: Soch as came agaynst them they slew, and kylld no lesse (of all together) then twentye thousande. Neuerthelesse some (no lesse then nynce thousande) were fled in to two stronge towres, hauynge all maner of ordinaunce to withstonde them.

Then Machabeus leauynge Symon, Iosephus, Zachaus and those that were with them, (which were very many) wente to besege thē, and to fight where most node was. Now they that were with Symon beyng led with couetousnesse, were intreated for money, throw certayne of those that laye in the towers: toke lxx. M. drachmas, & let some of them escape. But when it was tolde Machabeus what had happened, he called ſy captaynes of the people together, accusynge those persones, that they had solde the brethren for money, and let their enemies go. So he slew those traytours, & immediatly wente in honde with the ij. towers. And when they had ordred them selues manly with their weapons & hondes, they slew in ſy two castels moo thē twētie thousande.

Now Timotheus whom the Iewes had ouercome afore, gathered a multitude of straunge people, brought an hoost also of horsmen of the Asians, to wyne Iewry by strength. But when he drewe nye, Machabeus and they that were with him fell to their prayer,<sup>6</sup> sprenched aszshes vpon their heades, beyng gyrded with hayrie cloth aboute their loines, fel downe before  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  aulter,  $\text{\textcircled{t}}$  besought the LORDE that he wolde be mercifull to them, but an enemie vnto their enemies, and to take parte agaynst their aduersaries, accordinge as it is promised in the lawe. So after the prayer,<sup>6</sup> they wente on further from the cite: and when they came nye the enemies, they prepared them selues agaynst them.

And by tymes in the mornynge at  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  breake of the daye, both the hoostes buckled together. The one parte had the LORDE for their refuge,<sup>4</sup> which is the geuer of prosperite, strength and victory. The other had a maly stomack, which is a captayne of warre.

The battayll now beyng greate, there appeared vnto the enemies from heauen v. men, vpon horszback with brydels of golde, ledinge the Iewes, and two of them hauynge Machabeus betwixte them,  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  kepte him safe on euery syde with their weapōs, but shot dartes and lighteninges vpon the enemies, where thorow they were confounded with blyndnesse and so sore afrayed, that they fell downe. There were slayne of fote men twenty thousande and fyue hundreth, and sixe hūdreth horsmen. As for Timotheus him self, he fled vnto Gazar a very strōge holde, wherin Cereas was captayne. But Machabeus and his company layed sege to it cherfully iij. dayes. Now they that were within, trustinge to the strength of the place, cursed  $\text{\textcircled{t}}$  banned exceedingly, and made greate crakyng with wicked wordes. Neuerthelesse vpon the fifth daye in the mornynge, xx. yonge men of Machabeus cōpany, beyng set on fyre in their myndes because of the blasphemy: came manfully vnto the wall, and with bolde stomackes they and their other companions clymmed vp vpon the towres, vndertakyng to set fyre vpon the portes,  $\text{\textcircled{t}}$  to burne those blasphemous personnes quyeke. Two dayes were they destroyenge the castell, which when they founde Timotheus (that was crepte in to a corner) they kylled him, and slewe Cereas his brother in like maner with Appollophanes. When this was done, they sunge Psalmes, with prayes and thankesgeuynge vnto the LORDE, which had done so greate thinges for Israel,  $\text{\textcircled{t}}$  geuen them the victory.

The xi. Chapter.

NOT longe after this, Lysias the kynges steward and a kynsman of his, (which had the gouernaunce of his matters,) toke sore displeasure for the thinges that had hapened: and when he had gathered lxxx. M. men of fote with all the hoost of the horsmen, he came agaynst the Iewes, thinkynge to wyne the cite, to make it an habitation for the Heithen, and the temple wolde he haue to be an house of lucre, like as the other goddes houses of the Heithē are,  $\text{\textcircled{t}}$  to sell  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  prestes office euery yere: Not consideringe the power of God, but was wyld in his mynde, trustinge in  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  multitude of fote mē, <sup>5</sup> in thousandes of horsmē, and in his lxxx. Elephantes.

So he came in to Iewry  $\text{\textcircled{t}}$  then to Bethsura (a castell of defence lyenge in a narrow place, v. furlonges from Ierusalē) and wanne it. Now when Machabeus and his company knew that the stronge holdes were taken, they fell to their prayers<sup>4</sup> with wepyng and teares before the LORDE: and all the people in like maner besought him, that he wolde sende a good angell to delyuer Israel. Machabeus him self was the first that made him ready to the battayll, exortynge the other that were with him, to ioperde themselues and to helpe their brethrē. And when they were goyenge forth of Ierusalem together with a ready and wyllynge mynde, there appeared before thē vpon horszbacke a mā in whyte clothinge with harnesse of golde, shakinge his speare. Then they prayed  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  LORDE all together, which had shewed them mercy, and were comforted in their myndes: in so moch that they were ready, not only to fight with men, but with  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  most cruell beestes, yee and to runne thorow walles of yron.

Thus they wente on wyllingly hauynge an helper from heauē, and the LORDE mercifull vnto them. They fell mightly vpon their enemies like lyons, brought downe xj. M. fote men, xvj. C. horsmen, put all ſ̄ other to flight, many of them beyng wounded, and some gat away naked. Yee Lysias himſelf was fayne to fle ſhamefully, and ſo to eſcape. Neuertheſſe the man was not without vnderſtondinge, but conſidered by himſelf that his power was myniſhed, and pondred how ſ̄ Iewes beyng defended by the helpe of Almighty God, were not able to be ouercome: wherefore he ſent them worde, and promiſed, that he wolde conſente to all thinges which were reaſonable, and to make the kynge their fr̄de. To the which prayer of Lysias Machabeus agreed, ſekynge in all thinges the comon wealthe: and what ſo euer Machabeus wrote vnto Lysias cōcernynge the Iewes, the kynge graunted it. For there were lettres writtē vnto ſ̄ Iewes from Lysias conteynynge theſe wordes:

D Lysias ſendeth gretinge to the people of the Iewes. Ihon and Abſalon which were ſent from you, delyuered me wrytynge, and requyred me to fulfill the thinges concernynge their earande. Therefore loke what might be graunted, I certified ſ̄ kynge therof: and what ſo euer was conuenient, I agreed therto. Yf ye now will be faithfull in the matters, I ſhal endeuer my ſelf hereafter alſo to do you good. As concernynge other thinges by euery article therof: I haue committed them to youre meſſaungers, and to thoſe whom I ſent vnto you, to comon with you of the ſame, fare ye well. In the hūdreth and xlviij. yeare, the xxiiij. daye of the moneth Dioſcorinthius.

Now the kynges lettre conteyned theſe wordes: Kyng Antiochus ſendeth gretinge vnto his brother Lysias. "For ſo moch as oure father is now deed, oure wyll is, that they which are in oure realme, lyue without eny inſurreccion, and euery man to be diligent in his owne matters. We vnderſtonde alſo, that the Iewes wolde not conſent to oure father, for to be brought vnto the cuſtome of the Gentiles, but ſtiffly to kepe their owne ſtatutes: for the which cauſe they requyre of vs alſo, to let them remayne ſtill by their owne lawes.

E Wherefore oure minde is, that this people ſhalbe in reſt: we haue concluded and determined alſo, to reſtore them their temple agayne: that they maye lyue acordinge to the uſe & cuſtome of their forefathers. Thou ſhalt do vs a pleaſure therefore, yf thou ſende vnto them & agre with them: that when they are certified of oure mynde, they maye be of good chere, and loke to their owne wealthe.

And this was the lettre, that the kynge wrote vnto the Iewes: Kyng Antiochus ſendeth gretinge vnto the counsell and the other people of the Iewes. Yf ye fare well, we haue oure deſyre: as for vs, we are in good health. Menelaus came and tolde vs, how ſ̄ youre deſyre was to come downe to youre people, which are with vs.

Wherefore thoſe that wyll come, we geue them fre lyberte, vnto the xxx. daye of the moneth of Aprill, that they maye vſe ſ̄ meates f of the Iewes and their owne lawes, like as afore: and none of them by eny maner of wayes to haue harme, for thinges done in ignorance. Menelaus whom we haue ſent vnto you, ſhal comon with you at large, fare ye well. In the Cxlvij. yeare, the xv. daye of the moneth of Aprill.

The Romaynes alſo ſent a lettre, conteynynge theſe wordes: Quintus Mennius & Titus Manilius embassatours of the Romaynes, ſende gretinge vnto the people of the Iewes. Loke what Lysias the kynges kynſman hath graunted you, we graunte you the ſame alſo. But as concernynge the thinges which he referred vnto the kynge, ſende hither ſome with ſpede: and pōdre the matter diligētly amonge youre ſelues, that we maye caſt ſ̄ beſt to youre profite, for we muſt departe now vnto Antioche. And therefore wryte ſhortly agayne, that we maye knowe youre mynde. Fare well. In the hundreth xlviij. yeare, ſ̄ xv. daye of the moneth of Aprill.

The xij. Chapter.

WHEN theſe couenauntes were made, a Lysias wente vnto the kynge, and ſ̄ Iewes tyllid their grounde. But Timotheus, Appollonius the ſonne of Gemei, Ierome and Demophon ſ̄ proude, Nicanor ſ̄ captayne of Cypers, and they that laye in thoſe places: wolde not let them lyue in reſt and peace. They of Ioppa alſo dyd euen ſoch a ſhamefull dede: They prayed ſ̄ Iewes that dwelt amonge them, to go with their wyues and children in to the ſhippes which they had prepared, & dyd with them, as though they had ought them no euell wyll. For ſo moch then as there was gone forth a generall proclamaciō thorow ſ cite because of peace, they consented thereto, and suspecte nothinge: but when they were gone forth in to the depe, they drowned no lesse then ij. C. of them.

Whē Iudas knew of this cruelte shewed vnto his people, he commaunded those that were with him to make them ready, exortinge them to call vpon God the righteous iudge: wētē forth agaynst those murthurers of his brethrē, set fyre in ſ hauen by night, brent vp ſ shippes, and those that escaped from the fyre, he slewe with the swearde. And when he had done this, he departed as though he wolde come agayne, and rote out all them of Ioppa. But when he had gottē worde that the Iammites were mynded to do in like maner vnto ſ Iewes which dwelt amonge them, he came vpon the Iammites by night, and set fyre in the hauen with the shippes: so that the light of the fyre was sene at Ierusalem, vpon a ij. C. ¶ xl. furlonges.

Now when they were gone from thence ix. furlonges, in their iourney towardē Timotheus: v. thousande men of fote and v. hundredh horsmen of the Arabians fought with him. So when the batell was earnest, and prospered with Iudas thorow the helpe of God: ſ residue of the Arabians beyngē ouercome, besought Iudas to be at one with them, and promised to geue him certayne pastures, ¶ to do him good in other thinges. Iudas thynkyngē that they shulde in dede be profitable concernyngē many thynges, promised them peace: whervpon they shoke hondes, and so they departed to their tentes. Iudas wente also vnto a cite, which was very fast kepte with brydges, fensed rounde aboute with walles, ¶ dyuerse kyndes of people dwelling therein, called Caspin.

They that were within it, put soch trust in the strength of the walles, ¶ in their stoare of vytales: that they were the slacker in their doynges, cursinge and reuylinge Iudas with blasphemies, and speakyngē soch wordes as it becommeth not. But Machabeus callyngē vpon the greäte pryncē of ſ worlde (which without eny battayll rammes or ordinance of warre, ¶ dyd cast downe the walles of Iericho, in the tyme of Iosue) fell manfully vpon the walles, toke the cite, and (thorow the helpe of the LORDE) made an exceadinge greäte slaughter: In so moch that a lake of ij. furlōges brode which laye therby, semed to flowe with the bloude of the slayne.

Then departed they from thence vij. C. and L. furlonges, and came to Taraca vnto ſ Iewes that are called Tubiani. But as for Timotheus, they coude not get him there: for (not one matter dispatched,) he was departed from thence, and had lefte certayne men in a very stronge holde. But Dositheus and Sosipater which were captaynes with Machabeus, slewe those ſ Timotheus had lefte in the house of defence, euen x. M. men. And Machabeus prepared him with ſ vj. M. men ſ were aboute him, set them in ordre by companies, and wente forth agaynst Timotheus, which had with him an C. and xx. M. men of fote, ij. M. and v. C. horsmē.

When Timotheus had knowlege of Iudas commynge, he sent the women, children and the other baggage vnto a castell called Carnion. (For it coude not be wonne, ¶ was harde to come vnto, the wayes of the same places were so narow) and when Iudas cōpany came first in sight, the enemies were smytten with feare, thorow the presence of God, which seyth all thinges: In so moch ſ they fleyngē one here, another there, were rather discomfited of their owne people, ¶ wōded with the strokes of their owne swerdes. Iudas also was very earnest in folowingē vpon them and punyshyngē those vngodly, and slewe xxx. M. men of them. Timotheus also himself fell in to the hondes of Dositheus ¶ Sosipater, whom he besought with many prayers, to let him go with his life: because he had many of the Iewes fathers and brethren in preson, which (yf they put him to death) might be disapoynted. So when he had promised faithfully to delyuer them agayne acordingē to the condicion made, they let him go without harme, for the health of ſ brethren. And when Iudas had slayne xxv. M, he wente from Carnion.

Now after ſ he had chased awaye and slayne his enemies, he remoued the hoost towardē Ephron a strōge cite, ¶ wherein dwelt many dyuerse people of the Heithen, and ſ stronge yonge men kepte the walles, defendingē thē mightely. In this cite was moch ordinance, and prouysion of dartes. ¶ But when Iudas and his company had called vpon Allmighty

God, (which with his power breaketh the strength of the enemies) they wanne the cite, and slew xxv. M. of them  $\hat{y}$  were within. From thence wente they to the cite of the Scythians, which lieth vj. C. furlonges from Ierusalem. But when  $\hat{y}$  Iewes which were in the cite testified, that the citesyns deale louyngly with them, yee and intreated them kyndly in  $\hat{y}$  tyme of their aduersite, Iudas and his company gaue them thanks, desyringe them to be frendly still vnto them: "and so they came to Ierusalem the hye feast of the wekes beyng at honde. And after the feast they wete forth agaynst Gorgias the gouernoure of Idumea, with iij. M. men of fote and iiij. C. horsmē. Which when they met together, it chaused a few of the Iewes to be slayne.

$\text{¶}$  And Dositheus one of the Bachenors a mighty horsmā toke holde of Gorgias, and wolde haue takē him quye. But an horsmā of Thracia fell vpon him, and smote of his arme, so that Gorgias escaped and fled in to Moresa. When they now that were of Gorgias syde, had foughtē longe and were weery: Iudas called vpon the LORDE that he wolde be their helper,  $\text{¶}$  captayne of the felde: and with that, he beganne with a manly voyce to take vp a songe of prayse, and a crie: In so moch that he made the enemies afraied, and Gorgias men of warre to take their flight. So Iudas gathered his hoost, and came in to  $\hat{y}$  cite of Odolla. And when the seuenth daye came vpon them, they censed them selues (as the custome was)  $\text{¶}$  kepte the Sabbath in the same place. And vpon the daye folowinge, Iudas  $\text{¶}$  his company came to take vp the bodies of them that were slayne, and to bury them in  $\hat{y}$  fathers graues. Now vnder  $\hat{y}$  cotes of certayne Iewes which were slayne, they founde Jewels that they had taken out of the temple and from the Idols of the Ianniters: which thinge is <sup>4</sup>forbydden the Iewes by the lawe. Then euery man sawe  $\hat{y}$  this was the cause, wherfore they were slayne.

$\text{¶}$  And so euery man gaue thanks vnto the LORDE for his righteous iudgmēt, which had opened the thinge that was hyd. They fell downe also vnto their prayers, and besought God, that the fawte which was made, might be put out of remembraunce. Besydes that, Iudas exhorted  $\hat{y}$  people earnestly, to kepe them selues from soch synne: for so moch as they sawe before their eyes,  $\hat{y}$  these men were slayne for the same offence. So he gathered of euery one a certayne, in so moch that he brought together \* two thousande drachmas of syluer, which he sent vnto Ierusalem,  $\hat{y}$  there might a sacrifice be offred for the myszdede. In the which place he dyd well  $\text{¶}$  right: for he had some cōsideracion  $\text{¶}$  pondringe of  $\hat{y}$  life  $\hat{y}$  is after this tyme. For yf he had not thought  $\hat{y}$  they, which were slayne, dyd yet lyue, it had bene superfluous and vayne, to make eny vowe or sacrifice, for thē  $\hat{y}$  were deed. But for so moch as he sawe, that they which dye in the fauoure  $\text{¶}$  beleue of God, are in good rest  $\text{¶}$  ioye, he thought it to be good  $\text{¶}$  honorable for a reconcylinge, to do the same for those which were slayne, that the offence might be forgiven.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IN the Cxlix. yeare gat Iudas knowlege,  $\hat{y}$   $\text{¶}$  Antiochus Eupator was commynge with a greate power in to Iewry,  $\text{¶}$  Lysias the stewarde  $\text{¶}$  ruler of his matters with him: hauynge an C. and x. M. men of fote, v. M. horsmen, xxij. Elephantes, and iij. C. charettes. Menelaus also ioyned him self with them (but with greate disceate)  $\text{¶}$  spake fayre to the kynge, not for eny good of  $\hat{y}$  cōtre, but because he thought to haue bene made some greate man of auctorite. But the kynge of kynges moued Antiochus mynde agaynst this vngodly personne,  $\text{¶}$  Lysias infourmed the kynge, that this Menelaus was the cause of all myschefe: <sup>4</sup> so that  $\hat{y}$  kynge commaunded to take him, and (as  $\hat{y}$  maner of them is) to put him vnto death in the same place.

There was also in the same place a tower of L. cubites hye, heaped with aszshes: but aboue it was so made, that men might loke downe on euery syde. Where in to the kynge commaunded that shamefull person to be cast amonge the aszshes, as one that was cause of all vngraciousnesse. And reason it was,  $\hat{y}$   $\hat{y}$  vnthrift shulde dye soch a death, and not to be buried: for he had done moch myschefe vnto the aluler of God (whose fyre and aszshes were holy) therfore was it right,  $\hat{y}$  he him self also shulde be destroyed with aszshes.

But the kynge was woode in his mynde, & came to shewe him self more cruell vnto the Iewes, then his father was. "Which when Iudas perceaued, he commaunded the people to call vpon the LORDE night and daye: that he wolde now helpe them also, like as he had done allwaye: (For they were afrayed to be put from their lawe, from their naturall countre and from  $\text{f}$  holy temple:) and not to suffre the people (which a litle whyle afore beganne to recouer) to be subdued agayne of  $\text{f}$  blasphemous nacions.

C So when they had done this together, and besought the LORDE for mercy, with wepyng and fastinge thre dayes longe, flat vpon the grounde: Iudas exhorted them, to make them selues ready. But he and the elders together deuysed, to go forth first with their people, afore the kynge brought his hoost in to Iewry, and afore he beseged the cite, & so to committe the matter vnto God. Wherefore he ascrybed the power of all thinges vnto God the maker of  $\text{f}$  worlde, exortinge his people to fight manfully, (yee euen vnto death) for  $\text{f}$  lawes, the temple,  $\text{f}$  cite, their owne natyue countre, & to defende  $\text{f}$  citesyns: & set his hoost before Modin. He gaue them also  $\text{f}$  were with him, a token of  $\text{f}$  victory of God, chosinge out the manlyest yonge men, wente by night in to the kynges payulion, <sup>a</sup>slewe of the hoost xiiij. M. men, and the greatest Elephantes, with those that sat vpon them.

D Thus when they had brought a greate feare & rumoure amonge  $\text{f}$  tentes of their enemies, and all thinges wente prosperously with them, they departed in the breake of  $\text{f}$  daye, God beyng their helper & defender. Now when the kynge perceaued the manlynesse of the Iewes, he wente aboute to take the stronge places by craft, & remoued his hoost vnto <sup>a</sup>Bethsura, which was a wel kepte house of defence of the Iewes: but they were chased away, hurte and discomfited. And Iudas sent vnto them that were in it, such thinges as were necessary. In the Iewes hoost also there was one Rhodocus, which tolde the enemies their secretes: but they sought him out, and when they had gotten him, they put him in preson. After this dyd the kynge comon with them that were in Bethsura, toke truce with them, departed, and stroke a battayll with Iudas, which ouer-came him.

But when he vnderstode, that Philippe (whom he had left to be ouerseer of his busy-nesses at Antioche) beganne to rebell agaynst him, he was astonnied in his mynde: so that he yelded himself to the Iewes, and made them an ooth, to do what so euer they thought right. Now when he was reconcyled with them, he offred, made moch of the temple, gaue greate gyftes vnto it, embraced Machabeus, makinge him captayne and gouernoure from Ptolomais vnto  $\text{f}$  Gerrenes.

Neuertheless when he came to Ptolomais, the people of the cite were not content with that bonde of frendship: for they were afrayed, that he wolde breake the couenaunt. Then wente Lysias vp in to the seate, and enfourmed the people, shewed the cause why, and pacified them. So he came agayne to Antioche. This is now the matter concyngne  $\text{f}$  kynges iourney, and his returne.

The xiiiiij. Chapter.

AFTER thre yeares was Iudas informed, <sup>a</sup> how that Demetrius the sonne of Seleucus was come vp with a greate power and shippes, thorow the hauen of Tripolis (to take certayne commodious places and countrees) agaynst Antiochus and his captayne Lysias. Now Alcimus (which had bene hye prest, and wilfully defyled himself, in the tyme of the myxtinge) seyng, that by no meanes he coude be helped, ner haue eny more inтраunce to the altare: he came to kynge Demetrius in the hundreth and one and fiftie yeare, presentinge vnto him a crowne of golde, a palme and an olyue tre: which (as men thought) belonged to the temple, and that daye he helde his tonge.

But when he had gotten oportunitie for his madnesse, Demetrius called him to couñcell, and axed him, what thinges or counsels the Iewes leaned vnto? He answered: The Iewes that be called Assidei (whose captayne is Iudas Machabeus) maynteyne warres, make insurreccions, and wyl not let the realme be in peace.

For I beyng depryued of my fathers <sup>b</sup>honoure (I meane the hye presthode) am come hither: partly because I was faithfull vnto the kynge, and partly because I sought the profit of the citesyns. And why? all oure people (thorow the wickednesse of them) are not a litle troubled. Wherefore I beseeke the (o kynge) conside all these thinges diligently, and then make some prouysion for the londe and the people, accordinge to the kyndnesse that thou hast offred vnto them. For as longe as Iudas hath the vpper hande, it is not possible that men can lyue in peace.

When he had spoken these wordes, other frendes also haunye euell will at Iudas, set the kynge Demetrius on fyre agaynst him. Which immediatly sent Nicanor (ruler of  $\frac{1}{2}$  elephantes) a captayne, in to Iewry: commaunding him, to take Iudas himself alyue, but to slaye them that were with him, and to make Alcimus hye prest of the temple.

Then the Heithen which fled out of Iewry from Iudas, came to Nicanor by flockes, thinkynge the harme and decaye of the Iewes to be their welfare. Now whē the Iewes herde of Nicanors commynge, & the gatherynge together of  $\frac{1}{2}$  Heithē: they <sup>a</sup>sprēckled them selues with earth, and besought him (which made them his people, and euer defended his owne porcion with euident tokens) that he wolde preserue them still. So at the commaundement of the captayne, they remoued from thence, and came to a towne called Dessasan. And Symon Iudas brother fell in honde with Nicanor, but thorow the sodane commynge of the enemies, he was afraied.

Neuertheles Nicanor hearinge the manlynes of them that were with Iudas, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  bolde stomackes that they had to fight for their naturall countre, durst not proue the matter with bloudsheddinge. Wherefore he sent Possidonius, Theodocius & Mathias before, to geue and to take peace. So when they had taken longe advysement there vpon, and the captayne shewed it vnto the multitude: they were agreed in one mynde, to haue peace. And they appoynted a daye to syt vpon these matters quietly amonge them selues,  $\frac{1}{2}$  stoles also were brought and set forth. Neuerthelesse Iudas cōmaunded certaine men of armes to waite in conueniēt places, lest there shulde sodenly aryse eny euell thorow the enemies. And so they commoned reasonably together.

Nicanor, whyle he abode at Ierusalem, ordred himself not vnreasonably, but sent awaye the people that were gathered together. He loued Iudas euer with his hert, and fauoured him. He prayed him also to take a wyfe, and to brynge forth children. So he married, lyued in rest, and they led a comon life. But Alcimus perceauynge the loue that was betwixte them, and how they were agreed together, came to Demetrius, and tolde him that Nicanor had taken straunge matters in honde, and ordered Iudas (an enemy of the realme) to be the kynges successoure. Then the kinge was sore displeased, and thorow the wicked accusations which Alcimus made of Nicanor, he was so prouoked, that he wrote vnto Nicanor, sayenge: that he was very angrie for the friendship and agrement, which he had made with Machabeus. Neuertheles he commaunded him in all the haist, that he shulde take Machabeus presoner, and sende him to Antioche.

Which lettres when Nicanor had sene, he was at his wittes ende, and sore greued, that he shulde breake the thinges, wherin they had agreed: specially, seyng Machabeus was the man, that neuer dyd him harme. But because he might not withstonde the kynge, he sought oportunitie to fulfil his commaundement. Notwithstondinge when Machabeus sawe that Nicanor beganne to be churlish vnto him, and that he intreated him more roughly then he was wonte, he perceaued that soch vnkyndnes came not of good, and therefore he gathered a few of his men, and withdrewe himself frō Nicanor. Which when he knewe that Machabeus had manfully preuented him, he came in to the greate and most holy temple: and commaunded the prestes (which were doynge their vsuall offeringes) to delyuer him the man. And when they sware that they coude not tell, where the mā was whō he sought, he stretched out his honde, and made an ooth, sayenge: Yf ye wyll not delyuer me Iudas <sup>b</sup>captiue, I shall remoue this temple of God in to the playne felde, I shal breake downe the alter, and consecrate this tēple vnto Bachus. After these wordes he departed.

Then the prestes lift vp their hondes towarde heauen, and besought him that was euer the defender of their people, sayenge:

Thou o LORDE of all, which hast nede of nothinge, woldest that the temple of thy habitation shulde be amonge vs. Therefore now (o most holy LORDE) kepe this house euer vndefyled, which lately was censed. Now was there accused vnto Nicanor, one Razis an Alderman of Ierusalem, a louer of the whole cite, and a man of good reporte: which for the kynde hert that he bare vnto the people, was called a father of y<sup>e</sup> Iewes. This man oft tymes (when the Iewes were mynded to kepe them selues vndefyled) defended and delyuered them, beyng content stedfastly to spende his body and his life for his people.

So Nicanor wyllinge to declare the hate, that he bare to the Iewes, sent fyue hundreth men to take him: for he thought, yf he gat him, he shulde brynge the Iewes in greate decaye. Now when the people beganne to ruszshe in at his house, to breake the dores, and to set fyre on it: he beyng now taken, wolde haue defended himself with his swerde: chosinge rather to dye manfully, then to yelde himselfe to those wicked doers: and because of his noble stocke, he had rather haue bene put to extreme cruelte.

Notwithstandyng what tyme as he myssed of his stroke for haist, and the multitude fell in violently betwixte the dores: he rāne boldly to y<sup>e</sup> wall, & cast himself downe manfully amonge the heape of them, which gaue soone place to his fall, so that he fell vpon his bely. Neuerthelesse whyle there was yet breath within him, he was kyndled in his mynde: and whyle his bloude guszshed out exceedyngly (for he was very sore wounded) he ranne thorow the myddest of y<sup>e</sup> people, and gat him to the toppe of a rocke. So when his bloude was now gone, he toke out his owne bowels with both his hondes, and threw them vpon the people: callinge vpon the LORDE of life and sprete, to rewarde him this agayne, and so he dyed.

The xv. Chapter.

NOW when Nicanor knewe that Iudas was in the countre of <sup>b</sup>Samaria, he thought with all his power to strike a felde with him vpon a Sabbath daye. Neuerthelesse the Iewes that were compelled to go with him, sayde: O do not so cruelly and vnkyndly, but halowe y<sup>e</sup> Sabbath daye, and worshipe him that seyth all thinges. For all this, yet sayed the vngracious personne: 'Is there a mightie one in heauen, that commaunded the Sabbath daye to be kepte? And when they sayde: yee the luyyinge God, the mightie LORDE in heauen commaunded the seuenth daye to be kepte,<sup>d</sup> he sayde: And I am mightie vpon earth, to commaunde them for to arme them selues, and to perfourme the kynges busynesse. Notwithstandyng he might not haue his purpose.

Nicanor had deysed with greate pryde to ouercome Iudas, and to brynge awaye y<sup>e</sup> victory. But Machabeus had euer a fast confidence and a perfecte hope in God that he wolde helpe him, and exorted his people, not to be afraied at the commyng of the Heithen: but allwaye to remembre the helpe that had bene shewed vnto them from heauen, yee and to be sure now also, y<sup>e</sup> Allmightie God wolde geue them the victory. He spake vnto them out of the lawe and prophetes, puttinge them in remembrance of the battayls, that they had striken afore, & made them to be of a good corage.

So when their hartes were plucte vp, he shewed them also the disceatfulness of the Heithen, and how they wolde kepe no couenaunt ner ooth. Thus he weapened the not with the armour of shyld and speare, but with wholsome wordes and exortacions. He shewed them a dreame also, wherthorow he made them all glad, which was this: He thought that he sawe Onias (which had bene hye prest, a vertuous & louyng man, sad, and of honest conuersacion, well spoken, and one that had bene exercised in godlynes fro a childe) holdinge vp his hōdes toward heauen, and prayenge for his people. After this there appeared vnto him another mā, which was aged, honorable and glorious. And Onias sayde: This is a louer of the brethren, and of the people of Israel. This is he that prayeth moch for the people, and for all the holy cite: Jeremy the prophet of God. He thought also y<sup>e</sup> Jeremy helde out his right hōde, and gaue him (namely vnto Iudas) a swerde of golde, sayenge: Take this holy swerde, a gifte from God, wherwith thou shalt smyte downe the enemies of the people of Israel.

And so they were wel confortd thorow the wordes of Iudas, and toke corage vnto the, so that the yonge men were determed in their myndes to fight, & to byde styfly at it: In so moch that in the thinges which they toke in honde, their boldnesse shewed the same, because the holy cite and the temple were in parell: for the which they toke more care, then for their wyues, children, brethre and kynsfolkes. Agayne, they that were in the cite, were most carefull for those which were to fight. Now when they were all in a hope that the iudgment of the matter was at hōde, and the enemies drew nye, the hoost beyng set in araye, the Elephantes and horsmē euery one standinge in his place: Machabeus considered the commynge of the multitude, the ordinaunce of dyuerse weapons, the cruellenesse of the beestes, and helde vp his honde towarde heauen, callinge vpon the LORDE that doth wonders, which geueth not the victory after the multitude of weapons and power of the hoost (but to them that please him) accordinge to his owne will. Therefore in his prayer he sayde these wordes:

O LORDE, thou that diddest sende thine angell in the tyme of Ezechias kynge of Iuda, and in the hoost of Sennacherib slewest an hundreth and fyue and foure score thousande: sende now also thy good angell before vs (o LORDE of heauens) in the fearfulness and drede of thy mightie arme, that they which come agaynst thy holy people to blasphemie them, maye be afrayed. And so he made an ende of his wordes. Then Nicanor and they that were with him, drew nye with shawmes and songes: but Iudas and his company with prayer and callinge vpon God.

With their honde they smote, but with their hertes they prayed vnto the LORDE, and slewe no lesse then xxxv. M. mē: For thorow the present helpe of God they were gloriously comforted.

Now when they left of, and were turninge agayne with ioye, they vnderstode that Nicanor himself was slayne with the other. Then they gaue a greate shoute and a crie, praysinge the allmighty LORDE with a loude voyce. And Iudas (which was euer ready to spende his body and life for his citesyns) commaunded to smyte of Nicanors heade, with his arme and honde, and to be brought to Ierusalem. When he came there, he called all the people, and the prestes at the aulter with those that were in y<sup>e</sup> castell, and shewed them Nicanors heade, and his wicked honde, which he had presumptuously holden vp agaynst the temple of God. He caused y<sup>e</sup> tonge also of that vngodly Nicanor to be cut in litle peces, and to be cast to the foules, and the cruell mans honde to be hanged vp before the temple.

So euery man gaue thanks vnto y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, saienge: blessed be he, that hath kepte his place vndefyled.

As for Nicanors heade, he hanged it vp vpō the hye castell, for an enuydent and playne token of the helpe of God. And so they agreed all together, to kepe that daye holy: namely y<sup>e</sup> xiiij. daye of y<sup>e</sup> moneth Adar, which in y<sup>e</sup> Syriās language is called y<sup>e</sup> nexte daye before Mardocheus daye. Thus was Nicanor slayne, and from that tyme forth the Iewes had the cite in possession: And here wil I now make an ende.

What S. Mathew conteyneth.

Chap. I.

The genealogy of Christ, and mariage of his mother Mary. The angell satisfieth Iosephs mynde.

Chap. II.

The tyme & place of Christes byrth. The wyse men offre their presentes, Christ flyeth in to Egipte, the yonge childern are slayne. Christ turneth in to Galilee.

Chap. III.

The baptyme, preachinge and office of Ihon, and how Christ was baptysed of him in Iordan.

Chap. IIII.

Christ fasteth and is tempted : he calleth Peter, Andrew, Iames and Ihon, & healeth all the sicke.

Chap. V.

In this Chapter and in the two next folowinge is conteyned the most excellēt and louynge Sermon of Christ in the mount : Which sermon is the very keye that openeth the vnderstandinge in to the lawe. In this fift chapter specially he preacheth of the VIII. beatitudes or blessings, of manslaughter, wrath and anger : of aduoutrie, of swearing, of suffringe wronge, and of loue euen toward a mans enemies.

Chap. VI.

Of Almes, prayer and fastinge. He forbyddeth the carefull sekyng of wordly thynges.

Chap. VII.

He forbyddeth fooliszh and temerarious iudgment, reproueth ypocrisie, exorteth vnto prayer, warneth to bewarre of false prophetes, and so concludeth his sermon.

Chap. VIII.

Christ clenseth the leper, healeth the captaynes seruauant and many other diseases : helpeth Peters mother in lawe, stilleth the see and the wynde, and dryueth the deuels out of the possessed in to the swyne.

Chap. IX.

He healeth the palsye, calleth Mathew from the custome, answereth for his disciples, healeth the woman of the blonde yssue, helpeth Iairus doughter, geueth ij. blyndmen their sight, maketh a domme man to speake, dryueth out a deuell.

Chap. X.

Christ sendeth out his Xij. Apostles to preach in Iewry, geueth them a charge, teacheth them, & comforteth them agaynst persecucion and trouble.

Chap. XI.

Ihon baptist sendeth his disciples vnto Christ, which geueth them their answeare, rebuketh the vnthakfull cities, and louyngly exorteth men to take his yock vpon them.

The gospel of S. Mathew.

Chap. XII.

The disciples plucke the eares of corne, he excuseth them, healeth the dried hande, helpeth the possessed that was blynde and dōme, rebuketh the vnfaithfull that wolde nedes haue tokens, and sheweth who is his brother, sister and mother.

Chap. XIII.

The parable of the sede, of the tares, of the mustarde sede, of the leuen, of the treasure hyd in the felde, of the perles, and of the nett.

Chap. XIII.

Ihon is taken and headed, Christ fedeth fyue thousand men with v. loaves and two fishes, and appeareth by night vnto his disciples vpon the see.

Chap. XV.

Christ excuseth his disciples, and rebuketh the scribes and pharises for transgressinge Gods cōmaundement thorow their owne tradicions. The thinge that goeth in to the mouth defyleth not the mā. He delyuereth the woman of Canaanes daughter, healeth the multitude, and with vij. loaves and a fewe litle fishes fedeth iiiiij. M. men, besyde wemen & children.

Chap. XVI.

The Pharises requyre a token. Iesus warneth his disciples of the pharises doctrine. The confession of peter. The keyes of heauen. The faithfull must beare the crosse after Christ.

Chap. XVII.

The transfiguracion of Christ vpō the mount of Tabor. He healeth the lunatike and payeth tribute.

Chap. XVIII.

He teacheth his disciples to be humble, and harmlesse, to avoyde occasiōs of euell, and one to forgeue anothers offence.

Chap. XIX.

All the generacions from Abrahā to Dauid are fourtene generacions: From Dauid vnto the captiuite of Babylon, are fourtene generacions. From the captiuite of Babylon vnto Christ, are also fourtene generacions.

The byrth of Christ was on thys wyse: ¶ When his mother Mary was married to Ioseph \*before they came together, she was foude with chylde by ſy holy goost. But Ioseph her huszbande was a perfect man, and wolde not bringe her to shame, but was mynded to put her awaie secretly. Now whan Ioseph awoke out of slepe he did as the angell of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE bade hym, and toke his wyfe vnto hym, and knewe her not, tyll she had brought forth hir fyrst borne sonne,<sup>a</sup> and called his name Iesus.

The ij. Chapter.

A WHEN Iesus was borne at Bethleē in Iury, in the tyme of Herode the kynge, Beholde, there came wyse men from the east to Ierusalē, saynge: Where is the new borne kynge of the Iues? We haue sene his starre in the east, and are come to worship him.

When Herode  $\hat{y}$  kynge had herde thys, he was troubled,  $\tau$  all Ierusalē with hym, and he gathered all the hie Prestes and Scribes of  $\hat{y}$  people, and axed of them, where Christ shulde be borne. And they sayde vnto hym: at Bethleem in Iury. For thus it is written by the Prophet: <sup>b</sup>And thou Bethleem in the londe of Iury, art not the leest amonge the Princes of Iuda. For out of  $\hat{y}$  shall come vnto me the captayne, that shall gouerne my people Israel.

B Then Herod preuely called the wyse men, and diligently enquired of them, what tyme the starre appered, and sent them to Bethleem, sainge: Go, and searche diligently for the chylde. And when ye haue founde hym, bringe me worde agayne, that I maye come and worshippe hym also.

When they had heard the kynge, they departed: and lo, the starre which they sawe in the east, went before them, tyll it came, and stode ouer the place where the chylde was. When they sawe the starre, they were maruelously glad: and went into the house, and found the chylde with Mary his mother, and kneled downe and worshipped hym,<sup>c</sup>  $\tau$  opened ther treasures, and offred vnto hym gyftes: gold, franckynsence and myrre. And after they were warned of God in a dreame, that they shuld not go ageine to Herod, they returned into their awne cowntre another waye.

C When they were departed: beholde, the angell of the LORDE appered to Ioseph in a dreame, saynge: aryse, and take the chylde and his mother, and flye into Egypte, and abyde there tyll I brynge the worde. For Herod wyl seke the chylde to destroye hym. Thē he arose, and toke the chylde and his mother by night, and departed into Egypte, and was there vnto  $\hat{y}$  deeth of Herod, that the thinge might be fulfilled which was spokē of the LORDE, by the Prophet, which sayeth: 'out of Egypte haue I called my sonne.

Then Herod perceauynge  $\hat{y}$  he was disceaue of the wyse men, was excedynge wroth, and sent forth, and slue all the chyl-dren that were in Bethleem, and in all the coastes there of, as many as were two yere olde and vnder, accordynge to the tyme which he had diligently searched out of the wyse men.

Then was  $\hat{y}$  fulfilled which was spoken by  $\hat{y}$  Prophet Ieremy saynge: <sup>e</sup> On  $\hat{y}$  hilles was a voyce herde, greate mournynge, wepyng,  $\tau$  lamentacion: Rachel wepyng for her chyl-dren, and wolde not be comforted, because they were not.

When Herode was deed: beholde, an angell of the LORDE appered in a dreame to Ioseph in Egypte, sayinge: arise and take the chylde and his mother, and go in to  $\hat{y}$  londe of Israel. For they are deed, which sought the chylde's life. And he arose vp, and toke  $\hat{y}$  chylde and his mother,  $\tau$  came into the londe of Israel. But whē he herde that Archelaus did raygne in Iury, in  $\hat{y}$  rowme of his father Herode, he was afrayde to go thither. Notwithstandinge after he was warned of God in a dreame, he turned asyde into the parties of Galile, and went and dwelt in a cite called Nazareth,<sup>f</sup> to fulfill  $\hat{y}$  which was spoken by the Prophetes: he shalbe called a Nazarite.

The iij. Chapter.

IN those dayes Ihon the Baptyst came and preached in the wildernes of Iury, saynge: Amēde youre selues, the kyngdome of heuen is at honde.<sup>g</sup> This is he, of whom it is spokē by  $\hat{y}$  Prophet Esay, which sayeth: The voyce of a cryer in  $\hat{y}$  wyldernes, prepare the LORDES waye, and make his pathes straight.

This Ihon had his garment of camels heer, and a lethrē gerdell aboute his loynes.<sup>h</sup> Hys meate was locustes and wyldre hony. Then went out to hym Ierusalem, and all Iury, and all the region rounde aboute Iordan, and were baptised of him in Iordan, cōfessynge their synnes.

"Now when he sawe many of the Pharises and of ſ̄ Saduces come to hys baptim, he sayde vnto them: ye generaciō of vipers, who hath certified you, that ye shal escape ſ̄ vengeance to come? Bewarre, brynge forth due frutes of pennaunce. Thinke not now, to saye in your selues, we haue Abraham to oure father. For I saye vnto you, that God is able of these stones to raiſe vp chyldren vnto Abraham. Euen now is the axe put vnto ſ̄ rote of the trees: therfore <sup>1</sup>euery tre which bringeth not forth good frute, shalbe hewē downe, and cast into the fyre.

Then came Iesus from Galile to Iordan, vnto Ihon, to be baptised of hym. But Ihō forbade hym, saynge: I haue nede to be baptysed of the: and comest thou to me? Iesus answered & sayd vnto hym: Let it be so now. For thus it will be cometh vs to fulfill all righteousnes. Then he suffred hym. <sup>5</sup> And Iesus assone as he was baptised, came straight out of the water. And lo, heuē was opē ouer hym: and Ihon sawe the spirite of God descende lyke a doue, and lyght vpon hym. And lo, there came a voyce frō heuē sayng: <sup>6</sup>Thys ys that my beloued sonne, in whom is my delyte.

The iiii. Chapter.

<sup>7</sup> THEN was Iesus ledd awaye of the spirite in to wildernes, to be tempted of the deuyll. And when he had fasted fourtye dayes and fourtye nightes, he was afterward an hungred. <sup>8</sup> And the tēpter came to him and sayde: yf thou be the sonne of God, commaunde, that these stones be made breed. He answered & sayde: yt is wryttē: <sup>9</sup>Man shall not lyue by bred only, but by euery worde that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Then the deuyll toke hym vp into the holy cite, and set hym on a pynacle of the temple, and sayde vnto hym: yf thou be ſ̄ sonne of God, cast thy sylfe downe. <sup>10</sup> For it is wrytten: he shall geue his angels charge ouer the and with their handes they shal holde the vp, that thou dashe not thy fote agaynst a stone. And Iesus sayde vnto hym: it ys wrytten also: <sup>11</sup>Thou shalt not tempte thy LORDE God.

Agayne, the deuyll toke hym vp and led hym in to an excedynge hye mountayne, and shewed hym all the kyngdomes of the worlde, and all the glorie of them, and sayde vnto hym: all these wil I geue the, yf thou wilt fall downe and worship me. <sup>12</sup> Then sayde Iesus vnto hym: Auoyde Satā. For it ys wryttē: thou shalt worshipp the LORDE thy God and hym onely shalt thou serue.

Then the deuell left hym, and beholde, the angels came and ministred vnto hym.

<sup>13</sup> When Iesus had herde that Ihon was taken, he departed into Galile and left Nazareth, and went and dwelt in Capernaum, which is a cite apon the see, in the coostes of zabulon and Neptalim, ſ̄ the thinge might be fulfilled whiche was spoken by Esay the Prophet, saynge: <sup>14</sup>The londe of zabulon and Neptalim, the waye of the see beyonde Iordan, and Galile of the Gentylys, the people which sat in darknes, sawe a greate lyght, & to them which sat in the region & shadowe of deeth, lyght is begōne to shyne.

From that tyme forth beganne Iesus to preach, and to saye: Amende youre selues, ſ̄ kingdome of heauen is at honde.

As Iesus walked by the see of Galile, he sawe two brethren: Šimon which was called Peter, & Andrew his brother, castynge a net into ſ̄ see, for they were fiszhers, and he sayde vnto them: folowe me, & I will make you fiszhers of mē.<sup>15</sup> And they strayght waye lefte their nettes, and folowed hym.

¶ WHEN he sawe the people, he went vp into a mountayne: and when he was set, his disciples came to hym, and he opened his mouth, and taught them, sayinge: <sup>a</sup> Blessed are the poore in sprete: for theirs is the kyngdome of heuē. Blessed are they that mourne: for they shalbe cōforted.<sup>c</sup> Blessed are the meke: for they shall inheret the erth.<sup>d</sup> Blessed are they which hunger & thyrst for rightewesnes: for they shalbe filled. Blessed are the mercifull: for they shall obteyne mercy. Blessed are the pure in herte: for they shall se God. Blessed are the peace-makers: for they shalbe called the chyldren of God. Blessed are they which suffre persecution for rightwesnes sake: for theirs is the kyngdome of heuen. <sup>e</sup> Blessed are ye when men reuyle you, and persecute you, and falsly say all manner of yuell saynges against you for my sake. <sup>f</sup> Reioyce and be glad, for greate is youre rewarde in heuē.

For so persecuted they the Prophetes which were before youre dayes.

¶ Ye are y salt of the earth, but and yf the salt haue lost his saltnes, <sup>g</sup> what can be salted therwith? Is it thence forth good for nothyng, but to be cast out, and to be trodden vnder fote of men. Ye are the light of the worlde. A cite that is set on an hill, can not be hid: nether do men lyght a candell, and put it vnder a busshell, but on a candlestick, and it lighteth all that are in the house. Let youre light so shyne before men,<sup>h</sup> that they maye se youre good workes, and glorify youre father which is in heauen.

TAKE hede to youre almes, that ye geue <sup>a</sup> it not in the syght of men, "to the intent that ye wolde be sene of them: or els, ye get no rewarde of youre father which is in heauen. When soeuer therfore thou geuest thine almes, thou shalt not make a trompet to be blown before the, as the ypocrites do in the synagoges and in the stretes, for to be prayسد of mē. Verely I saye vnto you: they haue their rewarde. But whē thou doest almes, let not thy left hande knowe, what thy righte hande doth, that thine almes maye be secrete: and thy father which seith in secrete, shall rewarde the openly.

ypocrytes are. For they disfigure their faces, that they myght be sene of men to fast. Verely I saye vnto you: they haue their rewarde. Se that ye gather you not treasure vpon the earth,<sup>a</sup> where rust and mothes corrupte, and where theues breake through and steale. But gather you treasure together in heauen, where nether rust nor mothes corrupte, and where theues nether breake vp nor yet steale. For where youre treasure is, there is youre herte also.

<sup>b</sup>The eye is the light of the body. Yf thyne eye then be synge, all thy body shal be ful of light: But and yf thyne eye be wycked, all thy body shalbe full of darckenes: Wherefore yf the light that is in the, be darckenes, how greate then shall that darckenes be?

No mā can serue two masters. For ether he shall hate the one and loue the other:<sup>c</sup> or els he shall leane to the one, and despise the other: <sup>d</sup>Ye can not serue God and mammon. Therefore I saye vnto you: be not ye carefull for youre lyfe, what ye shall eate, or what ye shall drinke: nor yet for youre body, what ye shal put on. Ys not the lyfe more worth thē meate, and the body more of value then raymēt? Beholde the foules of f̄ ayer: for they sowe not, nether reepe, nor yet cary in to the barnes: and yet youre heauēly father fedeth thē. Are ye not moch better thē they?

Which of you (though he toke thought therfore) coulede put one cubit vnto his stature? why care ye then for rayment? Considre the lylies of the felde, how they growe. They laboure not, nether spynne. And yet for all that I saye vnto you, that euen Salomon in all his royaltie was not arayed lyke vnto one of these. Wherefore yf God so cloth the grasse, which is to daye in the felde, and to morowe shalbe cast in to the fornace: shal he not moch more do the same vnto you, o ye of lytle fayth?

Therefore take no thought, sayinge: what shall we eate, or what shall we drinke? or where with shall we be clothed? After all soch thynges do the heithen seke. For youre heauenly father knoweth, that ye haue nede of all these thynges. <sup>e</sup>Seke ye fyrst the kyngdome of heauen and the righteousnes therof, so shal all these thynges be ministred vnto you.

Care not then for the morow, for the morow shall care for it self: Euery daye hath ynough of his owne trauayll.

The vij. Chapter.

JUDGE not, that ye be not iudged: <sup>f</sup>For as ye iudge, so shal ye be iudged. And with what measure ye meete, with the same shall it be measured to you agayne. Why seist thou a moate in thy brothers eye, and perceauest not the beame y<sup>g</sup> is yn thine awne eye? Or why saiest thou to thy brother: holde, I wil plucke the moate out of thyne eye, and beholde, a beame is in thyne awne eye. Ypocryte, fyrst cast out the beame out of thyne awne eye,<sup>h</sup> and then shalt thou se clearly, to plucke out the moate out of thy brothers eye.

Geue not that which is holy, to dogges: nether cast ye youre pearles before swyne,<sup>i</sup> lest they treade them vnder their fete, and the other turne agayne and all to rente you.

<sup>n</sup>Therefore what soeuer ye wolde that mē shulde do to you, euē so do ye to them. This ys the lawe and the Prophetes.

The Captayne answered and sayde: Syr, I am not worthy, that thou shuldest come vnder my rofe, but speake the wordes only, <sup>i</sup>and my seruauent shalbe healed. For I my selfe also am a mā subiect to <sup>j</sup>the auctorite of another, <sup>k</sup>and haue souldiers vnder me. When Iesus hearde that, he marueled, and sayde to them that folowed hym: Verely I say vnto you: I haue not founde so greates fayth: no not in Israel. But I say vnto you: <sup>m</sup>Many shall come from the east and west, and shall rest with Abraham, Isaac and Iacob in the kyngdome of heauen: and the chyldren of the kyngdome shalbe cast out in to vtter darcknes: there shal be wepinge, <sup>n</sup>and gnasching of teth. And Iesus sayd vnto <sup>o</sup>his Captayne: go thy waye, and as thou beleuest, so be it vnto the. And his seruauent was healed the same houre.

<sup>b</sup>And he entred in to a shyppe, & his disciples folowed him. And beholde, there arose a greate tempest in the see, in so moch that the shippe was couered with wawes, & he was a slepe. And his disciples came vnto him, and awoke hym, sayinge: LORDE, saue vs, we perishe. And he sayde vnto them: why are ye fearfull, o ye of lytell faith? Then he arose, and rebuked the wyndes and the see, & there folowed a greate calme. And the men marueyled and sayde: what mā is this, that both wyndes and see obey hym?

<sup>d</sup>And when he was come to þ̄ other syde, in to the cowntre of the Gergesites, there met him two possessed of deuyls,<sup>e</sup> which came out of the graues, and were out of measure fearede, so that no man myght go by that waye. And he sayde vnto them: go youre wayes. Then went they out, and departed in to the heerd of swyne. And beholde, þ̄ whoale heerd of swyne was caryed with violēce headlinge in to the see, and perished in the water. sinnes are forgeuē the. And beholde, certeyne of the scribes sayde in them selues: this man blasphemeth. But when Iesus sawe their thoughtes, he sayde: wherfore thinke ye euill in youre hertes? Whether ys it easier to saye: thy synnes be forgeuē þ̄, or to saie: arise and walke? But that ye maye knowe, that the sonne of man hath power to forgeue sinnes in earth, thē sayde he vnto the sicke of þ̄ palsie: arise, take vp thy bed, and go home. And he arose and wente home. When þ̄ people sawe it, they marueyled, & glorified God, which had geuē soch power vnto men.

<sup>k</sup>And as Iesus passed forth from thence, he sawe a man syt a receyuinge of custome, named Mathew, & sayde vnto him: folowe me. And he arose, and folowed him. And it came to passe as he sat at meate in the house: beholde, many publicans and synners came and sat downe also with Iesus and his disciples.

When the Pharises sawe that, they sayde to his disciples: why eateth youre master with publicans and synners? When Iesus herde that, he sayde vnto them: The whole nede not þ̄ phisicio, but they that are sicke. Go and learne, what that meaneth: I haue pleasure in mercy, and not in offerynge.<sup>l</sup> For I am not come to call the righteous, but þ̄ synners to repentance.

<sup>m</sup>Then came the disciples of Ihon to hym sayinge: why do we & þ̄ Pharises fast so oft: and thy disciples fast not? And Iesus sayde vnto thē: Can the weddyng chyldrē mourne as lōge as the bridegrome is with them? The tyme will come, when the bridegrome shalbe taken from them, and thē shall they fast. No man peceth an olde garment with a pece of newe clothe. Then Iesus turned him aboute, and behelde her, sayinge: Doughter be of good conforte, thy faith hath made y safe. And she was made whole, euen that same houre.

"And when Iesus came into the rulers house, and sawe the minstrels and the people raginge, he sayde vnto them: Get you hẽce, for y maye do not deed, but slepeth.<sup>a</sup> And they laughed hym to scorne. But whan the people were put forth, he went in, and toke her by the honde, and the mayde arose. And this was noysed through out all that londe.

And as Iesus departed thence, two blynde mẽ folowed hym, cryinge and sayinge: O thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon vs. And when he was come home, the blynde came to hym, And Iesus sayde vnto them Beleue ye, that I am able to do thys? And they sayde vnto hym: yee, LORDE. Then touched he their eyes, sayinge: accordinge to youre fayth, be it vnto you.<sup>c</sup> And their eyes were opened. And Iesus charged thẽ, sayinge: Se that no m̃a knowe of it. But they departed, & spred abroade his name through out all the londe.

Whan these were gone out,<sup>d</sup> beholde, they brought to hym a domme man possessed of a deuyll. And whan the deuyll was cast out, the domme spake: And the people merueled sayinge: it was neuer so sene in Israel. But y Pharises sayde: 'he casteth out deuyls, thorow the chefe deuyll.

'And Iesus wente aboute in all cities and townes, teachinge in their synagoges & preaching y gospel of y kyngdome, & healinge all maner sicknes & all maner disease amōge the people. <sup>e</sup>And when he sawe the people, he had compassion on thẽ, because they were pyned awaye, and scattered abroade, euen as shepe hauinge no shepherd.

Then sayde he to hys disciples: y heruest is greate, but y laborers are fewe. Wherefore praye the LORDE of the haruest,<sup>f</sup> to sende forth laborers into hys haruest.

The i. Chapter.

AND he called his xii. disciples vnto hym, & gaue them power ouer vncleane spretes, to cast them out, & to heale all maner of sicknesses, and all maner of diseases.

The names of the xii. Apostels are these: The fyrst, Simon called Peter: & Andrew his brother. Iames the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon his brother. Philip and Bartlemew. Thomas, and Mathew the Publican. Iames the sonne of Alphe, and Lebbeus otherwyse called Taddeus. Simon of Cane, and Iudas Iscarioth, which also betrayed hym.

These twolue sent Iesus, and commaunded them, sayinge:<sup>g</sup> Go not in to the wayes y leade to the Heithen, and in to the cities of the Samaritais enter ye not. But go rather to the lost shepe of the housse of Israel. 'Go and preach, sayinge: The kyngdome of heuẽ is at hande. Heale the sicke, cense the lepers rayse the deed, cast out the deuils. 'Frely ye haue receaued, frely geue againe. Posses not golde, nor siluer, nor brasse yn youre gerdels, nor yet scrip towards your iorney: nether two cotes, nether shues, nor yet a staffe. For "the workman is worthy of his meate. In to what soeuer cite or towne ye shall come, enquire in it, who is mete for you, and there abyde, tyll ye go thence.

And whẽ ye come in to an house, salute y same. And yf the housse be mete for you, youre peace shal come vpō it. But yf it be not mete for you, youre peace shal turne to you againe.

And yf no man wil receaue you, ner heare youre preachinge, departe out of that house or that cite, and shake the dust of youre fete. Truly I saye vnto you: 'it shall be easier for y londe of Sodoma and Gomorra in y daye of iudgment, then for that cite.

Beholde, I sende you forth as shepe amōge wolues. Be ye therefore wyse as serpent, and innocent as doues. 'Beware of men, for they shall deliuer you yp to the couẽsels, and shal scourge you in their synagoges. And ye shall be brought before prynces and kynges for my sake, in witnes to them and to the gentyls.

The xi. Chapter

A ND it came to passe, whā Iesus had made an ende of cōmaunding his twolue disciples, he departed thence, to teach and to preach in their cities.

Whan Ihon beinge in preson<sup>o</sup> herde of the workes of Christ, he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto him: Art thou he ŷ shal come, or shal we loke for another? Iesus answered and sayde vnto thē: Go youre waye and tell Ihon agayne, what ye se and heare. The blynde se, and the lame go:<sup>p</sup> the lepers are censed, and ŷ deaf heare: the deed aryse ageyne, and the "gospell is preached to the poore: and blessed is he, that is not offended at me.

When they wente their waye, Iesus beganne to speake vnto the people, "concernynge Ihon: What are ye gone out for to se in the wyl- dernes? Wolde ye se a rede shaken with the wynde? Or what are ye gone out for to se? Wolde ye se a man clothed in soft rayment? Beholde, they that weare soft clothinge, are in kinges houses, But what are ye gone out for to se? A prophet? ### The xij. Chapter.

corne vpon the Sabbath,<sup>1</sup> and his disciples were hongrie, and beganne to plucke of the eares of the corne, and to eate. When y Pharises sawe that, they sayde vnto him:
Beholde, thy disciples do that, which is not lauffull to do vpon the Sabbath. He sayde vnto them: haue ye not red what Dauid did, whan he was hongrie, & they also y were with him? How he entred in to the house of God, & <sup>2</sup> ate the shew breds which were not lauffull for him to eate, nether for thē y were with him, but onely for the prestes? Or haue ye not red in the lawe how that the prestes in the temple breake the Sabbath, and yet are blamelesse? But I saye vnto you: y here is one greater then the temple. <sup>3</sup> But yf ye wist what this were (I haue pleasure in mercy, and not in offeringe) ye wolde not haue condemned innocentes: For the sonne of man is LORDE euen ouer the Sabbath.

And he departed thence, and wente in to B their synagoge: and beholde,<sup>4</sup> there was a mā which had his hāde dried vp. And they axed him, sayenge: Is it lauffull to heale, vpon the Sabbath?<sup>5</sup> because they might accuse him.
But he sayde vnto thē: Which of you is it, yf he had a shepe fallē in to a pytte vpon the Sabbath, that wolde not take him,<sup>6</sup> and lift him out? And how moch is a man better then a shepe? Therefore it is leffull to do good vpon the Sabbath. Then sayde he to the mā: Stretch forth thine hande. And he stretched it forth: and it was whole agayne like vnto the other.

Then wente the Pharises out,<sup>7</sup> and helde a counsell agaynst him, how they might de-departed thence, & moche people folowed him: and he healed them all, and charged them, <sup>ŷ</sup> they shulde not make him knowne: that the thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoken by Esay the prophet, which sayeth: <sup>a</sup> Beholde, this is my seruauit, whom I haue chosen: and my beloued, in whom my soule delyteth: I wil put my sprete vpon hi, and he shal shewe iudgment vnto the Heithē. He shal not stryue, ner crye, nether shal eny man heare his voyce in the stretes. A brosed rede shal he not breake, and flax that beginneth to burne shal he not quench, tyll he sende forth iudgment vnto victory. And in his name shal the Heithen trust.

Then was there brought vnto him one possessed <sup>b</sup> (of a deuell) the which was blynde and donne, and he healed him: in so moche <sup>ŷ</sup> <sup>ŷ</sup> blynde and donne both spake and sawe. And all the people were amased, and sayde: Is not this the sonne of Dauid? <sup>c</sup> But whan the Pharises herde that, they sayde: He dryeth the deuyls out none other wyse, but thorow Beelzebub the chefe of the deuyls. Neuertheles Iesus knew their thoughtes, and sayde vnto them: Euery kyngdome deuyded within it self, shalbe desolate: and euery cite or house deuyded in it self, maye not contynue. So yf one Sathan cast out another, thē is he at variance within him self: how maye then his kyngdome endure? But yf I cast out deuils thorow Beelzebub, thorow whom do youre childrē cast them out? Therefore shal they be youre iudges. But yf I cast out the deuyls by the sprete of God then is the kyngdome of God come vpon you. Or how cā a man entre in to a stronge mans house, <sup>d</sup> and violently take awaye his goodes, excepte he first bynde the stronge mā, & thē spoyle his house? He that is not with me, is agaynst me: & he <sup>ŷ</sup> gathereth not with me, scattereth abrode. Therefore I saye vnto you: <sup>e</sup> All synne and blasphemie shalbe forgeuen vnto men, but the blasphemy agaynst the sprete shal not be forgeuen vnto men: And whosoener speaketh a worde agaynst the sonne of man, <sup>f</sup> it shalbe forgeuē him. But whosoener speaketh agaynst the holy goost it shal not be forgeuen him, nether in this worlde, ner in the worlde to come.

Then answered certayne of the scribes and Pharises, and sayde: Master, we wolde fayne se a tokē of the. <sup>k</sup> And he answered and saide vnto thē: This euell and aduouterous generacion seketh a token: and there shal no token be geuen thē, but the token of the prophete Ionas. <sup>l</sup> For as Ionas was thre dayes and thre nightes in the Whalles bely, so shal the sonne of mā be thre dayes and thre nightes in the hert of the earth. The men of Ninyue shal ryse in the last iudgment with this generacion, and shal condemne it: <sup>m</sup> for they dyd pēnauce acordinge to <sup>ŷ</sup> preachinge of Ionas. And beholde, here is one greater thē Ionas. The quene of the south shal <sup>n</sup> aryse in the last iudgmēt with this generacion, and shal condēne it: for she came from the vttemost partes of the earth, to heare <sup>ŷ</sup> wysdome of Salomon: And lo, here is one greater then Salomon.

Whan the vnclene sprete is gone out of man, <sup>o</sup> he walketh thorow dryt places, seeking rest, & fyndeth none. Thē saith he: I wil turne agayne in to my house, frō whence I wōte out. And whan he cōmeth, he fyndeth it emptye, swepte and garnysed. Then goeth he his waye, & taketh vnto him seuē other spretes worse then him self: and whan they are entred in, they dwell there: <sup>p</sup> And the ende of that man is worse then the begynnyng. Euen so shal it go with this euell generacion.

Why le he yet talked vnto the people, beholde, his mother & his brethrē stode without desyringe to speake with him. <sup>q</sup> Then sayde one vnto him: Beholde, thy mother and thy

The xiiij. Chapter.

A THE same daye wente Iesus out of <sup>c</sup>ŷ house, <sup>d</sup>and sat by the see syde, ⁊ moch people resorted vnto him: so <sup>e</sup>ŷ he wēte in to a shyppe and satt him downe, and all the people stode vpō the shore. And he spake many thinges vnto thē in symilitudes, sayenge: Beholde, The sower wente forth to sowe: and as he sowed, some fell by the waye syde: Then came the foules, ⁊ ate it vp. Some fell vpon stony grounde, ⁊ anone it spronge vp, because it had no depth of earth: But whan the Sonne arose, it caught heate: and for so moch as it had no rote, it withred awaye. Some fell amōge the thornes, ⁊ the thornes grewe vp, and choked it. Some fell vpō good grōnde, ⁊ gaue frute: some an hundredth folde, some sixtie folde, some thirtie folde. Who so hath eares to heare, let hi heare.

B And the disciples came vnto him, and sayde: Why speakest thou to thē by parables? He answered and sayde vnto thē: Vnto you it is geuen to knowe the <sup>f</sup>mystery of the kingdome of heauen, but vnto them it is not geuen. For whoso hath, vnto him shal be geuē, and he shal haue abundaunce. But who so hath not, from him shalbe taken awaye, euē that he hath. Therefore speake I vnto thē by parables, for with seynge eyes they se not, ⁊ with hearinge eares they heare not, for they vnderstonde it not. And in them is fulfilled <sup>g</sup>ŷ prophecie of Esay, which sayeth: <sup>h</sup>Ye shal heare in dede, and shal not vnderstonde: and with seinge eyes shal ye se, and not perceaue. For <sup>i</sup>ŷ hert of this people is waxed grosse, ⁊ their eares are thick of hearige, ⁊ their eyes haue they closed, lest they shulde once se with <sup>j</sup>ŷ eyes, ⁊ heare with the eares, ⁊ vnderstōde with the hert, ⁊ turne, that I might heale them.

But blessed are youre eyes, for they se: ⁊ C youre eares, for they heare. Verely I saye vnto you: <sup>k</sup>Many prophetes ⁊ righteous men haue desyred to se <sup>l</sup>ŷ thinges that ye se, and haue not sene thē: and to heare the thinges that ye heare, and haue not herde thē. Heare ye therefore the parable of the sower. <sup>m</sup>Whan one heareth <sup>n</sup>ŷ worde of the kyngdome, and vnderstondeth it not, the euell man cōmeth, and plucketh it awaye that is sowne in his hert: ⁊ this is he <sup>o</sup>ŷ is sowne by the waye syde. But he <sup>p</sup>ŷ is sowne in the stonye grounde, is this: whā one heareth the worde, ⁊ anone with ioye receaueth it: neuertheles he hath no rote i him, but endureth for a season: whā trouble ⁊ persecucion aryseth because of the worde, immediatly he is offended. As for him that is sowne amonge <sup>q</sup>ŷ thornes, this is he: Whā one heareth the worde, ⁊ the carefulnes of this worlde, ⁊ the disceatfulnes of riches choke the worde, ⁊ so he becōmeth vnfrutefull. But he <sup>r</sup>ŷ is sowne in the good grounde, is this: whan one heareth the worde, and vnderstondeth it, and bringeth forth frute: and some geueth an hundredth folde, some sixtie folde, and some thirtie folde.

Another parable put he forth vnto thē, D ⁊ sayde: The kyngdome of heauē is like vnto a man, <sup>s</sup>ŷ sowed good sēde in his felde. But whyle mē slepte, there came an enemye, and sowed tares amonge <sup>t</sup>ŷ wheate, ⁊ wente his waye. Now whā the blade was sprōge vp ⁊ brought forth frute, thē <sup>u</sup>ŷ tares appeared also. Then came the seruauētes to <sup>v</sup>ŷ housholder, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Syr, sowdest not thou good sēde in thy felde? <sup>w</sup>Frō whēce thē hath it tares? He sayde vnto thē: that hath the enemye done. Thē sayde <sup>x</sup>ŷ seruauētes: wilt thou then <sup>y</sup>ŷ we go ⁊ wede thē out? He sayde: No, lest whyle ye wede out <sup>z</sup>ŷ tares, ye plucke vp the wheate also with thē. Let thē both growe together tyll the haruest, and in tyme of haruest I wil saye vnto the reapers: Gather <sup>aa</sup>ŷ tares first, ⁊ bynde thē in sheeues to be brēt: but gather the wheate in to my barn.

Another parable put he forth vnto thē, and sayde: The kyngdome of heauen is like vnto a grane of mustarde sede, which a man toke, and sowed it in his felde. Which is the leest amonge all sedes. But whan it is growne, it is the greatest amonge herbes, and is a tre: so that the byrdes vnder the heauen come and dwell in the braunches of it.

Another parable spake he vnto thē: <sup>a</sup>The kyngdome of heauē is like vnto leuē, which a woman toke, and myxte it amonge thre peckes of meele, tyll all was leuended.

Then sent Iesus the people awaye, and came home. And his disciples came vnto hī, and sayde: Declare vnto us <sup>f</sup>parable of <sup>f</sup>tares of <sup>f</sup>felde. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: He that soweth the good sede, is the sonne of man: the felde is the worlde: <sup>f</sup>good sede are the childrē of the kyngdome: The tares are the children of wickednes: <sup>f</sup>enemye that soweth thē, is the deuell: <sup>f</sup>haruest is the ende of the worlde: <sup>f</sup>reapers are <sup>f</sup>angels. <sup>c</sup>For like as <sup>f</sup>tares are weded out, and brent in the fyre, euē so shal it go in <sup>f</sup>ende of this worlde. The sonne of man shal sende forth his angels, and they shal gather out of his kyngdome all thinges <sup>f</sup>offende, and thē <sup>f</sup>do iniquyte, and shal cast thē in to a fornace of fyre, there shalbe waylinge and gnaszhinge of teth. <sup>c</sup>Thē shal the righteous shyne as the Sonne, in the kyngdome of their father. Who so hath eares to heare, let him heare.

Agayne, the kyngdome of heauen is like vnto a treasure hyd in the felde, which a mā founde and hid it, and for ioye therof he wēte and solde all <sup>f</sup>he had, and bought <sup>f</sup>felde.

Agayne, the kyngdome of heauen is like vnto a marchaūt, <sup>f</sup>sought good pearles: and whā he had founde a precious pearle, <sup>c</sup>he wēte and solde all that he had, and bought it.

Agayne, <sup>f</sup>kyngdome of heauē is like vnto a nett cast in to <sup>f</sup>see, wherwith are takē all maner of fyshes: and whā it is ful, mē drawe it out vnto <sup>f</sup>shore, and sytt and gather <sup>f</sup>good ī to the vessels, but cast the bad awaye. <sup>a</sup>So shal it be also in <sup>f</sup>ende of <sup>f</sup>worlde. The angels shal go out, and seuer the bad frō the righteous, and shal cast thē in to a fornace of fyre, there shalbe waylinge and gnaszhinge of teth.

And Iesus sayde vnto them: Haue ye vnderstōde all these thinges? They sayde: <sup>c</sup>Yee LORDE. Then sayde he vnto thē: Therfore euery scribe taught vnto <sup>f</sup>kyngdome of heauen, is like an housholder, which bryngeth out of his treasure thinges new and olde.

And it came to passe whā Iesus had ended these parables, he departed thence, and came in to his owne coūtre, and taught thē in their synagoges: in so moch, that they were astonnyed and sayde: Whēce cōmeth soch wysdome and power vnto him? <sup>c</sup>Is not this the carpēters sonne? Is not his mother called Mary? and his brethrē Iames and Ioses, and Symon and Iude? And are not all his sisters here with us? Whence hath he thē all these thinges? And they were offended at him. But Iesus sayde vnto thē: <sup>c</sup>A prophet is nowhere lesse sett by, thē at home and amonge his owne. And he dyd not many miracles there, because of their vnbeleue.

The xiiij. Chapter.

At that tyme Herode <sup>f</sup>Tetrarcha herde of <sup>f</sup>fame of Iesu, and sayde vnto his seruaūtes: This is Iho <sup>f</sup>baptist. He is rysen agayne frō the deed, therefore are his dedes so mightie. <sup>c</sup>For Herode had takē Iho bounde hī, and put him in preson for Herodias sake his brothers Philips wife. For Iho sayde vnto him: <sup>c</sup>It is not lauffull for <sup>f</sup>to haue her. And fayne wolde he haue put him to death, but he feared the people, because they helde him for a Prophet.

But whan Herode helde his byrth daye, the daughter of Herodias daunsed before thē, and that pleased Herode well, wherfore he promysed her with an oath, <sup>f</sup>he wolde geue her, whatsoeuer she wolde axe. And she (beyng instructed of hir mother afore) sayde: geue me Iho baptistes heade in a platter. And the kynge was sory. Neuertheles for <sup>f</sup>oath sake, and thē <sup>f</sup>sat with him at <sup>f</sup>table, he heeded Ihon in the preson. And his heed was brought in a platter, and geuen to the damsell, ⁊ she brought it vnto her mother.

Then came his disciples, and toke his body, and buried it, and wente and tolde Iesus.

Whan Iesus herde ŷ, he departed thence by shippe in to a desert place alone.<sup>a</sup> And whā the people herde therof, they folowed him on fote out of ŷ cities. And Iesus wēte forth, and sawe moch people, and had pytie vpon them, and healed their sicke. But at euen his disciples came vnto him, ⁊ saide: This is a deserte place, and ŷ night falleth on: let ŷ people departe from the, that they maye go in to the townes, and bye them vyttayles. But Iesus sayde vnto them: They nede not go awaye, geue ye thē to eate. Thē saide they vnto him: We haue here but fyue loaues and two fyshes. And he saide: bringe thē hither.
C And he cōmaunded ŷ people to syt downe vpon the grasse, and toke ŷ fyue loaues and two fiszhes, and lokd vp toward heauen, and gaue thanks, and brake and gaue the loaues vnto the disciples, and the disciples gaue them to the people. And they all ate, and were suffised. And they gathered vp of the broken meate that remayned ouer, twolue baszkettes full. And they ŷ ate, were aboute a fyue thousande men, besyde wemen and children.

<sup>b</sup> And straight waye Iesus made his disciples to entre in to a shippe, ⁊ to go ouer before hī, tyll he had sent ŷ people awaye. And whan he had sent the people awaye, he wēte vp in to a mountayne alone,<sup>c</sup> to make his prayer.
And at euen he was there him self alone.
And ŷ shippe was already in ŷ myddest of the see, ⁊ was tost with wawes, for the winde was cōtrary. But in ŷ fourth watch of ŷ night Iesus came vnto thē, walkinge vpon the see.
And whan his disciples sawe him goinge vpon the see, they were afraied, sayenge: It is some sprete, and cried out for feare. But straight waye Iesus spake vnto them, and sayde: Be of good cheare, it is I, be not afraied.

3 D Peter answered him, ⁊ saide: LORDE, yf it be thou, byd me come vnto the vpon ŷ water. And he sayde: come on thy waye.
And Peter stepte out of the shippe, ⁊ wēte vpon the water, to come vnto Iesus. But whan he sawe a mightie wynde, he was afraied, ⁊ begāne to synke, ⁊ cried, sayenge: LORDE, helpe me. And immediatly Iesus stretched forth his hande, ⁊ caught him, ⁊ sayde vnto him:

O thou of litle faith, wherfore doubtest thou?
And they wente in to the shippe,<sup>d</sup> ⁊ the wynde ceased. Then they that were in ŷ shippe, came ⁊ fell downe before him, ⁊ sayde: Of a trueth thou art ŷ sonne of God. And they shipped ouer, ⁊ came in to the lōde of Genazereth. And whā ŷ mē of ŷ place had knowlege of hī, they sent out in to all that cōūtre rounde aboute, ⁊ brought vnto him all that were sicke, ⁊ besought him, that they might but touch the hemme of his vesture onely: ⁊ as many as touched it, were made whole.

The xv. Chapter.

3 T HEN came vnto him the scribes and A pharises from Ierusalem,<sup>e</sup> sayenge:
Why do thy disciples transgresse ŷ tradicions of the elders? for they wash not their hōdes whan they eate bred. He answered ⁊ sayde vnto thē: Why do ye transgresse the cō-maundemēt of God, because of youre owne tradiçiōs? For God cōmaunded, sayēge:
Honoure father ⁊ mother: ⁊ <sup>f</sup> he ŷ curseth father ⁊ mother, shal dye the death. But ye saye: Euery man shal saye to father or mother: <sup>g</sup> The thige ŷ I shulde helpe ŷ withal, is geuē vnto God. By this is it come to passe, that no man honoureth his father or his mother eny more. And thus haue ye made the cōmaundement of God of none effecte, for youre owne tradiçiōs. Ye ypcrites, full well hath Esaye prophecied of you, ⁊ sayde:<sup>h</sup>
This people draweth nye vnto me with their mouth, ⁊ honoureth me with their lippes, how beit, their hert is farre fro me. But in vayne do they serue me, whyle they teach soch doctrynes as are nothinge but the commaunde-mentes of men.

And he called ŷ people to hī, ⁊ saide vnto 3
thē: Heare ⁊ vnderstōde: That which goeth in to the mouth, defyleth not the mā: but ŷ which cōmeth out of the mouth, defyleth ŷ mā.

Then came his disciples, ⁊ sayde vnto him:
knowest thou ŷ the Pharises were offended, whan they herde this sayenge? He answered, and sayde: <sup>i</sup> All plantes which my heauenly

<sup>b</sup>Then answered Peter & sayde vnto him: Declare vnto us this parable. And Iesus sayde vnto thē: Are ye yet thē without vnderstondinge? Perceauē ye not, ŷ what so-euer goeth in at ŷ mouth, descēdeth downe in to ŷ bely, & is cast out in to the draught? But the thinge that procedeth out of the mouth, cōmeth frō ŷ hert, & that defyleth ŷ mā. For out of ŷ hert come euell thoughtes murthur, breakynge of wedlocke, whordome theft, false witness, blasphemy. These are ŷ thinges that defyle a man. But to eate with vnwaszhen hondes, defyleth not a man.

<sup>c</sup> And Iesus wente out from thence, & departed in to the coastes of Tyre of Sidon. And beholde, a womā of Canaan wēte out of ŷ same coastes, & cried after him, sayēge: O LORDE, thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon me. My doughter is sore vexed with a deuell. And he answered her neuer a worde. Thē came his disciples vnto him, & besought him, sayēge: Sēde her awaye, for she crieth after us. But he answered, & saide: I am not sent, <sup>d</sup>but vnto the lost shepe of the house of Israel. Notwithstandinge she came & fell downe before him, & sayde: LORDE, helpe me. He answered & sayde: It is not good, to take the childrens bred, & to cast it vnto dogges. It is trueth LORDE (sayde she) Neuertheles the whelpes eate of the crommes, that fall frō their lordes table. Then answered Iesus & sayde vnto her: O womā, greate is thy faith be it vnto the, euē as thou desyrest. And hir doughter was made hole at ŷ same houre.

And Iesus departed thēce, and came nye vnto the see of Galile, and wente vp in to a mountayne, and sat downe there. And there came vnto him moch people, hauinge with them, lame, blynde, dōme, crepell, and other many, and cast them downe at Iesus fete. And he healed thē, <sup>e</sup>in so moch that the people wōdred, to se the dōme speake, the crepell whole, the halt to go, & the blynde to se. And they praysed the God of Israel.

<sup>f</sup> And Iesus called his disciples vnto him, & sayde: I haue cōpassion vpon the people, for they haue cōtynued with me now thre dayes, & haue nothings to eate, & I wil not let thē departe fastynge, lest they perishe in ŷ waye. And his disciples sayde vnto him: Whence shulde we get so moch bred in the wyldernes, that we might satisfie so moch people? And Iesus sayde vnto thē: How many loaves haue ye? They sayde: seue, & a few litle fyshes. And he cōmaunded ŷ people to syt downe vpō the grounde, and toke ŷ seue loaves, & the fyshes, & gaue thanks & brake thē, & gaue thē to his disciples, & ŷ disciples gaue thē vnto the people. And they all ate, & were suffised. And they toke vp of the brokē meate ŷ was left, seuen baszkettes full. And they ŷ ate, were foure thousande mē, besyde women and children. And whan he had sent awaye the people, he wente in to a shippe, & came in to the parties of Magdala.

The xvi. Chapter.

<sup>l</sup>And whā his disciples were come to the other syde of the water, they had forgotten to take bred with them. Iesus sayde vnto thē: Take hede & bewarre of the leuē of ŷ Pharises & of the Saduces.<sup>m</sup> Thē thought they in thē selues, sayēge: We haue takē no bred with us. Whē Iesus perceaued ŷ, he sayde to thē: O ye of litle faith, why are ye combred (in youre mindes) because ye haue takē no bred with you? Do ye not yet perceauē? Remembre ye not those fyue loaves, <sup>n</sup>whē there were fyue thousande mē, and how many baszkettes toke ye vp? Nether ŷ <sup>o</sup>seue loaves whan there were foure thousande men, & how many baszkettes toke ye vp? Why perceauē ye not then, <sup>p</sup>ŷ I spake not to you of bred, whē I saide: bewarre of ŷ leuē of ŷ Pharises & of ŷ Saduces?

Then came Iesus in to the coastes of the cite Cesarea Philippi, † axed his disciples † saide: Whō do mē saie, † † sonne of mā is? They sayde: Some saye, † thou art Ihō the baptist, Some † thou art Elias, Some † thou art Jeremy, or one of † prophetes. He saide to thē: But whō saye ye † I am? Thē answered Symō Peter and saide: Thou art Christ † sonne of † lyuinge God.<sup>a</sup> And Iesus answered, † saide vnto hī: Blessed art thou Symō † sonne of Ionas, for flesh † bloude hath not opened † vnto the, but my father † is in heauē.<sup>b</sup> And I saie to †: Thou art Peter, † † vpō this rocke wil I builde my cōgregation: and † gates of hell shal not preuaile agaynst it. † And the keyes of heauen wil I geue vnto the: Whatsoeuer thou shalt bynde vpon earth, shalbe bounde also in heauen: † whatsoeuer thou shalt lowse vpon earth, shalbe lowsed also in heauē. Then charged he his disciples, that they shulde tell no mā that he was Iesus Christ.

Then sayde Iesus vnto his disciples: † Yf eny man wil folowe me, let him forsake him self, † take vp his crosse, and folowe me. For who so wil saue his life, shal lose it: but who so loseth his life for my sake, shal fynde it. What helpeth it a man though he wanne the whole worlde, and yet suffred harme in his soule? Or what can a man geue, to redeme his soule withall? For it wil come to passe, that the sonne of mā shal come in the glory of his father with his angels, and then shal he rewarde euery one accordinge to his dedes.<sup>c</sup> Verely I saye vnto you: † there stonde here

The xviij. Chapter.

AND after sixe dayes Iesus toke Peter † James, and Ihon his brother,<sup>a</sup> and brought them vp in to an hye mountayne out of the waye, and was transfigured before thē: † his face shone as † Sonne, and his clothes were as white as the light. And beholde, there appeared vnto the Moses and Elias talkinge with him. Then answered Peter, and sayde vnto Iesus: LORDE, here is good beyng for us. Yf thou wilt, let us make here thre tabernacles: one for the, one for Moses, and one for Elias. † Why he yet spake, beholde, a bright cloude ouershadowed them: and lo, there came a voyce out of the cloude, saienge: † This is my deare sonne, in whom I delyte, † heare him. When † disciples herde that, they fell vpon their faces, and were sore afrayed. But Iesus came and touched them, and sayde: Aryse, and be not afrayed. And when they lokd vp, they sawe no man, but Iesus onely.

And whā they came downe frō † mountayne, Iesus charged them, and sayde: † Tell no man of this vision, tyll the sonne of man be rysen agayne from † deed. And his disciples axed him, and sayde: Why saye the scribes then, that Elias must first come? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: Elias shall come first in dede, and bringe all thinges to right agayne. But I saye vnto you: Elias is come all ready, † they knewe him not, but haue done vnto him what they wolde. Euē so shal also the sonne of man suffre of them. Then the disciples perceaued, that he spake vnto them of Ihon the baptist.

† And when they were come to the people, there came vnto him a certayne man, and kneled vnto him, and sayde: LORDE, haue mercy vpon my sonne, for he is lunatike, † sore vexed. He falleth oft tymes in to † fyre, and oft in to † water: and I brought him vnto thy disciples, and they coude not heale him. Iesus answered, and sayde: O thou faithles and frowarde generacion, how longe shal I be with you? How longe shal I suffice you? Bringe him hither to me. And Iesus

Then came the disciples vnto Iesus secretly, ⁊ sayde: "Why coude not we cast him out? Iesus sayde vnto them: Because of youre vnbeleue. For I saye verely vnto you: "Yf ye haue faith as a grane of mustarde sede, ye maye saye vnto this mountayne: Remoue hence to yonder place, and he shal remoue, nether shal eny thinge be vnpossible vnto you. And they were very sory. Now wha they were come to Capernaum, they that receaued ⁊ tribute money, came to Peter, and sayde: Doth youre master paye tribute? He sayed: yee. And when he was come home, Iesus preuented him, and sayde: What thinkest thou Symon? Of whom do the kynges of the earth take toll or tribute? Of their children, or of straungers? Then sayde Peter to him: Of straungers. Iesus sayde vnto him: "Then are ⁊ children fre. ### The xviij. Chaptr.

AT the same tyme came the disciples vnto Iesus, and sayde: "Who is the greatest in the kyngdome of heauen? And Iesus called a childe vnto him, and set him in the myddest amonge them, and sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: Excepte ye turne and become as children,<sup>a</sup> ye shal not entre in to the kyngdome of heauen. Whosoever therefore humbleth him self as this childe, ⁊ same is the greatest in ⁊ kyngdome of heauen. And who so receaueth soch a childe in my name, receaueth me. <sup>b</sup> But who so offendeth one of these litle ones which beleue in me, it were better for him, that a mylstone were hanged aboute his neck, and he drowned in the depth of the see.

Wo vnto the worlde because of slaunders. <sup>c</sup> Yee there must slaunders come: but wo vnto that man, by whom slaunders commeth. <sup>d</sup> But yf thy hande or thy fote offende the, cut him of, and cast him from the. Better it is for the to entre in vnto life with one eye, the to haue two eyes, and to be cast in to hell fyre.

Take hede, <sup>f</sup> ye despyse not one of these litle ones. For I saye vnto you: their angels do alwaye beholde the face of my father which is in heauen: for the sonne of man is come to saue that which is lost. How thinke ye? <sup>g</sup> Yf a man haue an hundreth shepe, and one of the be gone astraye, doth not he leaue the nyentie and nyene in the mountaynes, and goeth, and seketh that one which is gone astraye? And yf it happen that he fynde it, verely I saye vnto you: he reioyseth more ouer it, then ouer the nyentie ⁊ nyene which wote not astraye. Euen so is it not the will before youre father in heauen, that one of these litle ones shulde perishe.

But yf he heare the not, then take yet with the one or two, that in the mouth of two or thre wytnesses,<sup>i</sup> euery matter maye be stablyshed. Yf he heare not them, tell it vnto the congregacion. Yf he heare not the cōgregacion, holde him as an Heithen and Publican. ŷ trespasseth agaynst me? Seuē tymes? Iesus saide vnto hi: I saye not vnto ŷ seuē tymes, but seuētie tymes seven tymes. Therefore is ŷ kingdome of heauē likened vnto a kynge which wolde reken with his seruauntes. And whan he beganne to rekē, one was brought vnto him, which ought him ten thousande pouēde. Now whā he had nothinge to paye his lorde cōmaunded him to be solde, ⁊ his wife ⁊ his childrē, ⁊ all ŷ he had, ⁊ payment to be made. Then the seruaunt fell downe, ⁊ besought him, sayenge: Syr, haue paciēce with me, and I wil paye the all. Then had the lorde pytie on that seruaunt, ⁊ discharged him, and forgaue him the dett.

One of the same seruaunt wēte out, ⁊ fōūde one of his felowes, which ought him an hūdreth pens, and layed hande vpon him, and toke him by the throte, and sayde: paye me that thou owest. Thē his felowe fell downe, and besought him, sayenge: haue paciēce with me, and I wil paye the all. Neuertheles, he wolde not, but wente and cast him in to preson, tyll he shulde paye the dett. Whan his felowes sawe what was done, they were very sory, and came and tolde their lorde all that had happened. Then his lorde called for him, and sayde vnto him: °O thou wicked seruaūt, I forgaue the all this dett, because thou praydest me: shuldest not thou then haue had compassion also vpon thy felowe, euen as I had pytie vpon the? And his lorde was wroth, and deluyered him vnto the iaylers, tyll he payed all that he ought. °So shal my heauenly father do also vnto you, yf ye euery one of you frō your hertes, forgeue not his brother his trespasses.

The xix. Chapter.

AND it came to passe, whā Iesus had ended these sayenges, he gat him frō Galile, ⁊ came i to ŷ coastes of Iewry beyonde Iordane, ⁊ moch people folowed him, and he healed them there.

Then came vnto him the Pharises ⁊ tēpted him, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Is it lauffull for a man to put away his wife for eny maner of cause? He answered ⁊ sayde vnto thē: Haue ye not red, how ŷ he which made (man) at the begynnyng, made thē mā ⁊ womā, ⁊ sayde:

°For this cause shal a mā leaue father ⁊ mother, ⁊ cleue vnto his wife, and they two shalbe one fleshe. Now are they not twayne then, but one flesh. Let not man therefore put a sunder, ŷ which God hath coupled together.

Then sayde they: Why dyd Moses then cōmaunde to geue a testimonyall of deuorsement, ⁊ to put her away? He sayde vnto thē: Moses (because of ŷ hardnes of youre hertes) suffred you to put away youre wyues: Neuertheles frō the begynnyng it hath not bene so. But I saye vnto you: / Whosoer putteth away his wife (excepte it be for fornicacion) and marieth another, breaketh wedlocke. And who so marieth her ŷ is deuorced, comnytteth aduoutrye.

Then sayde his disciples vnto him: Yf ŷ matter be so betwene mā and wife, thē is it not good to mary. But he sayde vnto them: All mē can not cōprehende ŷ sayenge, saue they to whō it is geuē. °For there be some gelded, which are so borne from their mothers wombe: and there be some gelded, which are gelded of men: ⁊ there be some gelded, which haue gelded thē selues for the kyngdome of heauens sake. He that can cōprehende it, let him comrehende it.

°Then were brought vnto him yōge children, ŷ he shulde put his hondes vpon thē, ⁊ praye. And ŷ disciples rebuked them. But Iesus sayde: Suffre ŷ childrē, ⁊ forbyd thē not to come vnto me, for vnto soch belōgeth the kyngdome of heauen. And whā he had layed his hōdes vpō thē, he departed thēce.

And beholde, one came vnto him, and sayde: °Good master, what good shal I do, ŷ I maye haue the euer lastinge life? He sayde vnto him: Why callest thou me good? there is none good, but God onely. °Neuertheles yf thou wilt entre in to life, kepe ŷ * cōmaudemētes. Thē sayde, he vnto him: Which? Iesus saide: Thou shalt not kyll: thou shalt not breake wedlocke: thou shalt not steale: ° thou shalt beare no false wytnes: Honour father and mother: and thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy self. Then sayde the yonge mā vnto him: °All these haue I kepte frō my youth vp: what lack I yet? Iesus sayde vnto him: Yf thou wilt be perfecte,

D Iesus sayde vnto his disciples: 'Verely I saie vnto you: it shalbe harde for a rich man to entre in to the kyngdome of heauē. And morouer I saie vnto you: It is easier for a Camell to go thorow the eye of a nedle, thē for a rich man to entre in to the kyngdome of heauen. Whan his disciples herde that, they were exceedingly amased, and sayde: Who can thē be saued? 'Then answered Peter ⁊ sayde vnto him: Beholde, we haue forsakē all, and folowed thee: What shal we haue therfore? Iesus sayde vnto thē: Verely I saie vnto you: that when the sonne of man<sup>d</sup> shal sytt in the seate of his maiestye, ye which haue folowed me in the new byrth, shal syt also vpon twolue seates, and iudge þ twolue trybes of Israel.<sup>e</sup> And who so euer forsaketh houses or brethrē,<sup>f</sup> or sisters, or fathers, or mother, or wife, or children, or londes, for my names sake, the same shal receaue an hundredth folde, and inheret euerlastinge life. <sup>g</sup> But many that be the first, shalbe the last: and the last shal be the first.

The ii. Chapter.

A THE kyngdome of heauen is like vnto an housholder, which wēte out early in the mornynge, to hyre labourers in to his vynyarde. And whā he had agreed with the labourers for a peny a daye, he sent thē in to his vynyarde. And about þ thirde houre he wente out, and sawe other standinge ydle in the market place, and sayde vnto them: Go ye also in to my vynyarde, ⁊ what so euer is right, I wil geue it you. And they wēte their waye. Agayne, he wēte out aboute the sixte and nyenth houre, and dyd likewise, And aboute the eleuenth houre he wēte out, and founde other stōdyng ydle, and sayde vnto them: Why stonde ye here all the daye ydle? They sayde vnto him: because no man hath hyred us. He saide vnto thē: Go ye also in to my vynyarde, and loke what is right, ye shal haue it. Now whan euen was come, the lorde of the vynyarde sayde vnto his stewarde: Call the labourers, and geue them their hyre, begynnynge from the last vnto þ first. Then they that were hyred aboute the eleuenth houre, came and receaued euery man a peny. B But whan the first came, they supposed that they shulde receaue more: and they also receaued euery man a peny. And whan they had receaued it, they murmured agaynst the housholder, and sayde: These last haue wrought but one houre, and thou hast made thē equall vnto us, which haue borne the burthen and heate of the daye. He answered and sayde vnto one of them: frende, I do þ no wronge: diddest not thou agree with me for a peny? Take that thine is, and go thy waye. I wil geue vnto this last also, like as vnto the. <sup>h</sup> Or haue I not power, to do as me listeth with myne owne? Is thine eye euell, because I am good? <sup>i</sup> So the last shalbe the first, ⁊ the first the last. For many are called, but few are chosen.

<sup>m</sup> And Iesus wente vp to Ierusalem, and toke the twolue disciples asyde in the waye, and sayde vnto them: Beholde, we go vp to Ierusalem, and the sonne of man shalbe deliuered vnto the hye prestes and scribes: ⁊ they shal condemne him to death, and shal deliuer him vnto þ Heithen, to be mocked to be scourged, and to be crucified. And the thirde daye he shal ryse agayne.

Then came vnto him the mother of Zebēdes childrē with hir sonnes,<sup>n</sup> fell downe before him, and desyred a certayne thinge of hī. And he saide vnto her: What wilt thou? She sayde vnto him: Let these two sonnes of myne syt in thy kyngdome: the one vpon thy right honde, ⁊ the other vpon thy left honde. But Iesus answered, and sayde: Ye wote not what ye axe. Maye ye drynke the cuppe, that I shal drynke? ⁊ to be baptised with the baptye, that I shalbe baptysed withall? They sayde vnto him: Yee that we maye. And he sayde vnto them: My cuppe truly shal ye drynke, ⁊ with the baptye y I shal be baptysed withall, shal ye be baptysed: Neuertheles to syt vpon my right honde ⁊ on <sup>b</sup> When the ten herde that, they disdayned at the two brethren. But Iesus called them vnto him, and sayde: Ye knowe that y prynces of the worlde haue domynacion of the people, and the greatest *exercise power amonge thē. It shal not be so amonge you. But who so euer wyl be greate amonge you, let him be youre mynister: ⁊ who soeuer wyl be chefe, let him be youre seruauant: Euen as the sonne of man came, not to be serued, but to do seruyce, and to geue his life to a redēpcion for many.

<sup>c</sup> And when they departed from Iericho, moch people folowed him: and beholde, two blynde men sat by the waye syde: And when they herde that Iesus passed by, they cried ⁊ sayde. O LORDE, thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon vs. But y people rebuked thē, that they shulde holde their peace. Neuertheles they cried the more, ⁊ sayde: O LORDE, thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon vs. And Iesus stode styll, and called them, and sayde: What wil ye, y I shal do vnto you? They sayde vnto him: LORDE, that oure eyes maye be opened. And Iesus had compassion vpon them, and touched their eyes: ⁊ immediatly their eies receaued sight. And they folowed him.

The xxi. Chapter.

<sup>a</sup> NOW when they drew nye vnto Ierusalem,<sup>d</sup> and were come to Bethphage vnto mount Oliuete, Iesus sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go in to the towne that lyeth before you, ⁊ anone ye shal fynde an Asse bounde, and hir foale with her: louse them, and brynge thē vnto me. And yf eny man saye ought vnto you, saye ye the LORDE hath nede of thē, And straight waye he wil let them go. But all this was done, that the thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoken by the prophet, sayenge: <sup>e</sup>Tell the daughter of Sion: beholde, thy kynge commeth vnto y meke, syttinge vpon an Asse and a foale of y Asse vsed to the yocke. The disciples wente, and dyd as Iesus commaunded them, and brought the Asse and the foale, ⁊ layed their clothes vpon them, and set him thereon. But many of the people spred their /garmentes in the waye: other cut downe braunches from the trees, and strawed them in the waye. As for the people that wente before and that came after, they cryed and sayde: Hosianna vnto the sonne of Dauid, <sup>f</sup>Blessed be he that commeth in the name of the LORDE, Hosianna in the heignt.

And whan he was come in to Ierusalem, <sup>g</sup>all the cite was moued, and sayde: <sup>h</sup>Who is this? And the people sayde: This is Iesus y prophet of Nazareth out of Galile. And Iesus wente in to the tēple of God, and cast out all them that bought and solde in the tēple, and ouerthrew the tables of the money chaungers, and the seates of them that solde doues, and sayde vnto them: It is wryttē: <sup>i</sup>My house shalbe called y house of prayer, but ye haue made it a denne of murthurers. The blynde also and y lame came vnto him in the temple, and he healed them.

But whan the hye prestes and the scribes sawe the wonders that he dyd, and the children crienge in the temple and sayenge: Hosianna vnto the sonne of Dauid, they disdayned, and sayde vnto him: Hearest thou what these saye? Iesus sayde vnto them: Yee. Haue ye neuer red: <sup>k</sup>Out of the mouth of yre vabes and sucklings thou hast ordeyned prayse? And he left them there, <sup>l</sup>and wente out of the cite vnto Bethania, and there abode ouer night.

<sup>m</sup> But in the mornynge as he returned in to the cite, he hūgred. And in the waye he sawe a fygge tre, and came vnto it, and founde nothinge thereon, but leaues onely, <sup>n</sup>and sayde vnto it: Neuer frute growe on the fro hence forth. And immediatly the fygge tre wythred awaye. And whan his disciples sawe that, they marueyled, and sayde. How is y fygge tre wythred awaye so soone? Iesus answered <sup>o</sup>and sayde vnto them: Verely I saye vnto you: <sup>p</sup>Yf ye haue faith ⁊ doute not, ye shal not onely do this with the fygge tre, but yf ye shal saye vnto this mountayne: Avoide, and cast thy self in to the see, it shal be done. <sup>q</sup>And what soeuer ye axe in prayer, yf ye beleue, ye shal receaue it.

And when he was come in to the tēple, the chefe prestes and the elders of the people came vnto him (as he was teachinge) & sayde: "By what auctorite doest thou these thinges? and who gaue the this auctorite? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: I wil axe a worde of you also: which yf ye tell me, I in like wyse wyl tell you, by what auctorite I do these thinges. The baptyme of Ihō, whēce was it? from heauē, or of men? Then thought they amōge them selues, and saide: Yf we saye it was from heauē, then shal he saye vnto us: Why dyd ye not then beleue him? But yf we saye it was of men, thē feare we the people: For <sup>e</sup>euery mā helde Ihon for a prophet. And they answered Iesus, & sayde: We can not tell. Then sayde he vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these thinges. But what thinke ye? A certayne man had two sonnes, and came to the first, and sayde: Go thy waye my sonne, & worke to daye in my vynyarde. He answered and sayde: I wil not, but afterwarde he repented, and wente. He came also vnto the secōde, and sayde likewise. And he answered and saide: I wil syr. And wēt not. Whether of them twayne dyd the wil of the father? They sayde vnto him: the first. Iesus sayde vnto thē: Verely I saye vnto you: The publicans and harlottes shal come in to the kyngdome of God before you. <sup>c</sup>For Ihon came vnto you, and taught you <sup>f</sup> right waye and ye beleued him not: but the publicans & harlottes beleued hī. As for you, though ye sawe it, yet were ye not moued with repētaunce, that ye might afterwarde haue beleued him.

Hearē another parable. There was a certayne housholder which planted a vynyarde,<sup>d</sup> and hedged it rūde aboute, and dyged a wyne presse in it, and built a tower, and let it out vnto huszbandmen, and wente in to a straunge cōuntre. Now whā the tyme of the frute drew neare, he sent his seruauētes to the huszbandmen, to receaue the frutes of it. Then the huszbandmen caught his seruauētes: one they bett, another they kylled, the thirde they stoned. Agayne, he sent other seruauētes, moo then the first, and they dyd vnto them in like maner. At the last he sent his owne sonne vnto them, and sayde: they wyl stōde in awe of my sonne. But whē the huszbandmē sawe the sonne, they sayde amonge thē selues: This is the Heyre, come, let us kyl hym,<sup>e</sup> and take his inheritaunce vnto oure selues. And they caught him, and thrust him out of the vynyarde, & slew him. Now whē the lorde of the vynyarde commeth, what wyl he do with those huszbandmen? They sayde vnto him: He wyl cruelly destroye those euell personnes, & let out his vynyarde vnto other huszbadmen, which shal delyuē him the frute at tymes couenyent.

Iesus sayde vnto thē: Dyd ye neuer rede in the scriptures: The same stone which the buylders refused,<sup>f</sup> is become the heade stone in the corner? This was the LORDES doynge, & it is maruelous i oure eyes. Therefore I saie vnto you: The kingdome of God shalbe takē frō you, & shalbe geuē vnto the Heithē, which shal brynge forth <sup>g</sup> frutes of it. And who so falleth vpō this stone, shalbe brokē in peces:<sup>g</sup> & loke vpō whom it falleth, it shal grynde him to poulder.<sup>h</sup> And when the hye prestes & Pharises herde his parables, they perceaued, that he spake of them.<sup>i</sup> And they wente aboute to take him, but they feared <sup>j</sup> people, because <sup>k</sup> they helde hī for a prophet.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND Iesus answered, and spake vnto thē <sup>a</sup> agayne by parables, & sayde: The kingdome of heauen is like vnto a kyngē,<sup>a</sup> which maried his sonne. And sent forth his seruauētes, to <sup>b</sup> call the gēstes vnto the mariage, & they wolde not come. Agayne, he sent forth other seruauētes, and sayde: Tell the gēstes: Beholde, I haue prepared my dynner, myne oxen and my fed catell are kylled, and all thinges are readye, come to the mariage. But they made light of it, and wente their wayes: one to his huszbandrye, another to his marchaundise. As for the remnauē, they toke his seruauētes, and intreated thē shamefully, and slew thē. When the kyngē herde that, he was wroth, and sent forth his warryers, and destroyed those murtherers, and set fyre vpon their cite. Then sayde he vnto his seruauētes: The mariage in dede is prepared, but the gestes were not worthy. Go youre waye out therefore in to þ̄ hye wayes, and as many as ye fynde, byd them to the mariage. And the seruantes wēte out in to the hye wayes, and gathered together as many as they coulde fynde, both good and bad, ⁊ the tables were all full. Then the kynge wēte in, to se the gestes, and spyed there a man that had not on a weddyng garment, and sayde vnto him: Frende, how earnest thou in hither, ⁊ hast not on a weddyng garment? And he was euen spechlesse. Then sayde the kynge vnto his seruantes: <sup>a</sup>Take and bynde him hande and fote, ⁊ cast him into þ̄ vtter darcknes: there shal be waylinge and gnashinge of teth. For many be called, but few are chosē.<sup>b</sup>

Then wente the Pharises, and toke counsell, how they might tangle him in his wordes, and sent vnto him their disciples with Herodes officers, and sayde: Master, we knowe that thou art true, and teachest the waye of God truly, and carest for no mā: for thou regardest not the outwarde appearaunce of mē. Tell us therefore, how thinkest thou? Is it lauffull to geue tribute vnto the Emperoure, or not? Now whā Iesus perceaued their wickednes, he sayde: O ye ypocrites, why tēpte ye me? Shewe me þ̄ tribute money. And they toke hī a peny. And he saide vnto thē: Whose is this ymage and superscription? They sayde vnto him: The Emperours. Then sayde he vnto them: <sup>c</sup>Geue therefore vnto the Emperour, that which is the Emperours: and geue vnto God, that which is Gods. When they herde that, they marueyled, and left him, ⁊ wēte their waye.

The same daye there came vnto him the Saducees<sup>d</sup> (which holde that there is no resurreccion) and axed him, and sayde: Master, Moses sayde: <sup>e</sup>Yf a man dye, hauynge no children, his brother shal mary his wife, ⁊ rayse vp sede vnto his brother. Now were there with us seuē brethren. The first married a wife, and dyed: ⁊ for somoch as he had no sede, he left his wife vnto his brother. Like wyse the secōde, and thirde vnto the seuēth. Last of all the woman dyed also. Now in the resurreccion, whose wife shal she be of the seuen? For they all had her. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Ye erre, and vnderstōde not the scriptures, ner the power of God. In the resurreccion they shal nether mary, ner be married, but are as the angels of God in heauen.

As touchinge the resurrecciō of the deed, haue ye not red, what is spoken vnto you of God, which sayeth: I am the God of Abraham, and þ̄ God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob? Yet is not God a God of the deed, but of the lyuynge. And whan the people herde that, they were astonnyed at his doctryne.

When the Pharises herde,<sup>f</sup> that he had stopped the mouth of the Saduces, they gathered them selues together. And one of them (a Scribe) tēpted him, and sayde: Master, which is the chefest commaudemēt in the lawe? Iesus saide vnto him: Thou shalt loue the LORDE thy God with all thy hert,<sup>g</sup> with all thy soule, and with all thy mynde: this is the pryncipall and greatest cōmaundement. As for the seconde, it is like vnto it: <sup>h</sup>Thou shalt loue thy neyghboure as thy self. In these two commaundementes hange all the lawe and the prophetes.

Now why the Pharises were gathered together,<sup>i</sup> Iesus axed them, and sayde: What thinke ye of Christ? Whose sonne is he? They sayde vnto him: Dauids. He sayde vnto them: How then doth Dauid in sprete, call him LORDE, sayenge: The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: <sup>j</sup>Syt thou on my right honde, tyll I make thine enemies thy fote stole. Yf Dauid now call him LORDE, how is he then his sonne? And no man coude answer him one worde, nether durst eny man axe him eny mo questiōs, frō that daye forth.

of their fyngers. All their workes do they to be sene of men. They set abrode their Philateries,* and make large borders vpon their garmentes, and loue to syt vppermost at the table, and to haue the chefe seates in the synagoges, and loue to be saluted in the market, and to be called of mē Rabbi.

But ye shal not suffre youre selues to be called Rabbi, for one is youre master, euen Christ, and all ye are brethren. And call no man father vpon earth, for one is youre father, which is in heauē. And ye shal not suffre youre selues to be called masters, for one is youre master, namely, Christ. He that is greatest amōge you, shalbe youre seruauant. For who so exalteth himself, shal be brought lowe: and he that humbleth himself, shalbe exalted.

Wo vnto you Scribes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes,<sup>c</sup> that shut vp the kyngdome of heauen before men: Ye come not in youre selues, nether suffre ye them to enter, that wolde be in.

Wo vnto you Scribes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes, that deuoure wyddowes houses, and that vnder the couloure of prayenge longe prayers, therefore shal ye receaue ſ greater damnacion.

Wo vnto you Scribes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes, which compasse see and lōde to make one †Proselyte: and whan he is become one, ye make of him a childe of hell, two folde more then ye youre selues are.

Wo vnto you blyndegydes, which saye: Who so euer sweareth by the temple, that is nothinge: but who so euer sweareth by the golde of the temple, he is giltye. Ye fooles and blynde, whether is greater? the golde, or the tēple that sanctifieth the golde? And who so euer sweareth by the altare, that is nothinge: but who so euer sweareth by the offeringe that is vpō it, he is giltye. Ye fooles and blynde, whether is greater? the offeringe, or the altare that sanctifieth the offeringe? Therefore who so sweareth by the altare, sweareth by the same, and by all that is theron: and who so sweareth by the temple, sweareth by the same, and by him that dwelleth therin. And who so sweareth by Wo vnto you scribes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes,<sup>c</sup> which tythe Mynt, Anyse and Commyn, and leaue the waightier matters of the lawe behynde: namely, iudgment, mercy, and fayth. These ought to haue bene done, and not to leaue the other behynde. O ye blynde gydes, which strayne out a gnat, but swalowe vp a Camell.

Wo vnto you scribes and Pharises, ye Ypocrites, which make cleane the vtter syde of the cuppe and platter, but within are ye full of robbery and †excesse. Thou blynde Pharise, clense first the in syde of the cuppe and platter, that the out syde maye be cleane also.

Wo vnto you scribes and Pharises, ye Ypocrites, which be like vnto paynted Sepulchres, that appeare beutyfull outward, but within they are full of deed mens bones and all fylthines. Euen so are ye also: Outwarde ye appeare righteous vnto men, but within ye are full of ypocrisie and iniquyte.

Wo vnto you scribes and Pharises, ye ypocrites, which buyde the tombes of the prophetes, and garnysh the sepulchres of the righteous, and saye: Yf we had bene in oure fathers tyme, we wolde not haue bene partakers with them in the bloude of the prophetes. Therefore ye be wytnesses vnto youre selues, that ye are the children of them, which slew the prophetes. Go to, fulfill ye also the measure of youre fathers. O ye serpentes, O ye generacion of vyppers, how wyl ye escape the damnacion of Hell?

Therefore beholde, I sende vnto you prophetes and wyse men, and scribes,<sup>e</sup> and some of them shal ye kyll and crucifye, and some of them shal ye scourge in youre synagoges, and persecute them from cite to cite: that vpon you maye come all the righteous bloude which hath bene shed vpon ſ earth, from the bloude of righteous Abel,<sup>f</sup> vnto ſ bloude of Zachary ſ sonne of Barachias, whom ye slew betwene the temple and the altare.<sup>g</sup> Verely I saye vnto you: All these thinges shal light vpō this generacion. The xxiij. Chapter.

AND Iesus wente out and departed from the temple,<sup>c</sup> and his disciples came vnto him, to shew him the buyldinge of the temple. But Iesus sayde vnto them: Se ye not all these thinges? Verely I saye vnto you: there shal not be left here one stone vpon another, <sup>f</sup> shal not be cast downe. And as he sat vpon the mount Oliuete, his disciples came vnto him secretly, <sup>g</sup> saide: Tell us, whē shal these thinges come to passe? and which shal be the token of thy cōmyng, and of the ende of the worlde? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: Take hede, that no man disceaue you. For there shal many come in my name, and saye: I am Christ, and shal disceaue many.

Ye shal heare of warres, and of <sup>f</sup> noyse of warres: take hede, and be not ye troubled. All these thinges must first come to passe, but the ende is not yet. For one people shall ryse vp agaynst another,<sup>e</sup> and one realme agaynst another: and there shalbe pestilēce, hongre, and earthquakes here <sup>g</sup> there. All these are the begynnyng of sorowes.

33 When ye therefore shal se the abhominacion of desolacion<sup>m</sup> (wher of it is spokē by Daniel the prophet) stonde in the holy place (who so readeth it, let him marck it well) thē let thē

But wo vnto them that are with childe, and to them that gene suck in those dayes. But praye ye, that youre flight be not in <sup>f</sup> wynter, ner on the Sabbath. For then shal there be greate trouble, soch as was not from the begynnyng of the worlde vnto this tyme, ner shalbe. Yee and excepte those daies shulde be shortened, there shulde no flesh be saued: but for <sup>f</sup> chosens sake those dayes shalbe shortened.

<sup>n</sup> Then yf eny man shal saye vnto you: lo, here is Christ, or there, beleue it not. For there shal aryse false Christes and false prophetes,<sup>o</sup> and shal do greate tokēs and wonders: In so moch, that (yf it were possible) the very chosen shulde be brought in to erreure. Beholde, I haue tolde you before. Wherefore yf they shal saye vnto you: Beholde, he is in the wildernes, go not ye forth: Beholde, he is in the chamber, beleue it not. For like as the lightenyng goeth out from the East, and shyneth vnto the west, so shal the commyng of the sonne of man be. For where so euer a deed carcase is,<sup>p</sup> there wyl the Aegles be gathered together.

<sup>q</sup> Immediately after the trouble of the same tyme, shal the Sonne and Moone lose their light, and the starres shall fall from heauen, and the powers of heauen shal moue: and then shal appeare the token of the sonne of man in heauē: and then shal all the kynreds of the earth mourne, and they shal se the sonne of man come in the cloudes of heauen with greate power and glory. And he shal sende his angels with <sup>f</sup> greate voyce of a trompe,<sup>r</sup> <sup>g</sup> they shal gather together his chosen from the foure wyndes, from one ende of the heauen to the other.

<sup>e</sup>THEN shal the kyngdome of heauen be like vnto ten virgins, which toke their lāpes, and wente forth to mete the brydegrome. But fyue of them were foolish, and fyue were wyse. The foolish toke their lāpes, neuertheles they toke none oyle with them. But the wyse toke oyle in their vessels with their lampes. Now whyle the brydegrome taried, they slombred all and slepte. But at mydnight there was a crye made: Beholde, the brydegrome commeth, go youre waye out for to mete him. Then all those virgins arose, and prepared their lampes. But the foolish sayde vnto the wyse: geue vs of youre oyle, for oure lāpes are gone out. Then answered the wyse, and sayde: Not so, lest there be not ynough for vs and you, but go rather vnto them that sell, and bye for youre selues. And whyle they wente to bye, the brydegrome came: and they that were readye, wente in with him vnto the mariage, and the gate was shut vp. At ⁊ last came ⁊ other virgins also, and sayde: <sup>f</sup>LORDE LORDE, opē vnto vs. But he answered, and sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: I knowe you not. Watch ye therefore, for ye knowe nether the daye ner yet the houre, whan ⁊ sonne of man shal come.

Like wyse as a certayne mā ready to take his iourney in to a straunge countre, <sup>g</sup>called his seruauentes, and delynered his goodes vnto thē. And vnto one he gaue fyue talentes, to another two, and to another one: vnto euery man after his abilyte, and straight waye departed. Then he that had receaued the fyue talentes, wente and occupied with the same, and wanne other fyue talentes. Likewyse he ⁊ receaued two talentes, wāne other two also. But he that receaued ⁊ one wente and dygged a pyt in the earth, and hyd his lordes money. After a longe season the lorde of those seruauentes came, and rekened with them. Then came he that had receaued fyue talentes, and brought other fyue talentes, and sayde: Syr, thou delyuerdst vnto me fyue talentes: Beholde, with them haue I wonne fyue talētes mo. Then sayde his lorde vnto hī: wel thou good ⁊ faithfull seruau, thou hast bene faithfull ouer litle, I wil set the ouer moch: entre thou in to the ioye of thy lorde. Thē came he also that had receaued two talentes, and sayde: Syr, thou delyuerdst vnto me two talentes: Beholde, I haue wonne two other talētes with thē. His lorde sayde vnto him: Wel thou good and faithfull seruau, thou hast bene faithfull ouer litle, I wil set the ouer moch: entre thou in to the ioye of thy lorde.

Then shal they also answer hi, and saye : LORDE, when sawe we the hōgrie, or thirstie, or herbourlesse, or naked, or sicke, or in preson, and haue not mystrired vnto the ? Thē shal he answer them, and saye : Verely I saye vnto you : <sup>r</sup>Loke what ye haue not done vnto one of the leest of these, the same haue ye not done vnto me. ### The xxi. Chapter.

AND it came to passe whā Iesus had <sup>s</sup> finished all these wordes, he sayde vnto his disciples : Ye knowe, that after two dayes shalbe Easter, and the sonne of man shalbe deluyered to be crucified.<sup>t</sup>

Then <sup>u</sup> assembled together the hye prestes and the scribes, and the elders of the people in to the palace of the hye prest which was called Caiphas, and helde a counsell, how they might take Iesus by disceate, and kyll him. But they sayde : Not on the holy daye, lest there be an vproure in the people.

Now when Iesus was at Bethany<sup>v</sup> in the house of Symon the leper, there came vnto hī a woman, which had <sup>w</sup> a boxe with precious oyntment, and poured it vpon his heade, as he sat at the table. Whan his disciples sawe that, they diszdayned, and sayde : Where to serueth this waist ? This oyntnēt might haue bene wel solde, and geuē to the poore. Whē Iesus perceaued that, he sayde vnto them : Why trouble ye the woman ? She hath wrought a good worke vpon me for ye haue allwaye the poore with you,<sup>x</sup> but me shal ye not haue allwayes. Where as she hath poured this oyntnēt vpon my body, she dyd it to bury me. Verely I saye vnto you : where so euer this gospell shalbe preached throw out all the worlde, there shal this also that she hath done, be tolde for a memoriall of her.

Then one of the twolue (called Iudas Iscarioth) wente vnto the hye prestes, and sayde: "What wil ye geue me, and I shal deluyner him vnto you? And they offred hi thirtie syluer pens. And from that tyme forth, he sought oportunitie to betraye him.

The first daye of swete bred came the disciples to Iesus,<sup>a</sup> and sayde vnto him: Where wilt thou that we prepare for the, to eate the Easter lambe? He sayde: Go in to the cite to such a man, and saye vnto him: The Master sendeth the worde: My tyme is at honde, I wil kepe myne Easter by the with my disciples. And the disciples dyd as Iesus had appoynted them, and made ready the Easter lambe.

And at euen he sat downe at the table with the twolue. And as they ate, he sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: One of you shal betraye me. And they were exceeding sorowfull, and beganne euery one of them to saye vnto him: Syr, is it I? He answered and sayde: He that deppeth his honde with me in the dyszhe, the same shal betraye me. The sonne of man goeth forth, as it is wyrtten of him: but wo vnto that man by whō the sonne of man shalbe betrayed: It had bene better for that mā, yf he had neuer bene borne. The Iudas that betrayed him, answered and sayde: Master, is it I? He sayde vnto him: Thou hast sayde.

And as they ate, Iesus toke the bred, gaue thanks,<sup>a</sup> brake it, and gaue it to the disciples, and sayde: Take, eate, this is my body. And he toke the cuppe, and thanked, and gaue it thē, and sayde: Drynke ye all therof, this is my bloude of the new testament, that shalbe shed for many for the remission of synnes. I saye vnto you: I wil not drynke hence forth of this frute of the vyne tre, vntill that daye that I shal drynke it new with you in my fathers kyngdome.

And when they had sayde grace, they wente forth vnto mount Oliuete. Then sayde Iesus vnto them.* This night shal ye all be offended in me. For it is wyrtten: I wil smyte the shepherde, and the shepe of the flocke shalbe scattered abroad. But after that I ryse agayne, I wil go before you in to Galile. Peter answered and sayde vnto him: †Though all men shulde be offended in ſy, yet wyl I neuer be offened. Iesus sayde vnto hi: Verely I saye vnto ſy: This same night before ſy cock crowe, shalt thou denie me thyrse. Peter saide vnto him: And though I shulde dye with the, yet wil I not denye the. Likewyse also sayde all the disciples.

Then came Iesus with them in to a felde which is called Gethsemane, and sayde vnto the disciples: Syt ye here, while I go yonder & praye. And he toke with him Peter, and the two sonnes of Zebede, and beganne to wexe sorowfull and to be in an agonye. Then sayde Iesus vnto them: †My soule is heuy euen vnto the death. Tary ye here, and watch with me. †And he wente forth a litle, and fell flat vpon his face, and prayed sayenge: O my father, yf it be possible, let this cuppe passe fro me: neuertheles not as I wil but as thou wilt. And he came to his disciples, and founde thē a slepe, & sayde vnto Peter: What? coude ye not watch with me one houre? Watch & praye, that ye fall not in to temptacion. †The sprete is wyllinge, but the flesh is weake.

Agayne, he wēte forth the seconde tyme and prayed, sayenge: O my father, yf this cuppe can not passe awaye fro me (excepte I drynke of it) thy will be fulfilled. And he came, and founde them a slepe agayne, and their eyes were heuy. And he left them, and wente forth agayne, and prayed the thirde tyme, sayenge the same wordes. Then came he to his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Slepe on now, and take youre rest. Beholde, the houre is come, & the sonne of man shalbe deluynered in to the hondes of synners: Aryse, let us be goynge. Beholde, he is at hōde, that betrayeth me.

him. And beholde, one of them that were with Iesus, stretched out his honde, and drue his swerde, and stroke a seruaunt of the hye prestes, & smote of his eare: Then sayde Iesus vnto him: Put vp thy swerde in to his place. <sup>a</sup>For all that take the swerde, shal perish with the swerde. Or thinkest thou that I can not praye my father now, to sende me more then twolue legions of angels? But how thē shulde the scriptures be fulfilled? *For thus must it be.

¶ In the same houre sayde Iesus vnto the multitude: <sup>b</sup>Ye are come out as it were to a murthurer with swerdes and staues for to take me. I sat daylie teachinge in the temple amonge you, and ye toke me not. But all this is done, that the scriptures of the <sup>c</sup>prophetes might be fulfilled. †Thē all the disciples left him, and fled. But they that toke Iesus, <sup>d</sup>led him to Caiphās the hye prest, where the scribes and the elders were gathered together. As for Peter, he folowed him a farre of vnto the hye prestes palace, & wente in, and sat with the seruauntes, that he might se the ende.

But the hye prestes and the elders, and the whole counsell sought false wytnesse ageynst Iesus, that they might put him to death, and founde none. And though many false wytnesses stepte forth, yet founde they none. At the last there stepte forth two false wytnesses, & spake: He sayde: I can breake downe the temple of God, <sup>e</sup>and buylde it agayne in thre dayes.

¶ Then the hye prest rente his clothes, and sayde: <sup>i</sup>He hath blasphemed, what nede we eny mo wytnesses? Lo, now haue ye herde his blasphemy: What thinke ye? They answered, & sayde: He is gyltie of death. <sup>j</sup>Then <sup>k</sup>spytted they in his face, & smote him with fistes. Some smote him vpon the face, and sayde: Prophecie vnto us thou Christ, who is it, that smote the?

<sup>l</sup>As for Peter, he sat without in the palace. And there came vnto him a damsell, and sayde: And thou wast with Iesus of Galile also. Neuertheles he denyed before thē all, and sayde: I can not tell what thou sayest. But whan he wēte out at the dore, another damsell sawe him, and sayde vnto them that were there: This was also with Iesus of Nazareth. And he denyed agayne, and sware also: I knowe not the mā. And after a litle whyle, they that stode there, stepte forth, and sayde vnto Peter: Of a trueth thou art one of them also, for thy speach bewrayeth the. Then begāne he to curse and to swear: I knowe not the man. And immediately the cock crew. Then thought Peter vpon the wordes of Iesus, which sayde vnto him: <sup>m</sup>before the cock crow, thou shalt denye me thrise. And he wente out, and wepte bytterly.

The xxvij. Chapter.

V PON the morow, all the hye prestes and elders of the people helde a counsell agaynst Iesus, <sup>n</sup>that they might put him to death, and bounde him, and led him forth, and delyuered him vnto <sup>o</sup>Pontius Pilate the debyte.

When Iudas which betrayed him, sawe this that he was condemned vnto death, it repented him, and brought agayne the thirtie syluer pens to the hye prestes and the elders, and sayde: I haue done euell, in that I haue betrayed innocēt bloude. They sayde: What haue we to do with <sup>p</sup>ŷ? Se thou therto. And he cast the syluer pens in the tēple, and <sup>q</sup>gat him awaye, and wente and hanged him self.

So the hye prestes toke the syluer pens, and sayde: It is not lauffull to put them in to the Gods chest, for it is bloudmoney. Neuertheles they helde a counsell, and bought with thē a potters felde, for to burye straügers in. Wherefore the same felde is called the bloudfelde vnto this daye. Then was that fulfilled, which was spoken by Ieremy the prophet sayenge: "And they toke thirtie syluer pens, the pryce of him that was solde, whom they bought of the children of Israell: and these they gaue for a potters felde, as the LORDE commaunded me.

B As for Iesus, he stode before the debyte, and the debyte axed him, and sayde: "Art thou the kyng of the Iewes? And Iesus sayde vnto him: Thou sayest it. And whā he was accused of the hye prestes and elders, he answered nothinge. Then sayde Pylate vnto him: Hearest thou not, how sore they accuse the? And *he answered him not one worde: in so moch that the debyte marueled exceedingly.

At that feast, the debyte was wōte to delyuer a presoner fre vnto the people, whom they wolde. And at the same tyme he had a notable presoner called Barrabas. And whan they were gathered together, Pylate sayde vnto them: Whether wil ye, that I geue lowse vnto you? Barrabas, or Iesus which is called Christ? For he knewe well that they had delyuered him of enuye. And whā he sat vpō the iudgmēt seate, his wife sent vnto him, sayenge: Haue thou nothinge to do with that righteous man, for I haue suffred many thinges this daye in a dreame because of him.

C But the hye prestes and the elders perswaded the people, "that they shulde axe Barrabas, and destroye Iesus. Then answered the debyte, and sayde vnto thē: "Whether of these two wyl ye ŷ I geue lowse vnto you? They sayde: "Barrabas: Pylate sayde vnto them: What shal I do then with Iesus, which is called Christ? They sayde all: let him be crucified. The debyte saide: What euell hath he done thē? Neuertheles they cried yet more and sayde, let him be crucified. So whan Pylate sawe, that he coude not helpe, but that there was a greater vproure, he toke water, and washed his handes before the people, and sayde: I am vngiltie of ŷ bloude of this righteous man. Se ye therto. Then answered all the people, and sayde: His bloude come vpon vs, and vpon oure children. "Then gaue he Barrabas lowse vnto thē, but caused Iesus be scourged, and delyuered him to be crucified.

D Then the debites soudryers toke Iesus, in to the comon hall, "and gathered the whole multitude ouer him, and stryped him out of his clothes, and put a purple robe vpō him, and plated a crowne of thorne, and set it vpon his heade, and a rede in his hāde, and kneeled before him, and mocked him, and sayde: hayle kyng of the Iewes. And spytted vpon him, and toke ŷ rede, and smote him vpon the heade. And whā they had mocked hī, they toke the robe of him ageyne, and put his owne clothes vpon him, and led him forth, ŷ they might crucifie hī. "And as they were goinge out, they founde a man of Cyren called Symon: him they compelled to beare his crosse. And when they came vnto the place called "Golgatha (that is to saye by interpretaciō a place of deed mens sculles) they gaue him to drynke, veneger myxte with gall. And whan he had tasted therof, he wolde not drynke.

"So whan they had crucified him, they parted his garmētes, and cast lottes therfore: that the thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoken by the prophet: "They haue parted my garmētes amonge thē, and cast lottes vpon my vesture. And there they sat, and watched hī. And aboue ouer his heade, they put vp the cause of his death in wrytinge: namely: "This is the kyng of the Iewes.

E Then were there two murthurers crucified with him, "the one of the right hande, and the other on the left. They that wente by, reuyled him, and wagged their heades and sayde: Thou that breakest downe the tēple of God, and buyldest it in three dayes, helpe thy self. Yf thou be the sonne of God, come downe from the crosse. The hye prestes also in like maner with the scribes and elders, laughed him to scorne, and sayde: he hath helped other, and can not helpe himself: Yf he be the kyng of Israel, let him come downe now from the crosse, and we wil beleue him. "He trusted in God, let him delyuer him now, yf he wil haue him. For he hath sayde: I am the sonne of God. The

¶ And from ƿ sixte houre there was darcknes ouer the whole earth vnto the nyenth houre. And aboute the nyenth houre, Iesus cried with a loude voyce, and sayde: Eli, Eli, Lamma asabthani? that is, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?<sup>a</sup> But some of the the that stode there, when they herde ƿ sayde: he calleth Elias. ¶ And immediatly one of them ranne, and toke a spōge, and fylled it with veneger, and put it vpon a rede, and gaue him to dryncke. ¶ And beholde, the vale of the temple was rente in two peces, from aboue tyll beneth, and the earth quaked, and the stones rent, and the graues opened, and many bodies of the sayntes that slepte, arose, and wēte out of the graues after his resurreccion, and came in to the holy cite, and appeared vnto many.

¶ But the captayne and they that were with him, and kepte Iesus, when they sawe the earthquake and the thinges that were done, they were sore afraied, and sayde: Verely this was Gods sonne. And there were many women there lokinge to asfawe of, which had folowed Iesus from Galile, and had mynistred vnto him: amonge whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Iames and Ioses, and the mother of the children of Zebede.

¶ At euen there came a rich man of Arimathea, called Ioseph,<sup>f</sup> which was also a disciple of Iesus. He wēte vnto Pylate, and axed the body of Iesus. Then commaunded Pylate that the body shulde be geuē him. And Ioseph toke the body, and wrapped it in a cleane linnen cloth, and layed it in his owne new sepulchre, which he had hewen out in a rocke, and rolled a greate stone to the dore of the sepulchre, and wente his waye. And there was Mary Magdalene and ƿ other Mary,<sup>g</sup> syttinge ouer agaynst the sepulchre.

The next daye that foloweth the daye of preparyng, the hye prestes and Pharises came together vnto Pylate, and saide: Syr, we haue called to remembrance, that this disceauer sayde whyle he was yet alyue:* After thre dayes I wyl ryse agayne. Cōmaunde therefore that the sepulchre be kepte vnto the thirde daye, lest peradventure his disciples come, and steale him awaye, and saye vnto the people: He is rysen from the deed, and so shal the last errour be worse thē the first. Pylate sayde vnto them: There haue ye watchmē, go youre waye, and kepe it as ye can. They wēte and kepte the sepulchre with watchmen, and sealed the stone.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

V PON the euenyng of the Sabbath holy daye,<sup>h</sup> which dawneth ƿ morow of the first daye of ƿ Sabbathes, came Mary Magdalene and ƿ other Mary, to se ƿ sepulchre. And beholde, there was made a greate earthquake: for the angell of the LORDE descended from heauen, and came and rolled backe ƿ stone from the dore, and sat vpon it. And his countenance was as ƿ lightenyng, and his clothinge whyte as snowe. But ƿ watch mē were troubled for feare of him, and became as though they were deed.

The angell answered,<sup>i</sup> and sayde vnto ƿ women: Be not ye afraied. I knowe that ye seke Iesus that was crucified. He is not here. He is rysen, as he sayde. The resurreccion of Christ, which appeareth vnto Mary Magdalene and to his disciples, whom he sendeth forth in to the worlde to preach the gospell, and ascēdeth vp in to heauen himself.

The gospell of S. Marke.

The first Chapter.

A THIS is the begynnyng of the gospell of Iesus Christ the sonne of God, as it is wryttē in the prophetes. <sup>a</sup> Beholde, I sende my messauger before thy face, which shal prepare thy waye before the. <sup>b</sup> The voyce of a cryer is in the wyldernes: Prepare the waye of the LORDE, make his pathes straight.

<sup>c</sup> Ihon was in the wyldernes, and baptysed, and preached the baptyme of amendment, for the remysion of synnes. And there wente out vnto him the whole londe of Iewry, and they of Ierusalem, and were all baptysed of him in Iordan, and knewedged their synnes.

<sup>d</sup> Ihon was clothed with Camels heer, and with a lethron gerdell aboute his loynes, and ate locustes and wyld hony, and preached, and sayde: <sup>e</sup> There commeth one after me, which is stronger then I: before whom I am not worthy to stoupe downe, and to lowse vp f lachet of his shue. I baptise you with water, but he shal baptise you with the holy goost.

<sup>f</sup> And it happened at the same tyme, that Iesus came out of Galile from Nazareth, and was baptysed of Ihon in Iordan. And as soone as he was come out of the water, he sawe that the heauens opened, and the goost as a doue cōmyng downe vpon him. And there came a voyce from heauē: Thou art my deare sonne,* in whom I delyte.

B And immediatly the sprete droue him in to the wyldernes: <sup>g</sup> and he was in the wyldernes fourtye dayes, and was tempted of Sathan, and was with the wyld beestes. And the angels mynistred vnto him.

But after that Ihon was taken,<sup>h</sup> Iesus came in to Galile, and preached the gospell of the kyngdome of God, and sayde: the tyme is fulfilled, and the kyngdome of God is at hande: Amende youre selues, and beleue the gospell.

<sup>i</sup> So as he walked by the see of Galile, he sawe Symon and Andrew his brother, castinge their nettes in the see, for they were fyszhers. And Iesus sayde vnto thē: Folowe me, and I wil make you fyszhers of mē.<sup>k</sup> And immediatly they left their nettes, and folowed him.

And when he was gone a lytle further from thence, he sawe Iames the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon his brother, as they were in the shyppe mendyng their nettes. And anone he called them. And they left their father Zebede in the shyppe with the hyred seruautes, and folowed him.

<sup>l</sup> And they wente in to Capernaum, and immediatly vpon the Sabbathes, he entred in to the synagoge, and taught. And <sup>m</sup> they were astonnyed at his doctryne: for he taught them as one hauynge power, and not as the Scrybes.

And in their synagoge there was a man possessed with a foule sprete,<sup>n</sup> which cried and sayde: Oh what haue we to do with the, thou Iesus of Nazareth. Art thou come to destroye us? I knowe that thou art euen y holy one of God. And Iesus reprobued him, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and departe out of him. And the foule sprete tare him, and cried with a loude voyce, and departed out of him. And they were all astonnyed, in so moch that they axed one another amonge thē selues, <sup>o</sup> and sayde: What is this? What new lernynge is this? For he comaundeth the foule spretes with power, and they are obedient vnto him. And immediatly the fame of him was noysed rounde aboute in the coastes and borders of Galile.

<sup>a</sup>And forth with they wente out of the synagoge, and came in to the house of Symō and Andrew, with Iames and Ihon. And Symons mother in lawe laye, ⁊ had the feuers, and anone they tolde him of her. And he came to her, and set her vp, and toke her by ⁊ hande, and the feuer left her immediatly. And she mynistrd vnto them.

<sup>b</sup>At euen whan the Sonne was gone downe, they brought vnto him all that were sick and possessed, and the whole cite was gathered together at the dore, and he healed many that were diseased with dyuerse sicknesses, and cast out many deuels, and suffred not the deuels to speake, because they knew him.

<sup>c</sup>And in the mornynge before daye, he arose, and wente out. And Iesus departed in to a deserte place, and prayed there. Peter also and they that were with him, folowed after him. And whan they had founde him, they sayde vnto him: Euery man seketh the. And he sayde vnto them: Let us go in to the next townes, that I maye preach there also, for therto am I come. And he preached i their synagoges, in all Galile, and droue out the deuyls.

<sup>d</sup>And there came vnto him a leper, which besought him, and kneled before him, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Yf thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And it pitied Iesus, and he stretched forth his honde, and touched him, and sayde: I wyll, be thou cleane. And whā he had so spoken, immediatly the leprosy departed frō him, and he was clensed.<sup>e</sup> And Iesus forbade him strately, and forth with sent him awaye, and sayde vnto him: Take hede, that thou saye nothinge to eny man, but go thy waye, and shew thy self vnto the prest, and offre for thy clensynge what Moses comaunded, for a wytnesse vnto them. But he whan he was departed, beganne to speake moch of it, and made the dede knowne: in so moch that Iesus coude no more go in to the cite openly, but was without in deserte places, ⁊ they came vnto him frō all quarters.

The ij. Chapter.

AND after certayne dayes he wente agayne vnto Capernaum,<sup>f</sup> and it was noysed that he was in ⁊ house. And immediatly there was gathered a greate multitude, in so moch that they had no rowme, no not without before the dore. And he spake the worde vnto thē. And there came vnto him certayne, which brought one sicke of the palsye borne of foure. And when they coude not come nye him for ⁊ people, they vncouered ⁊ rofe of ⁊ house where he was. And when they had made a hole, they let downe the bed (by coardes) wherin the sicke of ⁊ palsy laye. But when Iesus sawe their faith, he sayde vnto the sicke of the palsye: My sonne, thy synnes are forgeuen the.

Neuertheles there were certayne scribes which sat there, ⁊ thought in their hertes: How speaketh this man soch blasphemy? <sup>g</sup>Who can forgeue synnes, but onely God? And immediatly Iesus knew in his sprete, that they thought so in thē selues, and saide vnto them: Why thynke ye soch thinges in youre hertes? Whether is easier to saye to the sicke of the palsye: Thy synnes are forgeuē the, or to saye: aryse, take vp thy bed and walke. But that ye maye knowe, that ⁊ sonne of man hath power to forgeue synnes vpon earth, he sayde vnto the sicke of ⁊ palsye: I saye vnto the, aryse, take vp thy bed, and go home. <sup>h</sup>And immediatly he arose, toke his bed, and wente forth before them all: in so moch that they were all astonnied, and praysed God, and sayde: We neuer sawe soch.

And he wente forth agayne vnto the see, and all the people came vnto him,<sup>i</sup> and he taught them. And as Iesus passed by, he sawe Leui the sonne of Alpheus syttinge at the recaeate of custome, and sayde vnto him: Folowe me. And he arose, and folowed him. And it came to passe as he sat at the table in his house, there sat many publicans ⁊ synners at the table with Iesus and his disciples: For there were many ⁊ folowed him. And whan the scribes and Pharises sawe that he ate with publicans ⁊ synners, they sayde vnto his disciples: Why doth he eate and dryncke

And the disciples of Ihon and of þ̄ Pharises fasted.<sup>b</sup> And there came certayne, which sayde vnto him: Why fast the disciples of Ihon, and of þ̄ Pharises, and thy disciples fast not? And Iesus sayde vnto them: How can the weddinge children fast, whyle the brydegrome is with them? So longe as þ̄ brydegrome is with them, they can not fast. But the tyme wyl come, that the brydegrome shalbe taken from them, and then shal they fast.

No man soweth a peece of new cloth vnto an olde garment, for els he taketh awaye the new peece from the olde, and so is the rēt worse. And no man putteth new wyne in to olde vessels, els the new wyne breaketh the vessels, and the wyne is spylt, and þ̄ vessels perishe: but new wyne must be put in to new vessels.

And it chaunsed that vpon þ̄ Sabbath he wente thorow the corne felde, and his disciples begāne to make a waye thorow, and to plucke the eares of þ̄ corne. And the Pharises sayde vnto him: Beholde, what thy disciples do, which is not lauffull vpon the Sabbath. And he sayde vnto thē: Haue ye neuer red what Dauid dyd, whā he had nede, and was an hongred, both he and they that were with him: how he wente in to the house of God in the tyme of Abiathar the hye prest,<sup>c</sup> and ate the shewbreds (which was lauffull for no man to eate, but for the prestes) and he gaue them vnto him, and to them that were with him? And he sayde vnto them: The Sabbath was made for mans sake, and not man for the Sabbathes sake. Therefore is the sonne of man LORDE enen ouer the Sabbath.

The iij. Chapter.

HE wente agayne also in to the synagoge, and there was there a mā that had a wythred hande.<sup>d</sup> And they marked him, whether he wolde heale him on the Sabbath, that they might accuse him. And he sayde vnto þ̄ mā with the wythred hāde: Steppe forth here.

And he sayde vnto thē: Is it lauffull to do good on the Sabbath? Or is it lauffull to do euell? to saue life, or to kyll? But they helde their tonge. And he lokod rounde aboute vpon them with wrath, and was sory for the harde hertes of thē, and sayde vnto the man: Stretch out thine hande. And he stretched it out. And his hande was made whole like as þ̄ other.

And the Pharises wōte out, and straight waye they helde a counsell with Herodes officers agaynst him, how they might destroye him. But Iesus departed awaye with his disciples vnto the see. And there folowed him moch people out of Galile, and frō Iewry, and from Ierusalē, and out of Idumea, and from beyonde Iordan, and they that dwelt aboute Tyre and Sydon, a greate multitude which had herde of his noble actes, and came vnto him.

And he spake vnto his disciples þ̄ they shulde kepe a shyppe for him because of the people, lest they shulde thrunge him: for he healed many of them, in so moch, that all they which were plagued, preased vpon him, that they might touch him. And whan the foule spretes sawe him,<sup>e</sup> they fell downe before him, and cried, and sayde: Thou art the sonne of God. And he charged them strately, that they shulde not make him knowne.

And he wente vp in to a mountayne, and called vnto him whom he wolde, and they came vnto him. And he ordeyned þ̄ twolue, that they shulde be with him, and that he might sende them out to preach, and that they might haue power to heale sicknesses, and to cast out deuyls. And vnto Symon he gaue the name Peter, and Iames the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon the brother of Iames, and gaue thē the name Bonarges, that is to saye, the children of thonder: and Andrew, and Philippe, and Bartylmew, and Matheue, and Thomas, and Iames þ̄ sonne of Alpheus, and Taddeus, and Symon of Cana, and Iudas Iscarioth which betrayed him.

And they came to house. Then assembled the people together agayne, in so moch that they had no leysure to eate. And when they that were aboute him herde of it, they wente out to holde him. For they sayde: * he

And there came his mother and his brethrē, and stode without, and sente vnto him, and called him. And the people sat aboute him, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thy mother and thy brethrē axe after the without. And he answered, and sayde: Who is my mother and my brethren? And he loked rounde aboute him vpon his disciples, which sat rounde in compasse aboute him, and sayde: Beholde, my mother and my brethren. For who so euer doth the will of God the same is my brother, and my sister and my mother.

The iiii. Chapter.

AND he begāne agayne to teach by f see side. <sup>a</sup>And there gathered moch people vnto him, so that he wente in to a shippe, and sat vpon the water. And all the people stode vpon the londe by the see syde. And he preached longe vnto thē by parables, and sayde vnto thē in his doctryne: Herken to, beholde, there wente out a sower to sowe: & it happened whyle he was sowinge, that some fell by the waye syde. Then came the foules vnder the heauen, and ate it vp. Some fell vpon stonye grounde, where it had not moch earth: and anone it came vp, because it had not depe earth. Now whā the Sonne arose, it caught heate: and in so moch as it had no rote, it wythred awaye. And some fel amonge the thornes, & the thornes grew vp, and choked it, and it gaue no frute. And some fell vpon a good grounde, which gaue frute, that came vp and grew. And some bare thirtie folde, and some sixtie folde, and some an hundreth folde. And he sayde vnto them: Who so hath eares to heare, let him heare.

And whan he was alone, they that were aboute him with the twolue, axed him concernynge this parable. And he sayde vnto thē: Vnto you it is geuen, to knowe the mystery of the kyngdome of God: but vnto them that are without, all thinges happen by parables,<sup>f</sup> that with seynge eyes they maye se, and not discerne: and that with hearinge eares they maye heare, and not vnderstode, lest at eny tyme they turne, and their synnes be forgeuen them. And he sayde vnto them: Vnderstonde ye not this parable? How wyl ye then vnderstonde all other parables?

The sower soweth the worde. <sup>g</sup>These be they that are by the waye syde: where the worde is sowne, and as soone as they haue herde it, immediatly commeth Sathā, and taketh awaye the worde that was sown in their hertes. And likewise are they that are sown on the stonye grounde: which when they haue herde the worde, receaue it with ioye, and haue no rote in them: but endure for a tyme. When trouble and persecucion aryseth for f wordes sake, immediatly they are offended. And these are they that are sown amōge the thornes: which heare the worde, and f carefules of this worlde, and the disceatfulness of riches, and many other lustes entre in, and choke the worde, and so is it made vnfrutefull. And these are they f are sown vpō a good grounde: Which heare f worde, and receaue it, and brynge forth frute: some thirtie folde, and some sixtie folde, and some an hundreth folde.

With what measure ye mete, with the same shal it be measured vnto you agayne. †And vnto you that heare this, shal more be geuen. ‡For who so hath, vnto him shal be geuen: and who so hath not, from him shalbe taken awaye, euen that he hath.

And he sayde: The kyngdome of God is after this maner, as when a man casteth sede vpon the londe, and slepeth, and stondeth vp night and daye, § and the sede spryngeth vp, ¶ groweth, he not knowinge of it. (For the earth bryngeth forth frute of her selfe: first the grasse, afterwarde the eare, then the full wheate in the care.) But whan she hath brought forth the frute, he putteth to the syckell, because the haruest is come.

And he sayde: Where vnto wyl we lickene the kyngdome of God? Or by what symilitude wyl we compare it? †It is like a grayne of mustarde sede, which whā it is sowē vpō the londe, is the leest amonge all sedes of the earth. And whā it is sowed, it groweth vp, and is greater then all herbes, and getteth greate braunches, so y<sup>e</sup> the foules vnder the heauē maye dwell vnder y<sup>e</sup> shadowe therof.

¶ And by many soch parables he spake the worde vnto thē, there after as they might heare it, ¶ without parables spake he nothinge vnto them: but vnto his disciples he expounded all thinges pryuatly. And the same daye at euen he sayde vnto them: † let us passe ouer. And they let the people go, and toke him as he was in the shippe, and there were mo shippes with him. And there arose a greate storme of wynde, and daszhed the waves in to the shippe, so that the shippe was full. And he was behynde in the shippe and slepte vpon a pelowe. And they awoke him ¶ sayde vnto him: Master, Carest thou not, that we perishe? And he arose, and rebuked y<sup>e</sup> wynde, and sayde vnto the see: Peace, and be styll, And the wynde was layed, ¶ there folowed a greate calme. And he sayde vnto them: Why are ye so fearful? How is it, that ye haue no faith? And they feared exceedingly, ¶ sayde one to another:

What is he this? For wynde and see are obedient vnto him.

The v. Chapter.

AND they came ouer vnto the other syde of the see in to the cowntre of the Gaderenites. †And whan he wēte out of the shippe, there met him a mā possessed of an vnclane sprete, which had his dwellinge in the graues. And no man coude bynde hym, no not with cheynes: for he was oft bounde with fetters ¶ cheynes, and pluckte the cheynes in sunder, and brake the fetters in peces, and no man coude tame him. And he was allwaye both daye and night vpon the mountaynes and in the graues crienge, and beatinge him self with stones. But whan he sawe Iesus asafarre of, he ranne, and fell downe before him, and cried loude, and sayde: †What haue I to do with the O Iesus thou sonne of y<sup>e</sup> Hyest God? I charge the by God, that thou torment me not. Neuertheles he sayde vnto him: Go out of the man thou foule sprete. And he axed him: What is thy name? And he answered and sayde: My name is Legion, for there be many of vs. And he prayed him instantly, that he wolde not sende them awaye out of that cowntre.

And euen there in the mountaynes there was a †greate herd of swyne fedynge, and all the deuyls praied him, and sayde: Let vs departe in to the swyne. And anone Iesus gaue them leue. Then the foule spretes wente out, and intrid in to the swyne. And the heerd of swyne, ranne heedlinges in to y<sup>e</sup> see with a storme. They were aboute a two thousande swyne, and were drowned in the see.

And the swyneherdes fled, and tolde it in the cite, and in the cowntre. And they wente out for to se what had happened, and came to Iesus, and sawe hym which was possessed and had had y<sup>e</sup> legion, that he sat, and was clothed, and in his right mynde, and they were afraied. And they that had sene it, tolde them what had happened to the possessed, and of the swyne.

And they beganne to praye him, that he wolde departe out of their coastes. And whan he came in to the shyppe, the possessed prayed him, that he might be with him.

Neuertheles Iesus wolde not suffre hi, but saide vnto hi: Go i to thy house ⁊ to thine awne, and tell the how greate benefites the LORDE hath done for y, and how he hath had mercy vpon the. And he wente his waye, and beganne to publish in the ten cities how greate benefites Iesus had done for him. And every man marueyled.

C And whan Iesus passed ouer agayne by shippe, there gathered moch people vnto him, and was by the see syde. *And beholde, there came one of the rulers of the synagoge, whose name was Iairus. And whan he sawe him, he fell downe at his fete, and besought him greatly, ⁊ sayde: My doughter is at the poynte (of death) let it be thy pleasure to come and laye thine honde vpon her, that she maye be whole and lyue. And he wente with him, and moch people folowed him, and thronged him.

And there was a woman, <sup>b</sup>which had had the bloudeysse twolue yeares, and had suffred moch of many phisicians, and spent all that she had, and was not helped, but rather in worse case. Whan she herde of Iesus, she came behynde amonge the people, and touched his garment. For she sayde: Yf I maye but touch his clothes, I shal be whole.

And immediatly <sup>y</sup> fountayne of hir bloude was dried vp, and she felt in hir body, <sup>y</sup> she was healed of the plague.

D And forth with Iesus felt in himself the power that was gone out of him, and turned him aboute amōge the people, and sayde: Who hath touched my clothes? And his disciples sayde vnto him: Thou seist that the people thrusteth the, and sayest: Who hath touched me? And he loked aboute to se her, that had done it.

As for the woman, she feared and trembled (for she knew, what was done in her) and came and fell downe before him, and tolde him the whole trueth. And he sayde vnto her: *Doughter, thy faith hath made the whole: go thy waye in peace, ⁊ be whole of thy plague.

<sup>d</sup>Whyle he yet spake, there came certayne from the ruler of the synagoges house, and sayde: Thy doughter is deed, why troublest thou the master eny more? But Iesus herde right soone the worde that was spoken, and sayde vnto the ruler of the synagoge: Be not thou afrayed, beleue onely.

And he suffred no mā to folowe him, but Peter and Iames and Ihon his brother. And he came in to the ruler of the synagoges house, and sawe the busynes, and them that wepte and wayled greatly: and he wente in, and sayde vnto them: Why make ye this a doo, and wepe? *The mayde is not deed, but slepeth.

And they laughed him to scorne. *And he drone them all out, and toke the father and mother of the mayde, and them that were with him, and wente in where the mayden laye. And he toke the maydē by the honde, and sayde vnto her: Thabitha Cumi (which is by interpretation) Maydē, I saye vnto the: Aryse. †And immediatly the mayden arose, and walked. She was twolue yeare olde, and they were astonnyed out of measure. And he charged them strately, that no man shulde knowe of it, and sayde vnto them, that they shulde gene her to eate.

The vi. Chapter.

AND he departed thence, and came in to A his awne <sup>s</sup>countre, and his disciples folowed him. And whā <sup>y</sup> Sabbath came, he begāne to teach in their synagoge. And many that herde it, marueled at his lernynge, and sayde: From whēce hath he these thinges? And what wysdome is this, <sup>y</sup> is geuē him: ⁊ soch actes as are done by his handes? Is not this the Carpenter the sonne of Mary, and the brother of Iames and Ioses, and of Iude and Symon? Are not his sisters here with vs also? And they were offended at him. But Iesus saide vnto thē: *A prophet is nowhere lesse set by, thē in his awne countre, ⁊ at home amonge his awne. And he coude not shew one miracle there, but layed his handes vpon a few sicke, and healed them. And he marueyled at their vnbeleue.

And he wente aboute in the townes on euery syde, and taught them. And called the twolue, and begāne to sende them two and two, and gaue them power ouer the vnleane spretes. And commaunded thē, that they shulde take nothinge with them towarde their iourney, saue onely a rodde: no scrippe, no bred, no money in the gerdell, but shulde

And who so euer wyll not receaue you,<sup>a</sup> ner heare you, departe out from thence, and shake of the dust from youre fete, for a wytnesse vnto them. I saye vnto you verely: It shal be<sup>b</sup> easier for Sodome and Goinorra in the daye of iudgment, then for that cite.

And they wēte forth, and preached, that men shulde amēde them selues, and they cast out many denyis: and many that were sicke anoynted they with oyle, and healed thē.

And it came to kynge Herods eares (for his name was now knowne) and he sayde: Ihon the baptist is rysen agayne from the deed, and therefore are his dedes so mightie. But some sayde: It is Elias. Some sayde: It is a prophet, or one of ſy prophetes. But when Herode herde it, he sayde: It is Ihon whom I beheeded, he is rysen agayne from the deed. This Herode had sent forth, and taken Ihon, and put him in preson, because of Herodias his brother Philippes wife, for he had married her. Neuertheles Ihon sayde vnto Herode: *It is not lawfull for the to haue thy brothers wife. But Herodias layed wayte for him, and wolde haue slayne him, and coude not. Notwithstōdinge Herode feared Iho, for he knew that he was a iust and holy man: and he kepte him, and herkened vnto him in many thinges, and herde him gladly.

And there came a conuenient daye, that Herode on his byrth daye made a supper to the lordes, captaynes and chefe estates of Galile. Then the daughter of Herodias came in, and daunsed, and pleased Herode, and them that sat at the table. Then sayde the kynge vnto ſy damsel: Axe of me what thou wilt, I wil geue it the. And he sware vnto her: What soeuer thou shalt axe of me, I wil geue it the, euen vnto ſy one half of my kyngdome. She wente forth, and sayde vnto hir mother: what shal I axe? She sayde: Ihon baptistes heade. And immediatly she wēte in to the kinge with haist, and sayde: I will that thou geue me straight waye in a platter the heed of Ihon the baptist. Then the kynge was sorry: Yet for the ootheres sake and thē that sat at the table, he wolde not saye her nay.

And immediatly he sent the hangman, and commaunded his heade to be brought in. So he wēte, and heeded him in the preson, and brought his heade in a platter, and gaue it vnto the damsell, and the damsell gaue it vnto hir mother. And whan his disciples herde that, they came and toke his body, & layed it in a graue.

And the Apostles came together vnto Iesus, and tolde hī all, and what they had done and taught. And he sayde vnto them: Let vs go out of the waye in to the wyldernes, and rest a litle. For there were many cōmers and goers, and they had not tyme ynough to eate. And there he passed by shippe out of ſy waye in to a deserte place. And the people sawe thē departyng awaye, and many knewe of it, & ranne thither together of fote out of all cities, & came before thē, & came vnto him. And Iesus wente out, and sawe moch people, and had cōpassion vpon them: for they were<sup>c</sup> as the shepe, that haue no shepherde, and he begāne a lōge sermon.

Now whan the daye was farre past, his disciples came vnto him, and sayde: This is a deserte place, let them departe,<sup>d</sup> that they maye go in to the vyllagies and townes rounde aboute, and bye them selues bred, for they haue nothinge to eate. But Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: geue ye them to eate.

And they sayde vnto him: Shal we go then, and bye two hundreth peny worth of bred, and geue them to eate? He sayde vnto them: How many loaues haue ye? Go and se. And when they had searched, they sayde: Fyue, and two fiszhes. And he commaunded them all to syt downe by table fulles vpon the grene grasse. And they sat downe here a rowe and there a rowe by hundreds and by fifties. And he toke the fyue loaues and two fiszhes, and loked vp vnto heauen, and gaue thankes, and brake the loaues, and gaue to the disciples, to set before them. And the two fiszhes parted he amonge them all. And they all ate, and were satisfied. And they toke vp twolue baskettes full of ſy broken peces and of the fiszhes. And at euen was the shippe in the myddest of the see, and he alone vpon the londe. And he sawe that they were in parell with rowynge, for the wynde was agaynst them.

f And aboute the fourth watch of  $\text{y}$  night he came vnto them, and walked vpon the see, and wolde haue gone ouer by thē. And whan they sawe him walkinge vpon the see, they thought it had bene a sprete, and cried out, for they sawe him all, and were afraied. But immediatly he talked with them, and sayde vnto them: Be of good comforte, it is I, be not afraied. <sup>b</sup> And he wēte vnto them in to the shippe, and the wynde ceased. And they were astonnyed, and marueled exceedingly: for they had forgotten the \*loaues, and their hert was blynded.

And whan they were passed ouer, they came in to  $\text{y}$  lande of Genezareth, and drue vp in to the hauen. And whan they were come out of the shippe, immediatly they knewe him, and ranne thorow out all the region aboute, and beganne on euery syde to brynge vnto him in beddes soch as were sicke, where they herde that he was. And whither so euer he entred in to townes, cities or vyllages, there layed they thē sicke in the market place, and prayed him, that they might but touch the hemme of his garment. And as many as touched him, were made whole.

a AND there came vnto him the Pharises, and certayne of the scribes,<sup>c</sup> that were come from Ierusalē. And whā they sawe certayne of his disciples eate bred with comon (that is, with vnwashen) handes, they complayned. For the Pharises  $\text{t}$  all the Iewes eate not, excepte they wash their handes oft tymes: obseruynge so the tradicions of the elders. And whan they come from the market, they eate not, excepte they waszhe. And many other thynges there be, which they haue taken vpon them to obserue, as the washinge of cuppes and cruses, and brasen vessels and tables.

Then the Pharises and scribes axed him: Why walke not thy disciples after the tradi-cions of the elders, but eate bred with vnwashen handes? But he answered  $\text{t}$  sayde vnto them: Full well hath Esay prophecied of you Ypocrytes, as it is wryttē: <sup>d</sup> This people honoureth me with their lippes, but their hert is farre fro me. But in vayne do they serue me, whyle they teach soch doctrynes as are nothings but the commaundemētes of mē. Ye leaue the cōmaundement of God and kepe the tradicions of men, as the washyng of cruses and cuppes,  $\text{t}$  many soch thynges do ye.

And he saide vnto thē: How goodly haue ye cast asyde the cōmaundement of God, to manteyne youre owne tradicions? <sup>e</sup> For Moses sayde: Honour father  $\text{t}$  mother. <sup>f</sup> Who so curseth father and mother, shal dye the death. But ye saye: A mā shal saye to father or mother: Corban, that is, The thinge  $\text{y}$  I shulde helpe the withall, is geuē vnto God. And thus ye suffre him nomore to do ought for his father or his mother,  $\text{t}$  make Gods worde of none effecte, thorow youre owne tradicions that ye haue set vp. And many soch thynges do ye.

And he called vnto him all the people,<sup>g</sup> and sayde vnto them: Herken vnto me ye all, and vnderstonde me. There is nothings without a man, that can defyle him, whan it entreth in to him. But that goeth out of him, that is it that maketh the man nucleane. Yf eny man haue eares to heare, let him heare. And whan he came from the people in to  $\text{y}$  house, his disciples axed him of this symilitude. And he sayde vnto them: Are ye so then without vnderstandinge? Perceauce ye not yet,  $\text{y}$  euery thinge which is without, and goeth in to the mā, can not defyle him? For it entreth not in to his hert, but in to  $\text{y}$  bely, and goeth out in to the draught, that purgeth all meates.

And he sayde: The thinge that goeth out of the man, that defyleth the man. For from within out of the hert of man procede euell thoughtes, aduoutrye, whordome, murthur, theft, couetousnes, wickednes, disceate, vnclennes, a wicked eye, blasphemy, pryde, foolishnes. All these euell thynges go from within, and defyle the man.

But Iesus sayde vnto her: Let the children be fed first: It is not mete to take the childrēs bred, and to cast it vnto dogges. She answered and sayde vnto him: Yee LORDE, neuertheles the whelpes also eate vnder y table, of y childrēs crōmes. And he sayde vnto her: Because of this sayenge go thy waye, the deuell is departed out of thy daughter. And she wente vnto her house, & founde that the deuell was departed, and hir daughter lyenge on the bed.

* And whan he wente out agayne from the coastes of Tyre and Sydon, he came vnto the see of Galile, thorow the myddes of y coastes of the tē cities. And they brought vnto him one that was deaf, and had impediment in his speach. And they prayed him, that he wolde laye his hande vpon him.

And he toke him a syde from the people, and put his fyngers in his eares, and dyd spyt, and touched his tonge, and loked vp vnto heauen, sighed, and sayde vnto him: Ephatha, that is, be opened. And immediatly his eares were opened, and the bonde of his tōge was lousd, and he spake right. <sup>b</sup> And he charged them, that they shulde tell noman.

But the more he forbad them, the more they published it, & marueyled out of measure, and sayde: * He hath done all thinges well. The deaf hath he made to heare, and the domme to speake.

The viij. Chapter.

<sup>a</sup> AT the same tyme whan there was moche people there, and had nothinge to eate, Iesus called his disciples to him, and sayde vnto them: I haue compassion vpon the people, for they haue taried with me now three dayes, & haue nothinge to eate. And yf I let them go home fro me fastyng, they shulde faynte by the waye. † For some of them were come from farr. And his disciples answered him: Where shulde we get bred here in the wyldernes, to satisfie them? And he axed thē: How many loanes haue ye? They sayde: Seuen. And he commaunded the people to syt downe vpon the grounde. And he toke the seuen loanes, and gaue thākes, and brake them, and gaue thē vnto his disciples to set them before the people. And they set thē before the people. And they had a few small fyshes, and whan he had geuen thankes, he bad set the same before the people. They ate, and were satisfied, & toke vp seuē baszkettes full of y brokē meate that was left. And they y ate, were vyō a foure thousande. And he sent thē awaye.

And forth with he wente in to a shippe with his disciples,<sup>d</sup> and came in to the coastes of Dalmanutha. And the Pharises wente out, and begāne to dispute with him, and tempted him, and desyred a token of him from heauē. And he sighed in his sprete, and sayde: Why doth this generacion seke a token? Verely I saye vnto you: There shal no tokē be geuē vnto this generacion. And he left them, and wēt againe in to the shippe, and passed ouer.

<sup>f</sup> And they forgat to take bred with them, and had nomore with them in the shippe but one loaf. And he cōmaunded them, and sayde: Take hede, and bewarre of the leuen of the Pharises, and of the leuen of Herode. And their myndes wauered here and there, and sayde amonge them selues: This is it, that we haue no bred. And Iesus vnderstode that, and sayde vnto them: Why trouble ye youre selues, that ye haue no bred? Are ye yet without vnderstondinge? Haue ye yet a blynded hert in you? Haue ye eyes, & se not? and haue ye eares, and heare not? and remēbre ye not, <sup>e</sup> that I brake fyue loanes amonge fyue thousande, how many baszkettes full of broken meate toke ye then vp? They sayde: twolue. And † whan I brake the seuen amonge the foure thousande, how many baskettes full of broken meate toke ye then vp? They sayde: Seuen. And he sayde vnto thē: Why are ye then without vnderstondinge?

After this he layed his handes vpon his eyes ageyne, and made him to se. And he was brought to right againe, and sawe all clearly. And he sent him home, and sayde: Go not in to  $\text{f}$  towne, and tell it also vnto noman therein.

D And Iesus wente out and his disciples into the townes of the cite Cesarea Philippi,<sup>a</sup> And in  $\text{f}$  waye he axed his disciples and sayde vnto them: What do men saye, that I am? They answered: They saye, thou art Ihon the baptist: Some saye thou art Elias, some that thou art one of the prophetes. And he sayde vnto them: But whom saye ye that I am? Then answered Peter<sup>b</sup> and sayde vnto him: Thou art very Christ. And he charged them strately, that they shulde tell no man of him. And he begane to teach them:  $\text{c}$  The sonne of man must suffre many thinges, and be cast out of the elders  $\text{t}$  hye prestes and scribes, and be put to death, and after thre dayes ryse agayne. ## The ix. Chapter.

AND after sixe dayes Iesus toke vnto him Peter, Iames and Ihon,<sup>a</sup> and brought them vp in to an hye mountayne out of the waye alone, and was trasfigured before them, and his clothes were bright and very whyte as  $\text{f}$  snowe, so whyte as no fuller can make vpon earth. And there appeared vnto thē Elias with Moses, and they talked with Iesus. And Peter answered, and sayde vnto Iesus: Rabbi, here is good beyng for vs. Let vs make thre tabernacles: one for the, one for Moses, and one for Elias. For he knewe not what he sayde, and they were very fearfull. And there was a cloude, which ouershadowed thē.  $\text{b}$  And out of the cloude there came a voyce, and sayde: This is my deare sonne,<sup>c</sup> heare him. And immediatly they lokyd aboute them, and sawe noman more then Iesus onely with them.

$\text{d}$  But whan they wente downe from the mountayne, Iesus charged them, that they shulde tell no man what they had sene, tyll the sonne of man were rysen agayne from the deed.

And they keppe that sayenge by them, and axed one another: What is that rysinge agayne from the deed? And they axed him, and sayde: Why saye the scribes then, that  $\text{e}$  Elias must first come? He answered and sayde vnto them: Elias shal come first in dede, and brynge all thinges to right agayne. The sonne of man also shal suffre many thinges, and be despysed,  $\text{f}$  as it is wrytten. But I saye vnto you: Elias is come, and they haue done vnto him what they wolde, acordinge as it is wrytten of him.

$\text{g}$  And he came to his disciples, and sawe moch people aboute them, and the scribes disputynge with them. And as soone as the people sawe, they were astonnyed, and ranne vnto him, and saluted him. And he axed the scribes: What dispute ye with them? And one of the people answered, and sayde: Master, I haue brought vnto the my sonne, which hath a domme sprete: and whan so euer he taketh him, he teareth him, and he fometh, and gnaszeth with the teth, and pyneth awaye,  $\text{h}$  I haue spoken to thy disciples that they shulde cast him out, and they coude not.

C He answered him, and sayde: O thou vnfaithfull generacion, how longe shal I be with you? How longe shal I suffre you? Brynge hi hither to me. And they brought him vnto him. And as soone as the sprete sawe him, he tare him, and fell vpon the earth, and weltdred and fomed. And he axed his father: How longe is it, sens this happened vnto him? He sayde: Of a childe, and oft tymes hath he cast him in to the fyre and water, to destroye him: but yf thou canst do eny thinge, haue mercy vpon vs, and helpe vs. Iesus sayde vnto him: Yf thou couldest beleue: All thinges are possible vnto him that beleueth. And immediatly the father of the childe cried with teares, and sayde: LORDE I beleue: O helpe thou myne vnbeleue.

Now whan Iesus sawe that the people ranne to, he rebuked the foule sprete, and sayde vnto him: Thou domme and deaf sprete, I charge the, departe out of him, and entre no more in to him from hence forth. And he cried, and rent him sore, and departed. And he was as though he had bene deed, in so moch that many sayde: he is deed. But Iesus toke him by the hande, and set him vp. And he arose. And whan he came home, his disciples axed him secretly: "Why coulde not we cast him out? And he sayde: This kynde cā go out by no meanes, but by prayer and fastyng.

D And they departed thēce, and toke their journey thorow Galile,<sup>b</sup> and he wolde not that eny man shulde knowe of it. But he taught his disciples, and sayde vnto them: The sonne of mā shalbe delyuered in to the handes of men, and they shal put him to death: and whan he is put to death, he shal ryse ageyne the thirde daye. But they vnderstode not that worde, and were afraied to axe him.

And he came to Capernaum. And whan he was at home, he axed them: What disputed ye amonge youre selues by ¶ waye? But they held their tūges: "For they had disputed by the waye amonge them selues, who shulde be ¶ greatest. And he sat downe, and called the twolue, and sayde vnto them: "Yf eny man wyl be the first, the same shal be the last of all, and the seruaunt of all. And he toke a childe, and set him in the myddest of them, and toke him in his armes, and sayde vnto them: "Who so euer receaueth soch a childe in my name, receaueth me: and who so euer receaueth me, receaueth not me, but him that hath sent me.

Ihon answered him, and sayde: Master, we sawe one dryue out deuils in thy name, but he foloweth not vs, and we forbad him because he foloweth vs not. But Iesus sayde: Forbyd him not: for *there is no mā that doth a myracle in my name, and can soone speake euell of me. For who so euer is not agaynst vs, the same is for vs. And who so euer geueth you a cuppe of water† to drynke in my name, because ye belonge vnto Christ, verely I saye vnto you: he shal not lose his rewarde. And "who so offendeth one of these litle ones that beleue in me, it were better for him, that a mylstone were hāged aboute his neck, and he cast in to the see. "Yf thy hāde offende the, cut him of. Better it is for the to entre in to life lame, thē hauyng two hondes to go in to hell in to the euerlastinge fyre, where their worme dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out.

Yf thy fote offende the, cut him of. Better it is for the to entre in to life crepell, thē hauyng two fete to be cast in to hell in the fyre euerlastyng, where their worme dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out. Yf thine eye offende the, cast him from the. Better it is for the to entre in to ¶ kyngdome of God with one eye, then hauyng two eyes to be cast in to the fyre of hell: where their worme<sup>k</sup> dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out. For euery mā must be salted with fyre, ¶ euery offeryng shalbe seasoned with salt. "The salt is good: but yf ¶ salt be vnsauery, wherewith all shal it be salted? Haue salt in you, ¶ peace amonge youre selues one with another.

put away his wife, and tempted him withall. But he answered and sayde: What hath Moses comaunded you? <sup>a</sup>They sayde: Moses suffred to wryte a testimoniall of deuorcemēt, and to put her away. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Because of ¶hardnesse of youre hert dyd Moses wryte you this commaundement. But from the first creacion God made thē man and woman. <sup>b</sup>For this cause shal a man leaue his father & mother, and cleue vnto his wife, and they two shalbe one flesh. Now are they not twayne thē, but one flesh. Let not man therefore put asunder that, which God hath coupled together.

And at home his disciples axed him agayne of ¶same. And he sayde vnto thē: Who so euer putteth away his wife, <sup>c</sup>& marieth another, breaketh wedlocke to her warde. And yf a womā forsake hir huszbande, & be married to another, she committeth aduoutrie.

B And they brought childrē vnto him, that he might touch them. <sup>d</sup>But the disciples reproued those that brought thē. Neuertheles whan Iesus sawe it, he was displeased, and sayde vnto them: Suffre the children to come vnto me, and forbyd them not, for of soch is the kyngdome of God. Verely I saye vnto you: Who so euer receaueth not the kyngdome of God as a childe, he shal not entre therin. And he toke them vp in his armes, and layed his handes vpon them, and blessed them.

And whan he was gone forth vpon the waye, there came one runninge, <sup>e</sup>and kneled vnto him, & axed him: Good Master, what shal I do, that I maye inheret euerlastinge life? But Iesus saide vnto him: Why callest thou me good? There is no man good, <sup>f</sup>but God onely. Thou knowest the commaundementes: <sup>g</sup>Thou shalt not breake wedlocke: thou shalt not kyll: thou shalt not steale: thou shalt beare no false wytnesse: thou shalt begyle no man: Honour thy father and mother. But he answered, and sayde vnto him: Master, all these haue I kepte fro my youth vp. And Iesus behelde him, and loued him, & sayde vnto him: Thou wantest one thinge: Go thy waye, and <sup>h</sup>sell all that thou hast, and geue it vnto ¶poore: so shalt thou haue a treasure in heauen, and come & folowe me, and take the crosse vpon ¶. And he was discomforted at the sayenge, & wente awaye sory, for he had greate possessions.

And Iesus loked aboute him, and sayde C vnto his disciples: <sup>i</sup>O how hardly shal the ryche come in to ¶kyngdome of God? And the disciples were astonnyed at his wordes. But Iesus answered agayne, and sayde vnto them: Deare children, how harde is it for them that trust in riches, to come in to the kyngdome of God? It is easier for a Camell to go thorow the eye of a nedle, then for a rich man to entre in to ¶kyngdome of God. Yet were they astonnyed ¶more, and sayde amonge thē selues: Who can thē be saued? But Iesus behelde them, and sayde: With men it is vnpossible, but not with God: <sup>k</sup>for with God all thinges are possible.

Then sayde Peter vnto him: Beholde, we haue forsaken all, and folowed the. <sup>l</sup>Iesus answered & sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: There is no man that forsaketh house, or brethren, or sisters, or father or mother, or wife, or children, or londes for my sake and the gospels, that shal not receaue an hundreth folde now in this tyme, houses, and brethrē, and sisters, and mothers and children, and londes with persecucions, and in the worlde to come euerlastinge life. But many that are the first, shal be the last: and the last the first.

They were in the waye goinge vp to Ierusalem, and Iesus wente before them. D And they were astonnyed, and folowed him, and were afrayed. And Iesus toke the twolue agayne, and tolde them what shulde happē vnto him. Beholde, we go vp to Ierusalem, and the sonne of man shalbe deliuered vnto the hye prestes and scribes, and they shal condemne him to death, and delyuer him vnto the Heythē. And they shal mocke hī, and scourge him, and spyt vpon him, and put him to death, and on the thirde daye shal he ryse agayne.

Iesus sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, thy faith hath helped y. And immediatly he had his sight and folowed him in the waye.

The xi. Chapter.

Oliuete, he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go in to the towne that lyeth before you, and as soone as ye come in, ye shal fynde a foale bounde, wher vpon no man hath syttē: lowse it, and brynge it hither. And yf eny man saye vnto you: wherfore do ye that? Then saye ye: The LORDE hath nede therof, and forth with he shal sende it hither. They wēt their waie and founde the foale tyed by y dore without at the partynge of the waye, and lowsed it. And certayne of those y stode there, axed them: What do ye, that ye lowse the foale? But they sayde vnto thē, like as Iesus had commaunded them. And so they let them alone. And they brought the foale vnto Iesus, and layed their clothes theron, and he sat theron. But many spred their garmētes in the waye:<sup>d</sup> some cut downe branches frō the trees, and strowed thē in the waye. And they that wente before, and that folowed after, cried, and sayde: Hosyanna,<sup>e</sup> blessed be he, that commeth in the name of the LORDE: blessed be the kyngdome of oure father Dauid, which commeth in the name of the LORDE. And the LORDE entred in to Ierusalem, and wente in to the temple, and loked vpon all. And at euen he wente out vnto Bethany with the twolue: and on the morow<sup>f</sup> whā they departed from Bethanye, he hūgred, and sawe a fygge tre afarre of, which had leaues. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto it: Neuer mā eate frute of the for euermore. And his disciples herde it.

And they came to Ierusalem. And on the morow they passed by,<sup>a</sup> and sawe the fygge tre, that it was wythred vnto the rote. And Peter thought theron, and sayde vnto him: Master, beholde, the fygge tre y<sup>e</sup> thou cursedest, is wythred awaye. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: <sup>b</sup>Haue faith in God. Verely I saye vnto you: Who so euer saith vnto this mountayne: Avoide, and cast thy self in to the see, and <sup>c</sup>douteth not in his hert, but beleueth that the thinges shal come to passe which he saith, then loke what he sayeth, it shal come to passe. <sup>d</sup>Therefore I saye vnto you: What so euer ye desire in youre prayer, beleue that ye shal receaue it, and ye shal haue it. <sup>e</sup>And whan ye stonde and praye, forgeue yf ye haue ought ageynst eny man, that youre father also in heauen, maye forgeue you youre trespasses.

D And they came agayne vnto Ierusalem and whan he wente in the temple,<sup>f</sup> there came vnto him the hye prestes and scribes and the elders, and sayde vnto him: By what auctorite dost thou these thinges? and who gaued the this auctorite to do soch?

But Iesus answered and sayde vnto thē: I wil axe you a worde also, answere me, and I wyl tell you, by what auctorite I do these. The baptyme of Ihon, was it from heauen, or of men? Answer me.

And they thought in them selues: yf we saye, it was from heauen, then shal he saye: Why dyd ye not then beleue him? But yf we saye: It was of men, then feare we the people, for they all helde that Ihon was a true prophet. And they answered, and saide vnto him: We can not tell. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these thinges.

The xij. Chapter.

AND he beganne to speake vnto them by parables: A certayne mā planted a vynyarde, <sup>1</sup>and made a hedge aboute it, and dygged a wyne presse, and buylded a tower, and let it out vnto huszbande men, and wente in to a straunge countre. And whan the tyme was come, he sent a seruaut to the huszbande men, that he might receaue of the huszbandmen, of the frute of the vynyarde. But they toke him, and bet him, and sent him awaye emptye. Agayne, he sent vnto them another seruaut, whom they stoned, and brake his heade, and sent him awaye shamefully dealt withall. Agayne he sent another, whom they slew, and many other: some they bett, and some they put to death.

Then had he yet one sonne onely, whom he loued, him he sent also vnto them at the last, and sayde: they wyl stonde in awe of my sonne. But the same huszbandmen sayde amonge them selues: This is the heyre, Come, let vs kyll him, so shal the inheritance be ours. And they toke him, and slewe him, and cast him out of the vynyarde. What shal now the lorde of the vynyarde do? He shal come and destroye the huszbande men, and geue the vynyarde vnto other. Haue ye not red this scripture: <sup>2</sup>The same stone which the buylders refused, is become the headstone in the corner? This was the LORDES doynge, and it is maruelous in oure eyes. <sup>3</sup>And they wente aboute to take him (but they feared the people) for they perceaued, that he had spokē this parable agaynst thē. And they left him, and wente their waye.

B And they sent vnto him certayne of the Pharises and Herodes <sup>4</sup>officers to take him in his wordes. And they came, and sayde vnto hī: Master, we knowe that thou art true and carest for no man. For thou regardest not the outwarde appearaunce of men, but teachest y<sup>e</sup> waye of God truly. Is it lauffull to geue tribute vnto the Emperoure, or not? Ought we to geue it, or ought we not to geue it? But he perceaued their ypocrisy, and sayde vnto them: Why tempte ye me? Brynge me a peny, that I maye se it. And they brought it him. Then sayde he: Whose ymage and superscripcion is this? They sayde vnto him: The Emperours. Then answered Iesus and sayde vnto thē: <sup>5</sup>Geue therfore vnto the Emperoure that which is the Emperours, and vnto God that which is Gods. And they marueled at him.

axed him, and sayde : Master, Moses wrote vnto vs. "Yf eny mans brother dye, and leaue a wife, and leaue no children, his brother shal take his wife, and rayse vp sede vnto his brother. Now were there seuen brethren : the first toke a wife, and dyed, and left no sede : and the seconde toke her, and dyed, and left no sede also : the thirde in like maner.

And they all seuen toke her, and left no sede. At the last after them all, the wyfe dyed also. Now in the resurreccion whan they shal ryse agayne, whose wife shal she be of them ? For seuen had her to wife.

Then answered Iesus, and sayde vnto them : Do not ye erre ? because ye knowe not the scriptures ner ¶ power of God ? Whan they shal ryse agayne from the deed, they shal nether mary ner be maried, but they are as the angels in heauen. As touchinge the deed, that they shal ryse agayne, haue ye not red in the boke of Moses, how God spake vnto him in the bush, and sayde : ¶ I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, ¶ the God of Iacob ? Yet is not God a God of the deed, but of the luyng. Therefore ye erre greatly.

And there came vnto him one of the scribes, that had herkened vnto ¶ how they disputed together, and sawe that he had answered them well, and axed him : Which is the chefest cōmaundement of all ? Iesus answered him : The chefest commaundemēt of all commaundementes is this : ¶ Heare O Israel, the LORDE oure God is one God, and thou shalt loue the LORDE thy God with all thy hert, with all thy soule, with all thy mynde, and with all thy strength. This is the chefest commaundement, and the seconde is like vnto it : ¶ Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy self. There is none other greater commaundement then these.

And the scribe sayde vnto him : Master, Verely thou hast sayde right : for there is but one God, ¶ there is none other without him, and to loue him with all the hert, with all the mynde, with all the soule, and with all the strength, and to loue a mans neighbour as himself, is more then brent sacrifices and all offerynges. But whā Iesus sawe that he answered discretly, he sayde vnto him : Thou art not farre from the kyngdome of God. And after this durst no man axe him eny mo questions.

And Iesus answered, and sayde, whan he taught in the temple : ¶ How saye the scribes, ¶ Christ is the sonne of Dauid ? But Dauid himself saith thorow the holy goost : ¶ The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE : Syt thou on my right honde, tyll I make thine enemies thy ftestole. There Dauid calleth him his LORDE. How is he ¶ the his sonne ? And many people herde him gladly.

And he taught ¶ thē, and sayde vnto ¶ thē : ¶ Bewarre of the scribes, that loue to go in longe garmentes, and loue to be saluted in the market, and syt gladly aboue in the synagoges and at the table : they deuoure wyddowes houses, and vnder a coloure they make longe prayers. These shal receaue the more damnacion.

And Iesus sat ouer agaynst the ¶ Gods chest, and behelde how the people put money in to the Gods chest. And many that were riche : put in moch. And there came a poore wyddowe, and put in two mytes, which make a farthinge. And he called vnto him his disciples, and sayde vnto them : Verely I saye vnto you : this poore wyddowe hath put more in ¶ Gods chest, then all they that haue put in : For they all haue put ¶ i of their superfluyte, but she of hir pouerte hath put in all that she had, euen hir whole luyng.

But whan ye shal heare of the noyse of warres, be not ye afraied: for so must it be, but y<sup>e</sup> ende is not yet. <sup>a</sup>One people shal ryse ageynst another, and one realme ageynst another, and there shal be earth quakes here and there, and derth shal there be and troubles. These are the begynnynge of sorowes.

<sup>d</sup>Now when they shal lede you and delyuer you vp, take ye no thought afore what ye shal saye: and ynagyn ye nothinge afore hande, but what so euer shal be geūe you at the same houre, that speake: for it is not ye that speake, but the holy goost. One brother shal delyuer another vnto death, and the father the sonne, & the children shal ryse ageynst their fathers and mothers, and shal helpe them to death, and ye shal be hated of all men for my names sake. But who so endureth to the ende, shalbe saued.

And let him that is in the felde, not turne backe to fetch his clothes.

<sup>g</sup>But wo vnto them that are with childe, and to them that geue suck in those dayes. Neuertheles praye ye, that youre flight be not in the wynter. beleue it not. For there shal aryse false Christes, and false prophetes, which shal do tokens & wonders, to disceau euen the very chosen, yf it were possible. But take ye hede, Beholde, I haue tolde you all before.

Heauen and earth shal perishe, but my wordes shal not perishe. But of that daye and houre knoweth no man, nether the angels in heauen, no not the sonne him self, but the father only.<sup>k</sup>

But Iesus sayde: let her be in rest. Why trouble ye her? She hath done a good worke vpo me. Ye haue allwaye the poore with you, and whā so euer ye wil, ye maye do thē good: but me haue ye not allwaie. She hath done what she coulde, she is come before, to anoynte my body for my buriall. Verely I saye vnto you: Where so euer this gospell shal be preached in all the worlde, there shal this also that she hath now done, be tolde for a remembrance of her.

33 And Iudas Iscarioth<sup>a</sup> one of the twolue wente vnto the hye prestes, to betraye him vnto them. When they herde ⁊, they were glad, ⁊ promysed that they wolde geue him money. And he sought, how he might cōueniently betraye him.

<sup>b</sup> And vpon ⁊ first daye of swete bred, whā the Easter lambe was offered, his disciples sayde vnto him: Where wilt thou ⁊ we go and prepare, ⁊ thou mayest eate ⁊ Easter lābe? And he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go youre waye in to the cite, and there shal mete you a mā bearinge a pitcher with water, folowe him, ⁊ where so euer he goeth in, there saye ye to the good man of the house: The Master sendeth the worde: Where is the gest house, wherin I maye eate the Easter lābe, with my disciples? And he shal shewe you a greate parlour, which is paved ⁊ prepared, there make readye for vs. And ⁊ disciples wēte forth, ⁊ came in to ⁊ cite, ⁊ fōūde it as he had sayde vnto thē. And they prepared ⁊ Easter lambe.

34 At euen he came with the twolue. And as they sat at the table ⁊ ate, Iesus sayde: Verely I saye vnto you:<sup>c</sup> One of you ⁊ eateth with me, shal betraye me. And they were sory, ⁊ sayde vnto hī one after another: Is it I? ⁊ another (sayde:) is it I? He answered ⁊ saide vnto thē: One of the twolue, euen ⁊ same ⁊ dyppeth with me in ⁊ platter. The sonne of man truly goeth forth, as it is wryttē of hī.

But wo vnto that mā, by whom the sonne of man is betrayed. It were better for the same man, that he had neuer bene borne.

<sup>d</sup> And as they ate, Iesus toke the bred, gaue thanks, ⁊ brake it, and gaue it thē, ⁊ sayde: Take, eate, this is my body. And he toke the cuppe, thāked, and gaue it thē, and they all dranke therof. And he sayde vnto them: This is my bloude of the new Testament, which shalbe shed for many. Verely I saye vnto you, that from hence forth I wil not drynke of the frute of the vyne, tyll ⁊ daye ⁊ I drynke it new in ⁊ kyngdome of God. And whā they had sayde grace, they wēte forth vnto mount Oliuete.

And Iesus sayde vnto them: 'This night shal ye all be offended in me, for it is wrytten: * I wil snyte the sheperde, ⁊ the shepe shal be scatred abroad. Neuertheles after ⁊ I am rysen agayne, I wil go before you in to Galile.' But Peter sayde vnto him: And though all men shulde be offended, yet wolde not I be offended. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Verely I saye vnto ⁊: To daye in this same night, before ⁊ cock crowe two tymes, shalt thou denye me thryse. But he saide yet more: Yee though I shulde dye with ⁊, yet wil I not denie ⁊. So saide they all ī like maner.

And they came in to ⁊ felde called Gethsemane, and he saide vnto his disciples: Syt ye here, tyll I go yonder, and praye. And he toke with him Peter ⁊ Iames, ⁊ Ihou, and begāne to waxe fearefull, ⁊ to be in an agonye, ⁊ sayde vnto thē: My soule is heuy euē vnto ⁊ death: tary ye here and watch. And he wente forth a litle, fell vpon the grounde and prayed, that, (yf it were possyble) ⁊ houre might passe frō him, and sayde: Abba, my father, all thinges are possyble vnto the, take this cuppe awaye fro me: Neuertheles not what I wyl, but what thou wilt.

35 And he came vnto them, and founde thē slepyng, and sayde vnto Peter: Symon, sleepest thou? Couldest thou not watch with me one houre? Watch and praye, that ye fal not in to temptacion. The sprete is wyllinge, but ⁊ flesh is weak. And he wēte forth agayne, and prayde, and spake the same wordes, and returned, and founde them slepyng agayne: for their eyes were heuy, ⁊ they knewe not what they shulde answeere him.

And he came the thirde tyme, and sayde vnto them: Slepe on now, and take youre rest. It is ynough, the houre is come: beholde, y sonne of man shalbe deliuered in to the handes of synners: aryse, let vs be goynge. Beholde, he is at hande, that betrayeth me.

And immediatly whyle he yet spake, came Iudas one of the twolue, and with him a greate multitude, with swerdes and staues from the hye prestes and elders. And the traytoure had geuen them a tokē, and sayde: Whom so euer I kysse, that same is he, laye handes vpon him, and lede him awaye warily. And whā he was come, he wente straight waye vnto him, and sayde vnto him: O master, master, and kyssed him. Then layed they their handes vpon him, and toke him. But one of thē that stode by, drew out his swerde, and smote the hye prestes seruaunt, and cut of his eare.

And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto thē: Ye are come forth as it were to a murthurer with swerdes and with staues to take me. I was daylie with you in the temple, and taught, and ye toke me not. But this is done, that the scripture maye be fulfilled. And all the disciples forsoke him, and fled. And there folowed him a yonge mā, which was clothed in linnen vpon the bare skynne, and the yonge mē toke holde of him. But he let the linnen go, and fled naked from them.

And they led Iesus vnto the hye prest, where all y hye prestes, and elders and scribes were come together. As for Peter, he folowed him afarre of in to the hye prestes palace. And he was there, and sat with the seruauntes, and warmed him.

But the hye prestes and the whole councell sought wytnesse agaynst Iesus, y they might brynge him to death, and they founde none. Many gaue false wytnesse agaynst him, but their wytnesses agreed not together. And some stode vp, and gaue false wytnes agaynst him, and sayde: We herde him saye: I wil breake downe this temple that is made with hōdes, and in thre dayes buylde another not made with handes. But their wytnesse agreed not together.

And the hye prest stode vp amonge them, and axed Iesus, and sayde: Answerest thou nothinge vnto it, that these testifie agaynst the? But he helde his tunge, and answered nothinge. Thē the hye prest axed him agayne, and sayde vnto him: Art thou Christ the sonne of the blessed? Iesus sayde: I am. And ye shal se the sonne of man syt at the right hande of power, and come in the cloudes of heauē. Then the hye prest rent his clothes, and sayde: What nede we eny mo wytnesses? Ye haue herde the blasphemy. What thynke ye? They all cōdemned him, that he was giltye of death. Then beganne there some to spyt vpō him, and to couer his face, and to smyte him with fistes, and to saye vnto him Prophecie vnto vs. And the seruauntes smote him on the face.

And Peter was beneth in y palace. Thē came one of the wenches of the hye prest: And whā she sawe Peter warmynge him, she loked vpō hī, and sayde: And thou wast with Iesus of Nazareth also. But he denyed, and sayde: I knowe him not, nether can I tell what thou sayest. And he wente out in to the fore courte, and the cock crew. And a damsell sawe him, and beganne agayne to saye vnto them that stode by: This is one of them. And he denyed it agayne. And after a litle whyle they y stode by, sayde agayne vnto him: Of a trueth thou art one of them for thou art a Galilean, and thy speach soundeth euen alike. But he begāne to curse and swear: I knowe not the man, that ye speake of. And the cock crew agayne. Then thought Peter vpon the worde, that Iesus sayde vnto him: Before y cock crow two tymes, thou shalt denye me thryse. And he beganne to wepe.

"At that feast of Easter he was wonte to delyuer vnto them a presoner, whom so euer they wolde desyre. There was i preson with the sedicious, one called Barrabas, which in the vproure had committed murthur. And the people wente vp, and prayed him, that he wolde do, as he was wonte. Pylate answered them: wyl ye that I geue lowse vnto you the kyng of the Iewes? For he knew, that ¶ hyc prestes had delyuered him of envye. But the hyc prestes moued ¶ people,<sup>b</sup> that he shulde rather geue Barrabas lowse vnto them.

B Pylate answered agayne, and sayde vnto them: "What wil ye thē that I do vnto him, whom ye accuse to be kyng of the Iewes? They cried agayne: Crucifie hī. Pylate sayde vnto thē: What euell hath he done? But they cried yet moch more: Crucifie him. So Pylate thought to satisfie the people, and gaue Barrabas lowse vnto them, and delyuered thē Iesus, to be scourged ¶ crucified.

"And the soudyers led him in to the comō hall, and called the whole multitude together, and clothed him with purple, and plated a crowne of thorne, and crowned him withall, and beganne to salute him: Hayle kyng of the Iewes. And smote him vpon the heade with a rede, and spytted vpō him, and fell vpō the kne, ¶ worshipped him. "And whā they had mocked him, they toke ¶ purple of him, and put his clothes vpon him, ¶ led him out, that they might crucifye him.

C And they compelled one that passed by, called Symon of Cyren (which came from the felde,<sup>f</sup> and was the father of Alexander and Ruffus) to beare his crosse. And they brought him to the place Golgatha, which is by interpretacion: a place of deed mens skulles. And they gaue him wyne myxted with myrre, to drynke, ¶ he toke it not. And whā they had crucified him, they parted his garnētes,<sup>g</sup> ¶ cast lottes therfore, what euery one shulde take. And it was aboute ¶ thirde houre, ¶ they crucified him. And the tyle of his cause was wryttē ouer aboue him (namely:) The kyng of the Iewes. And they crucified him with two murthurers, one at ¶ right hande, and one at the left. Then was the scripture fulfilled, which sayeth: "He was couēted amonge the euell doers.

"And they that wēte by, reuyled him, and wagged their heades, and sayde: Fye vpon the, how goodly breakest thou downe ¶ tēple, ¶ buyldest it agayne in thre dayes? Helpe thy self now, ¶ come downe frō the crosse. The hyc prestes also in like maner laughed him to scorne amonge thē selues, with the scribes, ¶ sayde: He hath helped other, himself can he not helpe. Yf he be Christ and ¶ kyng of Israel, let him come downe now frō the crosse, ¶ we maye se it, ¶ beleue. And they ¶ were crucified with hī, checked hit also.

And whā it was aboute the sixte houre, there was a darcknesse ouer the whole lōde,<sup>d</sup> tyll aboute ¶ nyenth houre. And aboute ¶ nyenth houre Iesus cried loude, and sayde: Eli, Eli, lamma asabthani? which is interpreted: My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?<sup>e</sup> And some that stode by, whā they herde ¶, they sayde: Beholde, he calleth Elias. "Then rāne there one, ¶ fylled a spōge with vyneger, ¶ stickte it vpō a rede, ¶ gaue hī to drynke, ¶ sayde: Holde styll, let se, whether Elias wil come, and take him downe. But Iesus cried loude, and gaue vp the goost. And the vale of the tēple rent in two peces, from aboue tyll beneth.

AND whan the Sabbath was past,<sup>b</sup> Mary Magdalene, ⁊ Mary Iames, and Salome, bought spycies, ⁊ they might come, ⁊ anynte hi. And they came to the sepulchre vpō a daye of ⁊ Sabbathes very early, whā ⁊ Sonne arose, ⁊ sayde one to another: Who shal rolle vs ⁊ stone frō ⁊ dore of the sepulchre? And whan they lokyd, they sawe, that the stone was rolled awaye: for it was a very greate one. And they wente in to the sepulchre, and on the right hande they sawe a yonge man syttinge, which had a longe whyte garmēt vpon him, and they were abaszhed. But he sayde vnto thē: Be not ye afrayed, ye seke Iesus of Nazareth which was crucified: he is rysen, he is not here. Beholde, ⁊ place, where they layed him. But go ye youre waye, and tell his disciples and Peter, that he wil go before you in to Galile,<sup>c</sup> there shal ye se him* as he sayde vnto you. And they wente forth in all the haist, and fled from the sepulchre: for there was a tremblyng ⁊ feare come vpon them, nether sayde they eny thinge to eny man, for they were afrayed.

The prologe of S. Luke.

FOR so moch as many haue taken in hande, to set forth  $\hat{y}$  wordes of the actes that are come to passe amonge vs, like as they delyuered the vnto vs, which from the begynnynge sawe them their selues, and were mynisters of the worde, I thought it good (after that I had diligently searched out all from the begynnynge) to wryte the same orderly vnto the (good Theophilus) that thou mightest knowe the certēte of  $\hat{y}$  wordes, wherof thou art informed.

The first Chapter.

IN the tyme of Herode kynge of Iewry, there was a prest named Zachary of the \*course of Abia: and his wife of the daughters of Aaron,  $\tau$  hir name Elizabeth. They were both righteous before God, and walked in all the commaundementes and statutes of the LORDE vnreproueably. And they had no childe, for Elizabeth was baren, and they were both well stricken in age.

And it came to passe as he executed the prestes office before God whan his course came (acordinge to the custome of the presthode) it fell to his lott to burne incense. And he wente in to the temple of the LORDE, and the whole multitude of the people was without in prayer, whyle the incense was aburnynge. And the angell of the LORDE appeared vnto him, and stode on the right syde of the altare of incēse. And whan Zachary sawe him, he was abaszhed,  $\tau$  there came a feare vpon him.

But the angell sayde vnto him: Feare not Zachary, for thy prayer is herde. And thy wife Elizabeth shal beare the a sonne, whose name thou shalt call Ihon,  $\tau$  thou shalt haue ioye and gladnesse: and many shal reioyce at his byrth, for he shal be greate before the LORDE. Wyne and stronge drynke shal he not drynke. And he shalbe fylled with the holy goost, euen in his mothers wombe. And many of the children of Israel shal he turne vnto the LORDE their God. And he shal go before him in the sprete and power of  $\dagger$  Elias, to turne the hertes of  $\hat{y}$  fathers vnto the children, and the vnfaithfull vnto the wysdome of the righteous, to make the people ready for the LORDE.

And Zachary sayde vnto the Angel: B
"Wherby shal I knowe this? For I am olde, and my wife well stricken in age. The angell answered, and sayde vnto him: I am Gabriell that stonde before God, and am sent to speake vnto the, and to shewe the these glad tydinges. And beholde, thou shalt be domme, and not able to speake, vn tyll the daye that this come to passe, because thou hast  $\S$  not beleued my wordes, which shalbe fulfilled in their season.

And the people wayted for Zachary, and marueyled, that he taried so longe in the tēple. And whā he wēte out, he coude not speake vnto them. And they perceaued, that he had sene a vision in the tēple. And he beckened vnto them, and remayned speechlesse.

And it fortunēd whā the tyme of his office was out, he wente home in to his house. And after those dayes Elizabeth his wife conceaued, and hyd hir self fyue monethes,  $\tau$  sayde: Thus hath  $\hat{y}$  LORDE done vnto me in  $\hat{y}$  dayes, wherin he hath loked vpō me, to take awaye fro me my rebuke amōge men.

"And in the sixte moneth was the angell Gabriel sent from God in to a cite of Galile, called Nazareth, vnto a virgin that was spoused vnto a man, whose name was Ioseph, of the house of Dauid, and the virgins name was Mary. And the angell came in vnto her, and sayde: Hayle thou full of grace, the LORDE is with the: blessed art thou amonge wemen.

¶ Whā she sawe him, she was abaszeth at his sayenge, and thought: What maner of salutation is this? And the angell sayde vnto her: <sup>a</sup>Feare not Mary, for thou hast fōūde grace with God. Beholde, thou shalt cōceauē in thy wōbe, & beare a sonne* & shalt call his name Iesus: he shalbe greate, & shalbe called ſonne of the Hyeſt. And the LORDE God shal geue him ſonne of Dauid his father,† & he shal be kinge ouer ſonne of Iacob for euer‡ & there shalbe no ende of his kyngdome. Then sayde Mary vnto the angell: How shal this be, seinge I knowe not a mā? The angell answered, & sayde vnto her: The holy goost shal come vpon the, & the power of the Hyeſt shal ouer-shadowe the. Therefore that Holy also which shalbe borne (of the) shalbe called the sonne of God. And beholde, thy cōſen Elizabeth she also hath cōceauēd a sonne in hir olde age, & this is the sixte moneth of her, which is reported to be baren:§ for with God is nothinge vnpoſſyble. And Mary sayde: Beholde, here am I the handmaydē of the LORDE: be it vnto me, as thou hast sayde. And the angell departed frō her.

¶ And Mary arose in those dayes, and wente in to the moūtaynes with haist, into ſonne cite of Iewry, and came in to ſonne house of Zachary, and saluted Elizabeth. And it fortunēd as Elizabeth herde the salutation of Mary, the babe sprange in hir wombe. And Elizabeth was fylled with the holy goost, & cried loude, and sayde: Blessed art thou amōge wemen, and blessed is the frute of thy wombe. And how happeneth this to me, that ſonne mother of my LORDE commeth vnto me? Beholde, whan I herde the voyce of thy salutation, the babe sprange in my wombe with ioye, And blessed art thou that hast beleued, for ſonne things shalbe perfourmed, which were tolde ſonne frō ſonne LORDE. And Mary sayde:

"My soule magnifieth the LORDE.

And my sprete reioyseth ī God my Sauoure.

For he hath loked vpō the lowe degre of his hande mayde. Beholde, frō hence forth shal all generacions call me blessed.

For he that is Mightie, hath done greate things vnto me, and holy is his name.

And his mercy endureth thorow out all generacions, vpon them that feare him.

He sheweth strength with his arme, and scateth them that are proude in the ymaginacion of their hert.

¶ He putteth downe the mightie from the seate, and exalteth them of lowe degre.

He fylleth the hongrie with good thinges, and letteth the riche go emptye.

He remēbreth mercy, and helpeth vp his seruauit Israel.

Euen as he promysed vnto oure fathers, ¶ Abraham and to his sede for euer.

And Mary abode with her aboute thre monethes, and then returned home agayne.

¶ And Elizabethes tyme was come, that she shulde be delyuered, & she brought forth a sonne. And hir neighbours and kynsfolkes herde, ſonne the LORDE had shewed greate mercy vpō her, & they reioysed with her. And it fortunēd vpon the eight daye,¶ they came to circumcise ſonne childe, and called him Zachary after his father: And his mother answered, and sayde: No, but he shalbe called Ihon. And they sayde vnto her: There is none in thy kynne, ſonne is so called. And they made signes vnto his father, how he wolde haue him called. And he axed for wrytinge tables, wrote & sayde: His name is Ihon. And they marueyled all. And immediatly was his month and his tōge opened, and he spake, & prayſed God. And there came a feare vpon all their neighbours. And all this acte was noysed abrode thorow out all the hill countre of Iewry: And all they ſonne herde therof, toke it to hert, and sayde: What maner of man wil this childe be? For the hande of the LORDE was with him.

¶ And Zachary his father was fylled with the holy goost, and prophecied, and sayde:

Blessed be ſonne LORDE God of Israel, for he hath vysited and redemed his people.

The ij. Chapter.

AT fortunat at the same tyme, that there wēte out a cōmaundement frō Augustus the Emperoure, that the whole worlde shulde be taxed. And this taxynge was the first that was executed, whan Syrenius was leftenaunt in Siria. And they wente all, euery one to his owne cite to be taxed. Then Ioseph gat him vp also frō Galile, out of the cite of Nazareth, in to Iewry, to ŷ cite of Dauid, § which is called Bethleem, (because he was of ŷ house and lynage of Dauid) that he might be taxed with Mary his spoused wife, which was with childe.

¶ And it fortunat wyle they were there, ŷ tyme was come, that she shulde be delyuered. And she brought forth hir first begottē sonne, ⁊ wrapped him in swaddlinge clothes, and layed him in a maunger: for they had els no rowme in the yunne.

Beholde, I brynge you tydiges of greate ioye, which shall happen vnto all people: for vnto you this daye is borne ŷ Sauoure, euē Christ ŷ LORDE, in the cite of Dauid. And take this for a token: Ye shal fynde the babe swaddled, and layed in a maunger. And straight waye there was by the angell a multitude of heauenly hoostes, which praysed God, and sayde: Glory be vnto God an hye, ⁊ peace vpon earth, and vnto men a good wyll.

¶ And it fortunat whā the angels were gone from thē in to heauē, the shepherdes sayde one to another: let vs go now euen vnto Bethleem, and se this thinge that is happened, which ŷ LORDE hath shewed vnto vs. And they came with haist, ⁊ founde both Mary and Ioseph, ⁊ the babe layed in ŷ maunger. And whan they had sene it, they published abrode the sayenge, ŷ was tolde thē of this childe. And all they that herde it, wondred at the wordes, which the shepherdes had tolde them. But Mary kepte all these sayenges, and pondred them in hir hert. And the shepherdes returned, praysing and lauding God, for all that they had herde and sene, euen as it was tolde them.

¶ And whan eight dayes were ended, that the childe shulde be circumcysed, his name was called Iesus, || which was named of ŷ angell, before he was conceaued in his mothers wombe.

¶ And whā the dayes of their purificacion ¶ after the lawe of Moses, were come, they brought him to Ierusalē, that they might present him vnto the LORDE. (As it is written in the lawe of the LORDE: ¶ Euery māchilde that first openeth the Matrix, shalbe called holy vnto ŷ LORDE) and that they might geue the offerynge, as it is wryttē in the lawe of the LORDE (namely) a payre of turtle doues, or two yonge pigeons.

¶ And beholde, there was a man (at Ierusalē) whose name was Symeon, and the same mā was iust, and feared God, and lōged for the consolacion of Israel, and the holy goost was in him. And an answer was geuē him of the holy goost, that he shulde not se death, before he had sene ꝑ LORDES Christ. And he came by inspiracion into the tēple.

¶ And whan the elders brought the childe Jesus in to the temple, to do for him after ꝑ custome of the * lawe, then toke he him vp in his armes, and prayded God, and sayde:

LORDE, now lettest thou thy seruāūt departe in peace, accordinge to thy promesse.

For myne eyes haue sene thy Sauoure, whō thou hast prepared before all people.

† A light for the lightenyng of the Heythē, ¶ for the prayse of thy people of Israel.

And his father and mother marueyled at the thinges that were spokē of him. And Symeon blessed them, and sayde vnto Mary his mother: Beholde, this (childe) shalbe set to a fall, and to an vprysinge agayne of many in Israel, and for a token, which shalbe spokē agaynst. And the swerde shal pearse thy soule, that the thoughtes of many hertes maye be opened.

¶ And there was a prophetisse, one Anna, the daughter of Phanuel of the trybe of Aser, which was of a greate age, and had lyued seuen yearesh with hir huszbāde from hir virginite, ¶ had now bene a wedowe aboute foure score ¶ foure yearesh, which came neuer frō the tēple, seruyngē God with fastyngē and prayenge, daye and night: the same came forth also the same houre, and prayded the LORDE, and spake of him vnto all that loked for the redempcion at Ierusalem.

And whan they had perfourmed all acordyngē to the lawe of the LORDE, they returned ī to Galile, to their owne cite Nazareth. And the childe grewe, and waxed stronge in sprete, full of wysdome, ¶ the grace of God was with him.

And his elders wente to Ierusalem euery yeaer at the feast of Easter. And whan he was twolue yeaer olde, they wente vp to Ierusalem, ¶ after the custome of the feast. And whan they had fulfilled the dayes, and were gone home agayne, the childe Jesus abode styll at Ierusalem. And his elders knewe it not, but thought he had bene in the company, and they came a dayes iourney, and sought hī amōge their kynszfolkes ¶ acquātaunce. And whā they founde him not, they wētē agayne to Ierusalē, and sought him.

And it fortunēd after thre dayes, ꝑ they founde him in the temple, syttinge amonge the teachers, hearyngē thē, and opposyngē them. ¶ And all they that herde him, wōdred at his vnderstandyngē and answeres. And whan they sawe him, they were astonnyed. And his mother sayde vnto him: My sonne, why hast thou done this vnto vs? Beholde, thy father and I haue sought the sorowyngē. And he sayde vnto them: § What is it, that ye haue sought me? Wyst ye not, ꝑ I must go aboute my fathers busynes? And they ¶ vnderstode not the sayenge ꝑ he spake vnto them. And he wente downe with thē, and came to Nazareth, and was obediēt vnto them. And his mother kepte all these wordes in hir hert. And Jesus increased in wysdome, age and fauoure with God and men.

The iij. Chapter.

IN the fifteenth yeaer of the raigne of Tiberius the Emperoure, whā Pontius Pilate was leftenaūt in Iewry ¶ and Herode one of the foure princes in Galile, and his brother Philippe one of the foure prynces in Iturea, ¶ in the coastes of Traconites, and Lysanias one of the foure princes of Abilene, when Hannas and Caiphas were hye prestes, thē came ꝑ worde of God vnto Ihon the sonne of Zachary in the wyldernes. And he came in to all ꝑ coastes aboute Iordan, and preached the baptyeme of repētaunce for the remysyon of synnes. As it is wryttē in ꝑ boke of ꝑ sayenges of Esaye the prophet, which sayeth: The voyce of a cryer in the wyldernes: ¶ prepare the waye of the LORDE, and make his pathes straight. Euery valley shalbe fylled, and euery mountayne ¶ hyll shalbe brought lowe. And what so is croked, shalbe made straight: and what rough is, shalbe made smooth, and all flesh shal se the Sauoure of God.

Then sayde he vnto the people, ꝑ wente out to be baptyssed of him: Ye generacion of vipers, who hath certified you, that ye shal escape ꝑ wrath to come? Take hede, brynge forth due frutes of repētaūce, ¶ begynne not

The iiii. Chapter.

IESUS full of the holy goost, came agayne from Iordane,<sup>a</sup> and was led of  $\text{f}$  sprete in to wyldernes,  $\text{a}$  fourty dayes lōge was he tēpted of  $\text{f}$  deuell. <sup>a</sup>And in those dayes ate he nothinge. And whan they were ended, he hongred afterwarde. And the deuell sayde vnto him: Yf thou be  $\text{f}$  sonne of God, cōmaunde this stone,  $\text{f}$  it be bred. And Iesus answered  $\text{a}$  sayde vnto hī: It is written: †Man shal not lyeue by bred onely, but by euery worde of God. And  $\text{f}$  deuell toke him vp in to an hye mountayne, and shewed him all the kyngdomes of  $\text{f}$  whole worlde in  $\text{f}$  twinkelinge of an eye,  $\text{a}$  sayde vnto him: All this power wil I geue vnto the, and the glory therof, for it is geuē ouer vnto me, and I geue it, to whom I wil. Yf thou now wilt worshippe me, they shal all be thine. Iesus answered him, and sayde: Auoyde fro me thou Satan. It is written: †Thou shalt worshippe the LORDE thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue.

B And he caried him to Ierusalem, and set him vpon a pynacle of the temple, and sayde vnto him: Yf thou be  $\text{f}$  sonne of God, cast thy self downe from hence. For it is writtē: He shal geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the,<sup>c</sup> and with their handes they shal holde the vp, that thou dashe not thy fote agaynst a stone. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: It is sayde: †Thou shalt not tempte the LORDE thy God. And whan  $\text{f}$  deuell had ended all the temptacions, he departed from him for a season.

And <sup>a</sup>Iesus came agayne in the power of the sprete in to Galile. And the fame of him was noysed thorow out all  $\text{f}$  region rounde aboute. And he taught in their synagoges, and was commended of euery man.

And he came vnto Nazareth where he was noursed,<sup>f</sup> and as his custome was, he wēte in to the synagoge vpon  $\text{f}$  Sabbath, and stode vp for to rede. Then was there delyuered him the  $\text{b}$ oke of  $\text{f}$  prophet Esay. And whan he had turned ouer the boke, he founde the place where it is written: The sprete of the LORDE is with me,<sup>f</sup> because he hath anoynted me: to preach the Gospell vnto  $\text{f}$  poore hath he sent me: to heale the broken harted: to preach delyueraunce to the captiue, and sight to the blynde: and frely to set at liberty them that are brusd: and to preach the acceptable yeaue of the LORDE.

And whan he had closed the boke, he gaue C it agayne to  $\text{f}$  mynister,  $\text{a}$  sat him downe. And the eyes of all that were in the synagoge, were fastened on him. And he begāne to saye vnto them: This daye is this scripture fulfilled in youre eares. §And they all gaue him wytnesse, and wōdred at the gracious wordes, which proceeded out of his mouth, and they saide: Is not this Iosephs sonne?<sup>a</sup>

And he sayde vnto them: Doutles ye wyl saye vnto me this prouerbe: Phisician, heale thyself. For how greate thinges haue we herde done at Capernaū? Do the same here also in thine owne countre. But he saide: Verely I saye vnto you: There is no prophet accepted in his owne countre.<sup>f</sup> Neuertheles of a trueth I saye vnto you:  $\text{¶}$  There were many wedowes in Israel in  $\text{f}$  tyme of Elias, whā the heauē was shut thre yeaues and sixe monethes, and whan there was a greate derth in all the lande:  $\text{a}$  to none of thē was Elias sent, but onely vnto Sarepta of the Sydonians to a wedowe.  $\text{¶}$  And many lepers were there in Israel in the tyme of Eliseus  $\text{f}$  prophet, and none of thē was clensed, saue onely Naaman of Syria.

whā they herde  $\bar{y}$ , were fylled with wrath. And they rose vp, and thrust him out of the cite, and led him vp to the edge of the hyl whervpō their cite was buylded, that they might cast him downe headlynge. But he wente his waye euen thorow the myddest of them,\* and came to Capernaum a cite of Galile, and taught thē vpō the Sabbathes. And they wondred at his doctryne, \*for his preachinge was with power.

And in the Synagoge there was a man possessed with a foule deuell,  $\alpha$  he cryed loude, and sayde: Let me alone, what haue we to do with the thou Iesus of Nazareth?<sup>a</sup> Art thou come to destroye vs? I knowe  $\bar{y}$  who thou art, euen the Holy of God. And Iesus rebuked him and sayde: holde thy tūge, and departe out of him. And the deuell threw hī in the myldest amonge them, and departed from him, and dyd him no harme. And there came a feare ouer thē all, and they spake amonge them selues, and sayde: What maner of thinge is this? He commaundeth the foule spretes with auctorite and power, and they departe out. And  $\bar{y}$  fame of him was noysed thorow out all the places of  $\bar{y}$  countre rounde aboute.

And he rose vp out of the synagoge,<sup>c</sup> and came in to Symons house. And Symōs mother in lawe was takē with a greate feuer,  $\alpha$  they prayde him for her. And he wēte vnto her,  $\alpha$  cōmaunded the feuer. And it left her,  $\alpha$  imediately she rose vp,  $\alpha$  mynistred vnto thē.

$\text{E}$  And whan the Sonne was gone downe all they that had sicke of dyuerse<sup>d</sup> diseases, brought thē vnto him. And he layed his hādes vpon euery one of thē,  $\alpha$  made thē whole. \*The deuels also departed out of many, criēge and sayenge: Thou art Christ the sonne of God. And he rebuked thē,  $\alpha$  suffred them not to speake: for they knewe that he was Christ. But whā it was daye, he wēte out in to a deserte place. And the people sought hī, and came vnto him,  $\alpha$  kepte him,  $\bar{y}$  he shulde not departe frō thē. But he sayde vnto thē: I must preach the Gospell of  $\bar{y}$  kyngdome of God to other cities also: for there to am I sent. And he preached in the synagoges of Galile.

The v. Chapter.

$\text{I}$ T came to passe,  $\bar{y}$  the people / preassed  $\text{A}$  vpon him to heare the worde of God, and he stode by the lake of Genazereth, and sawe two shippes stōde by  $\bar{y}$  lake syde, but  $\bar{y}$  fishers were gone out of thē, and had waszhed their nettes. Then wente he in to one of the shippes, which was Symons, and prayed him,  $\bar{y}$  he wolde thrust out a litle frō the londe. And he sat him downe, and taught the people out of  $\bar{y}$  shippe.

And whan he had left of talkyng, he sayde vnto Symon: Launch out in to the depe  $\alpha$  let slyppe youre nettes, to make a draught. And Symon answered and sayde vnto him: Master, we haue laboured all  $\bar{y}$  night, and taken nothinge. But vpō thy worde, I wil lowse forth the nett. And whā they had so done, they toke a greate multitude of fiszhes,  $\alpha$  their net brake. And they made synges to their felowes which were in  $\bar{y}$  other shippe,  $\bar{y}$  they shulde come,  $\alpha$  helpe thē. And they came,  $\alpha$  fylled both the shippes full, so  $\bar{y}$  they soncke. Whan Symon Peter sawe  $\bar{y}$ , he fell downe at Iesus knees,  $\alpha$  sayde: LORDE, go fro me, for I am a synfull man: For he was astonnyed and all that were with him, at this draught of fishes which they toke, and so were Iames and Ihon also the sonnes of Zebede, which were Symons companyons. And Iesus sayde vnto Symō: Feare not, for frō hence forth thou shalt take men. And they brought the<sup>e</sup> shippes to londe, and left all, and folowed him.

$\text{C}$  And it fortunated as he was in a cite, beholde, there was a man full of leprosy. Whā he sawe Iesus, he fell vpō his face,  $\alpha$  besought him, and sayde: LORDE, yf thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And he stretched out his hāde, and touched him, and sayde: I wil, be thou cleane. And immediately the leprosy departed from him. And he charged hūn,  $\bar{y}$  he shulde tell no mā, but go thy waye (sayde he) and shewe thy self vnto  $\bar{y}$  prest, and offre for thy clensynge,<sup>f</sup> as Moses cōmaunded, for a witesse vnto thē. But  $\bar{y}$  fame of hī wēte out farther abrode,  $\alpha$  there came moch people together, to heare him,  $\alpha$  to be healed by hī frō their sicknesses. And he departed in to the wyldernesses, ⁊ gaue him self to prayer.

And it fortunēd vpō a daye, ŷ he taught, and there sat ŷ Pharises and scribes, which were "come out of all the townes of Galile, and Iewry, and frō Ierusalē, and the power of the LORDE wēte frō him, ⁊ healed euery man. And beholde, certayne men brought vpon a bed, a man ŷ had ŷ palsey, and they sought how they might brynge him in, and laye him before him. And whan they coude not fynde by what waye they might bringe him in (for ŷ people) they clymmed vp to ŷ toppe of the house, ⁊ let him downe thorow the tylinge with the bed, amōge thē before Iesus. And whan he sawe their faith, he sayde vnto hī: Man, thy synnes are forgeuē ŷ. And the scribes and pharyses begāne to thynke, ⁊ saide: What is he this, ŷ speaketh blasphemy. *Who cā forgeue synnes, but onely God?

Neuertheles whā Iesus perceaued their thoughtes, he answered, and saide vnto thē: What thynke ye in youre hertes? Whether is easier to saye: Thy synnes are forgeuē ŷ, Or to saye: Aryse, and walke? But that ye maye knowe, that the sonne of mā hath power to forgeue synnes vpon earth, he sayde vnto ŷ sicke of the palsey: I saye vnto ŷ: Aryse, take vp thy bed, and go home. And immediatly he rose vp before thē, ⁊ toke vp the bed ŷ he had lyen vpō, and wēte home, and prayed God. And they were all astonnyed, and gaue God ŷ prayse, and were fylled with feare, and sayde: We haue sene maruelous thynges to daye.

And afterwarde he wēte out, and sawe a publican named Leui, syttinge at ŷ reccate of custome, ⁊ he sayde vnto him: "Folowe me. And he left all, rose vp, ⁊ folowed him. And Leui made hī a greate feast ī his house. And many publicans ⁊ other sat with hī at ŷ table. And the scribes and Pharyses murmured agaynst his disciples, ⁊ saide: Wherefore do ye eate ⁊ drynke with publicāns ⁊ synners? d Iesus answered, ⁊ sayde vnto thē: The whole nede not ŷ phisician, but they ŷ are sicke. I am not come to call ŷ righteous, but sinners to repentaūce. e ŷ disciples of Ihō so of, ⁊ praye so moch, ⁊ the disciples of the Pharises likewyse, but thy disciples eate and drynke? And he sayde vnto them: Can ye make the weddyngge childrē fast, so lōge as the brydegrome is with thē? But the tyme wil come that the brydegrome shalbe takē frō thē, then shal they fast.

And he sayde vnto them a symilitude: No man putteth a pece of new cloth in to an olde garment: for els he renteth the new, and the pece of the new agreeth not with the olde. And no man putteth new wyne in to olde vessels, for els ŷ new wyne barsteth the vessels, and runneth out it self, and the vessels perishe. But new wyne must be put in to new vessels, and so are they both preserued. And there is no man that drynketh the olde, and wolde straight waye haue the new, for he sayeth: the olde is pleasaunter.

The vi. Chapter.

AND it fortunēd vpon an after pryncipall Sabbath, f that he wente thorow the corne felde, ⁊ his disciples plucked the eares of corne, and ate, and rubbed thē with their hādes. But certayne of the Pharises sayde vnto them: Wherefore do ye that, which is not lafull to do vpon the Sabbath? And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto thē: g Haue ye not red what Dauid dyd, whā he was hongrie, and they that were with him, how he wente in to the house of God, and toke the shewbread, and ate, and gaue also vnto them that were with him, which was lafull for no man to eate, but for the prestes onely? It came to passe vpō another Sabbath, that he wēte in to the synagoge, and taught: and there was a man, whose right hande was wythred. But ŷ scribes and Pharises marked him, whether he wolde heale vpon the Sabbath, that they might fynde an occasion agaynst him. destroie it? And he behelde the all rounde aboute, and sayde vnto the mā: Stretch out thine hande. And he dyd so. Then was his hande restored him to right, euen as whole as the other. But they were fylled full of madnes, and commoned together, what they wolde do to him.

33 * And it fortunēd at the same tyme, that he wente out in to a mountayne to praye, and continued all night in prayer to God.* And whā it was daye, he called his disciples, and chose twolue of them, whom he called also apostles. Symon, whom he named Peter, and Andrew his brother, Iames and Ihon, Phylippe and Bartylmew, Mathew and Thomas, Iames the sonne of Alpheus, Symon called Zelotes, Iudas the sonne of Iames, and Iudas Iscarioth, which was the traytoure.

† And he wente downe with them, and stode vpon a playne in the felde, and the company of his disciples, and a greate multitude of people, from all Iewry, and Ierusalem, and from Tyre and Sydon by the see coast, which were come to heare him, and to be healed of their diseases, and they that were vexed with foule spretes, were healed. And all the people sought to touch him, for there wente vertue frō him, and healed the all.

C And he lift vp his eyes vpō his disciples, and sayde: † Blessed are ye poore, for yours is the kyngdome of God. Blessed are ye that hunger here, for ye shalbe satisfied. Blessed are ye ⁊ wepe here, for ye shal laugh. Blessed are ye, whan men hate you, and put you out of their cōpanyes, and reuyle you, and cast out youre name as an euell thinge, for the sonne of mans sake. Reioyse ye then, and be glad: for beholde, youre rewarde is greate in heauen. ‡ Euen thus dyd their fathers vnto the prophetes also.

But vnto you riche, for ye haue youre cōsolacion already. Wo vnto you that are full, for ye shal hunger. Wo vnto you that laugh here, for ye shal wepe and wayle. Wo vnto you whan euery man prayseth you, Euen so dyd their fathers vnto the false prophetes also.

But I saye vnto you that heare: Loue youre enemies: do good vnto them that hate you: blesse them that curse you: praye for them that wrongfully trouble you. And who so smyteth the on the one cheke, offre him ⁊ other also. And who so taketh away thy cloake, forbyd him not thy cote also. Who so euer axeth of the, geue him: and who so taketh away thyne, axe it not agayne. † And as ye wolde that men shulde do vnto you, ‡ euen so do ye vnto them likewise.

D And yf ye loue them that loue you, what thāke haue ye therfore? For synners also loue their louers. And yf ye do good for youre good doers, what thanke haue ye therfore? For synners also do euen the same. And yf ye lende vnto them, of whō ye hope to receaue, what thāke haue ye ther fore? For synners also lende vnto synners, that they maye receaue as moch agayne. But rather loue ye youre enemies, do good, and lende, lokinge for nothinge therof agayne: so shal youre rewarde be greate, and ye shalbe the children of the Hiest, for he is kynde, euen to the vnthankfull and to the euell.

Be ye therfore mercifull,⁴ as youre father also is mercifull. Iudge not, and ye shal not be iudged. Condēpne not, and ye shal not be condemned. Forgeue, and ye shal be forgiven. † Geue, and to you shalbe geue. A good measure, pressed downe, shaken together, ⁊ rūnyngē ouer, shal mē geue in to youre bosome. ‡ For with what measure ye meete, with the same shal it be measured to you agayne.

And he sayde a synilitude vnto the: † Can the blynde shewe the waye to ⁊ blynde? Do they not both the fall in to the dyche? The disciple is not aboue his master.⁴ But whoso-euer is perfecte, ⁊ same shalbe as his master. But why seist thou a moote ī thy brothers eye, and considrest not the beame, that is in thine awne eye? Or how canst thou saye vnto thy brother: holde styll brother, I wil plucke ⁊ moate out of thyne eye,⁴ and thou thy self seist not ⁊ beame in thine awne eye? Thou ypocryte, Fyrst cast the beame out of thine awne eye, and the shalt thou se clearly to pull the moote out of thy brothers eye.

The vii. Chapter.

WHAN he had ended his talkynge vnto the people,<sup>a</sup> he wente in to Capernaum: and a captaines seruaut laye deede sicke, whom he loued. Whā he herde of Iesus, he sent the elders of the Iewes vnto him, and prayed him, that he wolde come, and make his seruaut whole. But whā they came to Iesus, they besought him instantly, ȝ sayde: He is worthy ȝ thou shuldest shewe this for him, for he loueth oure people, ȝ hath buylded vs ȝ synagoge. And Iesus wente with them.

Now whan they were not farre from ȝ house, ȝ captaine sent frēdes vnto hī, saiēge vnto him: Oh LORDE, trouble not thy self, I am not worthy, ȝ thou shuldest enter vnder my rofe, and therefore I thought not my self worthy to come to ȝ: but speake ȝ worde, ȝ my seruaut shalbe whole. For I my self also am a mā, subiecte to the hygher autorite, ȝ haue soudyers vnder me. And I saye vnto one: Go, ȝ he goeth. And to another: Come, and he cometh. And to my seruaut: Do this, ȝ he doeth it. Whan Iesus herde ȝ, he marueyled at hī, ȝ turned him aboute, ȝ sayde vnto ȝ people ȝ folowed hī: I saye vnto you: So greate faith haue I not founde, no not in Israel. And whā they that were sent, came home agayne, they founde the seruaut that was sicke, whole.

And it fortuneth afterwarde, that he wēte in to a cite called Naim, and many of his disciples wente with him, and moch people. Whan he came nye to the gate of the cite, beholde, there was caried out one deed, which was the onely sonne of his mother, and she was a wyddowe, and moch people of the cite wente with her. And whan the LORDE sawe her, he had cōpassion on her, and sayde vnto her: Wepe not. And he came nye, and touched the Coffyn. And they that bare him, stode styll. And he sayde: Yonge man, I saye vnto the: Aryse. And †the deed sat vp, and beganne to speake. And he deliuered him vnto his mother. And there came a feare on them all, and they prayed God, and sayde: ‡A greate prophet is rysen amonge vs, and God hath vysited his people. And this fame of him was noyed in all Iewry, and in all ȝ regions that laye rounde aboute.

And the disciples of Ihō shewed him of all these thinges. And Ihon called vnto him two of his disciples, and sent thē vnto Iesus sayenge: Art thou he that shal come, or shal we loke for another? Whan the men came to him, they sayde: Ihon ȝ baptist hath sent vs vnto the, sayenge: Art thou he that shal come, or shal we loke for another?

At the same houre healed he many from sicknesses ȝ plages, and frō euell spretes, and vnto many that were blynde, he gaue sight. And Iesus answered, ȝ sayde vnto thē: Go youre waye, shewe Ihon, what ye haue sene ȝ herde. ¶The blynde se, the halt go, the lepers are clensed, the deaf heare, the deed aryse, § the Gospell is preached vnto ȝ poore, and blessed is he, that is not offended at me.

<sup>a</sup>Whan the messaungers of Ihō were departed, Iesus begāne to speake vnto ȝ people cōcernynge Ihō: What are ye gone out for to se in ȝ wyldernes? Wolde ye se a rede, that is shakē with the wynde? Or what are ye gone out for to se? Wolde ye se a mā clothed in soft rayment? Beholde, they that are gorgeously arrayed, ȝ lyue delicately, are in kynge's courtes. Or what are ye gone out for to se? Wolde ye se a prophet? Yee I saye vnto you: one that is more thē a prophet.

This is he, of whom it is wrytten: "Beholde, I sende my messaunger before thy face, which shal prepare thy waye before the. For I saye vnto you: Amonge thē ŷ are borne of wemē, there is no greater prophet thē Ihon the baptist. Notwith stoundyge he that is lesse in the kyngdome of God, is greater then he.

And all the people that herde him, and ŷ publicans, iustified God, and were baptysed with the baptyme of Ihon. But the Pharises and scribes despyed ŷ counsell of God against thē selues, ⁊ were not baptised of hī.

¶ But the LORDE saide: Where vnto shal I licken the men of this generacion? And whom are they like? They are like vnto childrē which syt in the market, and crye one to another, and saye: We haue pyped vnto you, and ye haue not daunted: we haue mourned vnto you, ⁊ ye haue not wepte. For Ihon ŷ baptist came, and *ate no bred, and drake no wyne, and ye saye: he hath ŷ deuell. The sonne of man is come, eateth and drynketh, ⁊ ye saye: This man is a glutton and a wyne bebbler, a frende of publicans and synners. And wysdome is iustified of all hir children.

And one of the Pharises desyred him, ŷ he wolde eate with him. And he wente in to the Pharises house, and sat him downe at ŷ table. † And beholde, there was in the cite a womā, which was a synner. Whē she knewe that Iesus sat at the table in the Pharises house, she brought a boxe with oyntment, ⁊ stode behynde at his fete, and wepte, and beganne to water his fete with teares, and to drye thē with the hayres of hir heade, and kyssed his fete, ⁊ anoynted thē with oyntmēt.

¶ But whan the Pharise which had called him sawe that, he spake within himself, and sayde: Yf this mā were a prophet, he wolde knowe who, ⁊ what maner of woman this is that toucheth him, for she is a synner. And Iesus answered, and saide vnto him: Simō, I haue somewhat to saye vnto the. He sayde: Master saye on. A certayne lender had two detters, the one ought fyue hundred pens, the other fiftie: but whan they had nothinge to paye, he forgauē thē both. Tell me which of them wyl loue him most? Symon answered, and sayde: He, (I suppose) to whō he forgauē most. Then sayde he vnto him: Thou hast iudged right.

And he turned him to the woman, and sayde vnto Symō: Seist thou this womā? I am come in to thine house, thou hast geuē me no water vnto my fete, but she hath watred my fete with teares, and dried thē with the hayres of hir heade: Thou hast geuē me no kysse, but she (sens the tynne she came in) hath not ceased to kysse my fete: Thou hast not anointed my heade with oyle, but she hath anoynted my heade with oyntment. Therefore I saye vnto the: Many synnes are forgeuen her, for she hath loued moch. But vnto whom lesse is forgeuen, the same loueth the lesse.

And he sayde vnto her: Thy synnes are forgeuen the. Then they that sat at the table with him, beganne to saye within themselves: What is he this, that forgeueth synnes also? But he sayde vnto the woman: Thy faith hath sauēd the, Go thy waye in peace.

The viij. Chapter.

AND it fortunēd afterwarde, that he wente a thorow the cities and townes, and preached, and shewed ŷ Gospell of the kyngdome of God, and the twolue with him. And certayne women also, whō he had healed frō euell spretes and infirmities: Namely, Mary † which is called Magdalene, out of whom wente seuen deuels, and Ioanna ŷ wife of Chusa Herodes stewarde, and Susanna, and many other, that mynistred vnto them of their substaunce.

¶ Now whā moch people were gathered together, and haisted vnto him out of the cities, He spake by a symilitude: There wente out a sower to sowe his sede, ⁊ whyle he was sowynge, some fell by the waye syde, and was troddē vnder fote, and the foules of the ayre ate it vp. And some fell on stone, and whan it was spronge vp, it wythred awaye, because it had no moystnesse. And some fell amonge thornes, and the thornes spronge vp with it, and choked it. And some fell vpō a good grounde, and spronge vp, and bare frute an hundred fold. Whā he sayde this he cryed: Who so hath eares to heare, let him heare.

B And his disciples axed him, and sayde: "What symilitude is this? And he sayde: Vnto you it is geuē, to knowe the mysteryes of the kyngdome of God, but vnto the other in parables, † though they se it, they shulde not se it,<sup>a</sup> and though they heare it, they shulde not vnderstonde.

This is the parable: The sede is the worde of God: As for those that are by † waye syde, they are they that heare it, afterwarde commeth the deuell, and taketh awaye the worde out of their hertes, that they shulde not beleue, and be sauēd. But they on † stone, are such as whan they heare it, receaue the worde with ioye, and these haue no rote: they beleue for a while, and in the tyme of temptacion they fall awaye. As for it that fel amonge the thornes, are such as heare it, and go forth amonge the cāres, riches and voluptuousnesses of this life, and are choked and brynge forth no frute. But that on the good grounde, are they that heare the worde, and kepe it in a pure good hert, and brynge forth frute in pacience.

<sup>a</sup> No man lighteth a cādell, and couereth it with a vessell, or putteth it vnder a table, but setteth it vpon a candelsticke, that such as go in maye se light. <sup>a</sup> For there is nothinge hyd, that shal not be openly shewed: and there is nothinge secreete, that shal not be knowne, and come to light. Take hede therfore how ye heare. * For who so hath, vnto him shalbe geuē: but who so hath not, from him shalbe taken awaye, euē the same that he thynketh to haue.

C There wente vnto him his mōther and his brethren, and coude not come at him for the people. And it was tolde him. Thy mother and thy brethren stonde without,<sup>a</sup> and wolde se the. But he answered, † sayde vnto thē: My mother and my brethren are these, which heare the worde of God, and do it.

vnto him, and waked him vp, † sayde: Master master, we perishe. Then he arose, and rebuked the wynde, and the tēpest of water, and they ceased, and it waxed calme. But he sayde vnto thē: Where is youre faith? Neuertheles they were a frayd, and wōdred, and sayde one to another: What is he this? For he cōmaundeth the wyndes and the water, and they are obedient vnto him. <sup>a</sup> And they sayled forth in to the countre of the Gadarenites, which is ouer agaynst Galile.

And whan he wente out to londe, there met him out of † cite a mā, which had a deuell longe tyme, † ware no clothes, † taried in no house, but in the graues. Neuertheles whā he sawe Iesus, he cried, and fell downe before him, and cried loude, † sayde: What haue I to do with the Iesus, thou sonne of the Hyest God? I beseke the, that thou wilt not tormēte me. For he cōmaunded the foule sprete, that he shulde departe out of the mā, for he had played hī a lōge season. And he was bounde with cheynes, and kepte with fetters, and he brake the bondes in sonder, and was caried of the deuell in to the wyl-dernesse.

And Iesus axed him, and sayde: What is thy name? He sayde: Legion. For there were many deuels entred in to him. And they besought him, that he wolde not cōmaunde thē to go in to the depe. <sup>a</sup> But there was there a greate heerd of swyne fedyngē vpon the mountayne, and they besought him, that he wolde geue them leue, to entre in to † same. But whā † herdmen sawe what had chaunsed, they fled, and tolde it in the cite and in the vyllages.

Then wente they out, for to se what was done, and came to Iesus, and founde the mā (out of whom the deuyls were departed) syttinge at Iesus fete, clothed, and in his right mynde, and they were a frayd. * And it fortuned whā Iesus came agayne, the people receaued him, for they wayted for him. And beholde, there came a man named Iairus (and he was a ruler of the synagoge) and fell at Iesus fete, ⁊ besought him, that he wolde come in to his house. For he had but one daughter (vpon a twolue yere of age) and she laye at þ̄ poynt of death. <sup>b</sup> And as he wente, the people thronged him. And a womā hauynge the bloudysseue twolue yeres, (which had spent all hir substance vpon phisicians, and coude be healed of none) came behynde, ⁊ touched the hemme of his garmēt, and immediatly hir yssue of bloude was stanchēd.

f And Iesus sayde: Who hath touched me? But whan they all denyed, Peter sayde, and they that were with him: Master, the people thronge the and thrust the, and thou sayest: Who hath touched me? Iesus saide: Some body hath touched me, for I fele, that there is vertue gone out fro me. But whan the woman sawe that she was not hyd, she came trēblynge, and fell downe before him, and tolde him before all the people, for what cause she had touched him, ⁊ how she was healed immediatly. And he sayde vnto her: Doughter, be of good comforte, thy faith hath made the whole, go thy waye in peace.

<sup>c</sup> Whye he yet spake, there came one frō þ̄ ruler of þ̄ synagoges house, and sayde vnto him: Thy daughter is deed, disease not the master. Whan Iesus herde that, he answered him, and sayde: Feare not, beleeue onely, and she shal be made whole. But whan he came in to the house, he suffred no man to go in, saue Peter, and Iames and Ihō, and the father and mother of the mayden. They wepte all, and sorowed for her. But he sayde: Wepe not, for she is not deed, but <sup>d</sup> slepeth. And they laughed hī to scorne, knowynge well that she was deed. But he thrust them all out, and toke her by the hande, and cryed, and sayde: Maydē aryse. And hir sprete came agayne, ⁊ she arose straight waye. And he cōmaunded to geue her meate. And hir elders were astonnyed. But he charged them, that they shulde tell no man, what was done.

The ij. Chapter.

AND he called the twolue together, <sup>e</sup> and gaue them power and auctorite ouer all deuels, and that they might heale diseases. and shyned: and beholde, two men talked with him, Which were Moses and Elias, that appeared gloriously, and spake of his departyng, which he shulde fulfill at Ierusalem. As for Peter and them that were with him, they were full of slepe. But whan they awoke, they saw his glory, and the two men stondyng with him.

¶ And it chauned, whan they departed fro him, Peter sayde vnto Iesus: Master, here is good beyng for vs. Let vs make thre tabernacles: one for the, one for Moses, and one for Elias, and wyst not what he sayde. But whyle he thus spake, there came a cloude, and ouersadowed them. And they were afrayed, whan the cloude couered them. And out of the cloude there came a voyce, which sayde: This is my deare sonne, § heare him. And whyle this voyce came to passe, they founde Iesus alone. And they kepte it close, and tolde no mā in those dayes eny of the thynges which they had sene.

¶ And it chauned on the nexte daye after, whan they came downe from the mount, moch people met him, and beholde, a man amonge the people cryed out, and sayde: Master, I beseke the, loke vpon my sonne, for he is my onely sonne: beholde, the sprete taketh him, and sodenly he crieth, and he teareth him, that he someth, and with payne departeth he from him, whan he hath rente him. And I besought thy disciples to cast him out, and they coulde not. Then answered Iesus, and sayde: Oh thou vnfaithfull and croked generacion, how longe shal I be with you, & suffice you? Brynge hither thy sonne. And whan he came to him, the deuell rente him and tare him. But Iesus rebuked the foule sprete, and healed the chyld, and deliuered him vnto his father agayne. ¶ And they were all amased at the mighty power of God.

And whyle they wondred euery one at all thynges which he dyd, he sayde vnto his disciples: Comprehende these sayenges in youre eares. ¶ For the sonne of man must be deliuered in to the hādes of men. But they wyst not what that worde meant, and it was hyd from them, that they vnderstode it not. And they were afrayed to axe him of that

¶ And it fortuneth when the tyme was fulfilled that he shulde be receaued vp from hence, he turned his face to go straight to Ierusalem, and before him he sent messaungers, which wente their waye, and came in to a towne of the Samaritans, to prepare lodginge for him. And they wolde not receaue him, because he had turned his face to go to Ierusalē. But whan his disciples Iames and Ihon sawe that, they sayde: LORDE, wilt thou, that we commaunde, that fyre fall downe from heauen, and consume them,‡ as Elias dyd? Neuertheles Iesus turned him aboute, and rebuked them, and sayde: Knowe ye not, what maner of sprete ye are of? The sonne of man is not come to destroye mens soules, but to saue them. And they wente in to another towne.

*And it fortuneth as they went by the waye, one sayde vnto him: I wil folowe the, whyther so euer thou go. And Iesus sayde vnto him: The foxes haue holes, and the byrdes vnder the heauē haue nestes: but the sonne of man hath not wheron to laye his heade.

¶ And he sayde vnto another: Folowe me. He sayde: Syr, geue me leue first to go, and burye my father. But Iesus sayde vnto him: § Let the deed burye thy deed. But go thou thy waye, and preach the kyngdome of God.

AFTERWARDE the LORDE appointed out other seuentie, and sent them two and two before him in to euery cite and place, whither he himself wolde come, and sayde vnto them: "The haruest is greate, but the labourers are fewe. The seuētye came agayne with ioye, and sayde: LORDE, the deuels also are subdued vnto vs in thy name. But he sayde vnto them: "I sawe Sathan fall downe from heauen as a lightenyng. Beholde, *I haue geuen you power to treade vpon serpētes and scorpions, and ouer all power of the enemye, and nothinge shall hurte you. Neuertheles, reioyce not ye in this, that the spretes are subdued vnto you: but reioyse, †that youre names are wryten in heauen.

¶ At the same houre reioysed Iesus in sprete, and sayde: †I prayse the (O father and LORDE of heauen and earth) that thou hast hyd these thinges from the wyse and prudent, and hast opened them vnto babes. Euen so father, for so it pleased the. †All thinges are geuen ouer vnto me of my father: †and no man knoweth who the sonne is, but onely the father: nether who the father is, saue onely the sonne, and he to whō the sonne will open it.

And he turned him vnto his disciples, and sayde in especiall: Blessed are the eyes, which se that ye se. For I saye vnto you: †Many prophetes and kynges, wolde haue sene the thynges that ye se, and haue not sene them: and to haue herde the thynges that ye heare, and haue not herde them.

And beholde, there stode vp a scribe and tempted him, and sayde: Master, what must I do, to inheret euerlastinge life? He sayde vnto him: What is wryten in the lawe? How readeest thou? He answered and sayde: †Thou shalt loue thy LORDE God with all thy hert, with all thy soule, with all thy strength, and with all thy mynde, and §thy neghboure as thy self. He sayde vnto him: Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt lye. But he wolde haue iustified himself, ¶ sayde vnto Iesus: Who is then my neghboure?

¶ Then answered Iesus, and sayde: A certayne man wente downe from Ierusalem vnto Iericho, and fell amonge murthurers, which stryped him out of his clothes, and wounded him, and wente their waye, and left him half deed. And by chaūce there came downe a prest the same waye: and whan he sawe him, he passed by. And likewise a Leuite, whā he came nye vnto the same place and sawe him, he passed by. But a Samaritane was goynge his iourney, and came that waye, and whan he sawe him, he had compassion vpon him, wente vnto him, bounde vp his woundes, and poured oyle and wyne therin, and lifte him vp vpon his beast, and brought him in to the ynne, and made prouysion for him. Vpon the next daye whan he departed, he toke out two pens, and gaue them to the oost, and sayde vnto him: Take cure of him, and what so euer thou spendest more, I will paye it the, whan I come agayne. Which of these thre now thinkest thou, was neghboure vnto him, that fell amonge the murthurers? He sayde: He that shewed mercy vpon him. Then sayde Iesus vnto him: Go thy waye then, and do thou likewise.

It fortunated as they wēte, that he entred in to a towne, where there was a woman named Martha, which receaued him in to hir house. And she had a sister, called Mary, / which sat hir downe at Iesus fete, and herkened vnto his worde. But Martha made hir self moche to do, for to serue him. And she stepte vnto him, and sayde: LORDE, carest thou not, that my sister letteth me serue alone? Byd her therfore, that she helpe me. But Iesus answered, and sayde vnto her: Martha Martha, thou takest thought, and combest thy self aboute many thinges: ¶there is but one thinge nedefull. Mary hath chosen a good parte, which shal not be taken awaye from her.

<sup>b</sup>And he droue out a deuell that was domme: and it came to passe whan the deuell was departed out, the domme spake, and the people wondred. But some of them sayde: <sup>c</sup>He dryueth out the deuels, thorow Beelzebub the chefe of the deuels. The other tempted him, and desyred a token of him from heauen. <sup>f</sup>Whan the vncleane sprete is gone out of a man, he walketh thorow drye places, sekyng rest, and fyndeth none. Then sayeth he: I wil turne agayne in to my house, from whence I wente out. And whan he commeth, he fyndeth it swepete, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh vnto him seuen other spretes, worse then the himself. And whan they are entred in, they dwell there. And the ende of that man is worse then the begynnynge.

And it fortuneth whan he spake soch, a certayne woman amonge the people lift vp hir voyce, and sayde vnto him: Blessed is <sup>g</sup>ymombe that bare the, and the pappes that thou hast sucked. But he sayde: Yee blessed are they that heare the worde of God, and kepe it.

f I am come to kyndle fyre vpō earth, and what wolde I rather, thā that it were kyndled allready. Notwithstōdinge I must first be baptised with a baptyeme, and how am I payned tyll it be ended? Thynke ye, that I am come to brynge peace vpon earth? "I tell you nay, but rather debate. For from hence forth there shal be at varyaunce in one house: thre agaynst two, and two agaynst thre. The father shal be deuyded agaynst f sonne, and the sonne agaynst the father: the mother agaynst the doughter, & the doughter agaynst the mother: the mother in lawe agaynst hir doughter in lawe, and f doughter in lawe agaynst hir mother in lawe.

And he sayde vnto the people: "Whan ye se a cloude ryse out of f west, straight waye ye saye: there cōmeth a shower, and so it is: and whan ye se the southwynde blowe, ye saye: It wil be hote, and it commeth so to passe. O ye ypocrytes, ye can discerne the fashion of the skye and of the earth: Why can ye not discerne this tyme also? Yee and yie iudge ye not of youre selues, what is right?

Whyle thou goest with thine aduersary vnto the Prynce, geue diligēce by the waye, that thou mayest be quyte of him, lest he brynge the before the iudge, and the iudge delyuer the to the iaylar, and the iaylar cast the in to preson. I tell the, thou shalt not come out thence, tyll thou paye the vttemost myte.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A THERE were present at the same season certayne, that shewed him of f *Galileans, whose bloude Pilate had mēgled with their awne sacrifice. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Suppose ye, that these Galileās were greater synners then all the other Galileans, because they suffred soch punyshment? I tell you naye, but excepte ye amēde youre selues, ye shal all perishe likewise. Or thinke ye that f eightene (vpon whom the tower in Siloe fell and slewe them) were giltye aboute all men that dwell at Jerusalem? I tell you naye: but excepte ye amende youre selues, ye shal all perishe likewise.

And he tolde them this symilitude: A certayne mā had a fygge tre, which was planted in his vynyarde, & he came and sought frute thereon, and founde none. Then sayde he vnto the wyngardener: Beholde, This thre yeare longe haue I come euery yeare, and sought frute vpon this fygge tre, and fynde none: cut it downe, why hyndreth it the grounde? But he answered, and sayde: Syr, let it alone yet this yeare, tyll I dygge rōūde aboute it and donge it, yf it wyl brynge forth frute: Yf no, then cut it downe afterwarde.

And he taught in a synagoge vpon the Sabbath: and beholde, there was a womā, which had a sprete of infirmyte eightene yeares, and was croked, and coulde not well loke vp. Whan Iesus sawe her, he called her to him, and sayde vnto her: Woman, be delyuered from thy disease. And he layed his handes vpō her, and immediatly she was made straight, and praysed God. Then answered the ruler of the synagoge, and toke indignacion (because Iesus healed vpō f Sabbath) and sayde vnto the people: There are sixe dayes, wherin men ought to worke, in them come and be healed, and not on the Sabbath.

Then the LORDE answered him, and sayde: Thou ypocryte, doth not euery one of you lowse his ox or asse frō the crybbe vpō Sabbath, and leade him to the water? But shulde not this (which is Abrahams doughter) whom Sathan hath bounde now eightene yeares, be lowsed from this bonde vpō the Sabbath? And whan he thus sayde, all his aduersaries were ashamed. And all the people reioysed ouer all the excellent dedes, that were done by him.

And he sayde: "What is the kyngdome of God like? Or wher vnto shal I cōpare it? It is like a grayne of mustarde sede, which a man toke, and cast in his garden: and it grewe, and waxed a greute tre, and the foules of the ayre dwelt amonge the branches of it.

And agayne he sayde: "Where vnto shal I liken the kyngdome of God? It is like vnto leuen, which a woman toke, and myxte it anōge thre peckes of meele," tyll it was all leuended. And he wēte thorow cities and townes, and taught, and toke his iourney towarde Ierusalem.

C And one sayde vnto him: LORDE, are there few (thinkest thou) that shalbe saued? But he sayde vnto them: <sup>b</sup>Strye ye to entre in at the straye gate, for many (I saye vnto you) shal seke to come in, and shal not be able. From that tyme forth, when the good man of the house is rysen vp, and hath shut the dore, then shal ye begynne to stonde without, and to knocke at ſ̄ dore, and saye: LORDE LORDE, open vnto vs. <sup>c</sup>And he shal answere, and saye vnto you: I knowe you not whence ye are.

Then shal ye begynne to saye: We haue eaten and dronken before the, and thou hast taught vs vpon ſ̄ stretes. And he shal saye: I tell you, I knowe you not whence ye are. <sup>d</sup>Depart from me all ye workers of iniquyte. D Vpon the same daye there came certayne of ſ̄ Pharises, and sayde vnto him: Get the out of the waye, and departe hence, for Herode wyl kyll the. And he sayde vnto thē: Go ye and tell that foxe: beholde, I cast out deuels, and heale the people todaye and to-morow, and vpō the thirde daye shal I make an ende: for it can not be, that a prophet perishe without Ierusalem.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND it fortuneth that he came in to the house of one of ſ̄ chiefe Pharises vpō a Sabbath, to eate bred, <sup>i</sup> they watched him. And beholde, there was a mā before him, which had ſ̄ dropsye. And Iesus answered, <sup>j</sup> spake vnto the scribes and Pharises, <sup>k</sup> sayde: 'Is it lafull to heale on the Sabbath? But they helde their tonge. And he toke him, and healed him, <sup>l</sup> let him go, and answered, and sayde vnto thē: Which of you shal haue an oxe or an asse fallen in to a pytte, <sup>m</sup> and wil not straight waye pull him out on the Sabbath daye? And they coude not answere him agayne to that.

And he tolde a symilitude vnto ſ̄ gestes, whā he marked how they chose the hiest seates, <sup>n</sup> sayde vnto thē: Whan thou art byddē of eny man to a weddinge, syt not downe in the hiest rowme, lest a more honorable man thē thou be byddē of him, and he that bade both the and him, come <sup>o</sup> saye vnto ſ̄: geue this mā rowme, and thou thē begynne with shame to take ſ̄ lowest rowme. But rather whā thou art byddē, go and syt in ſ̄ lowest rowme, that whā he that bade the, cometh, he maye saye vnto the: Frende, syt <sup>p</sup> vp hyer: then shalt thou haue worships in the presence of them that syt at the table. For who so euer exalteth himself, shalbe brought lowe: <sup>q</sup> and he ſ̄ humbleth himself, shalbe exalted.

He sayde also vnto him that had bydden him: Whā thou makest a dyner or a supper, call not thy frendes, ner thy brethren, ner thy kynsfolkes, ner thy riche neighbours, lest they call the agayne, and recompēce be made ſ̄. But whā thou makest a feast, <sup>r</sup> call the poore, the crepell, the lame, the blynde, then art thou blessed, for they can not recompēce ſ̄. But it shalbe recompensed the in the resurrection of the righteous.

Whan one of them that sat by at the table herde this, he sayde vnto him: Blessed is he, that eateth bred in ſ̄ kyngdome of God. But he sayde vnto him: A certayne mā made a greate supper, <sup>s</sup> and called many ther to. And in ſ̄ houre of the supper he sent his seruaūte, to saye vnto thē ſ̄ were byddē:

¶ Come, for now are all things ready. And they begane all together to excuse the selues one after another: The first saide vnto hi: I haue bought a ferme, and I must nedes go forth and se it, I praye y haue me excused. And y seconde sayde: I haue bought fyue yoke of oxen, and now I go to proue them, I praye the haue me excused. And the thirde sayde: I haue married a wife, therefore can I not come. And the seruauant came, and brought his lorde worde agayne therof.

Then was the good man of the house displeased, and sayde vnto his seruauit: Go out quickly in to the stretes and quarters of y cite, and brynge in hither the poore and crepell, and lame and blynde. And the seruauit sayde: lorde, it is done as thou hast comaunded, and there is yet more rowme. And the lorde sayde vnto the seruauit: Go out in to the hye wayes, and to the hedges, and compell them to come in, that my house maye be fylled. But I saye vnto you: that none of these men which were bydden, shal taist of my supper.

¶ There wente moch people with him,<sup>a</sup> and he turned him aboute and sayde vnto them: Yf eny man come vnto me, and hate not his father, mother, wife, childre, brethre, sisters, yee and his owne life also, he can not be my disciple. And whosoever beareth not his crosse, and foloweth me, can not be my disciple.

¶ Which of you is it y wil buylde a tower, and sytteth not downe first and counteth y cost, whether he haue sufficiēt to perfourme, it? lest after he hath layed the foundaciō, and is not able to perfourme it, all they that se it, begynne to laugh him to scorne, & to saye: This man beganne to buylde, and is not able to perfurme it. Or what kynge wil go to make battayl agaynst another kynge, and sytteth not downe first, and casteth in his mynde, whether he be able with ten thousande, to mete him that commeth agaynst him with twentye thousande? Or els, whyle the other is yet a greate waye of he sendeth embassage, and desyreth peace. So likewyse euery one of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, can not be my disciple.

¶ Salt is a good thinge:<sup>b</sup> but yf the salt be vsnauery, what shal they season withall? It is nether good vpon the lande, ner in the donge hyll, but shal be cast awaye. He that hath eares to heare, let him heare.

The xii. Chapter.

¶ THERE resorted vnto him all the publicans and synners,<sup>c</sup> that they might heare him. And y Pharises and scribes murmured, and sayde: * This man receaueth synners, and eateth with them. But he tolde the thē this symilitude, and sayde: What man is he amonge you, that hath an hundreth shepe, and yf he loose one of the,<sup>d</sup> that leaueth not the nyne and nyentye in the wyldernesse, and goeth after that which is lost tyll he fynde it? And whan he hath founde it, he layeth it vpon his shulders with ioye: and whan he commeth home, he calleth his frēdes and neighbours, and sayeth vnto the: Reioyce with me, for I haue founde my shepe, y was lost. I saye vnto you: Euē so shal there be ioye in heauen ouer one synner that doth penance, more then ouer nyne and nyentye righteous, which † nede not repentance.

¶ Or what woman is it that hath ten groles, yf she loose one of them, that lighteth not a candell, and swepeth the house, and seketh diligently, tyll she fynde it? And whan she hath founde it, she calleth hir frendes & neighbours, and sayeth: Reioyce with me, for I haue foude my grole, which I had lost. Euen so (I tell you) shal there be ioye before the angels of God, ouer one synner y doth penance.

¶ And he sayde: A certayne man had two sonnes, and the yonger of them sayde vnto the father: Father, geue me the porcion of y goodes, that belongeth vnto me. And he deuoyded the good vnto them. And not longe thereafter, gathered the yonger sonne all together, & toke his iourney in to a farre countre, and there waisted he his goodes with ryotous lyuynge. Now whan he had spent all that he had, there was a greate derth thorow out all the same lōde. And he begane to lacke, and wente his waye, and clauē to a cytesin of that same countre, which sent him in to his felde, to kepe swyne. And he wolde fayne haue fylled his bely with the coddēs, that the swyne ate. And noman gaue him them.

Then came he to him self, and sayde: How many hyred seruauntes hath my father, which haue bred ynough, and I perish of hunger? I wil get vp, and go to my father, and saye vnto him: Father, I haue synned agaynst heauen and before the, and am nomore worthy to be called thy sonne, make me as one of thy hyred seruauntes. And he gat him vp, & came vnto his father. But whan he was yet a greate waye of, his father sawe him, and had cōpassion,<sup>a</sup> and ranne, and fell aboute his neck, and kyssed him. Then sayde the sonne vnto him: Father, I haue synned agaynst heauē, and before the, I am no more worthy to be called thy sonne. But the father sayde vnto his seruauntes: Brynge forth the best garment, and put it vpon him, and geue him a ryng vpon his hande, and shues on his fete, and brynge hither a fed calfe, and kyll it, lat vs eate and be mery: for this my sonne was deed, and is alyue agayne: he was lost, and is founde. And they beganne to be mery.

But the elder sonne was in the felde. And whan he came, and drewe nye to the house, he herde y<sup>e</sup> mynstrelsyng and daunsyng, and called one of the seruauntes vnto him, and axed what it was. He sayde vnto him: Thy brother is come, and thy father hath slayne a fed calfe, because he hath receaued him safe and sounde. Then was he angrie, and wolde not go in. Then wente his father out, and prayed him. But he answered, and sayde vnto his father: Lo, thus many yeares haue I done the seruyce, nether haue I yet broken thy commaundement, and thou gauest me neuer one kydd, y<sup>e</sup> I might make mery with my frendes. But now that this thy sonne is come, which deuoured his goodes with harlots, thou hast slayne a fed calfe. But he sayde vnto him: My sonne, thou art allwaye with me, and all that is myne, is thine: thou shuldest be mery and glad, for this thy brother was deed, and is alyue agayne: he was lost, and is founde agayne.

The xvi. Chapter.

HE sayde also vnto his disciples: There was a certayne riche man, which had a stewarde, that was accused vnto him, that he had waisted his goodes. And he called him, and sayde vnto him: How is it, that I heare this of the? geue acomptes of thy stewardshipe, for thou mayest be no longer stewarde. The stewarde sayde within himself: What shal I do? My lorde wil take awaye the stewardshipe fro me. I cā not dygge, and to begg I am ashamed. I wote what I wil do, that whā I am put out of the stewardshipe, they maye receaue me in to their houses.

And he called vnto hī all his lordes detters, and sayde vnto the first: How moch owest thou vnto my lorde? He sayde: an hundreth tonnes of oyle. And he sayde: Take thy byll, syt downe quickly, & wryte fiftie. Then sayde he vnto another: How moch owest thou? He sayde: An hundreth quarters of wheate. And he sayde vnto him: Take thy byll, and wryte foure score. And the lorde cōmended the vnrighteous stewarde, because he had done wysely. For the children of this worlde are in their kynde wyser, thē the children of light. And I saye vnto you: Make you frendes with the vnrighteous Mammon, y<sup>e</sup> whan ye shal haue nede, they maye receaue you in to euerlastinge Tabernacles.

He that is faithfull in the least, is faithfull also in moch: and he that is vnrighteous in the least, is vnrighteous also in moch. Yf ye then haue not bene faithfull in the vnrighteous Mammon, who wyll belene you in that which is true? And yf ye haue not bene faithfull in another mans busynesse, who wil geue you that which is youre awne?

No seruaunt can serue two masters: for either he shal hate the one, and loue y<sup>e</sup> other: or els he shal leane to the one, and despyse the other. Ye can not serue God and Mammon.

All these thinges herde the Pharises, which were couetous, and they mocked hī. And he sayde vnto them: Ye are they that iustifie youre selues before men, but God knoweth youre hertes. For y<sup>e</sup> which is hye amonge men, is an abhominacion before God.

The lawe and y<sup>e</sup> prophetes prophecied vnto Ihon,<sup>c</sup> and from that tyme forth is y<sup>e</sup> kyngdome of God preached thorow y<sup>e</sup> Gospell, and euery man preasseth in to it by violence. But easier is it, for heauen and earth to perishe, then one tittle of y<sup>e</sup> lawe to fall. Who so euer putteth awaye his wife, & marieth another, breaketh matrimonye:<sup>d</sup> and he that marieth her which is deuorced frō hir huszbande, breaketh wedlocke also.

There was a certayne riche man, which clothed him self with purple and costly linnen, and fared deliciously euery daye. And there was a poore man named Lazarus which laye at his gate full of sores, and desyred to be fylled with the crommes, that fell from the riche mans table. Yet came the dogges, and licked his sores. But it fortuneth, that the poore man dyed, and was caried of the angels in to Abrahams bosome. The riche man dyed also, and was buried.

D Now whan he was in the hell, he lift vp his eyes in the payne, and sawe Abraham asfarre of, and Lazarus in his bosome: and he cried, and sayde: Father Abraham, haue mercy vpon me, and sende Lazarus, that he maye dyppe the typpe of his synger in water, & coole my tonge, for I am tormētēd in this flāme. But Abraham saide: Remēbre sonne, y<sup>e</sup> thou hast receaued good in thy life, & contrary wyse Lazarus receaued euell. But now is he comforted, and thou art tormented. And beside all this, there is a great space set betwene vs and you: so y<sup>e</sup> they which wolde go downe from hence vnto you, can not: nether maye they passe ouer from thence vnto vs.

Then sayde he: I pray the then father, that thou wilt sende him vnto my fathers house, for I haue yet fyue brethren, that he maye warne them, lest they also come in to this place of torment. Abraham sayde vnto him: They haue Moses and the prophetes, let them heare them. But he sayde: Nay father Abraham, but yf one wente vnto them frō the deed, they wolde do pennaunce. Neuertheles he sayde vnto him: Yf they heare not Moses & the prophetes, then shal they not beleue also, though one rose agayne frō the deed.

The xviij. Chapter.

A HE sayde vnto his disciples: It is vnpossible that offences shulde not come:<sup>a</sup> but w<sup>e</sup> vnto him by whom they come: It were better for him, that a mylstone were hanged aboute his neck, and he cast in to the see, then that he shulde offende one of these litle ones. Take hede to youre selues. Yf thy brother trespass agaynst the, rebuke him: and yf he amende,<sup>b</sup> forgeue him. And though he synne agaynst the seuen tymes in a daye, and come seuen tymes in a daye to y<sup>e</sup> agayne, and saye: It repenteth me, forgeue him.

And the Apostles sayde vnto y<sup>e</sup> LORDE: Inceare oure faith. The LORDE sayde: Yf ye haue faith as a grayne of mustarde sede,<sup>c</sup> and saye vnto this Molbery tre: Plucke thy self vp by the rotes, and plāte thy self in the see, it shalbe obediēt vnto you. Which of you is it, that hath a seruaut (which ploweth, or fedeth the catell) whā he commeth home from y<sup>e</sup> felde, that he wil saye vnto him: Go quickly, and syt the down to meate? Is it not thus? that he sayeth vnto him: Make ready, that I maye suppe, gyrd vp thyself, and serue me, tyll I haue eaten and dronken, afterwarde shalt thou eate and drynke also. Thanketh he the same seruaut also, because he dyd that was commaunded him? I trowe not. So likewise ye, whā ye haue done all that is cōmaunded you, saye: We are vnprofitable seruantes, we haue done that we were bounde to do.

And it fortuneth, whan he toke his iourney towardes Ierusalem, he wente thorow the myddest of Samaria and Galile. And as he came in to a towne, there met him ten leporous men, which stode asfarre of, and lift vp their voyce, and sayde: Iesu master, haue mercy vpon vs. And whan he sawe them, he sayde vnto thē: *Go, and shewe youre selues vnto y<sup>e</sup> prestes. And it came to passe, as they wente, they were censed. And one of them whā he sawe that he was censed, he turned backe agayne, and praysed God with loude voyce, and fell downe on his face at his fete, and gaue him thanks. And the same was a Samaritane. Iesus answered and saide: Are there not ten censed? But where are those nyne? There were els none founde, that turned agayne, and gaue God the prayse, saue onely this strainger. And he sayde vnto him: Aryse, go thy waye, thy faith hath made y<sup>e</sup> whole.

But whan he was demaunded of y<sup>e</sup> Pharises: Whan cōmeth the kyngdome of God? He answered them, and sayde: The kyngdome of God commeth not with outwarde appareance, nether shal it be sayde: lo, here or there is it. For beholde, y<sup>e</sup> kyngdome of God is inwarde in you.

And they shal saye vnto you: "Se here, Se there Go not ye, nether folowe, for as the lightenyng shyneth aboue from the heauen, and lighteth ouer all that is vnder the heauē, so shal the sonne of mā be in his daye. But first must he suffre many thinges,<sup>c</sup> and be refused of this generacion.

<sup>c</sup> And as it came to passe in the tyme of Noe, so shal it come to passe also in ¶ dayes of the sonne of man. They ate, they dranke, they married, and were married, euen vnto ¶ daye that Noe wente in to the Arke, and ¶ floude came, and destroyed them all.

D Likewise also as it came to passe in the tyme of Lot, they ate, they dranke, they bought, they solde, they planted, they buylded. But euen the same daye that Lot wente out of Sodom,<sup>d</sup> it rayned fyre and brymstone from heauē, and destroyed them all. After this maner also shal it go, in the daye whan the sonne of man shal appeare.

In that daye, who so is vpō the rose, and his stuffe in ¶ house,<sup>e</sup> let him not come downe to fetch it: Likewise he that is in the felde, let him not turne backe, for it that is behynde him. * Remēbre Lottes wife. I saye vnto you: In ¶ night shal two lye vpon one bed, the one shalbe receaued, the other shalbe for saken. ¶ Two shalbe gryndinge together, the one shalbe receaued, the other shalbe forsaken. And they answered, and sayde vnto him: Where LORDE? He sayde vnto thē: Where so euer ¶ deed carcase is there wil ¶ Aegles be gathered together.

The xliij. Chapter.

A HE tolde them a symilitude,<sup>h</sup> signifienge, ¶ men ought allwayes to praye, & not to leaue of, & sayde: There was a iudge in a cite, which feared not God, and stode in awe of no man. And in the same cite there was a wedowe, which came vnto him, and sayde: delyuer me fro myne aduersary. And he wolde not a greате whyle. But afterwarde he thought within hī self: Though I feare not God, & stonde in awe of no man, yet seynge this weddowe is so importune vpon me, I wil delyuer her, lest she come at the last, and rayle vpon me.

Then sayde the LORDE: Heare what ¶ vnrightheous iudge sayeth. But shall not God also delyuer his chosen, that crye vnto hī daye and night, though he differre thē? I saye vnto you: He shal delyuer them, and that shortly. Neuertheles, whan the sonne of man cōmeth, suppose ye, that he shal fynde faith vpon earth?

And vnto certayne which trusted in thē selues, that they were perfecte, and despysed other, he spake this symilitude: There wente vp two men in to the tēple, to praye: the one a Pharise, the other a publican. The Pharise stode, and prayed by himself after this maner: 'I thanke the God, that I am not as other men, robbers, vnrightheous, aduouters, or as this publican. I fast twyse in the weke, I geue the tithes of all that I haue. And the publican stode afaire of, and wolde not lift vp his eyes to heauen, but smote vpon his brest, and sayde: God be thou mercifull vnto me synner. I tell you: This man wente downe in to his house iustified more thē the other.<sup>i</sup> For who so euer exalteth himself, shalbe brought lowe: and he that humbleth himself, shalbe exalted.

<sup>i</sup> They brought yonge children also vnto him, that he shulde touch them. But whan the disciples sawe that, they rebuked them. Neuertheles Iesus called them vnto him, and sayde: Suffre childrē to come vnto me, and forbyd thē not, for of such is ¶ kyngdome of God. Verely I saye vnto you: Whosoever receaueth not ¶ kyngdome of God as a childe, shal not enter therein.

And a certayne ruler axed him, and sayde: C "Good master, what must I do, that I maye enheret euerlastinge life? But Iesus sayde vnto him: Why callest thou me good? There is no man good, but God onely. Thou knowest the cōmaundementes: Thou shalt not breake wedlocke: Thou shalt not kyll: "Thou shalt not steale: Thou shalt not beare false wytnesse: Honoure thy father and thy mother. thinge, sell all that thou hast, and geue it vnto y poore, and thou shalt haue a treasure in heauen, and come & folowe me. When he herde that, he was sory, for he was very riche.

¶ Whan Iesus sawe that he was sory, he sayde: How hardly shal the riche come in to the kyngdome of God? It is easier for a Camell to go thorow the eye of a nedle, the for a rich man to entre in to the kyngdome of God. Then sayde they y herde that: Who can then be saued? But he sayde: loke what is vnpossible with mē, is possible with God.<sup>a</sup>

Then sayde Peter: Beholde, we haue forsakē all, and folowed the. He sayde vnto the: Verely I saye vnto you: There is no mā y forsaketh house, or elders, or brethren, or wife, or children for the kyngdome of Gods sake, which shal not receaue moch more in this tyme, and euerlastinge life in the worlde to come.

¶ He toke vnto him the twolue, and sayde vnto them: Beholde, we go vp to Ierusalē, and it shal all be fulfilled, that is wrytten by the prophetes of the sonne of man. For he shal be delyuered vnto y Heythen, and shalbe mocked,<sup>c</sup> and despytefully intreated, and spitted vpon: and whan they haue scourged him, they shal put him to death, and vpon the thirde daye shal he aryse agayne. *And they vnderstode nothinge of these thinges. And this sayenge was hyd from them, and they perceaued not the thinges that were spoken.

¶ And it came to passe, whan he came nye vnto Iericho, there sat one blynde by the waye, and begged. And whan he herde the people passe by, he axed what it was. Then sayde they vnto him, that Iesus of Nazareth passed by. And he cryed, and sayde: Iesu thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon me. But the people that wente before, rebuked him, that he shulde holde his tunge. Neuertheles he cried moch more: Thou sonne of Dauid haue mercy vpō me. Iesus stode styl, & cōmaunded hī to be brought vnto hī. And whan he was come neare, he axed him and sayde: What wilt thou, that I do vnto the? He sayde: LORDE, that I maye receaue my sight. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Receaue thy sight, thy faith hath saued the. And immediatly he sawe, and folowed him, & prayseed God. And all the people that sawe it, gaue God the prayse.

The xix. Chapter.

AND he entred in, and wente thorow Iericho: & beholde, there was a man named Zacheus, which was a ruler of the publicans, and was riche, and desyred to se Iesus what he shulde be, and he coulde not for the people, for he was lowe of stature. And he ranne before, and clymmed vp in to a wylde fygge tre, that he might se him: for he shulde come y waye. And whan Iesus came to the same place, he lokyd vp, and sawe him, and sayde vnto him: Zache, come downe haistely, for to daye must I turne in to thy house. And he came downe hastily, and receaued him† with ioye. Whan they sawe that, they murmured all, and sayde, y he was gone in, to a synner.

But Zacheus stode forth, and sayde vnto the LORDE: Beholde LORDE, the half of my goodes geue I to the poore: and yf I haue defrauded eny man, I restore him foure folde. Iesus sayde vnto him: This daye is health happened vnto this house, for so moch as he also is Abrahams sonne.† For the sonne of mā is come, to seke and to saue that which was lost.

Now whyle they herkened, he tolde a symilitude also, because he was nye vnto Ierusalem, and because they thought, that the kyngdome of God shulde appeare immediatly. And he sayde: A certayne noble mā wēte in to a farre countrie, to receaue hī a kyngdome, and then to come agayne. This man called ten of his seruauentes, and delyuered them ten pounce, and sayde vnto them: Occupy, tyll I come agayne. But his citesyns hated him, and sent a message after him, and sayde: We wil not haue this man to raigne ouer vs.

And it fortunyd whan he came agayne, <sup>33</sup> after that he had receaued the kyngdome, he bade call for the seruauentes, vnto whom he had geuē his money, y he might knowe, what euery one had done. Then came the first and sayde: Syr, thy pounce hath wonne ten pounce. And he sayde vnto him: Well thou good seruaut, for so moch as thou hast bene faithfull in the least, thou shalt haue auctorite ouer ten cities. The seconde came also, and sayde: Syr, thy pounce hath wonne fyue pounce. And to him he sayde: And thou shalt be ouer fyue cities. And y<sup>e</sup> thirde came, and sayde: Lo syr, here is thy pounce, which I haue kepte in a napkyn. I was afayed of the, for thou art an harde man, thou takest vp y<sup>e</sup> thou hast not layed downe, and reapest that thou hast not sowne. He sayde vnto him: *Of thine awne mouth iudge I the thou euell seruauent. Knewest thou that I am an harde man, takynge vp that I layde not downe, and reapyng that I dyd not sow? Wherefore then hast thou not deliuered my money to the exchange banke? And at my commynge might I haue requyred myne awne with vantage?

C And he sayde vnto them that stode by: Take y<sup>e</sup> pounce from him, and geue it vnto him that hath ten pounce. And they sayde vnto him: Syr, he hath ten pounce already. But I saye vnto you: *Whosoeuer hath, vnto him shal be geue: but from him that hath not, shal be taken awaye euen that he hath. As for those myne enemies, which wolde not that I shulde raigne ouer them, bringe them hither, and slaye them before me. And when he had thus sayde, he wete on forwarde, and toke his journey vp to Ierusalem.

† And it fortuneth whan he came nye to Bethphage and Bethany vnto mount Oliuete, he sent two of his disciples, and sayde: Go in to the towne that lyeth ouer agaynst you, and assone as ye are come in, ye shal fynde a foale tyed, wheron yet neuer man satt, lowse it, and brynge it hither. And yf eny mā axe you wherfore ye lowse it, saye thus vnto him. The LORDE hath nede therof.

And they that were sent, wete their waye and founde euen as he had sayde. But whā they lowsed y<sup>e</sup> foale, the owners therof sayde vnto thē: Why lowse ye the foale? They sayde: The LORDE hath nede therof. And they brought it vnto Iesus, and cast their clothes vpō the foale, and set Iesus thereon. † Now as he wente, they spred their garmentes in the waye.

begāne ioyfully to prayse God with loude voyce, ouer all the miracles that they had sene, and sayde: †Blessed be he, that cometh a kynge in the name of the LORDE. †Peace be in heauen, and prayse in the height. And some of the Pharises amonge the people sayde vnto him: Master, rebuke thy disciples. And he answered and sayde vnto them: I tell you, †yf these holde their peace, yet shal the stones crye.

And whan he was come neare, he behelde the cite, and s<sup>e</sup>wep<sup>t</sup>e vpō it, and sayde: Yf thou knewest what were for thy peace, thou shuldest remembre it euen in this present daye of thine. But now is it hyd from thine eyes. †For the tyme shal come vpon the, that thine enimies shal cast vp a bāke aboute the, and aboute thy children with the, and besege y<sup>e</sup>, and kepe the in on euery syde, and make the eauen with the grounde, and shal not leaue in the one stone vpon another, because thou hast not knowne y<sup>e</sup> tyme, wherin thou hast bene visited.

‡ And he wente in to the temple, and begāne to dryue out them that bought and solde therin, and sayde vnto them: It is wrytten:

My house is an house of prayer, but ye haue made it a denne of murthurers. And he taught daylie in the tēple. But the hye prestes and the scribes and the chiefe of y<sup>e</sup> people wente aboute to destroye him,† and founde not, what to do vnto him. For all the people stacke by him, and gaue him audience.

The xx. Chapter.

A ND it fortuneth one of those dayes, whan A he taught the people in the tēple,† and preached the Gospell, the hye prestes and scribes came to him with the Elders, and spake vnto him, and sayde: Tell vs, by what auctorite doest thou these thinges? Or who gaue the this auctorite? But he answered, † sayde vnto thē: I wil axe you a worde also, tell it me: The bapty<sup>m</sup>e of Ihō was it from heauen, or of men? But they thought in them selues, and sayde: Yf we saye, from heauen, then shal he saye: Why dyd ye not thē beleue him? But yf we saye, of men, then shal all the people stone vs, for they be perswaded, that Ihon is a prophet. And they answered, that they coude not tell, whence it was. And Iesus sayde vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these thinges.

And he beganne to tell the people this symilitude: <sup>B</sup> A certayne man planted a vynyarde, and let it out vnto huszbadmen, and wente himself in to a straunge countre for a greate season. And whan his tyme was come, he sent a seruaut to the huszbadmen, that they might geue him of the frute of the vynyarde. But the huszbandmen bet him, and sent him awaye emptye. And agayne he sent yet another seruaut: but they bet him also, and intreated him shamefully, & sent him awaye emptye. And besides this, he sent the thirde: but they wounded him also, and thrust him out. Then sayde the lorde of the vynyarde: What shal I do? I wil sende my <sup>B</sup> deare sonne, peradventure they wil stonde in awe of him, whan they se him.

But whan the huszbandmen men sawe the sonne, they thought in thē selues, and sayde: This is the heyre, come,† let vs kyll him, y the inheritaunce maye be oures. And they thrust him out of y vynyarde, and slew him. What shal now the lorde of the vynyarde do vnto them? He shal come, and destroye those huszbandmen, and let out his vynyarde vnto other. Whan they herde that, they sayde: God forbyd.

But he behelde thē, and sayde: What is this then that is written: <sup>B</sup> The same stone which the buylders refused, is become the head corner stone? Who so euer falleth vpon this stone, shalbe broken in sunder: but vpō whō so euer he falleth, he shall grynde him to poulder. <sup>B</sup> And the hye prestes and scribes wente aboute to laye handes vpon him the same houre, and they feared the people: for they perceaued, that he had spokē this symilitude agaynst them.

And they watched hī, & sent forth spyes, <sup>C</sup> which shulde fayne thē selues perfecte, that they might take him in his wordes, to delyuer him vnto the power and auctorite of y debite. And they axed him, & sayde: Master, we knowe that thou sayest & teachest right, and regardest the outwarde apperaunce of no man, but teachest the waye of God truly. Is it lauffull, that we geue tribute vnto the Em-peroure, or not? But he perceaued their craftynes, and sayde vnto them: Why tēpte ye me? Shewe me the peny. Whose ymage and superscripcion hath it? They answered, and sayde: The Emperours. Then sayde he vnto them: Geue thē vnto the Emperoure, that which is the Emperours: & vnto God, that which is Gods. And they coude not reproue his worde before the people, and marueyled at his answer, and helde their peace.

<sup>D</sup> Then came vnto him certayne of the Saduces (which holde that there is no resurrection) and axed him, and sayde: Master, Moses wrote vnto vs, yf eny mans brother dye hauynge a wife, and dyeth without childrē, then shal his brother take his wife, and rayse vp sede vnto his brother. Now were there seuē brethrē: the first toke a wife, and dyed childlesse: and the seconde toke the wife, and dyed without children also: and the thirde toke her, likewise all the seuē, and left no children behynde thē, and dyed. At the last after them all, the woman dyed also. Now in the resurrection, whose wife shal she be of them? For seuē had her to wife. And Iesus answered and saide vnto them: The childrē of this worlde mary, & are maried, but they y shalbe worthy to enioye that worlde and the resurrection from the deed, shal nether mary ner be maried, for they can dye nomore. For they are like vnto the angels, and are the children of God, in so much as they are children of the resurrection.

But that the deed ryse agayne, hath Moses <sup>E</sup> also signified besydes the bush, when he called the LORDE, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. But God is not a God of the deed but of the lyuynge, for they lyue all vnto him. Then answered certayne of the scribes, and sayde: Master, thou haist sayde well. And from that tyme forth they durst axe him no mo questions.

<sup>E</sup> But he sayde vnto them: How saye they that Christ is Dauids sonne? And Dauid himself sayeth in the boke of the Psalmes: The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: 'Syt thou on my right honde, tyll I make thine enemies thy fote stole. Dauid calleth him LORDE, how is he then his sonne?

They deuoure wedowes houses, and that vnder a couloure of longe prayenge: These shal receaue the greater dānacion.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND he loked vp, and behelde y<sup>e</sup> riche,<sup>a</sup> how they put in their offerynges in to the Gods chest. He sawe also a poore wedowe, which put in two mytes, and he sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: * This poore wedowe hath put in more thē they all: For these all haue of their excesse put in vnto the offerynge of God, but she of hir pouerte hath put in all hir luyng that she had.

And whā some spake of the temple, that it was garnished with goodly stones and Iewels, he saide: † The time shal come, wherin of all this that ye se, there shal not be left one stone vpon another, which shal not be broken downe. They axed him, and sayde: Master, whā shal these be? and what shalbe the token, when these shal come to passe?

He sayde: Take hede, that ye be not disceaused: † For many shal come in my name, and saye, I am he, & the tyme is come hard by. Fōlowe them not.

33 But whan ye heare of warres and insurreccions, be not ye afrayed, for soch must come to passe, but the ende is not yet there so soone. Then sayde he vnto them: One people shal ryse agaynst another,<sup>c</sup> and one realme ageynst another, & shal be greate earthquakes here and there, pestilence, and derth, and fearful thinges. And greate tokēs shal there be frō heauē. But before all these, they shal lay handes vpon you,<sup>d</sup> and persecute you, and delyuer you vp in to their synagoges and presons, and brynge you before kynges & prynces for my names sake. But this shal happen vnto you for a wytnesse. Be at a poynt therfore in youre hertes, that ye take no thought, how ye shal answer: for I wil geue you mouth & wysdome,<sup>e</sup> agaynst the which all youre aduersaries shal not be able to speake ner to resist. Holde fast youre soules with pacience.

But whan ye shal se Ierusalem beseged with an hoost, then vnderstonde,<sup>g</sup> that the desolacion of it is nye. Then let them which be in Iewry, flye vnto the mountaynes: and let soch as be in the myddest therof, departe out: and let soch as be in the countrees, not come therin. For these are the dayes of vengeance, that euery thinge which is wrytten, maye be fulfilled. But wo vnto them that are with childe, and to them that geue sucke in those dayes: for there shalbe greate trouble vpon earth, and wrath ouer this people, and they shal fall thorow the edge of the swerde, and be led captiue amōge all nacions.<sup>h</sup> And Ierusalē shalbe troden downe of the Heithen, vntyll the tyme of the Heithen be fulfilled.

And there shal be tokens in the Sonne and Mone, and starres, and vpon earth the people shalbe in soch perplexite, that they shal not tell which waye to turne them selues. And the see and the waters shal roare, and men shal pyne awaye for feare, and for lokyng after the thinges which shal come vpō earth. For euen the very powers of heauen shal moue.

And then shal they se the sonne of man commynge in the cloude with power and greate glory. But whan these thinges begynne to come to passe, thē loke vp, and lift vpp youre heades, for youre redempcion draweth nye.

And he tolde them a symilitude: Beholde the fygge tre,<sup>i</sup> and all the trees, whā they now shute forth their budde, ye se by them, and perceaue, that Sommer is now at hande. So likewise ye, whan ye se all these thinges come to passe, be sure that the kyngdome of God is nye. Verely I saye vnto you: This generacio shal not passe, tyll all be fulfilled. ### The xxiij. Chapter.

THE feast of swete bred (which is called Easter) drue nye. And y<sup>e</sup> hye prestes and Scribes sought how they might put him to death, and were afrayed of the people. But *Satan was entred in to Iudas, named Iscarioth (which was of y<sup>e</sup> nombre of y<sup>e</sup> twolue) and he wēte his waye, and talked with the hye prestes and with y<sup>e</sup> officers, how he wolde betraye him vnto them. And they were glad, and promysed to geue him money. And he cōsented, & sought oportunitē, y<sup>e</sup> he might betraye hi without eny rumoure.

"Then came y<sup>e</sup> daye of swete bred, wherin the Easter lambe must be offered. And he sent Peter and Ihon, and sayde: Go youre waye, prepare vs the Easter lambe, that we maye eate. But they sayde vnto him: Where wilt thou, that we prepare it? He saide vnto them: Beholde, whā ye come in to y<sup>e</sup> cite, there shal mete you a man, bearinge a pitcher of water, folowe him in to the house y<sup>e</sup> he entreth in, and saye vnto the good man of the house: The master sendeth y<sup>e</sup> worde: Where is y<sup>e</sup> gēsthouse, wherin I maye eate the Easter labe with my disciples? And he shal shewe you a greate parlour pauer. They wente their waye, and founde as he had sayde vnto them, and made ready the Easter lambe.

And whan the houre came, he sat him downe, and the twolue Apostles with him, and he sayde vnto them: I haue hertely desyred to eate this Easter labe with you before I suffre. For I saye vnto you: that henceforth I wil eate nomore therof, tyll it be fulfilled in the kyngdome of God. And he toke the cuppe, gaue thanks, and sayde: Take this and deuyde it amonge you. For I saye vnto you: I wil not drynke of the frute of y<sup>e</sup> vyne, vntyll the kyngdome of God come.

And he toke the bred, gaue thanks, and brake it, and gaue it them, and sayde: This is my body, & which shalbe geuen for you. This do in the remembraunce of me. Likewise also the cuppe, after they had supped, and sayde: This cuppe is the new Testamēt in my bloude, which shalbe shed for you.

But lo, the hande of him that betrayeth me, is with me on the table. And the sonne of man trulye goeth forth, as it is appoynted. But wo vnto that man, by whom he is betrayed. And they beganne to axe amonge them selues, which of them it shulde be, that shulde do that.

"There rose a strife also anōge thē, which of them shulde be takē for the greatest. But he sayde vnto them: The kynges of y<sup>e</sup> worlde haue domynion ouer y<sup>e</sup> people, and they that beare rule ouer thē, are called gracious lordes. But ye shal not be so: But the greatest amonge you, shalbe as the yngest: and the chefest, as a seruaunt. For which is the greatest? he that sytteth at the table, or he that serueth? Is not he that sytteth at the table? But I am amōge you as a mynster. As for you, ye are they, that haue byddē with me in my temptacions. And I wil appoynte the kyngdome vnto you, euen as my father hath appoynted me, that ye maye eate and drynke at my table in my kyngdome, and syt vpon seates, and iudge the twolue trybes of Israel.

But the LORDE sayde: Simon Simon, beholde, Satan hath desyred after you, that he might siffte you euen as wheate: but I haue prayed for y<sup>e</sup>, that thy faith fayle not. And whan thou art cōuerted, strength thy brethren: But he sayde vnto him: LORDE, I am ready to go with the in to preson, and in to death. Neuertheles he sayde: Peter, I saye vnto the: The cock shal not crowe this daye, tyll thou haue thrise denyed, y<sup>e</sup> thou knewest me.

For loke what is wrytten of me, it hath an ende. But they sayde: LORDE, Beholde, here are two swerdes. He sayde vnto thē: It is ynough.

¶ And he wente out (as he was wonte) vnto moũt Oliuete. But his disciples folowed him vnto the same place. And whan he came thither, he sayde vnto thē: † Praye, that ye fall not in to tēptacion. And he gat him from them aboute a stoncs cast, and kneled downe, prayed, & sayde: Father, yf thou wilt, take away this cuppe fro me: Neuerthelesse, not my wyll,<sup>a</sup> but thyne be fulfilled. And there appeared vnto him an angell frō heauen, and comforted him. And it came so, that he wrestled with death, and prayed the longer. And his sweate was like droppes of bloude, runnyng downe to the grounde. And he rose vp frō prayer, and came to his disciples, and founde them slepinge for heuynesse, and sayde vnto them: What, slepe ye? ryse vp and praye, that ye fall not in to tentacion.

¶ But whyle he yet spake, beholde, the multitude, and one of the twolue called Iudas wente before them, and he came nye vnto Iesus, to kyse him. But Iesus sayde vnto him: Iudas, betrayest thou the sonne of mā with a kyse? Whan they that were aboute him, sawe what wolde folowe, they sayde vnto him: LORDE, shal we smyte with the swerde? And one of thē stroke a seruaūt of ŷ hye prestes, & smote of his eare. But Iesus answered, and sayde: Suffre thē thus farre forth. And he touched his eare, & healed him.

¶ But Iesus sayde vnto the prestes and rulers of the temple, and to the Elders that were come vnto him: Ye are come forth as it were to a murthurer with swerdes, & with staues. I was daylie with you in the temple, and ye layed no handes vpon me. But this is youre houre, and the power of darknesse.

Neuerthelesse they toke him, and led him, and brought him in to the hye prestes house. As for Peter, he folowed hī a farre of.

Then kyndled they a fyre in the myddest of the palace, and sat them downe together. And Peter sat him downe amonge them. Then a damsell sawe him syttinge by the light, and behelde him well, and sayde vnto him: This same was also with him. But he denyed him, and sayde: Womā, I knowe him not. And after a litle whyle, another sawe him, and sayde: Thou art one of them also. But Peter sayde: Man, I am not.

And aboute the space of an houre after, another affirmed, & sayde: Verely this was with him also, for he is a Galilean. But Peter saide: Mā, I wote not what thou sayest. And immediatly whyle he yet spake, ŷ cock crewe. And the LORDE turned him aboute and loked vpō Peter. And Peter remembred the wordes of ŷ LORDE, how he sayde vnto him: † Before the cock crowe, thou shalt denye me thryse. And Peter wente out, and wepte bytterly.

The men that helde Iesus, mocked him, and stroke him, blyndfolded him, and smote him on the face, and axed him, and sayde: Prophecie, who is it that smote the? And many other blasphemies sayde they vnto hī.

¶ And whan it was daye, there gathered together the Elders of the people, the hye prestes and scribes, and led him vp before their counsell, and sayde: Art thou Christ? Tell vs. But he sayde vnto them: Yf I tell you, ye wyl not beleue: But yf I axe you, ye wyl not answere me, nether wyl ye let me go.<sup>b</sup> From this tyme forth shal the sonne of man sytt at the right hāde of the power of God. Then sayde they all: Art thou then ŷ sonne of God? He sayde vnto them: Ye saye it, for I am. They sayde: What nede we anye farther wytnesse? We oure selues haue herde it of his awne mouth.<sup>c</sup>

and sayeth, that he is Christ a kynge. But Pilate axed him, and sayde: "Art thou the kynge of the Iewes? He answered him, and sayde: Thou sayest it. Pilate sayde vnto  $\text{f}$  hye prestes and to the people: I fynde no cause in this man. But they were the more fearce, and sayde: He hath moned the people, in that he hath taught here  $\text{t}$  there in all the londe of Iewry, and hath \* begonne at Galile vnto this place.

Whan Pilate herde mencion of Galile, he axed whether he were of Galile. And whan he perceaued that he was vnder  $\text{t}$  Herodes iurisdiccio<sup>n</sup> he sent him to Herode, which was also at Ierusalē in those dayes. When Herode sawe Iesus, he was exceeding glad, for he had longe bene desyrus to se him: because  $\text{s}$  he had herde moch of him,  $\text{t}$  hoped to se a miracle of hi. And he axed him many thinges. Neuertheles he answered him nothinge. The hye prestes and scribes stode, and accused him sore. But Herode with his men of warre despyed him, and mocked him, put a whyte garnēt vpō him, and sent him agayne vnto Pilate. Vpō  $\text{f}$  same daye were Pilate and Herode made frendes together, for afore they had bene at variaunce.

$\text{B}$  Pilate called the hye prestes, and the rulers, and the people together, and sayde vnto thē:  $\text{a}$  Ye haue brought this man vnto me, as one that peruerteth the people, and beholde, I haue examyned him before you,  $\text{t}$  fynde in the mā none of the causes, wherof ye accuse him: Nor yet Herode: for I sent you to him, and beholde, there is brought vpon hi nothinge, that is worthy of death.  $\text{¶}$  Therefore wil I chasten him, and let him lowse: For he must haue let one lowse vnto them after the custome of the feast.

$\text{c}$  Then cried the whole multitude, and sayde: Awaye with him, and delyuer vnto vs Barrabas, which for insurreccion made in the cite, and because of a murthur, was cast in to preson. Then called Pilate vnto them agayne,  $\text{t}$  wolde haue let Iesus lowse. But they cried, and sayde: Crucifye him, Crucifye him. Yet sayde he vnto them, the thirde tyme: What enell thē hath he done? I fynde no cause of death in hi, therefore wil I chasten him, and let him go. But they laye styll vpon him with greate crye, and requyred  $\text{y}$  he might be crucified. And the voyce of thē and of the hye preastes preuayled.

$\text{c}$  And Pilate gaue sentence, that it shulde be as they requyred, and let lowse vnto thē, him, that for insurreccio<sup>n</sup> and murthur was cast in to preson, whom they desyred, but gaue Iesus ouer vnto their wyll. And as they led him awaye, they toke one Simon of Cyren (which came from the felde)  $\text{t}$  layed  $\text{f}$  crosse vpon him, to beare it after Iesus.

$\text{¶}$  And there folowed him a greate multitude of people and of wemen, which bewayled and lamented him. But Iesus turned him aboute vnto thē, and sayde: Ye daughters of Ierusalē, wepe not ouer me: but wepe ouer youre selues, and ouer youre childrē. For beholde, the tyme wil come, wherin it shal be sayde: Blessed are the baren, and the wombes that haue not borne, and the pappes that haue not geuen sucke.  $\text{¶}$  Then shal they begynne to saye vnto the mountaynes: Fall vpon vs. And to the hylles: Couer vs. For yf this be done to a grene tre, what shal be done then to the drye?

$\text{c}$  And two other (which were myszdoers) were led out also, to be put to death with him. And whā they came to  $\text{f}$  place, which is called Caluery, they crucified him euen there, and the two myszdoers with him, the one on the righte hande, the other on  $\text{f}$  left. But Iesus sayde:  $\text{a}$  Father, forgeue them, for they wote not what they do.  $\text{¶}$  And they parted his garments, and cast lottes therfore. And the people stode and behelde.

$\text{D}$  And the rulers mocked him with them, and sayde: He hath helped other, let him helpe him self now, yf he be Christ  $\text{f}$  chosen of God. The soudyers also mocked him, wēte vnto him,  $\text{t}$  brought him vyneger, and sayde: Yf thou be the kynge of the Iewes, then helpe thyself. And aboue ouer him was this superscripcio<sup>n</sup>  $\text{t}$  wrytten with letters of Greke, Latyn, and Hebrue: This is the kynge of the Iewes.

And one of the myszdoers that hanged there, blasphemed him, and sayde: Yf thou be Christ, then helpe thy self and vs. Then answered the other, rebuked him, and sayde:

And thou fearest not God also, which art yet in like dānacion. And truly we are therein by right, for we receaue accordinge to oure dedes. As for this man, he hath done nothinge anysse. And he sayde vnto Iesus: LORDE, remembre me, whan thou comest in to thy kyngdome. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Verely I saye vnto the: To daye shalt thou be with me in Paradyse. And it was aboute the sixte houre,<sup>a</sup> and there was darknesse ouer ȝ whole londe vntyll the nyenth houre. And the Sonne was darkened, and the vayle of the temple rente in two euen thorow the myddes.

E And Iesus cryed loude, ȝ sayde: Father, *in to thy handes I commende my sprete. And whan he had so sayde, he gaue vp the goost. But <sup>b</sup>whan the Captayne sawe what had happened, he prayed God, and sayde: Verely this was a iust mā. And all the people that stode by ȝ behelde, whan they sawe what was done, smote vpon their brestes, ȝ turned backe agayne. But all his acquaintance, and the women that had folowed him out of Galile, stode a farre of, and behelde all these thinges.

<sup>c</sup>And beholde, a mā named Ioseph, a Senatour, which was a good iust man, the same had not consented vnto their counsell, and dede, which was of Arimathia a cite of the Iewes, which same also wayted for the kyngdome of God: he wete vnto Pilate, and axed the body of Iesus. And he toke him downe, wrapped him in a linnen cloth, and layed him in a hewen sepulchre, wherin neuer man was layed. And it was the daye<sup>d</sup> of preparinge, and the Sabbath drue on.

<sup>e</sup>The women that were come with him out of Galile, folowed him, and behelde the Sepulchre, ȝ how his body was layed. But they returned, and made ready the spyces ȝ anontmētes. And vpon the Sabbath they rested, accordinge to the lawe.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A BUT vpon one of the Sabbathes very early in the mornynge,<sup>f</sup> they came vnto the Sepulchre, and brought ȝ spyces which they had prepared, and certayne women with the. Neuertheles they founde the stone rolled awaye from the sepulchre, and wente in, and founde not the body of ȝ LORDE Iesu.† And it happened as they were amased therat, beholde, there stode by them two men in shyninge garmentes. And they were afayed, and cast downe their faces to the earth. Then sayde they vnto the: What seke ye? the lyuynge amōge the deed? He is not here. He is rysen vp. Remembre, how ȝ he tolde you whā he was yet in Galile, and sayde:‡ The sonne of man must be delyuered in to the hādes of synners, and be crucified, and the thirde daye ryse agayne.

And they remēbred his wordes, and wente from the sepulchre, and tolde all this vnto the eleuen,§ and to all the other. It was Mary Magdalene, and Iohanna, and Mary Iames, and the other with them, that tolde this vnto the Apostles. And thei wordes sēmed vnto them, as though they had bene but fables, and they beleued them not. But Peter arose, and ranne to the sepulchre, and stouped in, and sawe the linnen clothes layed by them selues, and departed. And he wondred within himself at that which had happened.

¶And beholde, two of them wente that same daye, to a towne (which was thre score furlōges from Ierusalem) whose name was called Emanas. And they talked together of all these thinges ȝ had happened. And it chaunced¶ as they were thus talkinge and reasonynge together, Iesus himself drue nye, and wente with them. But their eyes were holden, that they shulde not knowe hī. And he sayde vnto them: What maner of cōmunicacions are these that ye haue one to another as ye walke, and are sad? Then answered the one, whose name was Cleophas, and sayde vnto him: Art thou onely a straunger at Ierusalē, not knowinge what is come to passe there in these dayes? And he sayde vnto the: What? They sayde vnto him: That of Iesus of Nazareth, ȝ which was a prophet, mightie in dede and worde, before God and all ȝ people, how oure hye prestes and rulers delyuered him to the condemnation of death, and crucified him. But we hoped that he shulde haue delyuered Israel. And besydes all this, todaye is the thirde daye that this was done.¶ Yee ȝ certayne women also of oure company which were early at the Sepulchre, and founde not his body, came and tolde, that they had sene a visiō of angels, which sayde he was alyue. And certayne of them that were with vs, wente vnto the sepulchre, and founde it euen so as ŷ wemē sayde, but hī came they not.

¶ And he sayde vnto thē: O ye fooles and slowe of hert to beleue all that the prophetes haue spokē? * Ought not Christ to haue suffred these thinges, and to entre in to his glory? And he begaune at Moses and at all the prophetes, and expounded vnto them all the scriptures, that were spoken of him. And they drue nye vnto the towne, which they wēte vnto, and he made as though he wolde haue gone farther. † And they compelled him, and sayde: Abyde with vs, for it draweth towardes night, and the daye is farre passed. And he wente in to tary at thē. And it came to passe when he sat at the table with thē, he toke the bred, gaue thankes, brake it, and gaue it them. Then were their eyes opened, and they knewe him. And he vanyshed out of their sight. And they sayde, betwene thē selues: Dyd not oure hert burne with in vs, whan he talked with vs by the waye, whye he opened the scriptures vnto vs? And they rose vp the same houre, turned agayne to Ierusalem, and founde ŷ eleuē gathered together, and them that were with them, which sayde: The LORDE is rysen of a trueth, and hath appeared vnto Symon. And they tolde thē what had happened by ŷ waye, and how they knewe him in breakynge of the bred.

¶ But whye they were talkynge therof, Iesus himself stode in the myddes amonge thē, and sayde: Peace be with you. But they were abashed and afrayed, supposinge that they had sene a sprete. And he saide vnto thē: Why are ye abashed? ‡ wherfore ryse there soch thoughtes in youre hertes? Beholde my hādes † my fete, it is euen I my self. Handle me, and se, for a sprete hath not flesh and bones, as ye se me haue. And whan he had thus spokē, he shewed thē his hōdes and his fete. But whye they yet beleued not for ioye and wondred, he sayde vnto them: § Haue ye eny thinge here to eate? And they set before him a peece of a broyled fish, and an hony combe. And he toke it, and ate it before thē.

¶ And he sayde vnto them: ¶ These are the wordes, which I spake vnto you, whye I was yet with you. For it must all be fulfilled that was wrytten of me in the lawe of Moses, in the prophetes, † in the Psalmes. Thē opened he their vnderstandinge, that they might vnderstonde the scriptures, and sayde vnto them: § Thus is it wryttē, and thus it behoued Christ to suffre, † the thirde daye to ryse agayne frō the deed, and to let repentance and remysion of synnes be preached in his name amōge all nacions,|| and to begynne at Ierusalē. As for all these thinges, ye are wytnesses of thē. And beholde, ¶ I wil sende vpon you the ¶ promes of my father: but ye shal tary in the cite of Ierusalem, tyll ye be endewed with power from aboue.

¶ But he led them out vnto Bethany, and lift vp his handes, and blessed them. And it came to passe whā he blessed them, he departed from them, and was caried vp in to heauen. And they worshipped him, and turned agayne to Ierusalem with greate ioye and were contynually in ŷ tēple, geuyng prayse and thankes vnto God. Amen.

The gospel of S. Ihon.

What S. Ihons gospel conteyneth.

Chap. I.—The euerlasting byrth of the sonne of God, and how he became man. The testimony of Ihon and of his baptyme. The callinge of Andrew, Peter, Philip and Nathanael.

Chap. II.—Christ turneth the water vnto wyne at the mariage in Cana, and dryeth the marchauntes out of the temple.

Chap. III.—The swete talkinge of Christ with Nicodemus. The doctryne & baptyme of Iho, and what wytnesse he beareth of Christ.

Chap. IIII.—The lounge communicacion of Christ with the woman of Samaria by the welles syde. How he commeth in to Galile, and healeth the rulers sonne.

Chap. V.—He healeth the man that was sicke eight & thirtie yere. The Iewes accuse him as a breaker of the Sabbath : he answereth for him self, and reproueth them.

Chap. VI.—Iesus fedeth fyue thousande men with fyue barlye Loaves, departeth awaye, that they shulde not make him kynge, goeth vpō the see, and reproueth the fleshy hearers of his worde. The carnall are offended at hi, and forsake him.

Chap. VII.—Iesus commeth to Ierusalē at the feast, teacheth the Iewes and reproueth thē : The pharises & the hye prestes hearinge that the people begynne to fauour Christ and to beleue in him, sende out officers to take hi. There are dyuerse opinions of him amōge the people. The pharises rebuke the officers because they haue not taken him, and chyde with Nicodemus for takinge his parte.

Chap. VIII.—A woman is taken in aduoutrie : Christ delyuereth her. The fredome of such as folowe Christ, whom they accuse to haue the deuyl within him, and go aboute to stone him.

Chap. IX.—Christ maketh the man to se that was borne blynde, where thorow he getteth him self more displeasure amonge the Iewes and Pharises.

Chap. X.—Christ is the true shepherde, and the dore of the shepe. Some saye : Christ hath the deuell, and is madd, some saye : he speaketh not the wordes of one that hath the deuell. Because he telleth the trueth, the Iewes take vp stones to cast at him, call his preachinge blasphemy, and go aboute to take him.

Chap. XI.—Christ rayseth Lazarus frō death. The hye prestes & the pharyses gather a counsell, and cast their heades together agaynst him, therefore he getteth him out of the waye.

Chap. XII.—Mary anoynteth Christes fete, Iudas murmureth, Christ excuseth her, rydeth in to Ierusalem, and is loungly receaued of the thankfull, but vtterly depysed of the vngodly.

Chap. XIII.—Christ washeth the disciples fete, telleth them of Iudas the traytour, and commaundeth thē earnestly to loue one another.

Chap. XIII.—He armeth his disciples with consolacion agaynst trouble for to come, taketh frō thē the heynesce that they had because of his departinge, and promiset them the holy goost, the spirite of comforte.

Chap. XV.—The true vyne, the huszbandman & the braunches. A doctryne of loue, and a swete comforte agaynst persecucion.

Chap. XVI.—Cōsolacion agaynst trouble. Prayers are herde thorow Christ.

Chap. XVII.—The most hartely & lounge prayer of Christ vnto his father, for all such as receane the trueth, and be his awne.

Chap. XVIII.—Christ is betrayed. The wordes of his mouth smyte the officers to the grounde. Peter smytheth of Malchus eare. Iesus is brought before Anna, Caiphas, and Pilate.

Chap. XIX.—Christ is crucified. He commaundeth his mother vnto Ihon, sheddeth his bloude, and is buried.

Chap. XX.—The resurreccion of Christ, which appeareth to Mary Magdalene and to all his disciples, to their greate comforte.

Chap. XXI.—He appeareth to his disciples agayne by the see of Tyberias, and commaundeth peter earnestly to fede his shepe.

The gospell of S. Ihon.

The first Chapter.

IN the begynnyng was the worde, and the worde was with God, and God was  $\text{f}$  worde. The same was in the begynnyng with God.\* All thinges were made by the same, and without the same was made nothinge that was made. In him was the  $\text{t}$  life, and the life was the  $\text{t}$  light of men: and the light shyneth in the darknesse, and the darknesse comprehended it not.

There was sent from God a man, whose name was Ihon. The same came for a witness, to beare wytnesse of  $\text{f}$  light, that thorow him they all might beleue. $\text{f}$  He was not that light, but that he might beare witness of  $\text{f}$  light. That was the true light, which lighteth all men, that come in to this worlde. He was in the worlde,  $\text{t}$  the worlde was made by him, and  $\text{f}$  worlde knewe him not. He came in to his awne, and his awne receaued him not. But as many as receaued him,  $\text{t}$  to them gaue he power to be the children of God: euen such as beleue in his name. Which are not borne of bloude, ner of the wyl of the flesh, ner of the wyl of man, but of God.

And the worde became flesh, and dwelt amonge vs: $\text{f}$  and we sawe his glory, a glory as of the onely begottē sonne of the fater, full of grace and trueth.

Ihon bare wytnesse of him, cryed, and sayde:  $\text{f}$  It was this, of whom I spake: After me shal he come, that was before me, For he was or euer I: and  $\text{}$  of his fulnesse haue all we receaued grace for grace. For the lawe was geuen by Moses, grace and trueth came by Iesus Christ.  $\text{c}$  No man hath sene God at any tyme. The onely begottē sonne which is in the bosome of the fater, he hath declared the same vnto vs.

And this is the recorde of Ihon, whan the Iewes sent prestes and Leuites frō Ierusalem, to axe him: Who art thou? And  $\text{t}$  he confessed and denyed not. And he confessed, and sayde: I am not Christ. And they axed him: What thē? Art thou Elias? He sayde: I am not. Art thou the  $\text{t}$  Prophet? And he answered: No. Then sayde they vnto him: What art thou thē,  $\text{f}$  we maye geue answer vnto thē that sent vs? What sayest thou of thy self? He sayde:  $\text{f}$  I am  $\text{f}$  voyce of a cryer in the wyldernesse. Make straight  $\text{f}$  waye of the LORDE.  $\text{f}$   $\text{f}$  As  $\text{f}$  prophet Esay sayde.

And they that were sent, were of  $\text{f}$  Pharises.  $\text{c}$  And they axed him,  $\text{t}$  sayde vnto him: Why baptystest thou then, yf thou be not Christ, ner Elias, ner a prophet? Ihon answered them, and sayde:  $\text{c}$  I baptise with water, but there is one come in amonge you, whom ye knowe not. It is he that cometh after me, which was before me: whose shue lachet I am not worthy to vnloose. This was done at Bethabara beyonde Iordane,  $\text{t}$  where Ihon dyd baptise.

The nexte daye after, Ihon sawe Iesus commynge vnto him, and sayde: Beholde the  $\text{f}$   $\text{f}$  labe of God, which taketh awaye the synne of the worlde. This is he, of whom I sayde vnto you: After me commeth a man, which was before me. For he was or euer I, and I knewe him not: but that he shulde be declared in Israel, therefore am I come to baptysse with water.

D And Ihon bare recorde, & sayde: "I sawe the sprete descende from heauen like vnto a doue, and abode vpon him, & I knewe him not. But he that sent me to baptysse with water, & same sayde vnto me: Vpon whom thou shalt se the sprete descende and tary styll on him, the same is he, that baptyseth with the holy goost. And I sawe it, and bare recorde, that this is the sonne of God.

The nexte daye after, Ihon stode agayne, and two of his disciples. And whā he sawe Iesus walkynge, he sayde: Beholde the *lābe of God. And two of his disciples herde him speake, and folowed Iesus. And Iesus turned him aboute, and sawe them folowinge, and sayde vnto thē: What seke ye? They sayde vnto him: Rabbi, (which is to saye by interpretacon, Master.) Where art thou at lodgynge? He sayde vnto them: Come and se it. They came and sawe it, & abode with him the same daye. It was aboute the tenth houre.

One of the two, which herde Ihon speake, and folowed Iesus, was Andrew the brother of Symon Peter: the same founde first his brother Symon, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde Messias (which is by interpretacon, & Anoynted) and brought him to Iesus. Whan Iesus behelde him, he sayde: Thou art Symon the sonne of Ionas,† thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretacon, a stone.

E The<sup>c</sup> nexte daye after, wolde Iesus go agayne in to Galile, and founde Philippe, and sayde vnto him: <sup>b</sup> Folowe me. Philippe was of Bethsaida the cite of Andrew and Peter. Philippe founde Nathanael, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde him, of whō† Moses in the lawe, and & prophetes haue wrytten, euen Iesus the sonne of Ioseph of Nazareth. And Nathanaell sayde vnto him: ¶ What good can come out of Nazareth? Philippe sayde vnto him: Come, and se.

Iesus sawe Nathanael cōmyng to him, and sayde of him: Beholde, a righte Israelite, in whom is no gyle. Nathanael sayde vnto him: From whence knowest thou me? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: Before & Philippe called the, whan thou wast vnder the fygge tre, I sawe the. Nathanaell answered, and sayde vnto hī: Rabbi, thou art & sonne of God, thou art & kynge of Israel. Iesus answered, & sayde vnto him: Because I sayde vnto the, that I sawe the vnder the fygge tre, thou beleuest: thou shalt se yet greater thinges thē these. And he sayde vnto him: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Frō this tyme forth shal ye se the heauen open, and the angels of God goinge vp & downe ouer the sonne of man.

The ij. Chapter.

AND vpon the thirde daye there was a mariage at Cana in Galile, and the mother of Iesus was there. Iesus also and his disciples was called vnto & mariage. And whan the wyne fayled, the mother of Iesus saide vnto him: They haue no wyne. Iesus sayde vnto her: ¶ Womā, what haue I to do with the? Myne houre is not yet come. His mother sayde vnto & mynisters: What-soeuer he sayeth vnto you, do it. There were set there sixe water pottes of stone, after & maner of the purifieng of & Iewes, euery one cōteynninge two or thre measures.

Iesus sayde vnto thē: Fyll the water pottes with water. And they fylled thē vp to & brymme. And he sayde vnto thē: Drawe out now, & brynge vnto the Master of the feast. And they bare it. Whā the master of & feast had taisted & wyne which had bene water, and knewe not whence it came (but the mynisters that drue & water, knewe it) the Master of the feast called the brydegrome, and sayde vnto him: Euery man at the first geueth the good wyne: & whan they are dronken, thē that which is worse. But thou hast kepte backe the good wyne vntyll now.

This is the first token that Iesus dyd at Cana in Galile, and shewed his glory, and his disciples beleued on him. Afterwarde wente he downe to Capernaum, he, his mother, his brethrē, and his disciples, and taried not longe there.

And the Iewes Easter was at hande. And Iesus wēte vp to Ierusalem, and founde syttinge in the tēple, those that solde oxen, shepe, and doues, and chaungers of money.

And he made a scourge of small cordes, and droue them all out of the tēple with the shepe and oxen, and poured out the chaungers money, and ouerthrewe the tables, and sayde vnto them that solde the doues: Hauē these thinges hēce, and make not my fathers house an house of marchaundyse. His disciples remembered it, that is writtē: *The zele of thine house hath euen eaten me.

Then answered the Iewes, and sayde vnto him: *What token shewest thou vnto vs, that thou mayest do these thinges? Iesus answered & sayde vnto thē: †Breake downe this temple, and in thre dayes wil I set it vp agayne. Then sayde the Iewes: ‡Sixe and fortye yere was this temple abyldinge, and wilt thou set it vp in thre dayes? But he spake of ŷ tēple of his body. Now whā he was rysen agayne from the deed, his disciples remembered that he thus sayde, and they beleued the scripture, and the wordes which Iesus spake.

Whā he was at Ierusalē at Easter in ŷ feast, many beleued on his name, whan they sawe ŷ tokēs ŷ he dyd. But Iesus cōmytted not himself vnto thē, for he knewe thē all, & neded not ŷ eny mā shulde testifye of man, ‡for he knewe well what was in man.

The iij. Chapter.

THERE was a man of the Pharises, named Nicodemus<sup>a</sup> a ruler amōge the Iewes. The same came vnto Iesus by night, & sayde vnto hī: Master, we knowe ŷ thou art come a teacher frō God: for ¶no mā can do these tokēs ŷ thou doest, excepte God be with him. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: Verely verely I saye vnto the: Excepte a man be borne a new, he can not se the kyngdome of God. Nicodemus sayde vnto him: How can a man be borne, whan he is olde? Can he entre in to his mothers wombe, and be borne agayne? Iesus answered: Verely verely I saye vnto the: ¶Excepte a mā be borne of water and of the sprete, he can not come in to ŷ kyngdome of God.

***That which is borne of flesh, is flesh: & that which is borne of the sprete, is sprete. Maruell not, that I sayde vnto ŷ: Ye must be borne of new. The wynde bloweth where he wyl, and thou hearest his sounde: †but thou canst not tell whēce he commeth, and whither he goeth. So is euery one, that is borne of the sprete.

Nicodemus answered, and sayde vnto him: How maye these be? Iesus answered, & sayde vnto hī: Art thou a Master in Israel, & knowest not these? Verely I saye vnto ŷ: We speake that we knowe, and testifie that we haue sene, and ye receaue not oure wyt-nesse. Yf ye beleue not whan I tell you of earthly thinges, how shulde ye beleue, whā I speake vnto you of heauenly thinges?

‡And noman ascendeth vp in to heauen, but he that is come downe from heauē, (namely) the sonne of man which is in heauen. ¶And like as Moses lift vp the serpent in the wyldernes, euen so must the sonne of man be lift vp, that who so euer beleueth in him, shulde not perish, but haue euerlastinge life.

¶For God so loued the worlde, that he gaue his onely sonne, that who so euer beleueth in hī, shulde not perishe, but haue euerlastinge life.¶¶ For God sent not his sonne in to ŷ worlde to condempne the worlde, but that the worlde might be saued by him. He that beleueth on him, shal not be cōdemned. But he that beleueth not, is cōdemned already: because he beleueth not on the name of the onely sonne of God. But this is ŷ cōdempnacion, ¶that the light is come in to the worlde, and men loued the darknesse more thē ŷ light: for their workes were euell. Whoso-euer doth euell, hateth the light, and cōmeth not to the light, that his dedes shulde not be reprobud. But he that doth the trueth, commeth to the light, that his workes maye be knowne: for they are done in God.

Afterwarde came Iesus & his disciples in to the lōde of Iewry, and had his beyng there with them, and †baptysed. ¶¶ Ihon baptysed also in Enon besyde Salem: for there was moch water there. And they came thither, and were baptysed: for Ihon was not yet put in preson.

Then arose there a question amonge the disciples of Ihon with the Iewes aboute the purifenge, and they came vnto Ihon, and sayde vnto him: Master, he ŷ was with the

The iij. Chapter.

¶ NOW whan Iesus had knowlege, † it was come to the eares of the Pharises, that Iesus made and baptised mo disciples thē Ihon (howbeit Iesus himself baptysed not, but his disciples) ¶ he left the londe of Iewry, and departed agayne in to Galile. But he must nedes go thorow Samaria. Then came he in to a cite of Samaria, called Sichar, nye vnto † pece of lōde, † Iacob gaue vnto Ioseph his sonne. And there was Iacobs well. Now whan Iesus was weerye of his iourney, he satt hī downe so vpō the well. And it was aboute the sixte houre. Then came there a woman of Samaria to drawe water. Iesus sayde vnto her: Geue me drynke. (For his disciples were gone their waye in to † cite, to bye meate.) So the woman of Samaria sayde vnto him: How is it that thou axest drynke of me, seynge thou art a Iewe, and I a woman of Samaria? For the Iewes medle not with the ** Samaritans.

Iesus answered, and sayde vnto her: Yf thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that sayeth vnto the, geue me drynke, thou woldest axe of him, and he wolde geue the, the water of life.<sup>a</sup> The woman sayde vnto him: Syr, thou hast nothinge to drawe withall, and the well is depe, from whence hast thou then that water of life? Art thou greater then oure father Iacob, which gaue vs this well? And he himself dranke therof, and his children, and his catell. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto her: Who so euer drynketh of this water, shal thyrst agayne: But whosoever shal drynke of the water that I shal geue him, shal neuer be more a thyrst: † but the water that I shal geue him, shalbe in him a well of water, which spryngeth vp in to euerlastinge life.

The woman sayde vnto him: † Syr, geue me that same water, that I thyrst not, nether nede to come hither to drawe. Iesus sayde vnto her: Go, call thy huszbande, and come hither. The woman answered, and sayde vnto him: I haue no huszbande.

Iesus sayde vnto her: Thou hast sayde well, I haue no huszbande: for thou hast had fyue huszbandes, and he whom thou hast now, is not thine huszbande: there saydest thou right. The womā sayde vnto him: Syr, I se, that thou art a prophet. Oure fathers worshipped vpon this mountayne, and † we saye, that at Ierusalem is the place, where men ought to worshippe. Iesus sayde vnto her: Woman, beleue me, the tyme commeth, that ye shal nether vpon this mountayne ner at Ierusalem worshippe the father. Ye wote not what ye worshippe, but we knowe what we worshippe, for † Saluacion commeth of the Iewes. But the tyme commeth, and is now already, that the true worshippers shal worshippe the father in † sprete and in the trueth: For the father wil haue soch so to worshippe him. *** God is a sprete, and they that worshippe him, must worshippe in sprete and in the trueth.

Iesus sayde vnto her: I that speake vnto the, am he. And in the meane season came his disciples, and they marueyled that he talked with the woman. Yet sayde no man: What axest thou, or what talkest thou with her? Then the woman let hir pot stonde, and wente in to the cite, and sayde vnto the people: Come, se a man, which hath tolde me all that euer I dyd, Is not he Christ? Then wente they out of the cite, and came vnto him: In the meane whyle his disciples prayed him, and sayde: Master, eate. But he sayde vnto them: I haue meate to eate, that ye knowe not of. Then sayde the disciples amōge them selues: Hath eny man brought him meate? Iesus sayde vnto thē: My meate is this, that I do the wyll of him that sent me, and to fynish his worke. Saye not ye youre selues: There are yet foure monethes, and then commeth the haruest? Beholde, I saye vnto you: lift vp youre eyes, and loke vpon the felde, *for it is whyte already vnto the haruest.

¶ And he that reapeth, receaueth rewarde, and gathereth frute to euerlastinge life, that both he that soweth and he that reapeth, maye reioyse together. For herin is the proverbe true: One soweth, another reapeth. I haue sent you to reape that, wheron ye bestowed no labour. Other haue laboured, and ye are come in to their laboures.

Many Samaritans of the same cite beleued on him, for the sayenge of the woman, which testified: He hath tolde me all that euer I dyd. Now whan the Samaritans came to him, they besought him, that he wolde tary with them. And he abode there two dayes, and many mo beleued because of his worde, and sayde vnto the woman: We beleue now hence forth, not because of thy sayenge, †we haue herde him oureselues, and knowe, that this of a trueth is Christ the Sauoure of the worlde.

After two dayes he departed thence, and wente in to Galile. ‡For Iesus himself testified, that a prophet is nothinge set by at home. Now whā he came in to Galile, the Galileās receaued him, which had sene all that he dyd at Ierusalem in the feast: for they also were come thither in the feast. And Iesus came agayne vnto Cana in Galile,§ where he turned the water vnto wyne.

And there was a certayne ruler, whose sonne laye sicke at Capernaum. This herde that Iesus came out of Iewry in to Galile, and wente vnto him, and besought him, that he wolde come downe, and helpe his sonne, for he laye deed sicke. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Excepte ye se tokens and wonders, ye beleue not. The ruler sayde vnto him: Come downe Syr, or euer my childe dye. Iesus sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, thy sonne lyueth. The man beleued the worde, that Iesus sayde vnto him, and wente his waye. And as he was goinge downe, his seruantes mett him, and tolde him, and sayde: Thy childe lyueth. Then enquired he of them the houre, wherin he beganne to amende. And they sayde vnto him: Yesterdaye aboute the seuth houre the feuer left him. Then the father perceaued, that it was aboute the same houre, wherin Iesus sayde vnto him: Thy sonne lyueth.¶ And he beleued with his whole house. This is now the seconde token that Iesus dyd, whan he came from Iewry in to Galile.

The v. Chapter.

AFTERWARDE, there was a feast of the Iewes, and Iesus wente vp to Ierusalem. There is at Ierusalem by the slaughter house a pole, which in Hebrue is called Bethesda, ¶ hath fyue porches, wherin laye many sicke, blynde, lame, wythred, which wayted, whan the water shulde moue. For the angell wente downe at his tyme in to the pole, and stered the water. Who so euer now wente downe first, after that the water was stered, § same was made whole, what soeuer disease he had. And there was a man, which had lyen sicke eight and thirtie yeares. Whan Iesus sawe him lye, ¶ knewe that he had lyen so longe, he saide vnto him: Wilt thou be made whole? The sicke answered him: Syr, I haue no man, whan the water is moued, to put me in to the pole. And whan I come, another steppeth downe in before me.

Iesus sayde vnto him: Aryse, take vp thy bed, and go thy waye. And immediatly the man was made whole,¶ and toke vp his bed and wente his waye. * But vpon the same daye it was the Sabbath. Then sayde the Iewes vnto him that was made whole: To daye is y Sabbath, it is not lauffull for the to cary the bed. He answered them: He that made me whole, sayde vnto me: Take vp thy bed, and go thy waye. Then axed they him: What man is that, which sayde vnto the: Take vp thy bed, and go thy waye? But he that was healed, wyst not who he was: for Iesus + had gottē him self awaye, because there was moch people.

The mā departed, and tolde the Iewes, that it was Iesus, which had made hī whole. Therefore dyd y Iewes persecute Iesus, and sought to slaye him, because he had done this vpō y Sabbath.

But Iesus answered them: § My father worketh hither to, and I worke also. Therefore sought the Iewes the more to slaye hī: because he brake not onely y Sabbath, but saide also, that God was his father, and made him self equall with God. Thē answered Iesus, and sayde vnto them: Verely verely I saye vnto you: || The sonne can do nothinge of himself, but that he seyth the father do. For what soeuer he doeth, that doeth y sonne also. The father loueth the sonne, & sheweth him all that he doth, and wyll shewe him yet greater workes, so that ye shal marueyle. The vi. Chapter.

AFTER this wente Iesus ouer the see vnto the cite Tiberias in Galilee. And moch people folowed him, because they sawe the tokens that he dyd vpon thē which were diseased. But Iesus wēte vp in to a mountayne, and there he sat with his disciples. And Easter ȳ feast of the Iewes was nye. Then Iesus lift vp his eyes, and sawe ȳ there came moch people vnto him, and he sayde vnto Philippe: Whence shal we bye bred, ȳ these maye eate? But this he sayde to proue him, for he himself knewe, what he wolde do.

Philippe answered him: Two hundreth peny worth of bred is not ynough amonge thē, ȳ euery one maye take a litle. Thē sayde vnto hī one of his disciples, Andrew ȳ brother of Symō Peter: There is a lad here, ȳ hath fyue barlye loaues, and two fishes, but what is that amōge so many?† Iesus sayde: Make the the people syt downe. There was moch grasse in the place. Then they sat thē downe, aboute a fyue thousande men. Iesus toke the loaues, thanked, and gaue them to the disciples: the disciples (gaue) to them that were set downe. Likewyse also of the fishes as moch as they wolde.

BWhan they were fylled, he sayde vnto his disciples: Gather vp the broken meate that remayneth, that nothinge be lost. Thē they gathered, and fylled twolue baskettes with the brokē meate, that remayned of the fyue barlye loaues, vnto them which had eaten. Now whan the men sawe the token ȳ Iesus dyd, they saide: † This is of a trueth the Prophet, ȳ shulde come into the worlde. Whan Iesus now perceaued that they wolde come, and take him vp, to make him kynge,‡ he gat him awaye agayne in to a mountayne himself alone.

At euen wente his disciples downe to ȳ see, and entred in to the shippe, and came to the other syde of ȳ see vnto Capernaū. And it was darcke alreadie. And Iesus was not come to thē. And ȳ see arose thorow a greate wynde. Now whan they had rowed vpō a fyue and twētie or thirtie furlonges, they sawe Iesus goinge vpon the see, and came nye to the shippe. And they were afrayed. But he sayde vnto them: It is I, be not afrayed. Then wolde they haue receaued him in to ȳ shippe. And immediatly ȳ shippe was at the londe whither they wente.

The nexte daye after, the people which stode on the other syde of the see, sawe that there was none other shippe there saue that one, wherinto his disciples were entred: and that Iesus wēte not in with his disciples in to the shippe, but ȳ his disciples were gone awaie alone. Howbeit there came other shippes from Tiberias, nye vnto ȳ place where they had eatē the bred, after ȳ the LORDE had geuen thankes. Now whan the people sawe that Iesus was not there, nether his disciples, they toke shippe also, and came to Capernaum, and sought Iesus.

And whan they founde him on the other syde of the see, they sayde vnto him: Master, whan camest thou hither? Iesus answered thē, & sayde: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Ye seke me not because ye sawe ȳ tokēs, but because ye ate of the loaues, and were fylled. Laboure not for the meate which perisheth but ȳ endureth vnto euerlastinge life, which the sonne of mā shal geue you: For him hath God the father sealed.

Thē sayde they vnto him: What shal we do, that we maye worke ȳ workes of God? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto thē: This is the worke of God, that ye beleue on him, whom he hath sent. Then sayde they vnto him: § What token doest thou thē, that we maye se and beleue ȳ? What werkest thou? Oure fathers ate Māna in the wyldernes, as it is wryttē: ¶ He gaue thē bred frō heauen to eate. Then sayde Iesus vnto thē: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Moses gaue you not bred from heauē, but my father geueth you the true bred from heauen: For this is that bred of God, which commeth from heauen, and geueth life vnto the worlde.

Thē sayde they vnto him: ¶ Syr, geue vs alwaye soch bred. But Iesus sayde vnto thē: I am ȳ bred of life. He that cometh vnto me, shal not hūger: & he that beleneth on me, shal neuer thyrst. But I haue sayde vnto you, ȳ ye haue sene me, and yet ye beleue not. All that my father geueth me, cometh vnto me: and who so cometh vnto me, him wyl not I cast out: for I am come downe from heauē, not to do myne awne wyll, but the wyll of him that hath sent me.<sup>a</sup>

Thē murmured the Iewes ther ouer, that he sayde: I am ¶ bred which is come downe from heauē, and they sayde: Is not this Iesus, Iosephs sonne, whose father and mother we knowe? How sayeth he then, I am come downe from heauen? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Murmur not amonge youre selues. * No man can come vnto me, excepte the father which hath sent me, drawe him. And I shal rayse him vp at the last daye. It is wryten in the prophetes:<sup>d</sup> They shal all be taught of God. Who so euer now heareth it of the father, and lerneth it, cometh vnto me. † Not that eny man hath sene the father, saue he which is of the father, the same hath sene the father.

3F Verely verely I saye vnto you: ‡ He that beleueth on me, hath euerlastinge life. I am that bred of life. Your fathers ate Manna in the wyldernes, and are deed. This is that bred which commeth from heauen, that who so eateth therof, shulde not dye. I am that lyuynge bred, which came downe frō heauen: Who so eateth of this bred, shal lyue for euer. And the bred that I wil geue, is my flesh ¶ which I wil geue for ¶ life of the worlde.

Then stroue the Iewes amonge them selues, and sayde: How cā this felowe geue vs his flesh to eate? Iesus sayde vnto thē: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Excepte ye eate ¶ flesh of ¶ sonne of man and drynke his bloude, ye haue no life in you. Who so eateth my flesh, and drynketh my bloude, hath euerlastinge life: and I shal rayse him vp at the last daye. For my flesh is ¶ very meate, and my bloude is ¶ very drynke. Who so eateth my flesh, and drynketh my bloude,<sup>e</sup> abyde in me, and I in him. As the lyuynge father hath sent me, and I lyue for the fathers sake: Euen so he that eateth me, shal lyue for my sake. This is ¶ bred which is come frō heauen: Not as youre fathers ate Manna, and are deed. He that eateth of this bred, shal lyue for euer.

These thinges sayde he in the synagoge, 3 where he taught at Capernaum. Many now of his disciples that herde this, sayde: This is an harde sayenge, who maye abyde the hearynge of it? But when Iesus perceaued in hī self, that his disciples murmured therat he sayde vnto them: Doth this offende you? What and yf ye shal se the sonne of man ascende vp thither, where he was afore? It is ¶ sprete that quyckeneth, ¶ flesh profiteth nothinge. The wordes that I speake, are sprete, and are life. But there are some amōge you, that beleue not. For Iesus knewe well from the begynnynge, which they were that beleued not, and who shulde betraye him. And he sayde: Therefore haue I sayde vnto you: || No man can come vnto me, excepte it be geuen him of my father.

From that tyme forth, many of his disciples wente backe, and walked nomore with him. Then sayde Iesus vnto the twolue: Wyll ye also go awaye? Then answered Simon Peter: LORDE, Whither shal we go? Thou hast the wordes of euerlastinge life: and we haue beleued ¶ knowne, that thou art Christ the sonne of the lyuynge God. Iesus answered them. Haue I not chosen you twolue, and one of you is a deuell? But he spake of Iudas Symon Iscarioth: the same betrayed him afterwarde, and was one of the twolue.

3 AFTER that wente Iesus aboute in Galile, 2 for he wolde not go aboute in Iewry, because the Iewes sought to kyll him. But the Iewes feast of Tabernacles<sup>f</sup> was at hande. Then sayde his brethren vnto him: Get the hēce, and go in to Iewry, that thy disciples also maye se thy workes, that thou doest. He that seketh to be openly knowne, doth nothinge in secrete. Yf thou do soch thinges, thē shewe thy self before the worlde: For his awne brethren also beleued not in him.

Then sayde Iesus vnto them: My tyme is not yet come, but youre tyme is alwaye ready. *The worlde can not hate you,* but me it hateth: because I testifie of it, that the workes of it are euell. Go ye vp vnto this feast, I will not go vp yet vnto this feast, for my tyme is not yet fulfilled. Whan he sayde this vnto them, he abode styll in Galile. But as soone as his brethren were gone vp, then wente he vp also vnto the feast, not openly, but as it were secretly. Then sought him y Iewes at y feast, and sayde:† Where is he? And there was a greates murmur of him amonge the people. Some sayde: He is good. But other sayde: No, he doth but disceaue the people. ‡Howbeit no man spake frely of him, for feare of the Iewes.

But in the myddes of the feast wete Iesus vp in to the temple, and taught. And the Iewes marueyled and sayde: How can he y scripture, seynge he hath not lerned it? Iesus answered them, and sayde: My doctryne is not myne, but his that hath sent me. Yf eny man wyl do his will, he shal knowe, whether this doctryne be of God, or whether I speake of my self. He that speaketh of himself, seketh his awne prayse: but he that seketh the prayse of him that sent him, the same is true, & there is no vnrighteousnes in him. †Hath not Moses geuen you the lawe, and none of you kepeth the lawe? Why go ye aboute to kyll me? The people answered, and sayde: Thou hast the deuell, who goeth aboute to kyll the? Iesus answered and sayde: ‡One worke haue I done, and ye all maruayle. Moses gaue you the circumcision, (not because it commeth of Moses, but of y f f fathers:) Yet do ye circumcise a man vpon the Sabbath. Yf a man receaue circucision vpon the Sabbath, that the lawe of Moses shulde not be broken, disdayne ye then at me, because I haue made a mā euery whyt whole on the Sabbath? †Iudge not after the vter appareance, but iudge righteous iudgment.

Then sayde some of them of Ierusalem: Is not this he, whō they go aboute to kyll? And beholde, he speaketh boldely, and they saye nothinge to him. Do oure rulers knowe in dede, that he is very Christ? Howbeyt||

we knowe, whence this is. But whā Christ commeth, no man shal knowe whence he is.

Then cryed Iesus in the temple as he taught, and sayde: Yee ye knowe me, and whence I am ye knowe,¶ and of my self am I not come, but he y sent me, is true, whom ye knowe not. But I knowe him, for I am of him, and he hath sent me. Then sought they to take him,¶ but no man layed handes vpon him, for his houre was not yet come. ** But many of the people beleued on him, and sayde: Whan Christ commeth, shall he do mo tokens, then this doth?

And it came to the Pharises eares,⁹ that y people murmured soch thinges of him. And the Pharises and hye prestes sent out seruauntes, to take him. Then sayde Iesus vnto them: I am yet a litle whyle with you and then go I vnto him that hath sent me. Ye shal seke me, & not fynde me:⁹ and where I am, thither can ye not come. Then sayde the Iewes amonge them selues: Whyther wil he go, that we shal not fynde him? Wyl he go amōge the Grekes that are scatred abroad, and teach the Grekes? What maner of sayenge is this, that he sayeth: ye shal seke me, and not fynde me: and where I am, thither can not ye come?

But in the last daye which was y most solempne daye of the feast, Iesus stode vp, cried, and sayde: †Who so thyrsteth, let him come vnto me, and drynke. He that beleueth on me, as the scripture sayeth, out of his body shal flowe ryuers of the water of life. (But this spake he of the †† sprete, which they that beleue on him, shulde receaue. For the holy goost was not yet there, because Iesus was not yet glorified.) Many of the people now whan they herde this sayenge, sayde: This is a very prophet.⁹ Other sayde:†† He is Christ. But some sayde: Shal Christ come out of Galile? Sayeth not the scripture,⁹ that Christ shal come of the sede of Dauid, and out of the towne of §§ Bethleem, where Dauid was? The viij. Chapter.

IESUS wente vnto mount Oliuete,<sup>a</sup> and early in the mornynge came he agayne in to the temple, and all the people came vnto him. And he sat downe, and taught them. And ¶ scribes and Pharises brought vnto him a woman taken in adoutrye, and set her there openly, and sayde vnto him: Master, this woman was taken in adoutrye, euē as the dede was adoyng. <sup>a</sup>Moses in the lawe commaunded vs to stone soch. What sayest thou? This they sayde, to tempte him, that they might haue wherof to accuse him. But Iesus stouped downe, and wrote with his fynger vpō the grounde. Now whyle they contynued axynge him, he lift him self vp, and sayde vnto them: He that is amonge you without synne, let him cast the first stone at her. And he stouped downe agayne, and wrote vpon the grounde. But whan they herde that, they wente out, one after another: the eldest first, and left Iesus alone, and the woman standinge before him. Iesus lift himself vp, and whan he sawe noman but the woman, he sayde vnto her: Woman, where are thine accusers? Hath noman condemned the? She sayde: LORDE, no man. Iesus sayde: Nether do I cōdempne the,<sup>a</sup> Go thy waye, and synne nomore.

33 Then spake Iesus agayne vnto them, and sayde: I am the light of the worlde.<sup>c</sup> He that foloweth me, shal not walke in darknesse, but shal haue the light of life. Then sayde the Pharises vnto him: Thou bearest recorde of thy self, thy recorde is not true.

Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Though I beare recorde of my self, yet my recorde is true: for I knowe whence I came, and whither I go: but ye can not tell whence I come, and whither I go. Ye iudge after the flesh, I iudge no man: but yf I iudge, my iudgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the father that hath sent me. It is wrytten also in youre lawe, § that the testimony of two men is true. I am one that beare wytnesse of my self: And the father that sent me,<sup>f</sup> beareth wytnes of me also. Then sayde they vnto him: Where is thy father? Iesus answered: <sup>e</sup>Ye nether knowe me ner yet my father. Yf ye knewe me, ye shulde knowe my father also. Therefore haue I sayde vnto you, that ye shal dye in youre synnes. ¶ For yf ye beleue not that I am he, ye shal dye in youre synnes.

Then answered they him: We are Abrahams sede, we were neuer bonde to eny man, how sayest thou then: Ye shal be fre? Iesus answered them, and sayde: Verely verely I saye vnto you: † Who so euer doth synne, is the seruauent of synne: As for the seruauent, he abydeyth not in the house for euer, but the sonne abydeyth euer. Yf the sonne therfore make you fre, then are ye fre in dede. I knowe that ye are Abrahams sede, but ye seke to kyll me. For my worde taketh not amonge you. They answered, and sayde vnto him: Abraham is oure father. Iesus sayde vnto them: Yf ye were Abrahams children, ye wolde do the dedes of Abraham. But now ye go aboute to kyll me, a man, that haue tolde you the trueth, † which I haue herde of God, this dyd not Abraham. Ye do the dedes of youre father. Then sayde they vnto him: We are not borne of fornicacion, we haue one father, euen God. Iesus sayde vnto them: Yf God were youre father, then wolde ye loue me. For I am proceded forth, and come from God. For I am not come of my self, but he hath sent me. Why knowe ye not thē my speach? Euē because ye can not abyde the hearinge of my worde.

Ye are of the father the deuell, and after the lustes of youre father wyl ye do. § The same was a murthurer from the begynnyng, and abode not in the trueth: for the trueth is not in him. Whan he speaketh a lye, then speaketh he of his awne: for he is a lyar, and a father of the same. But because I saye the trueth, ye beleue me not.

Which of you can rebuke me of one synne? Yf I saye the trueth, why do ye not beleue me? ¶ He that is of God, heareth Gods worde. Therefore heare ye not, because ye are not of God.

Then answered the Iewes, and sayde vnto him: Saye we not right, that thou art a Samaritane, ¶ and hast the deuell? Iesus answered: I haue no deuell, but I honour my father, and ye haue dishonoured me. I seke not myne awne prayse, but there is one that seketh it, and iudgeth. Verely verely I saye vnto you: "Yf eny man kepe my worde, he shal neuer se death.

Then sayde the Iewes vnto him: Now knowe we, that **thou hast the deuell. Abraham is deed and the prophetes, and thou sayest: Yf eny mā kepe my worde, he shal neuer taist of death. Art thou greater then oure father Abraham? which is deed, and the prophetes are deed? Whō makest thou thy self? Iesus answered: ††Yf I prayse my self, then is my prayse nothinge. But it is my father that prayseth me, which ye saye is youre God, and ye knowe hī not: but I knowe him. And yf I shulde saye, I knowe him not, I shulde be a lyar, like vnto you. But I knowe him, and kepe his worde.

Abraham youre father was glad, that he shulde se my daye, ††And he sawe it, and reioysed. Then sayde the Iewes vnto him: Thou art not yet fiftie yere olde, and hast thou sene Abraham? Iesus sayde vnto thē: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Or euer Abraham was, §§ I am. Then toke they vp stones, to cast at him. But Iesus hyd himself, and wente out of the temple.

The ix. Chapter.

AND Iesus passed by, and sawe a man <sup>a</sup> that was borne blynde. And his disciples axed him, ⁊ sayde: Master, Who hath synned? this, or his elders, that he was borne blynde? Iesus answered: Nether hath this synned, ner his elders, ¶ but that y workes of God shulde be shewed on him. I must worke the workes of him that hath sent me, whyle it is daye. The night commeth, whan no man can worke. As longe as I am in the worlde, I am the ¶¶light of the worlde.

Whan he had thus sayde, he spat on the grounde, and made claye of the spetle, and rubbed the claye on the eyes of the blynde, and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye to the pole of ***Syloha (which is interpreted, sent) and wash the. Then wcte he his waye and waszhed him, and came seynge. The neighbours and they that had sene him before, that he was a begger, sayde: Is not this he that sat, and begged? Some sayde: It is he.

Other sayde: he is like him. But he himself sayde: I am euen he. Then sayde they vnto him: How are thine eyes opened? He answered, and sayde: The mā that is called Iesus, made claye, and anoynted myne eyes, and sayde: Go thy waye to the pole of Siloha, and wash the. I wente my waye, & washed me, and receaued my sight. Then sayde they vnto him: Where is he? He sayde: I can not tell.

B Then brought they vnto the pharises, him that a litle before was blynde. *It was the Sabbath, when Iesus made the claye, and opened his eyes. Then agayne the Pharises also axed him, how he had receaued his sight. He sayde vnto thē: He put claye vpon myne eyes, and I washed me, & now I se.

Then sayde some of the pharises: This man is not of God, seynge he kepeth not ſ Sabbath. †But the other sayde: How can a synfull man do soch tokens? And there was a stryfe amonge thē. They sayde agayne vnto ſ blynde: What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He sayde: he is a prophet.

The Iewes beleued not hī, that he was blynde, and had receaued his sight, tyll they called the elders of him, that had receaued his sight, and they axed them, and sayde: Is this youre sonne, whom ye saye, was borne blynde? How doth he now se then? His elders answered them, and sayde: We knowe, that this is oure sonne, and that he was borne blynde. But how he now seyth, we can not tell: or who hath opened his eyes, can we not tell. He is olde ynough himself, axe him, let him speake for him self.

C This sayde his elders, because they feared the Iewes. †For the Iewes had conspyred allready, that yf eny man dyd confesse that he was Christ, the same shulde be excommunicate. Therfore sayde his elders: He is olde ynough, axe him.

Then called they the mā agayne ſ was blynde, and sayde vnto him: ¶ Geue God ſ prayse, we knowe that this man is a synner. He answered, & sayde: Whether he be a synner or no, I can not tell: one thinge am I sure off, that I was blynde, and now I se. Thē sayde they vnto him agayne: What dyd he vnto the? How opened he thine eyes?

He answered them: I tolde you right now. Herde ye it not? What, wil ye heare it agayne? Will ye also be his disciples? Then rayted they him, and sayde: Thou art his disciple. We are sure that God spake with Moses: As for this felowe, we know not whēce he is.

The man answered, and sayde vnto thē: D This is a maruelous thinge, that ye wote not whence he is, and he hath opened mine eyes. For we knowe that God heareth not ſ sinners: but yf eny mā be a fearer of God, and doth his will, him heareth he. Sens ſ worlde beganne was it not herde, that eny man opened the eyes of one that was borne blynde. Yf this man were not of God, he coulde haue done nothinge. They answered, and sayde vnto him: Thou art altogether borne in synne, and teachest thou vs? And they thrust him out.

Iesus herde, ſ they had thrust him out, and whā he had founde him, he sayde vnto him: Beleuest thou on the sonne of God? He answered, and sayde: LORDE, who is it, ſ I might beleue on him? Iesus sayde vnto him: Thou hast sene him, and he it is, that talketh with the. He sayde: LORDE, I beleue. And he worshipped him.

And Iesus sayde: I am come to iudgmēt in to this worlde, that they which se not, might se: and that they which se, might be made blynde. And some of the Pharises ſ were with him, herde this, and sayde vnto him: Are we then blynde also? Iesus sayde vnto thē: Yf ye were blynde, ye shulde haue no synne. But now that ye saye, we se, therefore youre synne remaineth.

VERELY verely I saye vnto you: He ſ A entreth not in at the dore in to the shepefolde, but clymmeth vp some other waye, the same is a thefe & a murthurer. him: for they knowe not the voyce of straungers. This prouerbe spake Iesus vnto them, but they vnderstode not what it was, that he sayde vnto them.

Then sayde Iesus vnto them agayne: Verely verely I saye vnto you: *I am the dore of the shepe. All they that are come before me, are theues and murthurers. But †shepe harkened not vnto them. I am the dore. Yf eny man entre in by me, he shalbe saued, and shal go in and out, and fynde pasture. A thefe cōmeth not, but for to steale, kyll, and destroye. I am come, ‡they might haue life, and haue it more abundantly.

13 I am a good shepherde. A good shepherde geueth his life for the shepe. <sup>a</sup>But an hyred seruauit, which is not the shepherde, nether the shepe are his awne, seyth †wolfe cōmyng, and leaueth ‡shepe, and flyeth. And the wolfe catcheth †scatereth ‡shepe. But the hyred seruauit flyeth, because he is an hyred seruauit, and careth not for the shepe. I am a good sheperde, †and knowe myne, and am knowne of myne. Euē as my father knoweth me, and I knowe †father. And †I geue my life for my shepe. And I haue yet other shepe, which are not of this folde, and those same must I bryng also, and they shal heare my voyce, and there shalbe one flocke and one shepherde.

Therefore doth my father loue me, because I leaue my life, that I maye take it agayne. No mā taketh it fro me, but I leaue it of my self. I haue power to leaue it, and haue power to take it agayne. This commaundement haue I receaued of my father. Then was there discension amōge the Iewes for these sayenges. <sup>b</sup>Many of thē sayde: He hath the deuell, and is madd, why heare ye him? 14 It was the dedicacion of the tēple at Ierusalē, <sup>e</sup>and was wynter, and Iesus walked in †Salomōs porche. Thē came ‡Iewes rounde aboute hī, and saide vnto hī: How lōge dost thou make vs doute? Yf thou be Christ, tell vs planely. Iesus answered thē: I tolde you, and ye beleue not. The workes ‡I do in my fathers name, they beare wytnesse of me. But ye beleue not, because ye are not of my shepe as I sayde vnto you. My shepe heare my voyce, and I knowe thē, and they folowe me. And I geue thē euerlastinge life, and they shal neuer perishe, and nomā shal plucke thē out of my hande. My father which gaue thē me, is greater thē all: and noman is able to plucke them out of my fathers hande. †I and the father are one. Then the Iewes toke vp stones agayne, to stone him. Iesus answered thē: Many good workes haue I shewed you fro my father, for which of thē stone ye me?

The Iewes answered hī, and sayde: For the good worke sake we stone the not, <sup>**</sup>but for the blasphemy: and because ‡thou beyng a man, makest thy self God. Iesus answered thē: Is it not wyrtten in yore lawe: I haue sayde, Ye are Goddes? ††Yf he call them Goddes, vnto whom the worde of God came (and the scripture can not be broke) saye ye thē vnto hī, whō ‡father hath sanctified and sent in to ‡worlde: <sup>a</sup>thou blasphemest God, because I sayde: I am ‡sonne of God? †Yf I do not ‡workes of my father, beleue me not: but yf I do thē, thē (yf ye beleue not me) yet beleue ‡workes, ‡ye maye knowe and beleue, ‡the father is in me, and I in ‡father.

that he was sicke, he abode two dayes in ſþ place where he was.

After warde ſayde he vnto his diſciples: Let vs go agayne i to Iewry. His diſciples ſayde vnto him: Maſter, *lately wolde the Iewes haue ſtoned the, ⁊ wilt thou go thither agayne? Ieſus answered: Are there not twolue houres in ſþ daye? He ſþ walketh in the daye, ſtombleth not, for he ſeyeth ſþ light of this worlde. But he that walketh in the night, ſtöbleth: for there is no light in him.

33 This he ſpake, ⁊ after warde ſayde he vnto thē: Lazarus oure frende ⁊ ſlepeþ, but I go to wake him out of ſlepe. Thē ſayde his diſciples: LORDE, yf he ſlepe, he ſhal do well ynough (Howbeyt Ieſus ſpake of his death but they thought ſþ he had ſpokē of ſþ bodely ſlepe.) Thē ſayde Ieſus vnto thē planely: Lazarus is deed, ⁊ I am glad for youre ſakes, ſþ I was not there, that ye maye beleue. Neuertheles let vs go vnto hi. Thē ſayde Thomas (which is called Didimus)<sup>a</sup> vnto ſþ diſciples: Let vs go alſo, ſþ we maye dye with hi.

Thē came Ieſus, ⁊ founde ſþ he had lyen in ſþ graue foure dayes already. Bethanye was nye vnto Ieruſalē, aboute fiftene furlöges. And many of the Iewes were come to Martha ⁊ Mary, to cōforte thē ouer their brother. Now whā Martha herde ſþ Ieſus came, ſhe wēte to mete him. But Mary ſatt ſtyle at home.

Ⓒ Thē ſayde Martha vnto Ieſus: LORDE, yf thou haddeſt bene here, <sup>a</sup>my brother had not bene deed. But neuertheles I knowe alſo, what ſoeuer thou axeſt of God, that God wyl gene it the. Ieſus ſayde vnto her: Thy brother ſhal ryſe agayne. Martha ſayde vnto hi: I knowe, ſþ he ſhal ryſe agayne in the reſurreccion at ſþ laſt daye. Ieſus ſaide vnto her: I am the reſurreccion ⁊ the life.† He ſþ beleueth on me, ſhal lyue, though he were deed already: ⁊ whoſoeuer lyueth and beleueth on me, ſhal neuer dye. Beleueſt thou thiſ? She ſaide vnto him: Yee LORDE, I beleue, that thou art Chriſt the ſonne of God, which ſhulde come in to the worlde. And whā ſhe had ſayde thiſ, ſhe wēte hir waye, ⁊ called Mary hir ſiſter ſecretly, ⁊ ſaide: The maſter is come, ⁊ calleth for the. She whan ſhe herde that, roſe vp quykely, and came vnto him: For Ieſus was not yet come in to ſþ towne, but was yet in the place, where Martha met him. The Iewes that were with her in the houſe and comforted her, whan they ſawe Mary, that ſhe roſe vp haileſty, ⁊ wente out, they folowed her, ⁊ ſaide: She goeth to the graue, to wepe there.

Now whā Mary came where Ieſus was ⁊ ſawe him, ſhe fell downe at his fete, ⁊ ſayde vnto hi: LORDE, yf thou haddeſt bene here, my brother had not bene deed. Whā Ieſus ſawe her wepe, ⁊ the Iewes wepinge alſo ſþ came with her, he groned in the ſprete, ⁊ was ſory with in himſelf, ⁊ ſayde: Where haue ye layed him? They ſayde: LORDE, come, ⁊ ſe it. And <sup>b</sup>Ieſus wepte. Then ſayde ſþ Iewes: Beholde how he loued him. But ſome of thē ſaide: Coulede not he ¶ which opened the eyes of ſþ blynde, haue made alſo, that thiſ mā ſhulde not haue dyed? But Ieſus groned agayne in himſelf, and came to the graue. It was a caue, and a ſtone layed on it. Ieſus ſaide: Take awaye ſþ ſtone. Martha the ſiſter of him ſþ was deed, ſaide vnto hi: LORDE, he ſtynketh already, for he hath bene deed foure dayes. Ieſus ſayde vnto her: Sayde I not vnto the, that yf thou dyddeſt beleue, thou ſhuldeſt ſe the glory of God?

Then toke they awaye the ſtone, where the deed laye. Ieſus liſt vp his eyes, and ſayde: Father, I thiñke ſþ, that thou haſt herde me. Howbeit I knowe, that thou heareſt me allwaye: but ¶ becauſe of ſþ people that ſtonde by, I ſayde it, that they maye beleue, that thou haſt ſent me.

Whan he had ſayde thiſ, he cryed loude: Lazarus come forth. And ſþ deed came forth bounde hande ⁊ fote with graue clothes, ⁊ hiſ face bounde with a napkyn. Ieſus ſayde vnto thē: Lowſe him, ⁊ let him go. Many now of ſþ Iewes which were come vnto Mary, and ſawe what Ieſus dyd, beleued on him. But ſome of thē wente their waye vnto the phariſes, and tolde thē what Ieſus had done.

them, named Caiphas, which was hye prest that same yeaere, sayde vnto them: Ye knowe nothinge nether conside ye eny thinge at all.* It is better for us that one mā dye for the people, then that all the people shulde perishe.

¶ This spake he not of himself, but for so moch as he was hye prest of the same yeaere, he prophecied. For Iesus was for to dye for the people, and not for the people onely, but that he shulde gather together the children of God, which were scattered abroad: From that daye forth they toke counsell, how they might put him to death. Iesus walked nomore openly amonge the Iewes, but wente from thence in to a cowntre by the wyldernesse, to a cite called Ephraim, & there had he his beyng with his disciples.

The Iewes Easter was nye at hande. And there wente vp many to Ierusalē out of that cowntre before ¶ Easter, to purifye them selues. Then stode they vp, and axed after Iesus, and spake amonge them selues in the temple: What thynke ye, that he cōmeth not to ¶ feast? The hye prestes & pharises had geuen a commaundement, that yf eny man knewe where he were, he shulde shewe it, that they might take him.

The xij. Chapter.

¶ SIXE dayes before Easter came Iesus vnto ¶ Bethanye, where Lazarus was, which was deed, whom Iesus rayssed vp from the deed. There they made him a supper, and Martha serued. But Lazarus was one of them, that sat at the table with him. ¶ Then toke Mary a pounce of oyntment of pure and costly Nardus, and anoynted Iesus fete, & dryed his fete with hir heer. The house was full of the sauoure of the oyntment. ¶ Then sayde one of his disciples, Iudas Iscarioth Symons sonne, which afterwarde betrayed him: Why was not this oyntment solde for thre hundred pens, and geuen to the poore? (¶ This sayde he not that he cared for the poore, but because he was a thefe, and ¶ had the bagge, and bare that which was geuē.) ¶ Then sayde Iesus: Let her alone, this hath she kepte agaynst the daye of my buryenge. For the poore haue ye allwaye with you, but me haue ye not allwaye.

¶ Then moch people of the Iewes had knowlege, that he was there, and they came not for Iesus sake onely, but also ¶ they might se Lazarus, whom he had rayssed from the deed. But ¶ hye prestes were aduysed to put Lazarus to death also: because ¶ for his sake many of the Iewes wēte awaye and beleued on Iesus.

¶ Vpon the nexte daye moch people which were come vnto the feast, when they herde that Iesus came towarde Ierusalem, they toke braunches of palme trees, and wēte out to mete him, and cryed: Hosanna, ¶ Blessed be he, that in the name of the LORDE cometh kynge of Israel. Iesus gat a yonge Asse, and rode theron, As it is wryttē: ¶ Feare not thou daughter of Sion, beholde, thy kynge cōmeth rydinge vpō an Asses foale. Neuertheles his disciples vnderstode not these thinges at the first, but whan Iesus was glorified, then remēbred they that soch thinges were wryttē of him, and that they had done soch thinges vnto him.

The people that was with him whan he called Lazarus out of ¶ graue and rayssed him from the deed, commended the acte. Therefore the people met him, because they herde, that he had done soch a miracle. But the pharises sayde amonge them selues: Ye se, that we preuayle nothinge, beholde, all ¶ yf worlde runneth after him.

¶ There were certayne Grekes (amonge thē that were come vp to Ierusalē to worshipe at the feast)¶ the same came vnto Philippe, ¶ which was of Bethsaida out of Galile, & prayed him, and sayde: Syr, we wolde fayne se Iesus. Philippe came, & tolde Andrew. And agayne, Philippe and Andrew tolde Iesus. Iesus answered thē, and sayde: ¶ The houre is come, that the sonne of man must be glorified.

<sup>a</sup> Now is my soule heuy, and what shal I saye? Father, helpe me out of this houre. But therefore am I come in to this houre. Father, glorifye thy name.

D Then came there a voyce from heauen: I haue glorified it, and wyl glorifye it agayne. Then sayde the people that stode by and herde: It thondereth. Other sayde: An angell spake vnto him. Iesus answered, and sayde: * This voyce came not because of me, but for youre sakes.

Now goeth the iudgment ouer the worlde. Now shal the prynce of this worlde be thrust out. And I whan I am lift vp from the earth, wyl drawe all vnto me. (But this he sayde, to signifye, what death he shulde dye.) Then answered him the people: We haue herde in the † lawe, that Christ endureth for euer: and how sayest thou then, that the sonne of man must be lift vp? Who is this sonne of man?

E <sup>a</sup> Then sayde Iesus vnto them: The light is yet a litle whyle with you, walke whyle ye haue the light, that the darknesse fall not vpō you. He that walketh in the darknesse, woteth not whither he goeth. Beleue ye on the light, whyle ye haue it, that ye maye be the children of light.

These thinges spake Iesus, and departed away, and hyd himself from them. And though he had done soch tokens before thē, yet beleued they not on him, that the sayenge of Esay the prophet might be fulfilled, <sup>c</sup> which he spake: LORDE, who beleueth oure preachinge? Or to whom is the arme of the LORDE opened? Therefore coulde they not beleue, for Esay saide agayne: He hath blynded their eyes, <sup>d</sup> and hardened their hert, that they shulde not se with the eyes, ner vnderstonde with the hert, <sup>e</sup> & shulde be conuerted, and he shulde heale them. This sayde Esay, whan he sawe his glory, and spake of him.

F Neuertheles many of the chefe rulers beleued on him, <sup>f</sup> but because of the Pharises they wolde not be knowne of it, <sup>g</sup> lest they shulde be excommunicate, <sup>h</sup> For they loued more the prayse with men, then with God.

Iesus cryed and sayde: He that beleueth on me, beleueth not on me, but on him that sent me. And he that seyth me, seyth him <sup>i</sup> sent me. <sup>i</sup> I am come a light in to the worlde, that whosoer beleueth on me, shulde not byde in darknesse. And he that heareth my wordes and beleueth not, I iudge him not, for I am not come to iudge the worlde, <sup>k</sup> but to saue the worlde. He that refuseth me, and receaueth not my wordes, hath one allready that iudgeth him. <sup>l</sup> The worde that I haue spoken, that shall iudge him at the last daye, For I haue not spoken of my self: <sup>m</sup> but the father that sent me, hath geuen me a commaundement, what I shulde do and saye. And I knowe that his commaundement is life euerlastinge. Therefore loke what I speake, that speake I euē so, as the father hath sayde vnto me.

The xiiij. Chapter.

BEFORE the feast of Easter whan Iesus A knewe that his tyme was come, that he shulde departe out of this worlde vnto <sup>n</sup> father, as he loued his which were in the worlde, euen so loued he them vnto the ende. And after supper, whan the deuell had all ready put in to <sup>o</sup> hert of Iudas Iscarioth, <sup>p</sup> Symons sonne, to betraye him, Iesus knowinge that the father had geuen all thinges in to his handes, <sup>q</sup> that he was come from God, and wente vnto God, he rose from supper, and layed asyde his vpper garmentes, and toke a towell, and gyrde it aboute him. Then came he vnto Symon Peter, and <sup>s</sup> same sayde vnto him: LORDE, shalt thou washe my fete? <sup>1</sup>AND he sayde vnto his disciples: Let not <sup>2</sup>your hert be afayed. Yf ye beleue on God, the beleue also on me. In my fathers house are many dwellings. Yf it were not so, I wolde haue tolde you: I go to prepare the place for you. And though I go to prepare the place for you, yet wil I come agayne, and receaue you vnto my self, <sup>3</sup>y ye maye be where I am. And whither I go, ye knowe, and the waye knowe ye also.

Thomas sayde vnto him: LORDE, we knowe not whither thou goest, <sup>4</sup>and how can we knowe the waye? Iesus sayde vnto him: I am the waye, and the trueth, and the life. <sup>5</sup>'Noman cōmeth to the father but by me. Yf ye knewe me, ye knewe my father also. And frō hēce forth ye knowe hi, <sup>6</sup>and haue sene him. Philippe sayde vnto him: LORDE, shewe vs the father, and it sufficeth vs. Iesus sayde vnto him: Thus longe am I with you, and hast thou not knowne me? Philippe, he that seyth me, seyth the father. And how sayest thou then: Shewe vs the father? Beleuest thou not that I am in the father, <sup>7</sup>and that y father is in me? The wordes that I speake vnto you, those speake not I of my self: but the father that dwelleth in me, he doth the workes. Beleue me, that I am in the father, and that f father is in me: Or els, beleue me at the leest for the workes sake.

33 Verely verely I saye vnto you: He that beleueth on me, shal do the workes that I do, and shal do greater then these: for I go to the father. And what soeuer ye axe f father in my name, that wyl I do, that the father maye be prayd in the sonne. Yf ye axe eny thinge in my name, I wyl do it.

Yf ye loue me, kepe my commaundementes. And I wyl praye the father, and he shal geue you another comforter, that he maye byde with you for euer: euen f sprete of trueth, whom f worlde can not receaue, for it seyth him not, nether doth it knowe him: but ye knowe him, for he abydeth with you, & shalbe in you.* I wil not leaue you cōfortles, I come vnto you. It is yet a litle whyle, thē shal the worlde se me nomore, †but ye shal se me: for I lyue, and ye shal lyue also. In f daye shal ye knowe, that I am in the father and ye in me, and I in you. He that hath my cōmaundementes, †and kepeth them, the same is he that loueth me: and he that loueth me, shalbe loued of my father: ‡I wyl loue him, and wyl shewe myne awne self vnto him. †Iudas sayde vnto hī: (not that Iscariot) LORDE, What is the cause thē, that thou wilt shewe thy self vnto vs, and not vnto the worlde?

C Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: He that loueth me, wyl kepe my worde, and my father wyl loue him: and we wyl come vnto him, and wyll make oure dwellynge with him. But he that loueth me not, kepeth not my sayenges. And the worde that ye heare, is not myne, but the fathers which hath sent me.

This haue I spoken vnto you, whyle I was with you. †But that comforter euen f holy goost, §whō my father shal sende in my name, he shal teache you all thinges, & bringe all to youre remembrance, what soeuer I haue tolde you.

Peace I leaue vnto you, my peace I geue you: I geue not vnto you, as the worlde geueth. Let not youre hert be troubled, nether let it be a frayd. Ye haue herde, that I sayde vnto you: I go, & come agayne vnto you. Yf ye loued me, ye wolde reioyse, because I saide, I go to the father: for f father is greater thē I. And now haue I tolde you, before it come, that whan it is come to passe, ye maye beleue: Here after wyl not I talke moch with you. †For the prynce of this worlde cōmeth, and hath nothinge in me. But that the worlde maye knowe that I loue f father. And as the father hath cōmaunded me, so do I. Aryse, let vs go hence.

The xv. Chapter.

I AM a true v yne, and my father is an huszbande man. Euery braunch that bringeth not forth frute in me, shal be cut of: and euery one that bryngeth forth frute, shal he pource, f it maye bringe forth more frute. Now are ye cleane, because of the worde, that I haue spokē vnto you. Byde ye in me, and I in you. Like as f braunch can not brynge forth frute of it self excepte it byde in the v yne, Euen so nether ye also, excepte ye abyde in me.

I am the v yne, ye are the braunches. He that abydeth in me, and I in him, the same bryngeth forth moch frute: for without me can ye do nothinge. He that abydeth not in me, is cast out as a v yne braunche, and it wythereth, and men gather it vp, and cast it in to the fyre, and it burneth. **Yf ye abyde in me, and my wordes abyde in you, ye shal axe what ye wyl, & it shal be done vnto you. Herin is my father prayd, that ye brynge forth moch frute, and become my disciples. Like as my father hath loued me, eue so haue I loued you. †Cōtynue ye ī my loue.†† Yf ye kepe my cōmaundementes, ye shal cōtynue in my loue: like as I haue kepte my fathers cōmaundementes, and cōtynue in his loue.

These thinges haue I spoken vnto you, that †† your ioye might remayne in you, and f your ioye might be perfecte. †This is my cōmaundement, that ye loue together, as I haue loued you. No man hath greater loue, then to set his life for his frende. ††Ye are my frendes, yf ye do that I commaunde you. Hence forth call I you not seruantes, for a seruaunt knoweth not what his lorde doeth. But I haue sayde that ye are frendes: For all that I haue herde of my father, haue I shewed vnto you. <sup>a</sup>Ye haue not chosen me, but I haue chosen you, and ordeyned you, that ye go, and <sup>b</sup>bringe forth frute, and that youre frute contynue, that what soeuer ye axe the father in my name, he shulde geue it you.

This I commaunde you, that ye loue one another. Yf the worlde hate you, then knowe, that it hath hated me before you. Yf ye were of the worlde, the worlde wolde loue his awne. Howbeit because ye are not of the worlde, but I haue chosen you from the worlde, therefore the worlde hateth you. Remembre my worde, that I sayde vnto you: <sup>c</sup>The seruaunt is not greater then his lorde. Yf they haue persecuted me, they shal persecute you also: Yf they haue kepte my worde, they shal kepe yours also.

But whā the comforter commeth, whō <sup>k</sup> I shal sende you from the father euē the sprete of trueth which procedeth of the father, he shal testifie of me <sup>l</sup> and ye shal beare wytnesse also: for ye haue bene with me from the begynnyng.

The xvi. Chapter.

<sup>m</sup> THESE thinges haue I sayde vnto you, that ye shulde not be offended. They shal excommunicate you. The tyme commeth, that who soeuer putteth you to death, shal thinke that he doth seruyce vnto God. <sup>n</sup> And soch thinges shal they do vnto you, because they haue nether knowne <sup>o</sup> father ner yet me. But these thinges haue I sayde vnto you, <sup>p</sup> that whan the tyme cometh ye maye thynke theron, that I tolde you. But these thinges haue I not sayde vnto you from the begynnyng: For I was with you.

But now I go vnto him that sent me, <sup>q</sup> none of you axeth me: Whither goest thou? but because I haue sayde these thinges vnto you, youre hert is full of sorowe. Neuertheles I tell you the trueth, It is better for you <sup>r</sup> I go away: For yf I go not away that comforter commeth not vnto you: but yf I departe, <sup>s</sup> I wil sende hī vnto you. And whan he commeth, he shal rebuke the worlde of synne, and of righteousness, <sup>t</sup> of iudgment. Of synne, because they beleue not on me. Of righteousness, because I go to the father, and ye shal se me nomore. Of iudgmēt, because the <sup>u</sup>prynce of this worlde is iudged already.

I haue yet moch to saye vnto you, but ye <sup>v</sup> can not now beare it away: howbeit whan he (the sprete of trueth) commeth <sup>w</sup> he shal lede you in to all trueth. For he shal not speake of himself, but what soeuer he shal heare, that shal he speake: and he shall shewe you, what is for to come. He shal glorifye me: for he shal receaue of myne, and shal shewe vnto you. <sup>x</sup> All that the father hath, is myne. Therefore haue I sayde: he shal receaue of myne, and shewe vnto you.

After a litle whyle, and ye shal not se me: and agayne after a litle whyle, and ye shal se me: for I go to the father. <sup>y</sup> Thē saide some of his disciples amonge them selues: What is this that he sayeth vnto vs, After a litle whyle, and ye shal not se me: <sup>z</sup> agayne after a litle whyle, <sup>aa</sup> ye shal se me: for I go to the father? <sup>ab</sup> Then sayde they: What is this, that he sayeth: After a litle whyle? We can not tell what he sayeth. Then perceaued Iesus that they wolde axe him, and he sayde vnto them: Ye enquire of this amonge youre selues, that I sayde: After a litle whyle, and ye shal not se me: <sup>ac</sup> agayne after a litle whyle, and ye shal se me.

<sup>ad</sup> Verely verely I saye vnto you: Ye shal wepe and lamente, but the worlde shal reioyse: Ye shal be sory, but youre sorowe shal be turned in to ioye. A woman whan she trauallyeth, hath sorowe, for hir houre is come. But whan she is deliuered of the childe, she thinketh nomore of the anguyshe, for ioye that a man is borne in to the worlde. And now haue ye sorowe also: but I wil se you agayne, and youre hert shal reioyse, and youre ioye shal noman take from you. And in that daye shal ye axe me no question. <sup>a</sup> Verely verely I saye vnto you: Yf ye axe † father ought in my name, he shal geue it you. Hither to haue ye axed nothinge in my name. Axe, and ye shal receaue, † youre ioye maye be perfecte. These thinges haue I spoken vnto you by * prouerbes. Neuertheles the tyme commeth, that I shal speake nomore by prouerbes, but I shal shewe you planely of my father.

D In that daye shal ye axe in my name. And I saye not vnto you, that I wyl praye vnto the father for you: for the father himself loueth you, because ye haue loued me, † beleued that I am come out from God. † I wente out from the father, and came in to the worlde: Agayne, I leaue † worlde, and go to the father.

His disciples sayde vnto him: Beholde, now talkest thou planely, and speakest no prouerbe. Now are we sure † thou knowest all thinges, and nedest not that eny mā shulde axe the. Therefore beleue we, that thou earnest out from God: Iesus answered them: Now ye do beleue: <sup>b</sup> Beholde, the houre draweth nye, and is come already, that ye shalbe scatred, euery man in to his awne, and shal leaue me alone: <sup>c</sup> and yet am I not alone, for the father is with me.

These thinges haue I spoken vnto you, that in me ye might haue peace.<sup>d</sup> In † worlde haue ye trouble, but be of good comferte, I haue ouercome the worlde.

The xviij. Chapter.

A THESE thinges spake Iesus, and lift vp his eyes toward heauen, and sayde: <sup>e</sup> Father, the houre is come, that thou glorifye thy sonne, that thy sonne also maye glorifye the. Like as thou hast geuen him power ouer all fleshe, <sup>f</sup> that he shulde geue euerlastinge life to as many as thou hast geuen him: But this is the life euerlastinge, that they knowe the (that thou onely art the true God) and whom thou hast sent, Iesus Christ.

I haue glorified † vpō earth, † † synished † worke, † thou gauest me to do. And now glorifye me thou father by thine awne self, with † glory which I had or euer the worlde was. I haue declared thy name vnto † men, whom thou gauest me from the worlde. They were thine, and thou gauest them vnto me, and they haue kepte thy worde.

B Now knowe they, that all thinges what soeuer thou hast geuen me, are of the. For † wordes which thou gauest me,<sup>g</sup> haue I geuē vnto them, and they haue receaued them, † knowne of a trueth, that I am come forth from the, and haue beleued, that thou hast sent me. I praye for them, and praye not for the || worlde, but for them whom thou hast geuen me, for they are thine. And all that is myne, is thine: and what thine is, that is myne. And I am glorified in them. And now am I nomore in the worlde, and they are in † worlde, and I come to the. Holy father, kepe in thy name, those whom thou || hast geuē me, that they maye be one, like as we are. Whye I was with thē in the worlde, I kepte them in thy name. Those † thou gauest me, haue I kepte, and none of them is lost, but that lost childe,<sup>h</sup> that the <sup>**</sup> scripture might be fulfilled. But now come I vnto the, and this I speake in the worlde, that they maye haue my ioye perfecte in them. I haue geuen them thy worde,†† and the worlde hateth thē: for they are not of the worlde, euen as I also am not of the worlde. I praye not that thou shuldest take them out of the worlde, †† but that thou kepe thē frō euell. They are not of the worlde, as I also am not of the worlde.

C Sanctifye them in thy trueth. Thy worde is the trueth. Like as thou hast sent me in to the worlde, so haue I sent them in to the worlde: and for their sakes I sanctifye myself, that they also maye be sanctified in the trueth.

Neuertheles I praye not for them onely, but also for those, which thorow thy worde shal beleue on me, that they all maye be one, like as thou father art in me, and I in †, that they also maye be §§ one in vs: that the worlde maye beleue, that thou hast sent me. ### The xviij. Chapter.

¶ WHAN Iesus had thus spokē, he wētē forth with his disciples ouer the broke Cedron, where there was a gardē, in to the which Iesus entred and his disciples. But Iudas y betrayed hi, knewe the place also. For Iesus resorted thither oft tymes with his disciples. “Now whan Iudas had takē vnto him the cōpany, & mynistrs of the hye prestes and Pharises, he came thither with creshettes, with lanternes, and with weapens. Iesus now knowinge all y shulde come vpon him, wētē forth, and sayde vnto thē: Whom seke ye? They answered him: Iesus of Nazareth. Iesus sayde vnto them: I am he: Iudas also which betrayed him, stode with thē. Now whan Iesus sayde vnto thē: I am he; they wētē bacwardes, and fell to the grounde. Then axed he thē agayne: Whom seke ye? They sayde: Iesus of Nazareth. Iesus answered: I haue tolde you, that I am he. Yf ye seke me, then let these go their waye. That the worde might be fulfilled, which he sayde: Of them who thou gauest me, haue I not lost one. Then had Symon Peter a swerde, and drewe it out, and smote the hye prestes seruāit, and cut of his right eare. And y seruāites name was Malchus.

¶ Then sayde Iesus vnto Peter: Put vp thy swerde in to the sheeth. Shal I not drynke of y cuppe, which my father hath geuē me? Then the company and the captayne & the officers of the Iewes toke Iesus, and bounde him, & led him awaye first vnto Annas, that was fatherlawe vnto Caiphas, which was hye prest y same yeare. It was Caiphas, which gaue coicell vnto y Iewes that it were good, that one man shulde dye for the people.

As for Symon Peter, he and another disciple folowed Iesus. The same disciple was knowne vnto the hye prest, and wētē in with Iesus in to the hye prestes palace. But Peter stode without at the dore. Then y other disciple which was knowne vnto the hye prest, wente out, and spake to the damsell y kepte the dore, and brought in Peter. Then the damsell that kepte the dore, sayde vnto Peter: Art not thou also one of this mans disciples? He sayde: I am not.

The seruantes & officers stode, and had made a fyre of coles (for it was colde) & warmed thē selues. Peter also stode with them, and warmed him self. The hye prest axed Iesus of his disciples, and of his doctryne. Iesus answered him: “I haue spoken openly before the worlde, I haue euer taught in the synagoge and in the tēple, whither all the Iewes resorted, & in secrete haue I spokē nothinge. Why axest thou me? Axe thē y haue herde, what I haue spoken vnto thē: beholde, they can tell what I haue sayde. But whan he had thus spokē, one of the officers that stode by, smote Iesus on the face, and sayde: Answerest thou the hye prest so? Iesus answered him: Yf I haue euell spokē, thē beare wytnesse of euell: but yf I haue well spoken, why smyttest thou me? And Annas sent him bounde vnto Caiphas y hye prest.

“Synō Peter stode and warmed him self. Thē sayde they vnto him: Art not thou one of his disciples? He denyed, and sayde: I am not. A seruāit of the hye prestes, a kynszmā of his, whose eare Peter had smytten of, sayde vnto him: Dyd not I se the in the gardē with him?

Then Peter denyed agayne. And immediately the “cock crew. * Then led they Iesus from Caiphas in to the comon hall. And it was early in the mornynge. And they them selues wētē not in to the comō hall, lest they shulde be defyled, but y they might eate y Pascall lambe. Then wente Pilate out vnto thē, and sayde: What accusation brynge ye agaynst this man? They answered, and sayde

Then sayde ſ Iewes vnto him: It is not lauffull for vs to put eny mā to death. That ſ worde of Iesus might be fulfilled,* which he spake, when he signified, what death he shulde dye.

Then entred Pilate in to the comon hall agayne, and called Iesus, & sayde vnto him: Art thou the kynge of the Iewes? Iesus answered: Sayest thou that of thy self, or haue other tolde it the of me?

32 Pilate answered: Am I a Iewe? Thy people and the hye prestes haue deluyered the vnto me. What hast thou done? Iesus answered: My kyngdome is not of this worlde. Yf my kyngdome were of this worlde, my mynisters wolde fight therefore, ſ I shulde not be deluyered vnto the Iewes. † But now is my kyngdome not from hence. Thē sayde Pilate vnto hī: Art thou a kynge thē? Iesus answered: Thou sayest it, for I am a kynge. For this cause was I borne, and came in to the worlde, that I shulde testifye the trueth. Who so euer is of the trueth, heareth my voyce. ### The xii. Chapter.

33 THEN Pilate toke Iesus, and scourged him. And the soudyers platted a crowne of thornes, and set it vpon his heade, and put a purple garment vpon him, and sayde: Hayle kynge of the Iewes. And they smote him on the face. Then wente Pilate forth agayne, and sayde vnto thē: Beholde, I brynge him forth vnto you, ſ ye maye knowe, ſ I fynde no faute in hī. So Iesus wente out, & ware a crowne of thorne and a purple robe. And he sayde vnto them: Beholde, the man. Whan the hye prestes & the mynisters sawe him, they cryed, & sayde: Crucifye, crucifye. Pilate sayde vnto thē: Take ye him, and crucifye him, for I fynde no gyltynesse in him. The Iewes answered him: We haue a lawe, & after oure lawe he ought to dye, & because he made him self the sonne of God. Whan Pilate herde that worde, he was the more afayed, and wente agayne in to the comon hall, and sayde vnto Iesus: Whence art thou? But Iesus gaue him no answer. Thē sayde Pilate vnto him: Speakest thou not vnto me? Knowest thou not, ſ I haue power to crucifye ſ, & haue power to lowse ſ? Iesus answered: Thou shuldest haue no power vpō me, yf it were not ¶ geuē the from aboue. Therefore he that deluyered me vnto ſ, hath the more synne. From that tyme forth Pilate sought meanes to lowse him. But the Iewes cryed, & sayde: Yf thou let him go, thou art not the Emperours frēde. For whosoener maketh himself kynge, is agaynst the Emperoure.

Whan Pilate herde ſ worde, he brought Iesus forth, & sat hī downe vpō ſ iudgmēt seate, in the place which is called the Pauenment, but in the Hebrue, Gabbatha. It was the daye of preparinge of the Easter aboute the sixte houre. And he sayde vnto the Iewes: Beholde youre kynge. But they cryed: Awaye with him, awaye with him, crucifye him. Pilate sayde vnto thē: Shal I crucifye youre kynge? The hye prestes answered: We haue no kynge but ſ Emperoure. Thē deluyered he him vnto them, to be crucified.

They toke Iesus, and led him awaye. And he bare his crosse, & wente out to the place called ſ place of deed mens skulles, which in Hebrue is named Golgatha, where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either syde one, but Iesus in the myddes.** Pilate wrote a superscription, and set vpon the crosse. And there was wrytten: Iesus of Nazareth, kynge of the Iewes. This superscription red many of the Iewes. For ſ place where Iesus was crucified, was nye vnto the cite. And it was wrytten in Hebrue, Greke & Latyn. Then sayde the hye prestes of the Iewes vnto Pilate: Wryte not kynge of the Iewes, but ſ he sayde, I am kynge of the Iewes. Pilate answered: What I haue wrytten, that haue I wrytten.

C The soudyers,<sup>a</sup> when they had crucified Iesus, toke his garmentes, and made foure partes, to euery soudyer one parte, and the cote also. As for the cote, it was vnsowed frō aboue, wrought throw and throw. Then sayde they one to another: Let vs not deuyde it, but cast lottes for it, who shal haue it, that the scripture might be fulfilled, which sayeth: *They haue parted my garmentes amonge them, and on my cote haue they cast lottes. This dyd the soudyers in dede.

There stode by the crosse of Iesus, his mother, and his mothers sister Mary, the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. Now whan Iesus sawe his mother, and the disciple stondynge by, whō he loued, he sayde vnto his mother: Woman, beholde, that is thy sonne. Then sayde he to the disciple: beholde, that is thy mother. And from that houre the disciple toke her vnto him.

After that, whan Iesus knewe that all was performed, †that the scripture might be fulfilled, he sayde: I am a thyrst. There stode a vessell full of vynerger. They fylled a sponge with vynerger and <sup>b</sup>wonde it aboute with ysope, and helde it to his mouth. Now whan Iesus had receaued the vynerger, he sayde: It is fynished, and bowed his heade, and gaue vp the goost.

D The Iewes then, for so moch as it was the daye of preparinge, that <sup>c</sup>ȝ bodies shulde not remayne vpon the crosse on the Sabbath, (for <sup>c</sup>ȝ same Sabbath daye was greate) besought Pilate, that their legges might be broken, and that they might be taken downe. Then came the soudyers, and brake the legges of the first, and of the other that was crucified with him. But whan they came to Iesus, and sawe that he was deed already, they brake not his legges, but one of the soudyers opened his syde with a speare. ‡And immediatly there wente out bloude and water.

And he that sawe it, bare recorde, and his recorde is true. And he knoweth that he sayeth true, that ye might beleue also. For this is done, <sup>c</sup>ȝ the scripture might be fulfilled: §Ye shal not breake a bone of him. And agayne, another scripture sayeth: ¶They shal se him, whom they haue persed.

After that, Ioseph of Arimathia, which was a disciple of Iesus (but secretly<sup>c</sup> for feare of the Iewes) besought Pilate, <sup>c</sup>ȝ he might take downe the body of Iesus. And Pilate gaue him lycence. There came also ¶ Nicodemus, (which afore came vnto Iesus by night) † brought of Myrre † Aloes mingled together, aboute an hūdreth poinde weight.

Thē toke they the body of Iesus, † wonde it with linnen clothes, and with the spyces, as the maner of the Iewes is to burye. And by <sup>c</sup>ȝ place where Iesus was crucified, there was a gardē, and in the garden a new sepulchre, where in was neuer man layed: there layed they Iesus, because of the preparinge daye of <sup>c</sup>ȝ Iewes, for the sepulchre was nye at hande.

The xx. Chapter.

VPON one daye of the Sabbath, came <sup>a</sup> Mary Magdalene early (whē it was yet darcke) vnto the sepulchre, † sawe that the stone was takē from the sepulchre. Then ranne she, † came to Symon Peter, and to <sup>c</sup>ȝ other disciple, **whom Iesus loued, and sayde vnto them: They haue takē awaye the LORDE out of the sepulchre, † we can not tell where they haue layed him. Thē wēte Peter forth and the other disciple, and came to the sepulchre. They rāne both together, and that other disciple out rāne Peter, and came first to the sepulchre, and loked in, and sawe the linnen clothes layed. But he wēte not in. Thē came Symon Peter after him, and wente in to the sepulchre, † sawe the lynnē clothes lye, and the napkyn that was bounde aboute Iesus heade, not layed with the linnen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by it self. Thē wēte i also <sup>c</sup>ȝ other disciple, which came first to <sup>c</sup>ȝ sepulchre, † he sawe † beleued: for as yet they knewe not <sup>c</sup>ȝ scriptures,<sup>d</sup> <sup>c</sup>ȝ it behoued hī to ryse agayne frō <sup>c</sup>ȝ deed. Thē wēte <sup>c</sup>ȝ disciples againe together.

As for Mary, she stode before <sup>c</sup>ȝ sepulchre † <sup>b</sup> wepte without. Now as she wepte, she loked in to the sepulchre, and sawe two angels in whyte garmentes syttinge, <sup>c</sup>ȝ one at the heade, † the other at <sup>c</sup>ȝ fete, where they had layed the body of Iesus. And they sayde vnto her: Womā, why wepest thou? She saide vnto thē: They haue taken awaye my LORDE, †

I wote not where they haue layed hī. And whan she had sayde ȳ, she turned her self backe, & sawe Iesus stondinge, & knewe not ȳ it was Iesus. Iesus sayde vnto her: Woman, why wepest thou? Whom sekest thou? She thought ȳ it had bene ȳ gardener, & sayde vnto him: Syr, yf thou hast borne him hence: then tell me where thou hast layed him? and I wil fetch hī. Iesus sayde vnto her: Mary. Then turned she her aboute, & sayde vnto him: Rabboni, ȳ is to saye: Master. Iesus sayde vnto her: Touche me not, for I am not yet ascended vnto my father. But go thou thy waye vnto my *brethrē & saye vnto thē: I ascēde vp vnto my father and youre father: to my God, & youre God. <sup>a</sup>Mary Magdalene came, & tolde ȳ disciples: <sup>b</sup>I haue sene the LORDE, & soch thinges hath he spoken vnto me.

<sup>c</sup> The same Sabbath at euē whā ȳ disciples were gathered together, and the dores were shut for feare of ȳ Iewes, came Iesus, and stode ī ȳ myddes, & sayde vnto thē: Peace be with you. And whā he had so sayde, he shewed thē his hādes & his syde. <sup>d</sup>Thē were ȳ disciples glad, ȳ they sawe ȳ LORDE. Thē sayde Iesus vnto thē agayne: Peace be with you. <sup>e</sup>Like as my father sent me, euē so sēde I you. And whan he had sayde ȳ, he brethed vpō thē, and sayde vnto thē: Receaue the holy goost. Whose synnes so euer ye remytte, they are remytted vnto thē: and whose synnes so euer ye retayne, they are retayned.

But Thomas one of the twolue$ which is called Didimus, was not with thē whā Iesus came. Thē sayde the other disciples vnto him: We haue sene the LORDE. But he sayde vnto thē: Excepte I se in his handes the prynte of the nailes, and put my hāde in to his syde, I wil not beleue.

<sup>f</sup> And after eight dayes agayne were his disciples with in, & Thomas with thē. Thē came Iesus (whā ȳ dores were shutt) & stode in the myddes, & sayde: Peace be with you. After ȳ sayde he vnto Thomas: Reach hither thy lynger, and se my handes, and reach hither thy hāde, and put it ī to my syde, & be not faithlesse, but beleue. Thomas answered, & sayde vnto him: My LORDE, and my God. Iesus sayde vnto him: Thomas, because thou hast sene me, thou hast beleued. Blessed are they, that se not, and yet beleue.

Many other tokēs dyd Iesus before his disciples, which are not wryttē in this boke. But these are wryttē, ȳ ye shulde beleue, ȳ Iesus is Christ the sonne of God, & that ye thorow beleue might haue life in his name.

The xxi. Chapter.

AFTER that shewed Iesus himself agayne <sup>a</sup> at the see of Tiberias. But on this wyse shewed he himself. There were together Symō Peter, & Thomas which is called Didimus, & Nathanael of Cana a cite of Galile, & the sonnes of Zebede, & two other of his disciples. Symon Peter sayde vnto thē: I go a fyshinge. They sayde vnto hī: We also wil go with the. They wēte out, & entred in to a shippe straight waye. And ȳ same night toke they nothinge. But whā it was now morow, Iesus stode on the shore, but his disciples knewe not ȳ it was Iesus. Iesus sayde vnto thē: Childrē, haue ye eny thinge to eate? They answered hī: No. He sayde vnto thē: <sup>b</sup>Cast out the nett on ȳ right syde of the shippe, & ye shal fynde. Thē they cast out, & coulde nomore drawe it for ȳ multitude of fishes. Thē sayde ȳ disciple <sup>c</sup> whō Iesus loued, vnto Peter: It is the LORDE.

<sup>d</sup> Whan Simon Peter herde that it was the LORDE, he gyrd his mantell aboute him (for he was naked) and sprange in to ȳ see. But other disciples came by shippe (for they were not farre frō londe, but as it were two hundreth cubytes) and they drew the net with the fiszhes. Now whan they were come to londe, they sawe coles layed, and fysh theron, and bred. Iesus sayde vnto thē: <sup>e</sup>Bringe hither of the fyshes, that ye haue taken now. Symon Peter stepped forth, and drew the nett to the londe, full of greate fyszhes, an hundreth and thre and fytie. And for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

<sup>f</sup> Iesus sayde vnto them: Come, and dyne. But none of the disciples durst axe him: Who art thou? For they knewe, that it was the LORDE. Then came Iesus, and toke ȳ bred, and gaue it thē: and the fyszhe likewise. This is now the thirde tyme that Iesus

Whā Peter sawe him, he sayde vnto Iesus: LORDE, but what shal he do? Iesus sayde vnto him: Yf I wil that he tary tyll I come, what is that to the? Folowe thou me. Then wente there out a sayenge amonge the brethren: This disciple dyeth not. And Iesus sayde not vnto him: He dyeth not, but: Yf I wil that he tary tyll I come, what is that to the? This is the same disciple, which testifyeth of these thinges, and wrote these thinges, and we knowe that his testimony is true.

There are many other thinges also that Iesus dyd, which, yf they shulde be wryttē euery one, I suppose the worlde shulde not contayne the bokes, that were to be wrytten.

The Actes of the Apostles.

The first Chapter.

THE first treatise (deare Theophilus) haue I made of all that Iesus beganne to do and to teache, vntyll  $\text{f}$  daye that he was taken vp, after that he (thorow the holy goost) had geuen commaundementes to the Apostles, whom he had chosen: to whō also he shewed himself  $\text{a}$ lyue after his passion, by many tokēs, and appeared vnto them fourtye dayes longe, and spake vnto them of the kyngdome of God.

And whan he had gathered them together, he commaunded them that they shulde not departe from Ierusalem, but to wayte for the promyse of the father, wherof (sayde he) ye haue herde  $\text{b}$  of me:  $\text{c}$  For Ihon baptysed with water, but ye shalbe baptysed with  $\text{f}$  holy goost,  $\text{d}$  that within this few dayes.

Now whan they were come together, they axed him, and sayde: LORDE, shalt thou at this tyme set vp the kyngdome of Israel agayne? But he sayde vnto them: It belongeth not vnto you to knowe the  $\text{e}$  tymes or seasons, which the father hath kepte in his awne power, but ye shal receaue the power of  $\text{f}$  holy goost,  $\text{f}$  which shal come vpon you, and ye shalbe my witnesses at Ierusalem, and in all Iewrye and Samaria, and vnto the ende of the earth.

3 And whan he had spoken these thinges, whyle they behelde, he was taken vp, and a  $\text{g}$  cloude receaued him from their sight. And whyle they loked after him, as he wente in to heauen, beholde, there stode by them two men in whyte garmentes, which also sayde: Ye men of Galile, Why stonde ye gasyngye vp in to heauen? This Iesus which is takē vp from you in to heauen  $\text{h}$  shal come euen so as ye haue sene him go in to heauen.

Then turned they agayne from  $\text{f}$  mount that is called Oliuete, which is nye to Ierusalem, and hath a Sabbath dayes iourney. And whan they came in, they wente vp in to a parler, where abode  $\text{i}$  Peter and Iames, Ihon and Andrew, Philippe and Thomas, Bartilmew and Mathew, Iames the sonne of Alpheus, and Simon Zelotes, and Iudas the sonne of Iames. These all contynued with one acorde in prayer and supplicacion, with the wemen and Mary the mother of Iesu and with his brethren

And in those dayes Peter stode vp in the myddes amonge the disciples, and sayde: C (The company of the names together, was aboute an hundreth and twentye.) Ye men and brethren, this scripture must nedes be fulfilled, which  $\text{j}$  holy goost by the mouth of Dauid spake before of Iudas, which was a gyde of the that toke Iesus:  $\text{k}$  for he was nombred with vs, and had opteyned the felashippe of this mynistracion. This same trulye possessed the  $\text{l}$  felde for the rewarde of vnrighteousnes, and hanged himself, and brast a sunder in the myddes, and all his bowels guszhed out. And it is knowne vnto all the that dwell at Ierusalem, in so moch that the same felde is called in their mother tonge Acheldema, that is to saye, the bloude felde.

For it is wrytten in the boke of psalmes: D His habitation be voyde, and noman be dwellinge therin. And:  $\text{m}$  His bisshoprike another take. Wherefore amonge these men

And they appoynted two (Ioseph<sup>a</sup> called Barsabas, whose syrname was Iustus, and Mathias.) makinge their prayer and sayenge: Thou LORDE, <sup>b</sup>which knowest the hertes of all men, shewe whether of these two thou hast chosen, that the one maye take the rowme of this mynistracion and Apostelshippe, from the which Iudas by transgression fell, that he might go awaye in to his awne place. And they gaue forth the lottes ouer them, and the lot fell vpon Mathias. And he was counted with the cleuen Apostles.

The ij. Chapter.

AND whan the * Whit sondaye was fulfilled, they were all with one acorde together in one place. And sodenly there came a sounde from heauen, as it had bene the cōmyng of a mightie wynde, and it fylled the whole house where they sat. And there appeared vnto them clouen tungen, like as they had bene of fyre. And he sat vpon ech one of them, and they were all fylled with the holy goost. † And they beganne to preach with other tungen, euen as the sprete gaue them vtteraunce.

There were dwellinge at Ierusalem Iewes, men that feared God, out of euery nacion that is vnder heauen. Now whan this voyce came to passe, the multitude came together, and were astōnyed: For euery one herde, that they spake with his awne tunge. They wondred all and marueyled, and sayde amonge them selues: Beholde, are not all these which speake, of Galile? How heare we thē euery one his awne tunge, wherin we were borne? Parthians and Medes, and Elamites, and we that dwell in Mesopotamia, and in Iewry and Capadocia, Pontus, and Asia, Phrigia and Pamphilia, Egipte, and in the partes of Lybia by Cyren, and straungers of Rome, Iewes and ‡ Proselytes, Cretes and Arabians: we heare them speake with oure awne tungen the greate workes of God.

They were all amased, and wondred, and sayde one to another: What wil this be? But other mocked them, and sayde: They are full of swete wyne. Then stode Peter vp with the eleuen, and lift vp his voyce, and sayde vnto them:

Ye men of Iewry, and all ye that dwell at Ierusalem, be this knowne vnto you, and let my wordes entre in at youre eares. For these are not dronken, as ye suppose, for it is yet but the thirde houre of ȝ daye: but this is it, that was spokē before by the prophet Ioel: And it shal come to passe in the last dayes,<sup>c</sup> sayeth God, I will poure out of my sprete vpon all flesh, and youre sonnes and youre doughters shal prophecy, and youre yonge men<sup>d</sup> shal se visions <sup>e</sup> and youre olde men shall dreame dreames, and on my seruantes and on my handmaydens wyll I poure out of my sprete in those dayes, <sup>f</sup> they shal prophecy.

And I wil shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens on the earth beneth,<sup>g</sup> bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The Sonne shalbe turned in to darknesse, and the Moone in to bloude, before that greate and notable daye of the LORDE come. And it shal come to passe, <sup>h</sup> Who so euer shal call vpō the name of the LORDE, shalbe saued.

Ye men of Israel, heare these wordes: Iesus of Nazareth, ȝ man approued of God amonge you with miracles, and wonders and tokens, which God dyd by him in the myddes amonge you, as ye youre selues knowe also, <sup>i</sup> him (after that he was delyuered by the determinate councell and foreknowledge of God) haue ye taken by the handes of vnrighteous personnes, and crucified him, <sup>k</sup> and slayne him, whō God hath raysed vp,<sup>l</sup> and lowsed the sorowes of death, for so much as it was vnpossible that he shulde be holden of it. For Dauid speaketh of him: <sup>m</sup> A fore honde haue I set the LORDE allwayes before me, for he is on my right hōde, that I shulde not be moued. Therefore dyd my hert reioyse, and my tunge was glad: For my flesh also shal rest in hope. For thou shalt not leaue my soule in hell, nether shalt thou suffer thy Holy to se corrupcion. Thou hast shewed me the wayes of life, thou shalt make me full of ioye with thy countenaunce.

Ye men and brethren, let me frely speake vnto you of the Patryarke Dauid: For he is deed and buried,<sup>a</sup> and his sepulchre is with vs vnto this daye. Wherefore now seinge y<sup>e</sup> he was a prophet, and knewe that God had promised him with an ooth, that the frute of his loynes shulde syt on his seate,<sup>b</sup> he sawe it before, and spake of the resurrection of Christ: for his soule was not left in hell, nether hath his flesh sene corrupcion. This Iesus hath God raysed vp,<sup>c</sup> wherof we all are witnesses.

Seynge now that he by the right hande of God * is exalted, and hath receaued of y<sup>e</sup> father y<sup>e</sup> promyse of the holy goost, he hath shed forth this, that ye se and heare. For Dauid is not ascended in to heauen, but he sayde: The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: Syt thou on my righte hande,<sup>d</sup> vntyll I make thine enemies thy fote stowe. So therefore let allthe house of Israel knowe for a suertye, y<sup>e</sup> God hath made this same Iesus (whom ye haue crucified) LORDE and Christ.

¶ Whan they herde this, their hert pricked them, and they sayde vnto Peter and to the other Apostles: Ye men and brethre,<sup>e</sup> What shal we do? Peter sayde onto them: Amēde youre selues, and let euery one of you be baptysed in the name of Iesus Christ, for the remysion of synnes, and ye shal receaue the gifte of the holy goost. For this promyse was made vnto you and youre children, and to all that are farre of, whō so euer the LORDE oure God shal call. And with many other wordes bare he witnesse, and exhorted them, and sayde: Sauē youre selues from this vntowarde generacion. They that gladly receaued his preachinge, were baptysed, and the same daye there were added vnto them aboute thre thousande soules.

They continued in the Apostles doctryne, and in the felashippe, and in breakynge of bred, and in prayer. And feare came vpon euery soule, and many wonders and tokens were done by y<sup>e</sup> Apostles. But all they that beleued, were together,<sup>f</sup> and had all thinges commen. They solde their goodes and possessions, and parted them out amonge all, acordinge as euery mā had nede. And they continued daylie with one acorde in the tēple, and y<sup>e</sup> brake bred in euery house: they toke their meate with ioye and synglenesse of hert, praysinge God, and had fauoure with all y<sup>e</sup> people. And the LORDE added to the congregacion daylie soch as shulde be sauēd.

The iij. Chapter.

PETER and Ihon wente vp together in to the temple aboute the nyenth houre to praye. And there was a certayne man halt from his mothers wombe, whom they brought and layed daylie at the gate of the tēple, which is called, the Bewtyfull, that he might axe almesse of them that wēte in to the temple. Now whan he sawe Peter and Ihon, that they wolde in to the temple, he desyred to receaue an almesse. Peter behelde him with Ihon, and sayde: Loke on vs. And he gaue hede vnto them, hopynge to receaue some thinge of them. Howbeit Peter saide: Syluer and golde haue I none: but soch as I haue geue I the. ¶ In the name of Iesus Christ of Nazareth ryse vp and walke. And he toke him by the righte hande and lifte him vp. Immediately his legges and ancle bones were made strōge, and he sprange, stode and walked, and entred with them in to the tēple, walkynge, and leapinge and praysinge God.

And all the people sawe him walke and prayse God. And they knewe him, y<sup>e</sup> it was he, which sat for almesse at the bewtyfull gate of the temple. And they were fylled with wondrynge, and were astonnyed at that, which had happened vnto hī. But as this halt which was healed helde him to Peter and Ihon, all the people ranne vnto them in to the t<sup>e</sup> porche, which is called Salomōs, and wondred.

Whan Peter sawe that, he answered vnto the people: Ye men of Israel, why maruaile ye at this, or why loke ye so at vs, as though we by oure awne power or deserynge, had made this man to walke? The God of Abraham and of Isaac, and of Iacob, y<sup>e</sup> God of oure fathers hath glorified his childe Iesus,<sup>g</sup> whom ye deluyered and denyed in the presence of Pilate, whan he had iudged him to be lowsed. But ye denyed the holy and iust, and desyred the murthurer to be geuen you, but ye slewe the prynce of life, whom God hath raysed from the deed, of the which we Now deare brethrē, I knowe that ye haue done it \* thorow ignoraunce, as dyd also youre rulers. But God, which by the mouth of all his prophetes hath shewed before,  $\text{f}$  his Christ shulde suffre, hath so fulfilled it. Do penance now therfore and turne you, that youre synnes maye be-done awaye, when the tyme of refreshinge shal come before the presence of the LORDE, and whan he shal sende him, which now before is preached vnto you, euen Iesus Christ: which must receaue heauen vntyll the tyme that all thinges, which God hath spoken by the mouth of his holy prophetes sence  $\text{f}$  worlde beganne, be restored agayne.

For Moses sayde vnto  $\text{f}$  fathers: A prophet shal the LORDE youre God rayse vp vnto you,<sup>a</sup> euen from amonge youre brethren, like vnto me: him shal ye heare, in all that he shal saye vnto you. And it shal come to passe, what soule soeuer shal not heare the same prophet, shal be destroyed from amonge the people. ### The iij. Chapter.

BUT as they spake to  $\text{f}$  people, there came vnto thē the prestes and the rulers of the tēple, and the Saduces, whō it greued  $\text{f}$  they taught the people, and preached in Iesu  $\text{f}$  resurreccion frō the deed and they layed handes vpon them, and put thē in holde tyll the morow: for it was now euentide. Howbeit many of thē which herde the worde, beleued, and the nombre of  $\text{f}$  men was aboute fyue thousande.

And it chaunced on  $\text{f}$  morow, that their rulers and Elders and scribes (as Annas  $\text{f}$ hye prest and Caiphas, and Ihon and Alexander, and as many as were of the hye prestes kynred) gathered them selues together at Ierusalem, and set them before them, and axed them: By what auctorite, Or in what name haue ye done this?

Peter full of the holy goost, sayde vnto them: Ye rulers of the people, and ye Elders of Israel, Yf we this daye be examyned concernynge this good dede vpon the sicke mā, by what meanes he is made whole, be it knowne then vnto you and to all the people of Israel, that in  $\text{f}$  name of Iesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whō God hath raysed vp from the deed, stōdeth this man here before you whole. <sup>d</sup> This is the stone refused of you buylders, which is become the heade corner stone, nether is there saluacion in eny other:  $\text{f}$  Ner yet also is there geuē vnto mē eny other name, wherein we must be saued.

They sawe the boldnesse of Peter and Ihon and marueyled, for they were sure  $\text{f}$  they were vnlearned men and laye people. And they knewe thē also, that they were with Iesu. As for the man  $\text{f}$  was made whole, they sawe hī stōdinge by thē, and coulde not saye agaynst it. Then cōmaunded they thē to stōde asyde out of  $\text{f}$  counsell, and cōmened amonge thē selues, and saide: // What shal we do to these mē? for a manifest token is done by them, and is openly knowne vnto thē that dwell at Ierusalem, and we can not denye it. But that it breake out no farther amonge the people, let vs threatē them earnestly, that hence forth they speake of this name vnto noman.

And they called them, and cōmaunded thē, that in eny wyse they shulde not speake ner teache in the name of Iesu. But Peter and Ihon answered, and sayde vnto thē: Iudge ye youre selues, whether it be right before God, that we shulde be more obedient vnto you, then vnto God. We can not chose, but speake that we haue sene and herde. But they threatened them, and let them go, and founde nothinge how to punyshe them because of  $\text{f}$  people: for they all praysed God because of that, <sup>e</sup> which was done. For the man, vpon whom this token of health was done, was aboute fourtye yeare olde.

And whan they were let go, they came to their folowes, and tolde them what  $\text{f}$  hye prestes and Elders sayde vnto them. Whā they herde that, they lifte vp their voyce with one acorde vnto God, and sayde: LORDE, thou that art the God which made heauen and earth, and the see, and all that therein is thou that by the mouth of Dauid thy seruāūt hast sayde: Why do the Heythē rage? and  $\text{f}$  people ymagin vayne thinges? The kynges of the earth stonde vp,<sup>a</sup> and the prynces haue gathered them selues together agaynst  $\text{f}$  LORDE, and agaynst his Christ. Of a trueth agaynst thy holy childe Iesus, whom thou hast anoynted, both Herode  $\text{t}$  Pontius Pilate with the Heythen and people of Israel, haue gathered thē selues together, to do what soeuer thy hande and thy counsell determyned before to be done. And now LORDE, beholde their threatenynge, and graunte vnto thy seruantes with all stedfast boldnesse to speake thy worde: and stretch out thine hande, that healinge and tokēs and wonders maye be done by the name of thy holy childe Iesus.

B And whā they had prayed, the place moued where they were gathered together,  $\text{t}$  they were all fylled with  $\text{f}$  holy goost,  $\text{t}$  spake the worde of God boldly. The multitude of them that beleued, were of one hert and of one soule. Also none of them sayde of his goodes, that they were his awne, but had all thinges cōmen. And with greate power gaue the Apostles witness of the resurrection of the LORDE Iesu, and greate grace was with them all. Nether was there eny amonge them that lacked. For as many as were possessers of londes or houses, solde thē and brought  $\text{f}$  money of the goodes that were solde, and layed it at the Apostles fete. And distribution was made vnto euery mā, acordinge as he had nede.

Ioses which was also called of  $\text{f}$  Apostles, Barnabas (that is to saye, the sonne of consolacion) a Leuite, of the countre of Cypers, had londe, and solde it,  $\text{t}$  brought the money, and layed it at the Apostles fete.

The v. Chapter.

BUT a certayne man named Ananias with Saphira his wife, solde his possession, and kepte awaye parte of the money (his wife knowinge of it) and broughte one parte, $\text{t}$  layed it at the Apostles fete. But Peter sayde: Ananias, Wherefore hath Sathan fylled thine hert, that thou shuldest lye vnto the holy goost, and withdrawe awaye parte of the money of the lyuelod? Mightest thou not haue kepte it, whan thou haddest it? And whan it was solde, the money was also in thy power: Why hast thou then concealed this thinge in thine hert? Thou hast not lyed vnto mē, but vnto God. Whan Ananias herde these wordes, he fell downe,  $\text{t}$  gaue vp the goost. And there came a greate feare vpon all thē that herde of this. The yonge men rose vp, and put him asyde, and caried him out, and buried him.

And it fortunated as it were aboute  $\text{f}$  space of thre houres after, his wife came in, and knewe not what was done. But Peter answered vnto her. Tell me, solde ye the londe for somoch? She sayde: Yee, for so moch. Peter sayde vnto her: Why haue ye agreed together, to tempte the sprete of the LORDE? Beholde, the fete of thē which haue buried thy huszbande, are at the dore,  $\text{t}$  shal carye the out. And immediatly she fell downe at his fete, and gaue vp the goost. Then came in the yonge men, and founde her deed, and caried her out, and buried her by hir huszbande. And there came a greate feare ouer the whole congregacion, and ouer all thē that herde it.

Many tokens and wonders were done amonge the people by the hādes of the Apostles (and they were all together with one acorde in \* Salomons porche: but of other there durst no man ioynē him self vnto thē, neuer-theles the people helde moch of them. The multitude of the men and wemen that beleued in the LORDE, grewe more and more) In so moch that they brought out the sycke in to the stretes, and layed them vpon beddes and barowes, that at the leest waye the shadowe of Peter (whan he came by) might ouer-shadowe some of thē. There came many also out of  $\text{f}$  cities rounde aboute vnto Ierusalem, and brought the sicke and thē that were vexed with vnclene spretes, and they were healed euery one.

But the hye prest rose vp, and all they  $\text{f}$  C were with him, <sup>c</sup> which is the secte of the Saduces, and were full of indignacion,  $\text{t}$  layed handes on the Apostles, and put them in the comon preson. But the angell of  $\text{f}$  LORDE<sup>c</sup> by night opened the preson dores, and brought thē out, and sayde: Go youre waye and steppe vp, and speake in the temple to the people all the wordes of this life. Whan they herde that, they entred in to the temple early in the mornynge: and taught.

But the hye prest came, and they ſ were with him, and called the counsell together, ⁊ all ſ Elders of the children of Israel, and sent to the preson to fet them. The mynisters came and founde them not in the preson, came agayne, and tolde, and sayde: The preson founde we shut with all diligence, and the keepers standinge without before the dores: but whā we had opened, we founde noman therin. Whan the hye prest, and the rulers of the temple and the other hye prestes herde these wordes, they doubted of them, wher vnto this wolde growe.

D Then came there one, which tolde them: Beholde, the men that ye put in preson, are in the temple, standinge and teachinge the people. Then wēte ſ rulers with their mynisters, and fetched them without violence: *for they feared the people, lest they shulde haue bene stoned. And whan they had brought them, they set thē before the counsell. And the hye prest axed them, and sayde: Dyd not we† cōmaunde you strately, that ye shulde not teache in this name. And beholde, ye haue fylled Ierusalem with youre doctryne,‡ and ye intēde to brynge this mans bloude vpon vs.

But Peter and the Apostles answered, and sayde: We ought more to obeye God then men. The God of oure fathers hath rayseed vp Iesus, whō ye slewe, and hanged on tre. Him hath the righte hande of God exalted, to be a prynce and Sanioure, to geue repentance and forgeuenesse of synes vnto Israel. And we are his recordes of these wordes, and the holy goost, whō God hath geuen vnto thē that obeye him. Whā they herde that, it wente thorow the hertes of them, and they thoughte to slaye them.

E Then stode there vp in ſ counsell a pharyse,§ named Gamaliel, a scribe, had in greate reputacion before all ſ people, and bad put the Apostles asyde a lide, and sayde vnto them: Ye men of Israel, take hede to youre selues, what ye do as touchinge these men.

Before these dayes rose vp one Theudas, boasting himself. (And there cleued vnto him a nōbre of mē, aboute a foure hundreth) which was slayne, and all they ſ enclyned vnto him, were scatred abroad, and brought to naught. ¶ After this stode vp Iudas of Galile in ſ dayes of trybute, and drewe awaye moch people after him, ⁊ he also perished, ⁊ all they that enclyned vnto him, are scatred abroad. And now I saye vnto you: refrayne youre selues frō these men, and let thē go. ¶ Yf this counsell or worke be of mē, it wil come to naught: but yf it be of God, ye are not able to destroye it, lest ye be founde to be the men, that wil stryue agaynst God. Then they agreed vnto him, and called the Apostles, and bet them, and commaunded them, that they shulde speake nothinge in the name of Iesu, and let them go.

But they departed from the presence of the counsell, reioysinge,¶ that they were worthy to suffre rebuke for his names sake. And daylie in the temple and in euery house they ceassed not, to teache and to preache the Gospell of Iesus Christ.

The vi. Chapter.

IN those dayes whan the nombre of the disciples increased, there arose a grudge amonge the Grekes agaynst the Hebrues, because their wyddowes were not loked vpon in the daylie handreachinge. Then the twelue called the multitude of the disciples together, and sayde: It is not mete that we shulde leaue the worde of God, and to serue at the tables. Wherefore brethren, loke out amonge you seuē men, § that are of honeste reporte, and full of the holy goost and wysdome, whom we maye appoynte to this nedefull busynes. But we wil geue oure selues vnto prayer, and to the mynistracion of the worde of God. And the sayenge pleased the whole multitude. And they chose Steuen, a man full of fayth and of the holy goost, and Philippe, and Procorus, and Nicanor, and Thimon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas the Proselite of Antioche. ¶ These they set before ſ Apostles, and they prayed, and layed their handes vpon them. And the worde of God increased, and the nombre of the disciples multiplied greatly at Ierusalem.

And there were many prestes also obedient vnto the fayth.

Steuen full of faith and power, dyd wonders and greate tokens amonge the people. And they moued the people, and the Elders and the scribes, and came vpon him, and caught him, and brought him before the councell, and set false witnesses there, which sayde: This man ceaseth not to speake blasphemous wordes agaynst this holy place and the lawe. For we herde him saye: Iesus of Nazareth shall destroye this place, and chaunge the ordinaunces which Moses gaue vs. And all they that sat in the councell, looked vpon him and sawe his face as the face of an angell.}$

The viij. Chapter.

THEN sayde the hye prest: Is it euē so? He sayde: Deare brethren and fathers, herken to, The God of glorye appeared vnto oure father Abrahā, whyle he was yet in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran, and sayde vnto him: Get  $\text{the } \text{out of thy couētre, and frō thy kynred, and come in to a londe which I wil shewe the. The wente he out of the lande of the Caldees, and dwelt in Haran. And from thēce, whan his father was deed, he brought him ouer in to this londe (where ye dwell now) and gaue him no enheritaūce therin, no not the bredth of a fote: and promysed him, that he wolde geue it him to possesse, and to his sēde after him, whan as yet he had no childe.}$

$\text{But thus sayde God vnto him: Thy sēde shalbe a straunger in a straunge londe, and they shal make bonde men of them, and in-treate the euell foure hundreth yeares: and the people whom they shal serue, wil I iudge, sayde God. And after that shal they go forth, and serue me in this place. And he}$

gaue him the couenaūt of circūcisiō. And he begat Isaac, and circūcised him the eight daye. And Isaac begat Iacob: and Iacob begat the twolue Patriarkes.

And the Patriarkes had indignacion at Ioseph, and solde hi in to Egipte. And God was with him, and delyuered him out of all his troubles, and gaue him fauoure and wysdome: the sight of Pharaō kyng of Egipte which made him prynce ouer Egipte and ouer all his house.

But there came a deth ouer all the londe of Egipte and Canaan, and a greate trouble, and oure fathers founde no sustenance. But Iacob herde that there was corne in Egipte, and sent oure fathers out the first tyme. And at the seconde tyme was Ioseph knowne of his brethren, and Iosephs kynred was made knowne vnto Pharaō. But Ioseph sent out, and caused his father and all his kynred to be broughte, euē thre score and fyftene soules. And Iacob wente downe in to Egipte, and dyed, both he and oure fathers: and were brought ouer vnto Sichē, and layed in the sepulchre, that Abraham boughte for money of the children of Hemor at Sichem.

Now whā the tyme of the promes due nye (which God had sworne vnto Abrahā) the people grewe and multiplied in Egipte, tyll there rose another kyng, which knewe not of Ioseph. The same dealede suttely with oure kynred, and intreated oure fathers euell and made them to cast out the yonge children, that they shulde not remaine alyue.

At the same tyme was Moses borne, and was a proper childe before God, and was norished thre monethes in his fathers house. But whan he was cast out, Pharaos daughter toke him vp, and norished him vp for hir awne sonne. And Moses was learned in all maner wysdome of the Egipcians, and was mightie in dedes and wordes.

But whan he was fourtye yeare olde, it came in to his mynde to vyset his brethren the children of Israel. And whan he sawe one of them suffre wrōge, he helped him, and delyuered him, that had the harme done vnto him, and slewe the Egipcian. But he thoughte that his brethren shulde haue vnderstonde, how that God by his hande shulde saue thē, howbeit they vnderstode it not.

¶ And on the nexte daye he shewed himself vnto them as they stroue together, and wolde haue set them at one agayne, and sayde: Syrs, ye are brethren, why hurte ye one another? But he that dyd his neighbour wronge, thrust him awaye, and sayde: "Who made the a ruler and iudge ouer vs? Wilt thou slaye me also, as thou slewest the Egipcian yesterdaye? But Moses fled at that sayenge, and was a straunger in the lande of Madian, where he begat two sonnes.

"And after fourtye yeaes, the angell of f LORDE appeared vnto him vpon mount Sina, in a flamme of fyre in a buszhe. Whā Moses sawe it, he wondred at the sighte. But as he drue nye to beholde, f voyce of f LORDE came vnto him: I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. Howbeit Moses trēbled, and durst not beholde. But f LORDE sayde vnto hī: *Put of thy shues from thy fete, for f place where thou stondest, is an holy grounde. I haue well sene the trouble of my people in Egipte, and haue herde their gronyng, and am come downe to delyuer them. And now come, I wil sende the in to Egipte.

¶ This Moses, whom they refused, and sayde: "Who made f a ruler and iudge ouer vs? him had God sent to be a ruler & delyuerer by the hande of the angell, that appeared vnto him in the buszhe. The same broughte them out, and dyd wonders and tokens in Egipte, and in the reed see, and in f wyldernes fourtye yeaes. This is that Moses, which sayde vnto the children of Israel: "A prophet shal the LORDE youre God rayse vp vnto you euen from amonge youre brethren, like vnto me. Him shal ye heare. This is he," that was in the congregacion in the wyldernes with the angell, which talked with him, vpō mount Sina, and with oure fathers. This man receaued the worde of life to geue vnto vs, vnto whom oure fathers wolde not be obediēt, but thrust him frō thē, and in their hertes turned backe agayne in to Egipte, and sayde vnto Aaron: f Make vs goddes to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this Moses, f broughte vs out of the lande of Egipte. And they made a calfe at the same tyme, and offred sacrifice vnto the ymage, and reioysed in the workes of their awne handes.

But God turned himselfe, & †gaue them vp, so that they worshipped the hooste of heauē, as it is wyrtten in the boke of the prophetes: †O ye house of Israel, gaue ye me sacrifices and catel those fortye yeaes in the wyldernes? And ye toke vnto you f tabernacle of Moloch, and the starre of youre god Remphan, ymagines which ye youre selues made to worships thē. And I wil cast you out beyonde Babilon.

Oure fathers had the tabernacle of witnessse in f wyldernes, like as he appoynted them, f whan he spake vnto Moses, that he shulde make it (acordinge to the patrone, f he had sene.) which oure fathers also receaued, and brought it with Iosue in to the londe that the Heythē had in possession, whom God droue out before the face of oure fathers, vntyll the tyme of Dauid, which founde fauoure with God, and desyred that he might fynde a tabernacle for the God of Iacob.

But Salomon buylte hī an house. ¶ Howbeit f Hyst of all dwellth not in temples that are made with handes: As he sayeth by the prophete: "Heauē is my seate, and the earth is my fote stole. The viij. Chapter.

SAUL had pleasure in his death. At y same tyme there was a greate persecucion ouer the congregacion at Ierusalē. And they were all scatered abroad in the regions of Iewrye ⁊ Samaria, excepte the Apostles. As for Steuen, men y feared God dressed him, and made greate lamentacion ouer him. † But Saul made hauocke of the congregacion, entred in to euery house, and drue out men ⁊ wemen, ⁊ delyuered thē to preson. They now y were scatered abroad wēte aboute ⁊ preached the worde. Thē came Philippe in to a cite of Samaria, and preached Christ vnto them. And the people gaue hede with one acorde vnto y things that Philip spake, hearinge him, and seynge the tokēs that he dyd. For the vnclane spretes cryed loude, and departed out of many y were possessed. And many that were sick of the palsie and lame, were healed. And there was greate ioye in the same cite.

But afore there was in y same cite a certayne mā, called Simon, which vsed witche craft, and bewitched y people of Samaria, sayenge, that he was a man which coulde do greate things. And they all regarded him from the leest vnto y greatest, ⁊ sayde: This is the power of God which is greate. But they regarded him, because that of longe tyme he had bewitched them with his sorcery. Howbeit whan they beleued Philips preachinge of y kyngdome of God, and of the name of Iesu Christ, they were baptysed both mē ⁊ wemē. Then Symon himself beleued also, and was baptysed, and cleued vnto Philippe. And whā he sawe the dedes and tokens that were done, he wondred.

Whan the Apostles which were at Ierusalem, herde, that Samaria had receaued y worde of God, they sent vnto thē Peter and Ihon. Which, whā they were come, prayed for thē, y they might receaue the holy goost. For as yet he was come vpon none of them but they were baptysed onely in the name of Christ Iesu. † Then layed they their hādes on them, and they receaued the holy goost.

But whan Simon sawe, that by the layenge on of the Apostles hādes y holy goost was geuen, he offred thē money, and sayde: Geue me also this power, that, on whomsoeuer I put the hōdes, he maye receaue the holy goost. Howbeit Peter sayde vnto him: Perishe thou with thy money, § because thou thinkest that y gifte of God maye be optayned with money. Thou shalt haue nether parte ner felashipe in this worde, for thy hert is not righte before God. Repente therefore of this thy wickednesse, and praye vnto God, yf happily the thought of thy hert maye be forgeuē y. For I se, y thou art full of bytter gall, and wrapped in with vnrighteousnesse.

Then answered Simon, ⁊ sayde: ¶ Praye ye vnto the LORDE for me, y none of these things wherof ye haue spoken, come vpon me. And they, whā they had testified and spokē the worde of the LORDE, turned agayne to Ierusalem, and preached the Gospel in many townes of the Samaritanes.

But the angell of the LORDE spake vnto Philippe, and sayde: Aryse, ⁊ go towarde the South, vnto the waye that goeth downe from Ierusalem vnto Gaza, which is deserte. And he rose, and wente on. And beholde, a mā of the Morians lōde (a chamberlayne and of auctorite with Candace y quene of the londe of the Morians) which had the rule of all hir treasuries, y same came to Ierusalē to worshipec. And returned home agayne, and satt vpon his charet, and red the prophet Esay.

The sprete sayde vnto Philippe: Go neare, and ioyne thy selfe to yonder charet. Thē ranne Philippe vnto him, and herde him rede the prophet Esay, and sayde: Vnderstōdest thou what thou readest? He sayde: How can I, excepte some mā enfourme me?

D And he desyred Philippe, that he wolde come vp, and syt with him. The tenoure of the scripture which he red, was this: *He was led as a shepe to be slayne, and as a lambe voycellesse before his sherer, so opened he not his mouth. In his humblennesse is his iudgment exalted. Who shal declare his generacion? for his life is taken awaye from the earth. Then answered the chamberlayne vnto Philippe, and sayde: I praye the, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himselfe, or of some other man?

Philippe opened his mouth, and beganne at this scripture, and preached him the Gospell of Iesus. And as they wete on their waye, they came to a water. And the chamberlayne sayde: Beholde, here is water, what hyndereth me to be baptysed? Philippe sayde: Yf thou beleue from thy whole herte, thou mayest. He answered, and sayde: I beleue, that Iesus Christ is the sonne of God. And he commaunded to holde styll the charet, and they wente downe in to the water, both Philippe and the chamberlayne. And he baptysed him. But when they were come vp out of the water, the sprete of the LORDE toke Philippe awaye. And the Chamberlayne sawe him nomore. But he wente on his waye reioysinge. As for Philippe, he was founde at Aszdod, and walked aboute, and preached the Gospell vnto all the cities, tyll he came to Cesarea.

The ix. Chaptr.

A SAUL was yet breathing out threatnynges and slaughter<sup>a</sup> agaynst the disciples of the LORDE. And wente vnto  $\text{f}$  hye preste, and desyred of him letters to Damascon vnto the synagoges, that yf he foude eny of this waye (whether they were men or wemen) he mighte brynge thē bounde vnto Ierusalem. And as he was goinge on his journey, it fortuned, that he came nye vnto Damasco, and sodenly there shyned rounde aboute hī a light frō heauē, and he fell to the earth, and herde a voyce, which sayde vnto him: Saul Saul †why persecutest thou me? He sayde: LORDE, who art thou? The LORDE sayde: I am Iesus, whō thou persecutest. It shalbe harde for  $\text{f}$  to kycke agaynst the prycke. And he both tremblinge and as-tonnyed, sayde: LORDE †what wilt thou that I shal do? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Aryse, and go in to the cite, there shal it be tolde the what thou shalt do.

As for  $\text{f}$  mē that ionrneyed with him, they stode and were amased: for they herde a voyce, but sawe noman. Saul rose from the earth, and when he had opened his eyes, he sawe noman. Nenertheles they toke him by the honde, & broughte him to Damasco: and he was three dayes without sighte, and nether ate ner dranke. At Damascon there was a disciple named Ananias, and vnto him sayde the LORDE in a vision: Ananias. And he sayde: beholde, here am I LORDE. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Aryse, and go in to the strete which is called straight, and axe in the house of Iuda after one called Saul of  $\text{f}$  Tharsis: for beholde, he prayeth, & hath sene in a vision a mā named Ananias cōmynge vnto him, & layenge the hāde vpō him, that he mighte receaue his sighte.

Ananias answered: LORDE, I haue herde by many of this man, how moch euell he hath done to thy sayntes at Ierusalē. And here hath he auctorite of the hye prestes, to bynde all those  $\text{f}$  call vpon thy name. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, † for this man is a chosen vessell vnto me, that he maye beare my name before the Heythen, and before kynges, and before the children of Israel. I wil shewe him, how greate thinges he must suffre for my names sake.

And Ananias wente his waye, and came in to the house,<sup>a</sup> and layed the handes vpon him, and sayde: Brother Saul, the LORDE which appeared vnto  $\text{f}$  in the waye as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receaue thy sight, and be fylled with the holy goost. And immediatly there fell from his eyes as it had bene scales, and he receaued his sighte, and rose, and was baptysed, and toke meate, and was comforted.

Then was Saul a certayne dayes with the disciples that were at Damascon. And straight waye he preached Christ in the synagoges, how that he was  $\text{f}$  sonne of God. But all they that herde him, were amased, and sayde: Is not this he, which at Ierusalem spoyled all those that called on his name? and came hither to the intent that he shulde brynge

D And after many dayes the Iewes helde a councell together to kyll him. But it was tolde Saul, that they layed wayte for him. And they wayted at f̄ gates daye & night, that they might kyll him. * Then the disciples toke him by nighte, & put him thorow the wall, and let him downe in a basket.

† But whan Saul came to Ierusalem, he assayed to ioyn himself to f̄ disciples. And they were all afrayed of him, and beleued not, f̄ he was a disciple. Neuertheles Barnabas toke him, and broughte him to the Apostles, and tolde them how he had sene the LORDE in the waye, and how he spake to him, & how he had done boldly at Damascon in the name of Iesu. And he was with them, and wente out and in at Ierusalē, and quyte him selfe boldly in f̄ name of f̄ LORDE Iesu. He spake also, and disputed with f̄ Grekes. But they wēte aboute to slaye him. Whan the brethren knewe f̄, † they brought him to Cesarea, and sent him forth to Tharsis. So the congregacions had rest thorow out all Iewry, and Galile, and Samaria, & were edified, and walked in the feare of the LORDE, and were fylled with the comforte of the holy goost.

32 It chaunced that as Peter walked thorow all quarters, he came also vnto f̄ sayntes which dwelt at Lydda. There founde he a man named Eneas, which had lyen vpon his bedd eight yeares sicke of f̄ palsy. And Peter sayde vnto him: Eneas, Iesus Christ make the whole, aryse, and make thy bedd for thy self. And he arose immediatly. And all they that dwelt at Lydda and at Saron, sawe him, and turned vnto the LORDE.

At Ioppa there was a certayne woman that was a disciple, named Tabitha, which by interpretacion is called Dorcas: f̄ same was full of good workes and almesse dedes, which she dyd. But it chaunced at the same tyme, that she was sicke, and dyed. Then waszhed they her, and layed her in a chāber. But for so moch as Lydda was nye vnto Ioppa, and the disciples herde that Peter was there, they sent two men vnto him, and desyred him, f̄ he wolde take it for no grefe to come vnto them.

Peter rose, and came with thē. And whā he was come, they broughte him in to the chamber, and all the wyddowes stode rounde aboute him, wepyng, and shewed him the cotes and garmētes, which Dorcas made whyle she was with them. And whā Peter had put them all forth, he kneeled downe, made his prayer, and turned him vnto the body, and sayde: Tabitha, ryse vp. And she opened hir eyes: and whan she sawe Peter† she sat hir downe agayne. But he gaue her the hande, and lifte her vp, and called the sayntes and the wedowes, and shewed her there alyue. And it was knowne thorow out all Ioppa, & many beleued on f̄ LORDE. And it fortuned, f̄ he taried a lōge season at Ioppa by one Simō, which was a tanner.

The x. Chapter.

THERE was a man at Cesarea, named 3 Cornelius (a captayne of f̄ cōpany, which is called f̄ Italianysh) a deuoute man, & one that feared God with all his house, & gaue moch almesse to f̄ people, and prayed God allwaye. The same sawe in a vision openly (aboute the nyenth houre of the daye) an angell of God entringe in to him, and sayenge vnto him: Cornelius. He loked vpon him, and was afrayed, and sayde: LORDE, what is it? He sayde vnto him: † Thy prayers & thine allmesses are come vp in to remēbraunce before God. And now sende men vnto Ioppa, & call for Simō, whose synname is Peter, which is at lodginge with one Symon a tanner, whose house lyeth by f̄ see syde: he shal tell f̄, what thou oughtest to do. And whā the angell which spake to Cornelius, was departed, he called two of his housholde seruantes, & a deuoute soudyer, of thē that wayted vpon him: and tolde them all, and sent thē to Ioppa.

On the nexte daye after whan these were goinge on their iourney, and came nye vnto the cite, Peter f̄ wente vp in to a chamber to praye aboute the sixte houre. The nexte daye after wente Peter forth with them, and certayne brethren of Ioppa bare him company. And  $\text{y}$  daye folowinge came they to Cesarea. Cornelius wayted for thē, and had called together his kynszfolkes and speciall frendes. And as it chaunced  $\text{y}$  Peter came in, Cornelius mett him, and fell downe at his fete,  $\text{a}$  worshipped him. But Peter toke him vp, and sayde: ‡ Stonde vp, I am a man also. But God hath shewed me,  $\text{y}$  I shulde call no mā cōmen or vnclane. Therefore haue I not doubted to come, as soone as I was sent for.

2 THE Apostles and the brethren that were in Iewrye, herde saye, that the Heythen also had receaued the worde of God. And whan Peter was come vp to Ierusalem, they that were of the circūcision, chode with him, and sayde: * Thou wentest in to men that are vncircumcysed, and hast eaten with them. But Peter beganne, and expounded the thinge in order vnto thē and sayde: I was in ꝑ cite of Ioppa prayēge,<sup>a</sup> and in a trauunce I sawe a vision, a vessell commynge downe, as it had bene a greate linnen clothe with foure corners, and let downe from heauen, and came vnto me. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: Ryse Peter, slaye, & eate. But I sayde: Oh no, LORDE, for there neuer entred eny comen or vncleane thinge in to my mouth. Neuertheles the voyce answered me agayne from heauen: What God hath clensted, that call not thou vncleane. This was done thre tymes, and all was taken vp agayne in to heauen.

And beholde, immediatly stode there thre men before the dore of the house that I was in, sent from Cesarea vnto me. But the sprete sayde vnto me, that I shulde go with thē and doute nothinge. These sixe brethrē also came with me, and we entred in to the māns house.

And a greate nombre beleued, and turned vnto the LORDE.

This tydinges of them came to ꝑ eares of the cōgregacion at Ierusalem. And they sent Barnabas, that he shulde go vnto Antioche. Which whan he was come thither, & sawe the grace of God, he was glad, & exhorted them all, that with purpose of hert they wolde contynue in the LORDE. For he was a good man, full of the holy goost and faith. And there was a greate multitude of people added vnto the LORDE. But Barnabas departed vnto Tharsus, to seke Saul. It chaūced, that a whole yeaere they were there cōuersaunte together in the cōgregaciō, & taughte moch people, so that the disciples at Antioche were first called Christen.

And Peter was kepte in the prison. † But prayer was made without ceasinge of the congregacion, vnto God for him. And whan Herode wolde haue broughte him out vnto the people, in the same night slepte Peter betwene two souldiers, bounde with two cheynes. And the keepers before the dore kepte the prison.

B And beholde, the angell of the LORDE was there presente, and a lighte shyned in the habitation, and he smote Peter on the syde, and waked him vp, and sayde: Aryse vp quickly. And the cheynes fell of from his hondes. And the angell sayde vnto him: Gyrde the, and put on thy shues. And he dyd so. And he sayde vnto him: Cast thy mantle aboute the, and folowe me. And he wente out, and folowed him, and wyst not, that it was trueth that was done by ‡ angell, but thoughte he had sene a vision. Neuertheles they wente thorow the first and seconde watch, and came to the yron gate, that ledeth vnto the cite, which opened to the by his awne acorde. And they wente out, and passed thorow one strete, and immediatly the angell departed from him.

C And whan Peter was come to himself, he sayde: Now I knowe of a trueth, that § LORDE hath sent his angell, and delyuered me out of the honde of Herode, and from all the waytinge for of the people of the Iewes. And as he considered the thinge, he came to the house of Mary the mother of one Ihon, (which after his syrnyme was called Marke) where many were gathered together, and prayed. As Peter knocked at the entry dore, there came forth a damsell to herken, named Rhoda. And whan she knewe Peters voyce, she opened not the entry for gladnes, but rane in, and tolde, that Peter stode before § entrye. But they sayde vnto her: Thou art mad. Neuertheles she abode by it, that is was so. They sayde: it is his angell. But Peter continued knockinge. Whan they opened the dore, they sawe him, and were astonnyed. § But he beckened vnto them with the hande, to holde their peace, and tolde them, how the LORDE had broughte him out of the prison. And he sayde: Shewe this vnto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and wete in to another place.

D Whan it was daye, there was not a litle a doo amonge the souldyers, what was become of Peter. Whan Herode had called for him, and founde him not, he caused the keepers to be examyned, and commaunded the to be caried awaye, and he wente downe fro Iewry vnto Cesarea, and there abode. But he was displeased with them of Tyre and Sidō. Neuertheles they came vnto him with one acorde, and made intercession to Blastus the kynges chamberlayne, and desyred peace, because their cowntre was nourished by the kynges londe. But vpon a daye appoynted, Herode put on § kyngly apparell, sat him downe vpon the iudgment seate, and made an oracion vnto them. As for the people, they cried therto: This is a voyce of God, and not of a man. Immediatly the angell of the LORDE smote him, because he gaue not God the honoure: And he was eaten vp of wormes, and gaue vp the goost. But the worde of God grewe, and multiplied. As for Barnabas and Saul, they came agayne to Ierusalem, and delyuered || the handreachinge, and toke with them Ihon, whose syrnyme was Marke.

The xv. Chapter.

AND there came certayne frō Iewry, and taughte the brethren: † Excepte ye be circumcysed after the maner of Moses, ye can not be sauēd. Now whā there rose a discēsiō, and Paul and Barnabas had set them selues harde agaynst them,‡ they ordeyned, that Paul and Barnabas and certayne other of

Then rose there vp certayne of the secte of ſ̄ Pharises (which beleued) and sayde: They must be circumcysed and cōmaunded, to kepe the lawe of Moses. But the Apostles and Elders came together, to reason vpon this matter.

Now whan there was moch disputinge Peter rose vp, and sayde vnto thē: Ye men and brethren, ye knowe that a good whyle agoe, God chose amonge vs, ſ̄ the Heythē by my mouth shulde heare the worde of the Gospell, and beleue. HE came vnto Derba and to Lystra, and beholde, a certayne disciple was there named Timotheus, the sonne of a Iewish woman, which beleued, but his father was a Greke: § same had a good reporte amonge the brethrē of Lystra and at Iconium. Paul wolde that the same shulde go forth with him, and toke and † circumcysed him because of the Iewes that were in those quarters. For they knewe all, that his father was a Greke. But as they wente thorow the cities, they delyuered them the sentence to kepe, ‡ which was concluded of the Apostles and Elders at Ierusalem. from Troada, and came the straight course vnto Samothracia, on the nexte daye to Neapolis, and from thence to Philippis, which is the chefe cite of the londe of Macedonia, and a fre cite. In this cite abode we certayne dayes.

On the daye of the Sabbathes wēte we out of the cite besyde the water, where men were wonte to praye, and we sat downe, and spake vnto the women that resorted thither. And a deuoute woman (named Lydia) a seller of purple, out of the cite of Thiatira, herkened to, whose hert the LORDE opened that she gaue hede vnto the thinges that Paul spake. When she was baptysed and hir housholde, she besought vs, and sayde: Yf ye thinke that I beleue on the LORDE, then come in to my house, and a byde there. And she * constrained vs.

It fortunēd whan we wente to prayer, † there met vs a dansel, which had a sprete of soythsayenge, and broughte hir master and mastresse greate vauntage with soyth sayenge: ‡ same folowed Paul and vs, and cryed, and sayde: These men are the seruantes of the most hye God, which shewe vs † waye of saluacion. This dyd she many dayes. But Paul was not content with it, and turned him aboute, and sayde vnto the sprete: I cōmaunde the in the name of Iesu Christ, that thou departe out of her. "And he departed out at the same houre.

But whā hir master and mastresse sawe that the hope of their vauntage was gone,<sup>6</sup> † they toke Paul and Syllas, drue them in to the market place before ‡ rulers, and broughte thē vnto the officers, and sayde: These men trouble oure cyte, and are Iewes, and preach an ordynance, which is not lafull for vs to receaue, ner to obserue, seynge we are Romaynes. And the people rāne on them, and the officers rente their clothes, and cōmaunded them to be beaten with rodde.<sup>6</sup> And whan they had beaten them sore, they cast thē in prison, and commaunded the iayler, to kepe them diligēty. Which whan he had receaued soch commaundement, he cast thē in to the ynnr prison, and put their fete in the stockes.

But at mydnight prayed Paul and Syllas, and prayed God. And the presoners herde them. Sodenly was there a greate earth quake, so that the foundations of the preson were shaken. And immediatly were all the dores open, and all their bondes lowsed. Whā the keper of the preson waked out of slepe, and sawe the preson dores open, he drue out his swerde, and wolde haue kylled him selfe: for he thoughte † presoners had bene fled. But Paul cryed loude, and sayde: Do thy self no harme, for we are all here.

He called for a lighte, and sprange in, and trembled, and fell at the fete of Paul and Syllas, and broughte them out, and sayde: Syrs, what must I do, to be sauēd? They sayde:<sup>4</sup> Beleue on the LORDE Iesus, and so shalt thou and thy housholde be sauēd. And they preached the worde of the LORDE vnto him, and to all that were in his house.

And he toke them to him in the same houre of the night, and washed their strypes. And immediatly was he baptysed, and all his. And he broughte them in to his house, and set them a table, and † reioysed with all his housholde, that he was become a beleuer on God.

And whan it was daye, the officers of the cite sent mynisters, and sayde: Let those men go. And the keper of the preson tolde this sayenge vnto Paul: The officers haue sent hither, that ye shulde be lowse. Now therefore get you hōce, and go in peace. But Paul sayde vnto them: They haue beaten vs openly vncondempned (where as we are yet Romaynes) and haue cast vs in prison, and shulde they now thrust vs out preuely? Not so, but let them come them selues, and brynge vs out. The mynisters tolde these wordes vnto the officers. And they feared, whan they herde that they were Romaynes, and came and besoughte them, and prayed thē to departe out of the cite. Then wente they out of the preson, and entred in to the house of Lydia. And whan they had sene the brethren and comforted them, they departed.

spake vnto them of the scripture, opened it vnto thē, and alleged, * that Christ must nedes haue suffred, & ryse agayne from the deed: and this Iesus, whom I preach vnto you (sayde he) is y same Christ. And some of thē beleued, and were ioyned vnto Paul and Syllas, a greate multitude also of the deuoute Grekes, and of the chefe wemen not a fewe.

But the styffnecked Iewes had indignacion, and toke vnto them certayne euell men which were vagabundes, and gathered a company, and set the cite in a rore, and preassed vnto the house of Iason, and soughte to brynge them out vnto the comon people. But whan they founde them not, they drue Iason, and certayne brethren vnto the rulers of the cite, and cryed: These that trouble all the worlde, are come hither also, whom Iason hath receaued preuely. And these all do contrary to the decrees of the Emperoure, sayenge, that there is another kynge,<sup>a</sup> one Iesus. They troubled the people, and the rulers of the cite, that herde this. And whan they had receaued a sufficient answere of Iason and of the other, they let them go.

But the brethren immediatly sent away Paul and Syllas by night vnto Berea. Whan they came there, they wēte in to the synagoge of the Iewes (for they were the Eldest amonge thē at Thessalonica) which receaued the worde maruelous wyllingly, and †searched the scriptures daylie, whether it were euen so. Then beleued many of them, and worshipfull wemen off the Grekes, and men not a fewe.† But whan the Iewes off Thessalonica had knowlege, that the worde off God was preached off Paul at Berea, they came, and moued the people there also. Howbeit the brethren sent Paul awaye then immediatly, to go vnto the see. As for Syllas and Timotheus, they abode there styll.

They that conueyed Paul, brought him vnto Athens. And whan they had receaued a commaundement vnto Syllas and Timotheus, that they shulde come vnto him in all the haist, they wente their waye. But whyle Paul wayted for them at Athens, hi<sup>s</sup> sprete was moued in him, whan he sawe the cite geuē so to the worshippinge of ymages. And he spake vnto the Iewes and deuoute personnes in the synagoge, & in y market daylie vnto thē that came to him. But certayne Philosophers of y Epicurees and Stoikes disputed with him. And some sayde: What will this babler saye? But some sayde: He semeth to be a tidinges brynger of new §goddes (That was, because he had preached vnto thē the Gospell of Iesus, & of the resurreccion.) And they toke him, and broughte him before the counsell house, and sayde: Maye we not knowe, what new doctryne this is that thou teachest? For thou bryngeest straunge tidinges to oure eares? We wolde knowe therefore, what this meaneth. As for all they of Athens, and straungers & gestes, they gaue thē selues to nothinge els, but either to tell, or to heare some newes.

Paul stode on the myddes of the comon place, and sayde: Ye mē of Athens, I se that in all thinges ye are to superstitious. I haue gone thorow, & sene youre gods seruyce, and founde an altare, where vpō was written: To the vnknowne God. Now shewe I vnto you y same, whom ye worshippe ignorauntly. God which made y worlde,<sup>b</sup> and all that therein is, for so moch as he is LORDE of heauen and earth, ¶dwelleth not in temples made of handes, nether is he worshipped with mens handes, as though he had nede of eny man, seynge he himself ¶geueth life and breth vnto all men euery where: and hath made of one bloude all the generacion of men to dwell vpō all the face of y earth: and hath assigned borders appoynted before, how longe and farre they shulde dwell, that they shulde seke the LORDE, yf they mighte fele and fynde him.

And truly he is not farre from euery one of vs. For in him we lyue, moue, and haue oure beyng, as certayne of youre awne Poetes also haue sayde: We are his generacion. For as moch then as we are the generacion of God, we oughte not to thinke that the Godheade is like vnto golde or syluer, or ymagery worke of the crafte or ymaginacion of man. ¶And truly God hath ouersene the tyme of ignorance: ¶But now he commaundeth all men euery where to repente, because he hath appoynted a daye, in the which he wyl iudge the cōpasse of the worlde, with righteousnesse, by that one man in whō he hath appoynted it: and offred faith vnto

When they herde of the resurreccion of the deed, some mocked. But some sayde: We wyl heare the agayne of this matter. So Paul departed from amonge them. Howbeit certayne men claue vnto him, and beleued: amonge whom was Dionisius, one of the counsell: and a woman named Damaris, and other with them.

The xliij. Chapter.

AFTER that departed Paul frō Athens, and came to Corinthum, and founde a Iewe named *Aquila, borne in Pōtus, which was lately come out of Italy: and his wife Priscilla (because the Emperoure Claudius had conmaunded all Iewes to departe from Rome) and he drue vnto thē. And because he was of the same craft, he abode with thē, and wroughte. Their craft was to make tentes. And he preached in the synagoge euery Sabbath daye, and exhorted the Iewes and the Grekes.

Whan Sylas and Timotheus were come fro Macedonia, Paul was constrayned by the sprete to testifye vnto † Iewes, that Iesus was very Christ. But whā they sayde cōtrary and blasphemied, † he shoke his rayment, and sayde vnto them: Youre bloude be vpon youre awne heade. From hence forth I go blamelesse vnto the Gentyles. And he departed thence, and came in to the house of a man named Iustus, which feared God, and his house was nexte vnto the synagoge. Howbeit Crispus the chefe ruler of the synagoge, beleued on † LORDE with all his housholde. And many of the Corinthians that gaue audience, beleued, and were baptysed

The LORDE spake vnto Paul by a vision in † nyghte: Be not afraied, but speake, and holde not thy peace, for I am with the: and noman shal inuade the that shal hurte the, for I haue moch people in this cite. He contynued there a yeaere and sixe monethes, and taught them the worde of God.

But whan Gallio was ruler of the countre of Achaia, the Iewes made insurreccion with one acorde agaynst Paul, & broughte him before the iudgment seate, and sayde: This felowe counceleth men to worshipe God cōtrary to the lawe. Whan Paul was aboute to open his mouth, Gallio sayde vnto † Iewes: Yf it were a matter of wronge or an euell dede (O ye Iewes) reason wolde that I shulde heare you: but yf it be a question of wordes, and of names, and of † lawe amōge you, loke ye to it youre selues, I thinke not to be iudge there ouer. And he droue them from the iudgnēt seate. Then all the Grekes toke Sosthenes the ruler of the Sinagoge, and smote him before the iudgment seate. And Gallio cared for none of tho thinges.

Paul after † he had taried a good whyle, toke his leue of the brethren, and sayled in to Syria, Priscilla & Aquila bearinge him company. And he shore his heade at Cenehrea (for he had a † vowe) & came downe to Ephesus, & lefte them there. But he himselfe wēte in to the synagoge, and reasoned with the Iewes. And they desyred him, that he wolde tary with them a longer season. And he cōsented not, but had them farwele, and sayde: I must nedes in eny wyse kepe this feast that commeth, at Ierusalem: but † yf God wyl, I wil returne agayne vnto you.

And he departed from Ephesus, and came to Cesarea, and wente vp, and saluted † congregacion, and toke his iourney downe to Antioche, and taried there a certayne tyme, and departed, and walked thorow all † countre of Galatia and Phrigia by ordre, and strenghted all the disciples.

There came vnto Ephesus a certayne Iewe, named † Apollo (borne at Alexādria) an eloquent man, and mightie in the scriptures: the same was informed in the waye of the LORDE, and spake feruently in the sprete, and taughte diligently the thinges of the LORDE, and knewe but the baptyme off Ihon onely. The same beganne to speake boldly in the synagoge. Whan Aquila and Priscilla herde him, they toke him vnto thē, and expounded the waye of God vnto him more perfectly. But whan he wolde go in to Achaia, the brethren wrote, and exorted the disciples to receaue him. And whan he was come thither, he helped them moch which beleued thorow grace. For he ouercame the Iewes mightely, and shewed openly by † scripture, that Iesus was Christ.

The xix. Chapter.

BUT it fortun'd whan Apollo was at Corinthum, that Paul walked thorow the vpper coastes, and came to Ephesus, and founde certayne disciples, vnto whom he sayde: Hauē ye receaued ȝ holy goost, sence ye beleued? They sayde vnto hi: We haue not herde, whether there be an holy goost. He sayde vnto them: Where with then were ye baptysed? They sayde: With the baptyme of Ihon. Paul sayde: Ihon baptysed with the baptyme of repentaunce, and spake vnto ȝ people, that they shulde beleue on him, which shulde come after him, that is, on Iesus, that the same is Christ. Whan they herde that, they were baptysed in the name of the LORDE Iesu. And whan Paul layed the hādes on thē, the holy goost came vpon them, and they spake with tungen, and prophecied. And all the men were aboute twolue.

He wēt in to ȝ synagoge, and preached boldly thre monethes longe, teaching, and geuyng them exortacions of the kyngdome of God. But whan dyuerse waxed herde herted, and beleued not, and spake euell of the waye of the LORDE before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, and disputed daylye in the scole of one called Tyrannus. And this was done two yeaues lōge, so that all they which dwelt in Asia, herde the worde of the LORDE Iesu, both Iewes & Grekes. And God wroughte no small miracles by the handes of Paul, so that from his body there were broughte napkins or partlettes vnto the sicke, and the diseases departed from them, and the euell spretes wente out of them.

BUT certayne of the vagabounde Iewes which were coniurers, vndertoke to name ȝ name of the LORDE Iesus, ouer those that had euell spretes, and sayde: We charge you by Iesus whom Paul preacheth. They were seuen sonnes of one Scena a Iewe the hye prest, which dyd so. The euell sprete answered, and sayde: Iesus I knowe, and Paul I knowe, but who are ye? And the mā in whō the euell sprete was, ranne vpon them, and ouercame them, and cast them vnder him, so that they fled out of the same house naked and wounded. This was knowne vnto all the Iewes and Grekes which dwelt at Ephesus, and there fell a feare vpon them all. And ȝ name of the LORDE Iesus was magnified. *Many of thē also that belened, came and cōfessed, and shewed their workes. But many of them that had vsed curious craftes, broughte the bokes together, and burnte them openly: and they counted the pryce of them, and founde it of money fiftye thousande pens. So mightely grewe ȝ worde of the LORDE, and preuayled.

Whan this was done, Paul purposed in sprete to take his iourney thorow Macedonia and Achaia, and to go to Ierusalē, and sayde: After that I haue bene there, I must se Rome also. And he sent in to Macedonia two that mynistrd vnto him, Timotheus and Erastus. But he himselfe remayned in Asia for a season. At the same tyme there rose no litle a doo aboute that waye. For a certayne man named Demetrius a goldsmith, which made syluer shrynes for Diana, and broughte them of the crafte no small vantage. Them he gathered together, and the feloweworkmē of the same occupacion, and sayde: Syrs, ye knowe that by this crafte we haue vantage, and ye se and heare, that not onely at Ephesus, but almost also thorow out all Asia, this Paul turneth awaye moch people with his persnadyng, and sayeth: †They be not goddes that are made with hondes. Howbeit it shal not onely bryng our occupacion to this poynte to be set at naught, but also the temple of greate Diana shal from hence forth be despyed, and hir maiestye also shalbe destroyed, whō neuertheles all Asia and the worlde worshippeth.

Whan they herde this, they were full of wrath, cried out, and sayde: Greate is Diana of the Ephesians. And all ȝ cite was on a roore, and they ruszhed in with one assent in to the open place, and toke Gaius and Aristarchus of Macedonia, Pauls companions. Whan Paul wolde haue gone in amonge the people, the disciples suffred him not. Certayne also of ȝ chefe of Asia which were Pauls good frendes, sent vnto him, and desyred him, that he shulde not preasse in to the open place. Some cried one thinge, some another. And the congregacion was out of quyetē, and the more parte knewe not wherfore they were come together. Some of the people drue forth Alexander, whan ȝ Iewes thrust him forward. Alexāder beckened with the hande, and wolde haue geuen the people an answer. But whan they knewe that he was a Iewe, there arose a shout of all, and cried the space of two houres: Greate is Diana of the Ephesians.

¶ Whan the towne clarke had styld the people, he sayde: Ye men of Ephesus, what man is it which knoweth not, that the cite of ḡ Ephesiās is a worshipper of the greate goddess Diana, and of the heauenly ymage? Seinge now that this can not be sayde agaynst, ye ought to be contente, and to do nothinge without aduysement. Ye haue broughte hither these men, which are nether church-robbers ner blasphemers off youre goddess.

But yff Demetrius and they that are craftesmen with him, haue ought to saye vnto eny man, the lawe is open, and there are rulers, let them accuse one another. But yf ye wil go aboute eny other thinge, it maye be determyned in a lauffull congregacion. For we stonde in ioperdy to be accused of this dayes vproure: and yet is there no man giltye, of whom we mighte geue a rekenynge of this vproure. And whan he had sayde this, he let the congregacion departe.

The xx. Chapter.

¶ NOW whan the vproure was ceased, Paul called the disciples vnto him, and toke his leue of them, and departed *to go in to Macedonia. And whan he had gone thorow those partes, and exhorted them with many wordes, he came in to Grekelonde, and there abode thre monethes. But whan the Iewes layde wayte for him, as he was aboute to sayle in to Syria, he purposed to turne agayne thorow Macedonia. There accompanied him in to Asia, Sopater of Berrea: and of Thessalonica, Aristarchus and Secundus: and Gaius of Derba, and Timotheus: but of Asia, Tychicus and Trophimus. These wente before, and taried for vs at Troada: but we sayled after the Easter dayes from Philippos, vnto ḡ fyfth daye, and came to them vnto Troada, and taried there seuen dayes.

¶ Vpon one of the Sabbathes, whan the disciples came together to breake bred, Paul preached vnto them, wyllinge to departe on the morow, and contynued the preachinge vnto mydnight. And there were many lightes in the chamber, where they were gathered together. There sat a yonge man named Eutychos, in a wyndow, and fell in to a depe slepe (whyle Paul was speakinge) and was ouercome with slepe, and fell downe from the thirde losfe, and was taken vp deed. But Paul wente downe, and fell on him, and embraced him, and sayde: Make nothinge a doo, for his soule is in hi. Then wente he vp, and brake the bred, and ate, and talked moch with thē, tyll the daye brake, and so departed. As for the yōge man, they broughte him alyue, and were not a litle confortyd.

But we wente afore in to the shippe, and sayled towarde Asson, wyllinge there to receaue Paul. For so had he appoynted, and wolde himselfe go on fote. Whan he was come to vs vnto Asson, we toke him in, and came to Mitylenes, and sayled from thence, and came on the nexte daye ouer agaynst Chios, and on the daye folowinge we aryued at Samos, and taried at Tragilion, and on the nexte daye came we to Mileton: for Paul had determed to sayle ouer by Ephesus, that he nede not to spende the tyme in Asia: for he haisted to be at Ierusalem vpō the Whitson-daye, yf it were possible for him.

But from Mileton he sent vnto Ephesus, and called for the Elders of the congregacion. Whan they were come to him, he sayde vnto them: Ye knowe sence the first daye: that I came in to Asia, after what maner I haue bene with you at all tyme, and serued ḡ LORDE with all humblenesse of mynde, and with many teares and tentacions, which happened vnto me by ḡ layenges of wayte of the Iewes, how ḡ I haue kepte backe nothinge ḡ was profitable, but that I haue shewed you, and taughte you openly, and priuately from house to house. And haue testified both vnto the Iewes & to the Grekes the repent-aunce towarde God, and faith towarde oure LORDE Iesus.

And now beholde, I go bounde in ḡ sprete vnto Ierusalē, not knowinge what shal happen there vnto me, but ḡ the holy goost & witnesseth in euery cite, and sayeth, that bondes and troubles abyde me there. But ¶ I regarde none of them, nether counte I my life dearer then my selfe, that I maye fulfill my course with ioye, and the office ḡ I haue receaued of the LORDE Iesu, to testifie the Gospell of the grace of God.

D And now beholde, I knowe that ye shal se my face nomore, all ye, thorow whom I haue gone, and preached the kyngdome of God. Wherefore I take you to recorde this daye, that I am pure from the bloude of all men: For I haue kepte nothinge backe, but haue shewed you all the counsell off God. Take hede therefore vnto youre selues, and to all the flocke, amonge the which the holy goost hath set you to be Bishoppes, to fede the congregation of God, which he hath purchaced thorow his owne bloude. For this I knowe, *that after my departinge there shal enter in amonge you greuous wolues, which shal not spare the flocke. Yee euē †from amonge youre awne selues shal men aryse, speakynge peruerse doctryne, to drawe disciples after them. Therefore awake, and remembre, that by the space of three yeres I ceased not to warne euery one off you both nighte and daye with teares.

E And now brethren I commend you vnto God, and to ȝ worde of his grace, which is mightie to edifye you, and to geue you the enheritaunce amōge all them that are sanctified. "I haue not desyred syluer, golde or rayment off eny off you. For ye youre selues knowe, that ‡these handes haue mynistrd vnto my necessities, and them that were with me. I haue shewed you all thinges, how that so labouringe ye oughte to receaue the weake, and to remembre the worde of the LORDE, how that he sayde: It is more blessed to geue, then to receaue.

And whan he had sayde this, he kneled downe, and prayed with them all. But there was moch wepyng amonge them all, and they fell aboute Pauls necke, and kyssed him, and were sory, most of all because of the worde which he had sayde, that they shulde se his face nomore. And they accōpanied him vnto the shippe.

The xxi. Chapter.

A NOW whan it fortuneth that we had launched forth and were departed from them, we came with a straight course vnto Coon, and on the daye folowinge vnto the Rhodes, and from thence vnto Patara. And whan we founde a shippe ready to sayle vnto Phenices, we wente aborde and set forth.

But whā we came within the sighte of Cypers, we lefte it on the lefte hande, and sayled vnto Syria, and came vnto Tyre: for there the shippe shulde laye forth the ware. And whan we had founde disciples, we taried there seuen dayes. And they tolde Paul thorow the sprete, that he shulde not go vp to Ierusalem. And it fortuneth whā we had fulfilled those dayes, we departed, and wente oure wayes, and they all broughte vs on oure waye with wyues and childrē, tyll we were come out of ȝ cite, and we kneled downe vpo the shore, and prayed. And whan we had taken oure leue one off another, we toke shippe, but they turned agayne vnto theirs. As for vs we ended the course from Tyre, and came to Ptolomaida, and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one daye.

On the nexte daye we ȝ were with Paul, departed, and came vnto Cesarea, ȝ entred in to the house of ȝ Philippe the Euangelist (which was one of the seue) and abode with him. The same had foure daughters, which were virgins, ʒ and prophecied. And as we taried there mo dayes, there came downe from Iewry a prophet, named †Agabus. Whā he was come vnto vs, he toke Pauls gerdell, and bounde his hādes and fete, and sayde: Thus sayeth ȝ holy goost: **The man whose gerdell this is, shal the Iewes bynde thus at Ierusalem, and shal deliuer him in to the handes of the Heythē. Whan we herde this, both we and they that were of the same place, besoughte him, that he wolde not go vp to Ierusalem. Then answered Paul and sayde: What do ye, wepyng, and breakynge my hert? For I am redye not onely to be bounde, but also to dye at Ierusalem for ȝ name of the LORDE Iesu. But whā he wolde not be persuaded, we ceased, and sayde: ††The will of the LORDE be fulfilled. And after those dayes we were ready, ȝ wente vp to Ierusalem: There came with vs also certayne of the disciples off Cesarea, and broughte with them one of Cypers, named Mnason, an olde disciple, with whom we shulde lodge. Now whā we came to Ierusalem, the brethren receaued vs gladly. But on the nexte daye Paul wente in with vs vnto Iames, and all the Elders came together. And whan he had saluted them, he tolde by

¶ When they herde that, they prayzed the LORDE, and sayde vnto him: Brother, thou seyst how many thousande Iewes there are which beleue, and are all Zelous ouer y<sup>e</sup> lawe. But they are enfourmed agaynst the, that thou teachest all the Iewes which are amōge the Heythē, to forsake Moses, and sayest that they oughte not to circumcise their children, ner to walke after the same custome. What is it therfore? The multitude must nedes come together, for they shal heare that thou art come. Do this therfore that we saye vnto the: We haue foure men, which haue a *vowe on them, take them vnto y<sup>e</sup>, and purifye thyselfe with them, and do the cost on them, that they maye shaue their heades: and they shal knowe, that it is nothinge, wherof they are enfourmed agaynst the, but that thou also walkest and kepest the lawe. For as touchinge them that beleue amonge the Heythen, † we haue wrytten, and concluded, that they shulde obserue no such, but onely to kepe them selues from the offeringes of Idols, from bloude, from strāged, and from whordome. ¶ Then Paul toke the men vnto him, and was purified with them on the nexte daye, and entred in to the temple, declaringe that he fulfylled the dayes of purificacion, tyll there was an offeringe offred for euery one of them.

¶ But whan the seuē dayes were almost fulfylled, the Iewes of Asia sawe him in the temple, and moued all the people, layed handes vpon him, and cryed: Ye men of Israel, helpe, this is the man, that teacheth all men euery where agaynst oure people, the lawe, and this place. He hath broughte Grekes also in to the temple, and hath defyled this holy place. For they had sene † Trophimus the Ephesian with him in the cite, him they thoughte y<sup>e</sup> Paul had broughte in to the temple. And all the cite was moued, and the people ranne together. And they toke Paul, and drue him out off the temple, and forth with the dores were shut to.

But whan they wōte aboute to kyll him, tydings came to the chefe captayne of the company, that all Ierusalem was moued. Which immediatly toke soudyers and captaynes vnto him, and ranne in amōge them.

When they sawe the captayne and the soudyers, they lefte smytinge of Paul.

¶ Whan the captayne came nye, he toke him, and commaunded him y<sup>e</sup> to be bounde with two cheynes, and axed what he was, and what he had done. One cried this, another that amonge the people. But whan he coulde not knowe the certente because of the rumoure, he commaunded him to be caried in to the castell. And whā he came to the steppes, it fortuned that he was borne of y<sup>e</sup> soudyers because of the violence of the people. For the multitude off the people folowed after, and cryed: ¶ Awaye with him. Whan Paul was now to be caried in to the castell, he sayde vnto y<sup>e</sup> captayne: Maye I speake vnto the? He sayde: Canst thou Greke? Art not thou the Egipcian, which before these dayes maydest an vproure, & leddest out in to the wyldernesse foure thousande preuy murderers? Paull sayde: I am a man which am a Iewe off † Tharsis, a citesyn of a famous cite in Celicia: I beseke the, suffre me to speake vnto the people. Whan he had geuen him lycence, Paul stode on the steppes, and beckened with the hande vnto the people. Now whan there was a greate sylēce, he spake vnto them in Hebrue, and sayde:

me from heauen, and I fell to the earth, and herde a voyce which sayde vnto me: Saul Saul, why persecutest thou me? I answered: Who art thou LORDE? And he sayde vnto me: I am Iesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest. As for them that were with me, they sawe  $\text{f}$  lighte and were afraied, but they herde not the voyce of him that spake with me. I sayde: LORDE, what shal I do? The LORDE sayde vnto me: Aryse, and go in to Damascon, there shal it be tolde  $\text{f}$  of all that is appoynted the to do. But whan I sawe nothinge for the bryghtnesse of the lighte, I was led by the hande of them that were with me, and came to Damascon.

B There was one Ananias, a deuoute man after the lawe,<sup>a</sup> which had a good reporte of all the Iewes that dwelt there, the same came, and stepte vnto me, and sayde: Brōther Saul, loke vp. And I lokd vp vpon him the same houre. He sayde: The God of oure fathers hath ordeyned the before, that thou shuldest knowe his wyll, and se the thinge  $\text{y}$  is rightfull, and heare the voyce out of his mouth: for thou shalt be his wytnesse vnto all men, of tho thinges which thou hast sene and herde. And now why tariest thou? Aryse, and be baptysed, and wasze away thy synnes, and \* call vpon the name of the LORDE.

But it fortuneth, that whan I was come agayne to Ierusalē, and prayed in the temple, I was in a traunce, and sawe him. Then sayde he vnto me: Make haist, † and get the soone out of Ierusalem, for they wyl not receaue the witness that thou bearest of me. And I sayde: LORDE, they thē selues knowe that I put in preson and bett in euery synagoge them that beleued on the. ‡ And whā the bloude of Steuē thy witness was shed, I stode by also,  $\text{q}$  consented vnto his death, and kepte the clothes of them that slewe him. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, for  $\text{f}$  I wil sende the farre amonge the Heythen.

C They gaue him audience vnto this worde, and lifte vp their voyce,  $\text{q}$  sayde: Away with such a felowe from the earth, for it is not reason that he shulde lyue. But as they cried, and cast of their clothes,  $\text{q}$  thrue dust in to the ayre, the captayne bad brynge him in to the castell, and commaunded him to be beaten with rodde and to be examyned, that he mighte knowe, for what cause they cried so vpon him. And whan he bounde him with thonges, Paul sayde vnto the vndercaptayne that stode by: Is it lafull for you to scourge a man that is a Romaine, and vncondemned? Whan the vndercaptayne herde that, he wēte to the vpper captayne, and tolde him, and sayde? What wilt thou do? This man is a Romaine. Then came  $\text{f}$  vpper captayne, and sayde vnto him: Tell me, art thou a Romaine? He sayde: Yee. And the vpper captayne answered: With a greate sunne optayned I this fredome. But Paul sayde: As for me, I am a Romaine borne. Thē straight waye departed from him, they that shulde haue examyned him. And  $\text{f}$  chefe captayne was afraied, whan he knewe that he was a Romaine, and because he had bounde him. On the nexte daye wolde he knowe the certentye wherefore he was accused of the Iewes, and he lōsed him from the bondes, and commaunded the hye prestes and all their counsell to come together, and broughte Paul forth, and set him amonge them.

The xxiij. Chapter

PAUL behelde the counsell, and sayde: A Ye men and brethren, ¶ I haue lyued with all good conscience before God vnto this daye: ¶ But the hye prest Ananias commaunded them that stode aboute him, to smyte hi on the mouth. Then sayde Paul vnto him: God shal smyte the thou paynted wall. ¶ Syttest thou and iudget me after the lawe, and commaundest me to be smytten cōtrary to  $\text{f}$  lawe? And they that stode aboute hi, sayde: Reuylest thou Gods hye prest? And Paul sayde: Brethrē, I wyst not that he was the hye prest. For it is wryttē: \*\* The ruler of thy people shalt thou not curse.

But whan Paul knewe that the one parte was Saduces, and the other parte Pharises, he cried out in  $\text{f}$  counsell: Ye men and brethren, I am a Pharise, and the sonne of a Pharise, † Of hope and resurreccion of the deed am I iudged. And whan he had so sayde, there arose a dissencion betwene  $\text{f}$  Pharises and the Saduces, and the multitude was deuyded: for the Saduces saye that there is no resurreccion, nether angell, ner

B sprete: * but the Pharises graunte both. And there was made a greate crye. And ſ Scrybes of the Pharyses secte, stode vp, and stroue, and sayde: We fynde no euell in this mā. But yf a sprete or an angell haue spokē vnto him, let vs not stryue agaynst God.

But whan the discension was greate, ſ vpper captayne feared, that Paul shulde haue bene plucked a sonder of them, and commaunded the soudyers to go downe, and to take him from them, and to brynge him in to the castell. But in the nighte folowinge, the LORDE stode by him, and sayde: Be of good cheare Paul, for as thou hast testified of me at Ierusalem† so must thou testifie at Rome also.

Now whan it was daye, certayne of the Iewes gathered them selues together, and made a vowe nether to eate ner drynke, tyll they had kylled Paul. They were mo then fortye, which had made this conspyracion. These came to the hye prestes and Elders, and sayde: We haue bounde oure selues with a vowe, that we wil eate nothinge, tyll we haue slayne Paul. Now therefore geue ye knowlege to the vpper captayne and to the counsell, that he maye brynge him forth vnto you tomorrow, as though ye wolde heare him yet better: As for vs, we are ready to kyll him, or euer he come nye you.

C But whan Pauls sisters sonne herde of their layenge awayte, he came, and entred in to the castell, and tolde Paul. So Paul called vnto him one of ſ vnder captaynes, and sayde: Brynge this yonge man to the vpper captayne, for he hath somewhat to saye to him. He toke him, and broughte him to the vpper captayne, and sayde: Paul the presoner called me vnto him, and prayed me to brynge to the this yonge man, which hath somewhat to saye vnto the. Then the hye captayne toke him by the hande, and wente a syde with him out of the waye, and axed him: What is it, that thou hast to saye vnto me? He sayde: The Iewes are agreed together, to desyre the, to let Paul be broughte forth tomorrow before the counsell, as though they wolde yet heare him better. But folowe not thou their myndes, for there laye wayte for him mo then fortye men off them, which haue bounde them selues with a vowe, nether to eate ner drynke, tyll they haue slayne Paul: and euen now are they redye, and loke for thy promes.

Then the vpper captayne let the yonge man departe, and charged him to tell noman, that he had shewed him this. And he called vnto him two vndercaptaynes, and sayde: Make redye two hundreth soudyers, that they maye go to Cesarea, and thre score and ten horsmen, and two hundreth speare men at the thirde houre of the nighte, and delyuer thē beastes, that they maye set Paul theron, and brynge him safe vnto Felix the debyte, and he wrote a letter on this maner:

D Claudius Lysias, vnto the most mightie Debyte Felix, gretynge. † The Iewes had taken this man, and wolde haue slayne him, then came I with soudyers, and rescued him, and perceaued that he is a Romayne. And whan I wolde haue knowne the cause, wherfore they accused hī, I broughte him in to their counsell: then perceaued I, that he was accused aboute questions of their lawe. But there was no accusacion worthy of death or of bondes. And whan it was shewed me, that certayne Iewes layed wayte for him, I sent him straight waye vnto the, and commaunded the accusers also, that loke what they had agaynst him, they shulde tell the same before the. Fare well.

The soudyers (as it was commaunded them) toke Paul, and broughte him to Antipatras. But on the nexte daye, they lefte ſ horse men to go with him, and turned agayne to the castell. When these came to Cesarea, they delyuered the letter vnto the Debyte, and presented Paul before him also. Whan the Debyte had red the letter, he axed off what countre he was. And whā he vnderstode that he was of Celicia, he sayde: § I wil heare the, whan thine accusers are come also. And he commaunded him to be kepte in Herodes iudgment house.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AFTER fyue dayes the hye prest Ananias A came downe with the Elders, and with the Oratour Tertullus, which appeared before the Debyte agaynst Paul. Whan Paul was called forth, Tertullus begāne to accuse him, and sayde: Seynge that we lyue in greate peace by the meanes of ſ, and that many good thinges are done for this people thorow thy prouydence (most mightie Felix) that alowe we euer and in all places with all thanks. Notwithstandinge ſ I be nomore tedious vnto the, I praye the, that of thy curtesye thou woldest heare vs a few wordes.

We haue founde this man a pestilent fellowe, and a sterer vp of sedicion amonge all the Iewes thorow out all the worlde, and a manteyner of the secte of the Nazarettes, * and hath taken in hande also to suspende the temple, whom we toke, and wolde haue iudged him accordinge to oure lawe. But Lysias the hye captayne came vpō vs, and with greate violence deliuered him out of oure handes, and commaunded his accusers to come vnto the: of whom (yf thou wilt enquire) thou mayest haue knowlege of all these thinges, wherof we accuse him. The Iewes likewise affirmed and sayde, that it was euen so.

B But Paul (whan the debyte had beckened vnto him, that he shulde speake) answered: Seynge I knowe that thou hast bene iudge now many yeares amonge this people, I wil not be afrayed to answere for my selfe, because that thou mayest knowe, that there are yet nomore but twolue dayes sence I came vp to Ierusalem for to worshippe, and that they nether founde me in the temple disputinge with any man, or makyng any vproure amonge the people, ner in y synagoges, ner in the cite: nether can they proue the thinges, wherof they accuse me. But this I† confesse vnto the, that after this waye which they call heresy, so worshippe I the God of my fathers, that I beleue all that is wrytten in the lawe and in the prophetes, and haue hope towards God, that the same resurreccion of the deed (which they them selues loke for also) shalbe, both of the iust and vniust. Therefore studye I to haue allwaye a cleare conscience towards God and towards men.‡

¶ But after many yeares I came and broughte allmesse vnto my people, and offeringes:; whervpon they founde me purified in the temple without eny maner of rumoure or vnquyetnesse. Howbeit there were certayne Iewes out of Asia, which shulde be here presente before the, and accuse me, yf they had oughte agaynst me: or els lett these same here saye, yf they haue founde eny vnrighteousnes in me, whyle I stonde here before y councell: excepte it be for this one worde, that I cried stondeinge amonge them: § Of the resurreccion off the deed am I iudged of you this daye.

C Whan Felix herde this, he dyffered the (for he knewe very well of that waye) and sayde: Whan Lysias the vpper captayne commeth downe, I wyl knowe y vttemost of youre matter. ¶ But he commaunded the vndercaptayne to kepe Paul, and to let him haue rest, and that he shulde forbydde none of his acquaintance to mynister vnto him, or to come vnto him.

But after certayne dayes came Felix with his wife Drusilla, which was a Iewesse, and called for Paul, and herde him of the faith in Christ. Howbeit whan Paul spake off righteousnesse, and off chastite and off the iudgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered: Go thy waye for this tyme. Whan I haue a conuenient tyme, I wil sende for the. He hoped also, that money shulde haue bene geuen him of Paul, therefore called he oft for him, and commened with him. But after two yeares came Portius Festus in to felix rowme. Yet Felix wyllinge to shewe the Iewes a pleasure, left Paul bounde.

The xrb. Chapter.

NOW whan Festus was come in to the countre, ouer thre dayes he wente vp from Cesarea to Ierusalem. Then appeared the hye prestes and the chefe of the Iewes before him agaynst Paul, and intreated him, and desyred fauoure agaynst him, that he wolde sende for him to Ierusalem, and layed wayte for him, that they might slaye him by the waye. Then answered Festus, that Paul shulde be kepte at Cesarea, but that he him-selfe wolde shortly go thither agayne. Let them therfore (sayde he) which are able amonge you, come downe with vs to accuse the man, yf there be ought in him.

Whan he had taried amonge them more then ten dayes, he wente downe to Cesarea. And on the nexte daye he sat downe on the iudgment seate, and commaunded Paul to be broughte. Whan he was come, y Iewes which were come downe from Ierusalem, stode rounde aboute him, and broughte vp many and greuous quarels agaynst Paul, which they coude not proue, whyle he answered for himselfe: I haue nether offended ought agaynst the lawe of the Iewes, ner agaynst the tēple, ner agaynst the Emperoure.

But Festus wyllinge to shewe the Iewes a pleasure, answered Paul, and sayde: Wilt thou go vp to Ierusalem, and there be iudged off these thinges before me? But Paul sayde: I stonde at the Emperours iudgmēt seate, where I ought to be iudged: to the Iewes haue I done no harme, as thou also knowest very well. Yf I haue hurte eny man, or committed eny thinge worthy off death, I refuse not to dye. But yf there are no soch thinges as they accuse me off, then maye no man deluyner me vnto them. I appeale vnto the Emperoure. Then spake Festus with the Councell, and answered: Thou hast appealed vnto the Emperoure, to the Emperoure shalt thou go.

After certayne dayes came kynge Agrippa and Bernice to Cesarea to welcome Festus. And when they had taried there many dayes, Festus rehearsed Pauls cause vnto the kynge, and sayde: There is a man left bounde of Felix, for whose cause the hye prestes and Elders of the Iewes appeared before me when I was at Ierusalem, and desyred a sentence agaynst him. Vnto whom I answered: * It is not the maner off the Romaynes to deluyner eny man that he shulde perishe, before that he which is accused, haue his accusers presente, and receaue libertye to answere for him selfe to the accusation. Whā they were come hither together, I made no delay, but sat the nexte daye in iudgment, and commaunded the man to be broughte forth. Of whom, when the accusers stode vp, they broughte no accusation of soch thinges as I supposed: But had certayne questions agaynst him of their awne supersticions, and of one Iesus deed, whom Paul affirmed to be alyue. Howbeit because I vnderstode not the question, I axed hī, whether he wolde go to Ierusalē, and there be iudged of these matters. But whā Paul had appealed, that he might be kepte vnto the knowlege of the Emperoure, I cōmaunded him to be kepte, till I mighte sende him to the Emperoure.

Agrippa sayde vnto Festus: I wolde fayne heare the man also. He sayde: Tomorrow shalt thou heare him. And on the nexte daye came Agrippa & Bernice with greate pompe, and wēte in to the comon hall with the captaynes & chefe mē of the cite. And at Festus cōmaundement, Paul was brought forth. And Festus sayde: Kynge Agrippa, and all ye men which are here with vs, ye se this man, aboute whom all the multitude of the Iewes haue entreated me, both at Ierusalē and here also, and cried, that he ought not to lyue eny lenger. But whan I perceained that he had done nothinge worthy off death, and that he himselfe also had appealed vnto the Emperoure, I determyned to sende him, of whō I haue no certayne thinge to wryte vnto my lorde. Therefore haue I caused hī to be broughte forth before you, specially before the (O kynge Agrippa) that after examinacion had, I might haue somwhat to wryte. For me thynke it an vnreasonable thinge to sende a presoner, and not to shewe the causes which are layed agaynst him.

The xxii. Chapter.

AGRIPPA sayde vnto Paul: Thou hast A leue to speake for thy selfe. Thē Paul stretched forth the hande, and answered for himselfe: I thinke my selfe happye (O kynge Agrippa) because I shal answere this daye before the, of all the thinges wherof I am accused of the Iewes: specially for so moch as thou art experte in all customes and questions, which are amonge the Iewes. Wherefore I beseeche the, to heare me paciently.

My lyuynge truly from youth vp (how it was led from the begynnynge amonge this people at Ierusalē) knowe all the Iewes which knewe me afore at the first, yf they wolde testifye, for after the most straye secte of oure Iewysh lawe, I lyued a Pharise. And now stonde I, and am iudged because of the hope of the †promes, that was made of God vnto oure fathers, vnto the which (promes) oure twolue trybes hope to come, seruyng God instātylly daye and nighte. For the which hopes sake (O kynge Agrippa) I am accused of the Iewes. Wherefore is this iudged amonge you not to be belened, that God rayseth vp the deed?

I also verely thoughte by my selfe, that I oughte to do many cōtrary thinges cleane agaynst the name off Iesus off Nazareth, † which I dyd at Ierusalem, whan I shut vp many sayntes in preson, whervpon I receaued auctorite of ŷ hye prestes. And whā they shulde be put to death, I broughte the sentence. And thorow all the synagoges I punyshed them oft, and compelled thē to blaspheme, and was exceedinge mad vpon them, and persecuted them euen vnto straunge cities. Aboute which thinges as I wente towardle Damascon with auctorite and lycence of the hye prestes, euen at myddaye (O kyng) I sawe in the waye, that a lighte from heauē (clearer then the brightnessse of the Sonne) shyned rounde aboute me, and them that journeyed with me.

C But whan we were all fallen downe to the earth, I herde a voyce speakynge vnto me, and saycge in Hebrue: Saul Saul, why persecutest thou me? It shalbe harde for the to kycke agaynst the prycke. But I sayde: LORDE, who art thou? He sayde: I am Iesus, whom thou persecutest. But ryse vp, and stonde vpon thy fete, for therefore haue I appeared vnto the, that I mighte ordeyne the to be a mynister and wittesse of it that thou hast sene, and that I wyll yet cause to appeare vnto the. And I wil deluyder the from the people, and from the Heythen, amonge whō I wil now sende the, to opē their eyes, that they maye turne from the darknesse vnto the * lighte, and from the power of ꝑ deuell vnto God, that they maye receaue forgeuenesse of synnes, and the enheritaunce with them that are sanctified by faith in me.

D Wherefore (O kyng Agrippa) I was not faithlesse vnto ꝑ heauēly vision, but shewed it first vnto them at Damascon, and at Ierusalē, and in all the coastes of Lewry, and to the Heythen, that they shulde tdo pennaunce, and turne vnto God, and to do the righte workes of pennaunce. For this cause the Iewes toke me in the temple, and wente aboute to kyll me. But thorow the helpe of God lent vnto me, I stonde vnto this daye, and testifye both vnto small and greate, and saye no other thinge, thē that ꝑ prophetes haue sayde (that it shulde come to passe) and Moses, that Christ shulde suffre, and be the first of the resurreccion from the deed, and shew light vnto the people, and to the Heythen.

E Whan he thus answered for himselfe, Festus sayde with a loude voyce: Paul, thou art besydes thy selfe, moch lernynge maketh ꝑ madd. But Paul sayde: I am not madd (most deare Festus) but speake the wordes of truth and sobernesse: for ꝑ kyng knoweth this well, vnto whom I speake frely. For I thinke that none off these thinges is hyd from him: for this was not done in a corner. Beleuest thou the prophetes, O kyng Agrippa?

I knowe that thou beleuest. Agrippa sayde vnto Paul: Thou persuadest me in a parte to become a Christen. Paul sayde: I wolde to God, that (not onely in a parte but all-together,) I mighte persuade not the onely, but all them that heare me this daye, to be soch I am, these bondes excepte. And whan he had spoken this, the kyng rose vp, and the Debyte, and Bernice, and they that sat with them, and wente asyde, and talked together, and sayde: This man hath done nothinge that is worthy of death or of bondes. But Agrippa sayde vnto Festus: This man mighte haue bene loused, yf he had not appealed vnto the Emperoure.

The xxiij. Chapter.

W HAN it was concluded that we shulde sayle in to Italy, they deluyered Paul and certayne other presoners to the vndercaptayne named Iulius, of the Emperours soudyers. And whan we were entred in to a shippe of Adramitium, to sayle by Asia, we lowsed from londe. And there was with vs one † Aristarchus out of Macedonia off Thesalonica, and on the nexte daye we came vnto Sidon. And Iulius intreated Paul curteously, and gaue him liberty to go to his frendes, and to refresh himselfe. And from thence launched we, and sayled harde by Cypers (because the wyndes were agaynst vs) and sayled ouer the see of Celicia and Pamphilia, and came to Myra in Lycia.

And there the vndercaptayne founde a shippe of Alexandria, ready to sayle in to Italy, and put vs therin. And whan we had sayled slowly, and in many dayes were scarcely come ouer agaynst Gnydon (for the wynde with stode vs) we sayled by Candy nye vnto the cite off Salmo, and came scarcely beyonde it. Then came we to a place, which is called Goodhauen, nye where vnto was the cite Lasea. Now whan moch tyme was spent, and saylinge was now ioperdous, because that they also had fasted ouerlonge, Paul exhorted them, and sayde vnto them: Syrs, I se that this saylinge wyl be with hurte and moch dammage, not onely of the ladyng and of the shippe, but also of oure lyues.

Neuertheles ꝑ vndercaptayne beleued the gouernoure of the shippe and ꝑ master, more then it that was spoken of Paul. And for so much as the hauē was not comodious to wynter in, the more parte off them toke counsell to de- parte thēce, yf by eny meanes they might come to Phenices to wynter there, which is an hauen of Candy, towarde the Southwest and North- west wynde. Whan the South wynde blewē, they supposinge to haue had their purpose, lowsed vnto Asson, and sayled past all Candy.

But not longe after, there rose agaynst their purpose a flawe of wynde, which is called the Northeast. And whan the shippe was caught, and coulede not resist y wynde, we let her go, and draue with the wedder. But we came to an Ile named Claudia, where we coulede scarce get a bote. Which they toke vp, and vsed helpe, and bounde it vnder harde to the shippe, fearinge lest they shulde haue fallen in to the *Syrtes, and let downe the vessell, and so were caried. And whan we had bydden a greate tēpest, on the nexte daye they made an outcastinge. And on the thirde daye with oure awne handes we cast out the tacklynge of the shippe. But whā nether Sonne ner starres appeared in many dayes, and no small tempest laye vpon vs, all the hope of oure life was taken awaye.

And after longe abstinence, Paul stode forth in the myddes of thē, and sayde: Syrs, ye shulde haue herkened vnto me, and not to haue lowsed from Candy, and not to haue broughte vs this harme and losse. And now I exhorte you to be of good cheare, for there shal none of oure lyues perishe, but the shippe onely.

For this night stode by me the angell off God (whose I am, ⁊ whō I serue) ⁊ saide: Feare not Paul, thou must be broughte before the Emperoure. And lo, God hath geuen vn to the all thē that sayle with the. Wherefore syrs be of good cheare: for I beleue God, y it shal come so to passe, as it was tolde me. Howbeit we must be cast in to a certayne ylonde.

But whan the fourteenth night came, as we were caried in Adria aboute mydnight, y shipmen demed that there appeared some cōunte vnto them, and they cast out the leade, and founde it twēty feddoms: and whā they were gone a litle farther, they cast out the leade agayne, and founde fyfene feddoms.

Then fearinge lest they shulde fall on some rocke, they cast foure anckers out of the sterne, and wyszhd for the daye. Whan the shipmen were aboute to flye out of the shippe, and let downe the bote in to the see, (vnder a coloure as though they wolde cast ankers out of the fore shippe) Paul sayde to y vnder- captayne and to the soudyers: Excepte these byde in the shippe, ye can not be saued. Then the soudyers cut of the rope from the bote, and let it fall. And whan it beganne to be daye, Paul exhorted them all to take meate, and sayde: To daye is the fourtene daye that ye haue taried and contynued fastinge, and haue receaued nothinge: Wherefore I praye you to take meate, for youre health: for there shal not one heer fall from the heade of eny of you. And whan he had thus spoken, he toke bred, and † gaue thanks to God before them all, and brake it, and begāne to eate. Then were they all of good cheare, and toke meate also. We were all together in the shippe two hundredth thre score and sixtene soules. And whan they had eaten ynough, they lightened the shippe, and cast out the wheate in to the see.

Whan it was daye, they knewe not the londe. But they spyed an hauen with a banke, in to which they were mynded (yf it were possible) to thrust in the shippe. And whan they had takē vp the anckers, they commytted them selues to the see, and lowsed the rudder bandes, and hoysed vp the mayne sayle to the wynde, and drue towarde londe. And whan we chaunced on a place which had the see on both the sydes, the shippe daszhd vpon it. And the fore parte abode fast vnmooued, but the hynder parte brake thorow the violence of the wawes.

The soudyers counsell was to kyll y pre- soners, lest eny of them whan he had swymmed out, shulde flye awaye. But the vndercap- tayne wyllinge to saue Paul, kepted them from their purpose, and commaunded that they which coulede swymme, shulde cast them selues first in to the see, and escape vnto londe: and the other, some on bordes, some on broken peces of the shippe. And so it came to passe, that all the soules came safe vnto londe.

The xxviii. Chapter.

AND whā we were escaped, we knewe that the Ile was called Melite. As for the people, they shewed vs no litle kyndnesse:

* Syrtes, are perious places i the see.

* Mat. 10. d.

Luc. 12. a. † Mar. 6. e. and 8. a. Ioh. 6. a. 1 Tim. 4. a.

for they kyndled a fyre, and receaued vs all because of the rayne that was come vpō vs, and because of the colde. Whan Paul had gathered a bondell of stickes, and layed them on the fyre, there came a vyper out of the heate, and leape on Pauls hande. Whan the people sawe the beest hange on his hande, they sayde amonge them selues: This man must nedes be a murthurer, whō vengeaunce suffreth not to lyue, though he haue escaped the see. But he shoke of ſ̄ beest in to the fyre, * and felt no harme. Howbeit they wayted, whā he shulde haue swollen, or fallen downe deed sodenly. But whan they had loked a greate whyle, and sawe ſ̄ there happened no harme vnto him, they chaunged their myndes, and sayde that he was a God.

In the same quarters the chefe man of the Ile whose name was Publius had a lordshipe: the same receaued vs, and lodged vs thre dayes curteously. It fortunēd whā Publius father laye sicke of the feuers and of a bloudy fluxe, Paul wente in vnto him, and prayed, and layed the handes on him, and healed him.

33 Whan this was done, other also which had diseases in the Ile, came, and were healed. And they dyd vs greate honoure. And whan we departed, they laded vs with thinges necessary.

After thre monethes we sayled in a shippe of Alexandria, which had wyntred in the Ile, and had a badge of Castor and Pollux. And whan we came to Syracusa, we taried there thre dayes. And whan we had sayled aboute, we came to Rhegium: and after one daye whan the south wynde blewē, we came to Putiolus, where we founde breth̄r and were desyred of them to tarye there seuē dayes, and so came we to Rome. And from thence whan the breth̄ren herde of vs, they came forth to mete vs to Apiforum and to the Thre tauerns. Whan Paul sawe them, he thāked God, and waxed bolde. But whā we came to Rome, the vnder captayne delyuered the presoners to ſ̄ chefe captayne. As for Paul, he had leue to byde alone with one soudyer that kepte him.

Ⓒ After thre dayes it fortunēd, ſ̄ Paul called ſ̄ chefe of ſ̄ Iewes together. And whā they were come, he sayde vnto thē: Ye mē & breth̄r † I haue cōmytted nathing agaynst oure people, ner agaynst ſ̄ fathers, yet was I boude, delyuered out of Ierusalē in to ſ̄ Romaynes hādes: which whā they had examyned me, wolde haue let me go, for so moch as there was no cause of death ī me. But whā ſ̄ Iewes spake ſ̄ cōtrary, I was cōstrayned to appeale vnto ſ̄ Emperoure: not as though I had ought to accuse my people of. For this cause haue I called you, euē to se you, & to speake with you: because ſ̄ ‡ for ſ̄ hope of Israel, I am bounde with this cheyne. They sayde vnto hī: We haue nether receaued letter out of Iewry cōcernynge the, nether came there eny of the breth̄r, ſ̄ shewed or spake eny harme of ſ̄. But we wyl heare of ſ̄, what thou thinkest: for we haue herde of this secte, that euery where ſ̄ it is spoken agaynst. And whā they had appoynted hī a daye, there came many vnto hī in to his lodgings: vnto whō he expōued ſ̄ kyngdome of God & preached vnto thē of Iesu, out of ſ̄ lawe and out of the prophetes, euē frō mornynge vntyll the euē. And some beleued ſ̄ thinge ſ̄ he sayde, but some beleued not.

But whā they agreed not amōge thē selues, they departed, whā Paul had spokē one worde: Full well hath the holy goost spokē by ſ̄ prophet Esay vnto oure fathers, & sayde: "Go vnto this people, and saye: With eares ye shal heare, & not vnderstōde: & with eyes shal ye se, & not perceaue. For ſ̄ hert of this people is waxed grosse, & they heare hardly with their eares: & their eyes haue they closed, ſ̄ they shulde not once se with their eyes, & heare with their eares, & vnderstōde ī their hertes, and be cōuerted, ſ̄ I mighte heale thē. Be it knowne therefore vnto you, ſ̄ this saluaciō of God is sent vnto ſ̄ Heythē, and they shal heare it. And whā he sayde ſ̄, ſ̄ Iewes departed, & had a greate disputaciō amonge thē selues. But Paul abode two whole yeares in his owne hyred dwellinge, & receaued all thē ſ̄ came in vnto hī, preachinge ſ̄ kyngdome of God, and teachinge those thinges which concerne the LORDē Iesus with all boldnesse, vnforbydden.

The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Romaines.

The Summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

Paul declareth his loue towarde the Romaines, sheweth what the gospell is with the frute therof, and rebuketh the beestlynnesse of the flesh.

Chap. II.

He rebuketh the Iewes, which as touchinge synne are like the Heythē, yee worse then they.

Chap. III.

He sheweth what preferment the Iewes haue, and that both the Iewes and Gētiles are vnder synne, and are iustified only by the grace of God in Christ.

Chap. IIII.

He declareth by the exāple of Abrahā, that faith iustifieth, and not the lawe, ner the workes therof.

Chap. V.

The power of faith, hope, and loue: and how death raigned frō Adā vnto Christ, by whō only we haue forgeuenesse of synnes.

Chap. VI.

For so moch as we be deluyered thorow christ from synne, we must fashion oure selues to lyue as the seruantes of God, and not after oure awne lustes. The vnlke rewarde of righteousnes and synne.

Chap. VII.

Christ hath deluyered vs from the lawe and death. Paul sheweth what the flesh and outwarde man is, and calleth it the lawe of the membres.

Chap. VIII.

The lawe of the sprete geueth life. The sprete of God maketh vs Gods children and heyres with Christ. The abundaunt loue of God can not be separated.

Chap. IX.

Paul complayneth vpon the hard hertes of the Iewes, that wolde not receaue Christ, and how the Heythē are chosen in their steade.

Chap. X.

The vnfaithfulnes of the Iewes. Two maner of righteousnesses.

Chap. XI.

All the Iewes are not cast awaye, therefore Paul warneth the Gentiles that be called, not to be hye mynded, ner to despise the Iewes, for the iudgmētes of God are depe and secrete.

Chap. XII.

The swete conuersacion, loue, and workes of soch as beleue in Christ.

Chap. XIII.

The obedience of men vnto their rulers. Loue fulfilleth the lawe. It is now no tyme to folowe the workes of darknesse.

Chap. XIII.

The weake ought not to be despysed. No man shulde offende anothers conscience. Agayne, for outward thinges shulde no man condemne another.

Chap. XV.

The infirmite and fraylnesse of the weake ought to be borne with all loue and kyndnesse, after the ensample of Christ.

Chap. XVI.

A chapter of salutacions. He warneth them to bewarre of mens doctryne, and commendeth vnto them certayne godly men, that were louers and brethren in the trueth.

The first Chapter.

A PAUL the seruaunte of Iesus Christ, called to be an Apostle, * put aparte to preach the Gospell of God (which † he promysed afore by his prophetes in ‡ holy scriptures) off his sonne, which was begottē of § sede of Dauid after the flesh: and mightely declared to be the sonne of God after the sprete which sanctifieth, sence the tyme that he rose agayne from the deed, namely, Iesus Christ oure LORDE, by whom we haue § receaued grace and Apostelshippe amonge all Heythen, to set vp the obedience of faith vnder his name, of whom ye are a parte also, which are called of Iesus Christ.

To all you that be at Rome, beloued of God, and sayntes by callinge ¶ Grace be with you and peace frō God oure father, and the LORDE Iesus Christ.

First, I thanke my God thorow Iesus Christ for you all, that youre faith is spoken of thorow out all the worlde. For God is my wittenesse (¶ whom I serue in my sprete in the Gospell of his sonne) that without ceassynge I make mention of you ** besekinge allwayes in my prayers, that I mighte once haue a prosperous iourney (†† by the will off God) to come vnto you. For I longe to se you, that I mighte bestowe vpon you some spirituall gifte to strēth you (that is) that I mighte be comforted with you, thorow youre faith ¶ myne, which we haue together.

But I wolde ye shulde knowe (brethren) how that I haue often tymes purposed to come vnto you (but haue bene †† let hither to) that I mighte do some good amonge you, like as amonge other Gentyles. I am detter both to the Grekes, and to the vngrekes, to the wyse and to the vnwyse. Wherefore (as moch as i me is) I am ready to preach the Gospell vnto you at Rome also.

¶ For I am not ashamed of the Gospell of Christ: for it is the §§ power of God, which saueth all that beleue thereon, the lewe first ¶ also the Greke: for in it § righteousnes that is of value before God, is opened, which cometh out of faith i to faith. As it is wryttē:

¶ The iust shal lyue by his faith. For § wrath of God is declared from heauen vpon all vn-godlynnes and vnrighteousnes of mē, which withholde the trueth of God in vnrighteousnes: because that it, which maye be knowne of God, is manifest with thē. For God hath shewed it vnto thē, that the inuisible thinges of God (that is, his euerlastinge power and Godheade) mighte be sene ¶ whyle they are considered by the workes from the creacion of the worlde: so that they are without excuse, in as moch as they knewe, that there is a God, and haue not prayed him as God ner thanked him, but became wayne in their ymaginacions, and ¶¶ their foolish hert was blynded. When they counted them selues wyse, they became foolles: and turned *** § glory of the incorruptible God in to § symilitude of § ymage of a corruptible mā, ¶ of byrdes, ¶ of foure foted, ¶¶ of cреpinge beestes ¶¶¶ Wherefore God likewise gaue them vp vnto their hertes lustes in to vncleannes, to defyle their awne bodies in them selues, which turned the trueth of God vnto a lye, ¶ worshipped and

D Therefore God gaue the vp vnto shameful lustes. * For their women chaunged the naturall vse in to the vnnaturall: likewise y<sup>e</sup> mē also lefte the naturall vse of the woman, and brent in their lustes one on another, and man with man wrought fylthines, and receaued in them selues the rewarde of their erreure, as it was acordinge. † And as they regarded not to knowe God, euen so ‡ God gaue the vp in to a lewde mynde, to do those thinges which were not comly, beyng full of all vnrighteousnes, whordome, wickednes, couetousnes, maliciousnes, full of enuye, murthur, strife, disceate, euell conditioned whisperers, backbyters, despyers of God, doers of wronge, proude, boosters, bryngers vp of euell thinges, disobedient to their Elders, without vnderstandinge, couenauent breakers, vnlouyng, stubborne, vnmercifull: which men, though they knowe the righteousness of God (that they which do soch, are worthy of death) yet not onely do the same, but also haue pleasure in those that do the.

The ij. Chapter.

A THEREFORE canst thou not excuse thy selfe (O nā) who soener thou be that iudget: § for § loke wherein thou iudget another, thou condemnest thy selfe, in so moch as thou that iudget, doest euen the same. For we are sure that the iudgment of God is (acordinge to the trueth) ouer them that do soch. But thinkest thou this O thou man, that iudget them which do soch thinges, and doest euen the very same thy selfe, that thou shalt escape y<sup>e</sup> iudgmēt of God? Or despysest thou the riches of his goodnesse, patience, and lōge sufferinge? ¶ Knowest thou not, that y<sup>e</sup> louyng kyndnesse of God leadeth the to repentance?

But thou after thine harde and impenitent hert, heapest vnto thy selfe a treasure of wrath, agaynst the daye of wrath and of the openyng of the righteous iudgment of God, ¶ which shal rewarde euery man acordinge to his dedes: namely, prayse & honoure, and vncorruption, vnto them that with patience in doinge good, seke euerlasting life: But vnto them that are contentious ** & not obedient vnto the trueth, but obeye vnrighteousnes, shal come indignacion and wrath, trouble and anguysh vpō all the soules of mē that do euell, of the lewe first and also of the Greke: But vnto all the that do good (shal come) prayse and honoure, and peace, vnto the lewe first, and also to the Greke.

†† For there is no respecte of personnes before God: Who so euer haue synned without lawe, shal perish also without lawe: and whoso euer haue synned in the lawe, shalbe iudged by the lawe. ‡‡ For before God, they are not righteous, which heare y<sup>e</sup> lawe: but they that do the lawe, shalbe iustified. For yf the Gentyles which haue not the lawe, do of nature the thinges conteyned in the lawe, then they haunyng not the lawe, are a lawe vnto them selues, in that they shewe, that the worke of y<sup>e</sup> lawe is wrytē in their hertes: whyle their conscience beareth witness vnto the, and also the thoughtes which accuse or excuse them amonge them selues, in the daye whan God shal iudge the secretes of men by Iesus Christ, acordinge to my Gospell.

But take hede, §§ thou art called a lewe, and trustest in the lawe, & makest thy boost of God, and knowest his will: & for so moch as thou art enfourmed out of y<sup>e</sup> lawe, thou prouest what is best to do, and presumest to be a leader of the blynde: a lighte of them y<sup>e</sup> are in dareknes: an enformer of y<sup>e</sup> vnwyse: a teacher of y<sup>e</sup> symple: which hast the ensample of knowlege & of the trueth in the lawe.

Now teachest thou other, and teachest not thy selfe. Thou preachest that a man shulde not steale, and thou stealest. Thou sayest, that a man shulde not breake wedlocke, and thou breakest wedlocke. Thou abhorrest ymages, and robbest God of his honoure. Thou makest thy boost of the lawe, and thorow breakyng of the lawe thou dishonorest God. For thorow you is the name of God euell spoken of amonge the Gentyles, || as it is wrytten.

The circūcision verely awayleth, yf thou kepe the lawe: but yf thou breake the lawe, then is thy circumcision become vncircumcision. Therefore yf the vncircumcision kepe the righte thinges conteyned in the lawe, shal not his vncircumcision be counted for circumcision? And so it that of nature is vncircumcision, and fulfilleth the lawe shal iudge the, which vnder the letter and circumcision transgresseth the lawe. For he is not a Iewe which is a Iewe outwarde: nether is that circumcision which is done outwardly in the flesh: "But he is a Iewe, which is hydd within. And * the circumcision of the heart is the circumcision, which is done in the sprete and not in the letter: whose prayse is not of men, but of God.

The iii. Chapter.

WHAT furtheraunce then haue the Iewes? Or what auantageth circicision? Surely very moch. First † Vnto them was commytted what God spake. But where as some of them dyd not beleue theron, what then? shulde their vnebeue make the promes of God of none effecte? God forbyd. Let it rather be thus, that <sup>a</sup>God is true,<sup>t</sup> and all mē lyers. As it is wyrtten: That thou mayest be iustified in thy sayenges, and shuldest ouercome, whā thou art iudged.

But yf it be so, that oure vnrighteousnes prayseth y<sup>e</sup> righteousness of God, what shal we saye? Is God then vnrighteous, that he is angrie therfore? (I speake thus after the maner off men) God forbyd. How mighte God the iudge y<sup>e</sup> worlde? For yf the trueth of God be throw my lye the more excellent vnto his prayse, why shulde I thē be iudged yet as a synner? ¶ not rather to do thus (as we are euell spoken of, and as some repute, that we shulde saye) Let vs do euell, y<sup>e</sup> good maye come therof. Whose dānaciō is iuste.

What saye we then? Are we better then they? No, in no wyse: for we haue proued afore, y both the Iewes and Grekes are all vnder synne. As it is wrytē: There is none righteous, no not one. There is none y vnderstandeth, there is none that seketh after God. They are all gone out of the waye, they are altogether become vnprofitable: there is none that doeth good, no not one. Their throte is an open sepulchre, with their tunges they haue disceaued, the payson off Aspes is vnder their lippes. Their mouth is full of cursynge and bytternesse. Their fete are swifte to shed bloude. Destruction & wrechidnes are in their wayes, and y waye of peace haue they not knowne. ¶ There is no feare of God before their eyes.

But we knowe, y, what soeuer the lawe sayeth, it sayeth it vnto them which are vnder the lawe, y euery mouthe maye be stopped, y all the worlde maye be better vnto God,* because y by y dedes of the lawe no flesh maye be iustified in his sighte.† For by the lawe cometh but the knowlege of synne. But now without addinge to of y lawe is the righteousnes which auayleth before God, declared, hauynge witness of y lawe and the prophetes: but I speake of y righteousnes before God, which cometh by the faith on Iesus Christ, vnto all, and vpō all them that beleue.

For here is no difference. For they are all synners, and wate the prayse that God shulde haue of the, but without deservynge are they made righteous euē by his grace, thorow the redemption that is done by Christ Iesu, whom God hath set forth for a ⁊ Mercy seate thorow faith in his bloude, to shewe the righteousnes which avayleth before him, in that he foregoueth the synnes, which were done before vnder the sufferance of God, which he suffred, that at this tyme he might shewe ⁊ righteousnes which avayleth before him: ⁊ he onely might be righteous, ⁊ the righteous maker of him which is of the faith on Iesus.

Where is now then thy reioysinge? It is excluded. By what lawe? By the lawe of workes? Nay, but by the lawe of faith. We holde therefore that a man is iustified <sup>ss</sup> by faith, without the workes of the lawe. Or is God the God of the Iewes onely? Is he not also the God of the Heythen? Yes verely the God of the Heythen also, for so much as he is the God onely that iustifieth the circumcision which is of faith, and the vncircūcision thorow faith. Destroye we then the lawe thorow faith? God forbyd. But we mantayne the lawe.

dyd fynde? This we saye: Yf Abraham were made righteous thorow workes, then hath he wherin to reioyse, but not before God. But what sayeth  $\hat{\gamma}$  scripture? \* Abraham beleued God,  $\tau$   $\hat{\gamma}$  was counted vnto him for righteousnes. Vnto hi  $\hat{\gamma}$  goeth aboute with workes, is the rewarde not rekened of fauoure, but of dutye: Howbeit vnto him,  $\hat{\gamma}$  goeth not aboute with workes, but beleueth on him  $\hat{\gamma}$  iustifieth the vngodly, is his faith counted for righteousnes. Euen as Dauid sayeth also, that blessednes is onely that mans, vnto whō God counteth righteousnes without addinge to of workes, where he sayeth: "Blessed are they, whose vnrighteousnes are forgeuen, and whose synnes are couered. Blessed is the man, vnto whom the LORDE imputeth no synne.

B Now this blessednes, goeth it ouer the circūcision, or ouer the vncircumcision? We must nedes graunte,  $\hat{\gamma}$  Abrahā's faith was couēted vnto hi for righteousnes. How was it the rekened vnto him? In the circūcision, or in the vncircumcision? Doubtles  $\dagger$  not in the circūcision, but in the vncircumcision. As for the tokē of circūcision  $\dagger$  he receaued it for a seale off the righteousness off faith, which he had yet in  $\hat{\gamma}$  vncircūcision,  $\hat{\gamma}$  he shulde be a father of all thē  $\hat{\gamma}$  beleue, beinge in  $\hat{\gamma}$  vncircūcisiō,  $\hat{\gamma}$  it might be couēted vnto thē also for righteousnes:  $\tau$  that he might be a father of circumcisiō, not onely of thē that are of  $\hat{\gamma}$  circumcisiō, but of them also that walke in the foteystepes of the faith, which was in the vncircumcisiō of oure father Abraham.

C For the promes (that he shulde be  $\hat{\gamma}$  heyre of the worlde) was not made vnto Abraham or to his sede thorow the lawe, but thorow the righteousness of faith.  $\hat{\gamma}$  For yf they which are of the lawe be heyres, thē is faith vayne, and the promes of none effecte, for so moch as the lawe causeth but wrath. For where the lawe is not, there is also no transgression. Therefore was the promes made thorow faith, that it myght come off fauoure, wherby the promesse myghte be made sure vnto all the sede: not onely vnto him which is off the lawe, but also vnto him that is of the faith of Abraham  $\parallel$  which is the father of vs all. As it is written:  $\parallel$  I haue made the a father of many Heythē before God, whom thou hast beleued: which quickeneth the deed, and calleth it which is not, that it maye be.

And he beleued vpō hope, where nothinge D was to hope, that he shulde be a father of many Heythen. Acordinge as it was sayde vnto him: \*\* Euen so shal thy sede be. And he was not faynte in faith, nether cōsidred his awne body, which was deed allready, whyle he was almost an hundreth yeare olde, nether the deed wombe of Sara. For he doubted not in the promes of God thorow vnbeleue, but was strōge in faith, and gaue God the prayse:  $\tau$  was sure, that lōke what God promyseth, he is able to make it good. And therefore was it rekened vnto him for righteousnes.  $\dagger\dagger$  But this is not wyttē onely for his sake,  $\hat{\gamma}$  it was counted vnto him, but also for oure sakes: vnto whō it shalbe counted, yf we beleue on him, that raysed vp oure LORDE Iesus from the deed. Which  $\dagger\dagger$  was geuen for oure synnes, and raysed vp for oure righteousness sake.

The 6. Chapter.

BECAUSE therefore that we are iustified A by faith, we haue peace with God thorow oure LORDE Iesus Christ, by whō also we haue an intrauce in faith vnto this grace, wherin we stonde,  $\tau$   $\S\S$  reioyse in the hope of  $\hat{\gamma}$  glorie for to come, which God shal geue. Not onely  $\hat{\gamma}$ , but we reioyse also  $\bar{\imath}$  troubles, for so moch as we knowe,  $\hat{\gamma}$   $\parallel$  trouble bryngeth paciēce, paciēce bryngeth experieñce, experieñce bryngeth hope: As for hope, is letteth vs not come to cōfusiō, because the loue of God is shed abroad in oure hertes, by the holy goost which is geuen vnto vs. For whan we were yet weake acordinge to the tyme,  $\hat{\gamma}$  Christ dyed for vs vngodly. reioyce also in God thorow oure LORDE Iesus Christ, by whom we haue now receaued the attonement.

Wherefore \* as by one man synned entred in to the worlde, and death by  $\hat{y}$  meanes off synne: euen so wente death also ouer all men, in so moch as they all haue synned. For synne was in  $\hat{y}$  worlde vnto the lawe: but where no lawe is, there is not synne regarded. Neuertheles death reigned from Adam vnto Moses, euen ouer them also that synned not with like trangression as dyd Adam, which is  $\hat{y}$  ymage of him  $\hat{y}$  was to come.

But it is not with the gifte as with the synne: for yf thorow the synne of one man ye be deed, yet moch more plenteously came the grace and gifte of God vpon many  $\dagger$  by the fauoure that belonged vnto one man Iesus Christ.

C And the gifte is not onely ouer one synne, as death came thorow one synne of one that synned. For the iudgment came of one synne vnto condemnation, but the gifte to iustifye fro many synnes. For yf by  $\hat{y}$  synne of one, death raigned by the meanes of one, moch more shal they which receaue the abūdaunce of grace and of the gifte vnto righteousness, raigne in life by  $\hat{y}$  meanes of one Iesus Christ. Likewise the as by the synne of one, condemnation came on all men, euen so also by the righteousness of one, came the iustifenge off life vpon all men. For as by the disobedience of one, many became synners, euen so by the obedience of one shal many be made righteous.

\* But the lawe in the meane tyme entred, that synne shulde increace. $\dagger$  Neuertheles where abundaunce of synne was, there was yet more plenteousnes of grace: that, like as synne had reigned vnto death, euē so mighte grace reigne also thorow righteousness to euerlasting life by the meanes of Iesus Christ.

The vi. Chaptr.

Q WHAT shal we saye then? Shal we contynue in synne, that thero maye be abundaunce of grace? God forbyd. How shal we lyue in synne,  $\hat{y}$  are deed from it?  $\S$  Knowe ye not, that all we which are baptysed in to Iesu Christ, are baptysed in to his death? Therefore are we buried with him by baptyme in to death, that, like as Christ was rayzed vp from the deed by the glory of the fater,  $\parallel$  euen so we also shulde walke in a new life. For yf we be grafted with him vnto like death, then shal we be like the resurrection also: For so moch as we knowe, that oure olde man is crucified with him, that the synfull body mighte cease, that hence forth we shulde serue synne nomore. ¶ For he that is deed, is made righteous frō synne.

B  $\dagger$  But yf we be deed with Christ, we beleue, that we shal lyue also with him, and are sure,  $\ast\ast$  that Christ rayzed from the deed, dyeth nomore: Death shal haue nomore power ouer him. For as touchinge that he dyed, he dyed cōcernynge synne once: but as touchinge that he lyueth, he lyueth vnto God. Likewise ye also, counte youre selues to be euen deed concernynge synne, and to lyue vnto God thorow Iesus Christ oure LORDE. Let not synne reigne therfore in youre mortall bodye, that ye shulde obeye vnto the lustes of it. Nether geue ye ouer youre membres vnto synne to be wapens of vnrighteousnes, but geue ouer youre selues vnto God, as they that off deed are become lyuynge, and youre membres vnto God to be wapens off righteousness. For synne shal not haue power ouer you, in so moch as ye are not vnder the lawe, but vnder grace.

How then? Shal we synne, because we are not vnder  $\hat{y}$  lawe, but vnder grace? God forbyd.  $\dagger\ast$  Knowe ye not, that loke vnto whō ye geue ouer youre selues as seruauntes to obeye, his seruauntes ye are to whom ye obey, whether it be of synne vnto death, or of obediēce vnto righteousness? But God be thanked, that though ye haue bene the seruauntes of synne, ye are now yet obedient of herte to the ensample off the doctryne, whervnto ye are commytted. For now that ye are made free from synne, ye are become the seruauntes of righteousness.

C I wil speake grosly, because of the weaknes of youre flesh. Like as ye haue geuen ouer youre membres to the seruyce of vncleennesse, from one wickednesse to another: Euē so now also geue ouer youre membres to the seruyce of righteousness, that they maye be holy. For whan ye were the seruauntes of synne, ye were lowse from righteousness. What frute had ye at that tyme in those things, wherof ye are now ashamed? For the ende of soch thinges is death. But now that ye be fre from synne, and are become the seruantes of God, ye haue youre frute that ye shulde be holy: but the ende is euerlastinge life. * For death is the rewarde of synne, but the gifte of God is euerlastinge life.

The viij. Chapter.

KNOWE ye not brethren (for I speake vnto them that knowe the lawe) how that  $\text{y}$  lawe hath power vpon a man as longe as he lyueth? \* For the woman  $\text{y}$  is in subieccion to the man, is bounde vnto the lawe whyle the man lyueth: but yf the man dye, then is she lowsed from the lawe that concerneth the man. †Yf she be now with another man, whyle the man lyueth, she shal be called a wedlocke breaker. But yf the man be deed, then is she fre from the lawe, so that she is no wedlocke breaker, yf she be with another man.

Euen so my brethren, ye also are deed vnto the lawe by the body of Christ, that ye shulde be with another (namely with him which is raysed vp from the deed) that we shulde brynge forth frute vnto God. For whan we were in the flesh, the synfull lustes (which were stered vp by the lawe) were mightie in oure membres to brynge forth frute vnto death. But now are we lowsed from the lawe, and deed vnto it, that helde vs captiue, so that we shulde serue in a new conuersacion of the sprete, and not in the olde conuersacion of the letter.

What shal we saye then? Is the lawe synne? God forbyd: Neuertheles I knewe not synne, but by  $\text{y}$  lawe. For I had knowne nothinge of lust, yf the lawe had not sayde: †Thou shalt not lust. But then toke synne occasion at the commaundement, and stered vp in me all maner of lust. For without the lawe synne was deed. As for me, I lyued some tyme without lawe. Howbeit whan the commaundement came, synne reuyed, but I was deed. And the very same commaundement that was geuen me vnto life, was founde to be vnto me on occasion of death. For synne toke occasion at the comaundement, and disceaue me, and slewe me by the same commaundement. § The lawe in dede is holy, and the commaundement holy, iust and good. Is that then which is good, become death vnto me? God forbyd. But synne, that it mighte appeare how  $\text{y}$  it is synne, hath wroughte me death thorow good: that synne mighte be out of measure synfull by the commaundement. For we knowe, that the lawe is spirituall, but I am carnall, ¶ solde vnder synne: because I knowe not what I do. For I do not  $\text{y}$  I will, but what I hate,  $\text{y}$  do I. Yf I do now that which I wil not, the graunte I, that the lawe is good.

So then it is not I that do it, but synne that dwelleth in me: for I knowe that in me ( $\text{y}$  is, in my  $\text{f}$  flesh) there dwelleth no good thinge. To wyll is present with me, but to perfourme  $\text{y}$  which is good, I fynde not. For  $\text{y}$  good that I wyll, do I not: but the euell which I wil not, that do I. Yf I do now that I wil not, then is it not I that do it, but synne that dwelleth in me.

Thus fynde I now by the lawe,  $\text{y}$  whan I wyl do good, euell is present with me. For I delite in the lawe of God after the inwarde man: but I se another lawe in my membres, which stryeth agaynst  $\text{y}$  lawe of my mynde, and taketh me prisoner in  $\text{y}$  lawe of synne, which is in my membres. O wretched man that I am, who shal delyuer me from the body of this death? I thanke God thorow Iesus Christ oure LORDE. So then with the mynde I serue  $\text{y}$  lawe of God, but with the flesh the lawe of synne.

The viij. Chapter.

THEN is there now no damnacion vnto the that are in Christ Iesu, which walke not after the flesh, but after  $\text{y}$  sprete. For  $\text{y}$  lawe of  $\text{y}$  sprete ( $\text{y}$  bryngeth life i Christ Iesu) hath made me \*\*fre fro the lawe of synne & death. ††For what vnpossible was vnto  $\text{y}$  lawe (in as moch as it was weake because of the flesh)  $\text{y}$  perfourmed God, & sent his sonne in  $\text{y}$  similitude of synfull flesh, & by ††synne dāned synne in  $\text{y}$  flesh: that the righteousnes requyred of the lawe, mighte be fulfilled in vs, which walke not after the flesh, but after the sprete. For they that are fleshly, are fleshly mynded: but they that are goostly, are goostly mynded. To be fleshly mynded, is death: but to be goostly mynded, is life and peace. For to be fleshly mynded is enemyte agaynst God, §§syth it is not subdued vnto  $\text{y}$  lawe of God, for it can not also. As for the

[that are fleshlye, they can not please God. Howbeit ye are not fleshly, but goostly, yf so be that the sprete of God dwell in you. But who so hath not the sprete of Christ, the same is not his. Neuertheles yf Christ be in you, then is the body deed because of synne. But the sprete is life for righteousnes sake.

B Wherefore yf the sprete of him, that rayseed vp Iesus from the deed, dwell in you, then shal euen he also that rayseed vp Christ from the deed, quyeckē youre mortal bodies, because ſ his sprete dwelleth in you. Therefore brethrē we are now detters, not to the flesh, to lyue after the flesh: for yf ye lyue after ſ fleshe, ye must dye: but yf ye mortyfye the dedes of the body thorow the sprete, ye shal lyue. For who so euer are led by the sprete of God, are Gods childrē: for ye haue not receaued the sprete of bondage to feare eny more, but ye haue receaued ſ sprete of adoption, wherby we crye: Abba, deare father.* The same sprete certifieth oure sprete, that we are the childrē of God. Yf we be childrē, then are we heyres also, namely the heyres of God, and heyres annexed with Christ, yf so be that we suffer together, that we maye be also glorified together.

C For I suppose, that the afflictions off this tyme, are not worthy of ſ glorye, which shalbe shewed vpon vs. † For the feruent lōginge of ſ creature loketh for the appearinge of the children of God, because the creature is subdued vnto vanyte agaynst hir will, but for his wyll that hath subdued her vpon hope. For the creature also shal be fre from the bondage of corrupcion, vnto the glorious libertye of the childrē of God. For we knowe, that euery creature groneth, and ‡ trauayleth with vs in payne vnto the same tyme.

Not they only, but we oure selues also, which haue the first frutes of the sprete, grone within in oure selues for the childshippe, and loke for ſ delyuerance of oure bodye. For we are sauē ī dede, howbeit ī hope: but ſ hope that is sene, is no hope: for how can a man hope for that which he seyth? But yf we hope for that which we se not, thē do we thorow pacience abyde for it.

D Likewise the sprete also helpeth oure weakness: for we knowe not what we shulde desyre as we oughte: § neuertheles ſ sprete it selfe maketh intercession mightely for vs with vnoutspeakable gronynge. Howbeit he ſ searcheth the hert, knoweth what the mynde of the sprete is: for he maketh intercession for the sayntes accordinge to the pleasure of God. But sure we are, that all thinges serue for the best vnto them that loue of God, which are called of purpose. For those whom he knewe before, hath he ordeyned also before, ſ they shulde be like fashioned vnto ſ shappe of his sonne, ſ he mighte be the first begottē amōge many brethrē. As for those whom he hath ordeyned before, them hath he called also: and whom he hath called, thē hath he also made righteous: and whom he hath made righteous, them hath he glorified also.

What shal we saye then vnto these thinges? ¶ Yf God be on oure syde, who can be agaynst vs. ¶ Which spared not his owne sonne, but hath geuen him for vs all: how shal he not with him geue vs all thinges also? Who wyl laye eny thinge to ſ charge of Gods chosen? Here is God that maketh righteous, who wil then condemne? Here is Christ that is deed, yee rather which is rayseed vp agayne, which is also on ſ righte hande of God, and maketh intercession for vs.

Who will separate vs from the loue of God? Trouble? or anguysh? or persecuciō? or hunger? or nakednesse? or paille? or swerde? As it is wrytten: ¶ For thy sake are we kylled all the daye longe, we are counted as shepe appoynted to be slayne. Neuerthelesse in all these thinges we ouercome farre, for his sake that loued vs. For sure I am, that nether death ner life, nether angell, ner rule, nether power, nether thinges present, nether thinges to come, nether heyth, ner loweth, nether eny other creature shalbe able to separate vs from the loue of God, which is in Christ Iesu oure LORDE.

I SAYE the trueth in Christ, and lye Q not (wherof my conscience beareth me witnesse in the holy goost) that I haue greate heuynesse & contynual sorowe in my hert. ¶ I haue wysched my selfe to be cursed from Christ for my brethren, that are my kynsmen after the flesh, which are off Israel: ¶ vnto whom pertayneth the childshippe, and the glory, and the couenauntes and lawe, and the seruyce of God, and the promyses: whose are also the fathers, off whom (after the flesh) commeth Christ, *which is God ouer all, blessed for euer. Amē. But I speake not these thinges, as though the worde of God were of none effecte: †for they are not all Israelites, which are of Israel: †nether are they all children, because they are the sede of Abraham: †but in Isaac shal the sede be called vnto the, that is, They which are children after the flesh, are not the children of God, but the children of the promes are counted for the sede. For this is a worde of the promes, where he sayeth: †Aboute this tyme wyl I come, and Sara shal haue a sonne.

Howbeit it is not so with this onely, but also whan Rebecca was with childe by one (namely by oure father Isaac) or euer the childrē were borne, & had done nether good ner bad (that the purpose of God might stōde acordinge to the eleccion, not by the deseruyng of workes, but by the grace of the caller) it was sayde thus vnto her: The greater shal serue the lesse. As it is wrytten: †Iacob haue I loued, but Esau haue I hated.

What shal we saye then? Is God then vnrighteous? God forbyd. For he sayeth vnto Moses: †I shewe mercy, to whom I shewe mercy: and haue cōpassion, on whō I haue compassion. So lyeth it not then in eny mans wyl or runnyng, but in the mercy of God. For the scripture sayeth vnto Pharaο: †For this cause haue I stered the vp, euen to shewe my power on the, that my name mighte be declared in all lōdes. Thus hath he mercy on whom he wyl: and whom he wyl, he hardeneth.

Thou wilt saye then vnto me: Why blameth he vs yet? For who can resist his will? O thou man, who art thou, that disputest with God? Sayeth the worke to his workman: Why hast thou made me on this fashion? Hath not the potter power, out of one lompe of claye to make one vessell vnto honoure, and another vnto dishonoure? Therefore whan God wolde shewe wrath, and to make his power knowne, he broughte forth with greate pacience the vessels off wrath, which are ordeyned to damnacion: that he mighte declare the riches off his glorye on †vessels of mercy, which he hath prepared vnto glorye, whom he hath called (namely vs) not onely of the Iewes, but also of the Gentyles. As he sayeth also by Osee: †I wil call that my people, which is not my people: and my beloved, which is not †beloued. And it shal come to passe in †y place, where it was sayde vnto them: Ye are not my people, there shal they be called the children of the lyyunge God. But Esay crieth ouer Israel: †Though the nombre of the children of Israel be as the sonde of the see, yet shal there but a remnant be sauēd. For there is the worde, that fynisheth and shorteneth in righteousnes: for a shorte worde shal God make vpon earth. And as Esay sayde before: †Excepte the LORDE of Sabbaoth had lefte vs sede, we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorra.

What shal we saye then? This wil we saye: The Heythen which folowed not righteousness, haue ouertaken righteousness: but I speake of the righteousness that commeth of faith. Agayne, Israel folowed the lawe of righteousness, and attayned not vnto the lawe of righteousness. Why so? Euen because they soughte it not out of faith, but as it were out of the deseruyng of workes. For they haue stombled at the stomblinge stone. As it is wrytten: †Beholde, I laye in Sion a stone to stōble at, and a rocke to be offended at: and †who so euer beleueth on him, shal not be confounded.

The x. Chapter.

BRETHREN, my hertes desyre, & prayer vnto God for Israel is, that they might be sauēd. For I beare them recorde, that they are zelous for Gods cause, but not with vnderstandinge. For they knowe not the righteousness which auayleth before God, and go aboute to manteyne their awne righteousness: and thus they are not subdued vnto the righteousness, that is off value before God. †For Christ is the ende of the lawe, vnto righteousness for euery one †y beleueth. †Moses wryteth of †y righteousness which commeth of the lawe, that the man which doth †y same, shal lyue therein. The worde is nye the, euen in thymouth and in thine hert. This is  $\hat{y}$  worde of faith  $\hat{y}$  we preach.

33 For yf thou knowlegest Iesus with thy mouth, that he is the LORDE, and beleuest in thine hert, that God hath rayseed him vp from the deed, thou shalt be sauēd. For yf a man beleue from the hert, he shalbe made righteous: and yf a mā knowlege with the mouth, he shal be sauēd. For the scripture sayeth: "Who so euer beleueth on him, shal not be confounded.

Here is no difference, nether of the Iewer of the Gentyle. For one is LORDE of all, which is riche vnto all  $\hat{y}$  call vpō him. For who so euer shal call vpon the name of the LORDE, shalbe sauēd. But how shal they call vpō him, on whō they beleue not? How shal they beleue on him, of whō they haue not herde? How shal they heare without a preacher? But how shal they preach, excepte they be sent? As it is writtē: <sup>a</sup>How beutyfull are the fete of thē  $\hat{y}$  preach peace,  $\hat{y}$  brynge good tidinges? But they are not all obedient vnto the Gospell. For Esayesayeth: LORDE, who beleueth oure preachinge? So thē faith cōmeth<sup>b</sup> by hearynge, but hearinge cōmeth by the worde of God.

But I saye: Haue they not herde? "No doute their sounde wēte out in to all londes, and their wordes in to the endes of the worlde. But I saye: Hath not Israel knowne? First, Moses sayeth: <sup>c</sup>"I wil prouoke you to enuye, by them that are not my people:  $\tau$  by a foolish nacion wyl I anger you. Esaye after him is bolde, and sayeth: <sup>d</sup>"I am founde of them, that sought me not:  $\tau$  haue appeared vnto them, that axed not after me. But vnto Israel he sayeth: <sup>e</sup>"All the daye lōge haue I stretched forth my handes vnto a people  $\hat{y}$  beleueth not, but speaketh agaynst me.

The xi. Chapter.

34 I SAYE then: Hath God thrust out his people? God forbyd:<sup>f</sup> for I also am an Israelite, of the sede of Abraham out of the trybe of Ben Iamin. God hath not thrust out his people, whom he knewe before. Or wote ye not what the scripture sayeth of Elias, how he maketh intercession vnto God agaynst Israel, and sayeth: <sup>g</sup>"LORDE, they haue slayne thy prophetes,  $\tau$  dydged downe thine altares, and I am lefte ouer onely, and they seke my life? But what sayeth the answer of God vnto him? <sup>h</sup>"I haue reserued vnto me seuen thousande men, which haue not bowed their knee before Baal. Euē so goeth it now at this tyme also with this remnaunt after  $\hat{y}$  eleccion of grace.<sup>i</sup> Yf it be done of grace, thē is it not of deseruyng: els were grace no grace. But yf it be of deseruyng, then is grace nothinge: els were deseruyng no deseruyng.

What thē? Israel hath not optayned  $\hat{y}$  35 which he soughte, but the eleccion hath optayned it. As for  $\hat{y}$  other, they are blynded. As it is wrytten: God hath geuen them the sprete of vnquyetnesse, <sup>j</sup>"eyes that they shulde not se, and eares that they shulde not heare, euē vnto this daye. And Dauid sayeth: Let their table be made a snare<sup>k</sup> to take thē with all,  $\tau$  an occasion to fall,  $\tau$  a rewarde vnto thē. Let their eyes be blynded that they se not, and euer bowe downe their backes.

I saye then: Haue they therfore stombled,  $\hat{y}$  they shulde cleane fall to naughte? God forbyd: but thorow their fall is saluacion happened vnto  $\hat{y}$  Heythen, that he mighte prouoke them to be zelous after them. For yf their fall be the riches of the worlde, and the mynishinge of thē the riches of the Heythen: how moch more shulde it be so, yf their fulnesse were there? I speake vnto you Heythen: for in as moch as <sup>l</sup>I am  $\hat{y}$  Apostle of the Heythen, I wil prayse myne office, yf I mighte prouoke them vnto zele, which are my fleshe, and saue some of them. For yf the losse of them by the recōcylinge of the worlde, what were that els, then as yf life were taken of the deed? Yf the begynnynge be holy, then is all  $\hat{y}$  dowe holy:<sup>m</sup> and yf the rote be holy, then are the branches holy also.

But though some of  $\hat{y}$  branches now be brokē, and thou, whā thou wast a wyldelyue tre, art grafted in amonge them, and made partaker of the rote and sappe of the  $\parallel$  olyue tre, boost not thy selfe agaynst the branches.

I wolde not that this secrete shulde be hyd from you brethrē (lest ye shulde be wyse in your awne cōsaytes) that partly blyndnesse is happened vnto Israel; ‡ so longe tyll the fulnesse of the Heythen be come in, and so all Israel shalbe saued. As it is wyrtten: "There shal come out of Sion he that doth delyuer, and shal turne away vngodlynes from Iacob. And this is my couenaūt with them, whā I shal take away their synnes. As concernynge the Gospell, I holde them as enemies for youre sakes: but as touchinge the eleccion, I loue them for the fathers sakes.

For verely the giftes & callynge of God are soch, that it can not repente him of them. For likewise as ye also in tyme passed haue not beleued, but now haue optayned mercy thorow their vnbeleue: Euen so now haue they not beleued on the mercy which his hap-pened vnto you, that they also maye optayne mercy. For God hath closed vp all vnder vnbeleue, that he mighte haue mercy on all.

O the depenesse of the riches, both of the wysdome and knowlege of God? How incomprehensible are his iudgmentes,<sup>a</sup> and his wayes vnsearcheable?§ For who hath knowne the mynde of the LORDE? Or who hath bene his counsell gener? Or who hath geuē him ought a fore hande, that he mighte be recompenced agayne? For of him, and thorow him, and in him are all thinges. To him be prayse for euer, Amen.

The xij. Chapter.

I BESEKE you brethrē by the mercifulnesse of God, that ye geue ouer youre bodies for a sacrifice, y<sup>e</sup> is quicke holy, and acceptable vnto God, which is youre reasonable seruyng off God. And fashion not youre selues like vnto this worlde, but be chaunged thorow the renewynge off youre mynde, y<sup>e</sup> ye maye proue, what thinge that good, y<sup>e</sup> acceptable, & perfecte wil of God is. For I saye thorow the grace y<sup>e</sup> is geuē me, vnto euery man amonge you: † that no man esteeme off him selfe more, then it becōmeth him to esteeme: but that he discretly iudge of himselfe, accordinge as God hath dealte vnto euery man the measure of faith. For like as we haue many membres in one body, but all the membres haue not one maner of operacion: Euen so we beyng many are one body in Christ. But amonge oure selues euery one is the membre of another, and haue dyuers giftes, accordinge to the grace that is geuen vnto vs.** Yf eny man haue the gifte of prophecieng, let it be accordinge to the faith.

†† Let him that hath an office, wayte vpō the office: let him that teacheth, take hede to the doctryne: Let him that exhorteth, geue attēdaunce to the exhortacion. Yf eny mā geueth, let hī geue with synglenesse. Let him that ruleth,<sup>a</sup> be diligent.†† Yf eny man shewe mercy, let him do it with chearfulnesse. Let loue be without dissimulacion. Hate that which is euell: Cleue vnto that which is good. Be kynde one to another with brotherly loue. In geuyng honoure go one before another.§§ Be not slouthfull in the busynesse that ye haue in hande. Be feruent in the sprete. Applye youre selues vnto the tyme. Reioyce in hope, be pacient in trouble. Continue in prayer. Distribute vnto the necessities of the sayntes.¶¶ Be glad to harbarow. Blesse thē that persecute you. Blesse, & curse not. Be mery with them that are mery and wepe with them that wepe.

Be of one mynde amonge youre selues. Be not proude in youre awne consaytes, but make youre selues equall to them of § lowe sorte. Be not wyse in youre awne opinions.* Recompse vnto no man euell for euell. Pro- uydē honestie afore hāde towarde euery mā. Yf it be possible (as moch as in you is) haue peace with all men.

Dearly beloued, auenge not youre selues, but geue rowne vnto the wrath off God. For it is wryttē: "Vengeaunce is myne, and I wil rewarde, sayeth § LORDE. Therefore yf thine enemye hunger, fede him: Yf he thyrst, geue him drinke. "For in so doinge thou shalt heape coales of fyre vpō his heade. Be not ouercome with euell, but ouercome thou euell with good.

The iij. Chapter.

A LET euery soule submytte him selfe to the auctorite off the hyer powers.† For there is no power but of God. The powers that be, are ordeyned of God: so that who so euer resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God. And they that resiste, shal receaue to them selues dānacion. For rulers are not to be feared for good workes, but for euell. Yf thou wilt be without feare off the power, do well then, and thou shalt haue prayse of the same: for he is the minister off God for thy wealth. But yff thou do euell, then feare, for he beareth not the swerde for naughte. For he is the mynister of God, a taker of vengeaunce, to punyshe him that doth euell. Wherefore ye must nedes obeye, not onely for punyshmēt, but also because of conscience. For this cause must ye geue trybute also. For they are Gods mynisters, which māteyne § same defence.

B Geue to euery man therfore his dutye: "tribute, to whom tribute belongeth: custome, to whom custome is due: feare, to whom feare belongeth: honoure, to whom honoure pertayneth. Owe nothinge to eny man, but to loue one another. "For he that loueth another, hath fulfilled the lawe. For where it is sayde: (§ Thou shalt not breake wed- locke: thou shalt not kyll: thou shalt not steale: thou shalt not beare false witness: thou shalt not lust) and yf there be eny other commaundement, it is comprehēded in this worde: § Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. Loue doth his neighbour no euell. Therefore is loue § fulfillinge of the lawe.

And for so moch as we know this, namely the tyme ¶ that the houre is now for vs to ryse from slepe. (For now is oure saluacion nearer, then when we beleued: the nighte is past, but the daye is come nye.) Let vs there- fore cast away § "workes of darknesse, and put on the armour of lighte. Let vs walke honestly as in the daye, † not in excesse off eatinge and in dronkennesse, not in cham- buryng and wantonnesse, not in stryfe and enuyenge: but put ye on the LORDE Iesus Christ, **and make not prouysion for § flesh, to fulfill the lustes of it.

The iij. Chapter.

A HIM that is weake in the faith, receaue A vnto you, and trouble not the con- sciences. One beleueth that he maye eate all thinge: but he that is weake, eateth herbes. Let not him that eateth, despyse him that eateth not: and let not him which eateth not, iudge him that eateth: for God hath receaue him. ††Who art thou, that iudget another mans seruāt? He stondest or fallest vnto his LORDE: Yee he maye well stōde, for God is able to make hī stōde. Some man putteth differēce betwene daye ¶ daye, but another man counteth all dayes alyke. †Let euery man be sure of his mean- ynge. He that putteth difference in the daye, doth it vnto the LORDE: ¶ he that putteth no differēce in the daye, doth it vnto § LORDE also. He § eateth, eateth vnto the LORDE, and he geueth God thākes: and he that eateth not, eateth not vnto § LORDE, and geueth God thanks. For none of vs lyueth to him selfe, and none dyeth to him selfe. Yf we lyue, we lyue vnto the LORDE: Yf we dye, we dye vnto the LORDE. Therefore, whether we lyue or dye, we are the LORDS.

For therto dyed Christ, and rose agayne, ‡ and reuyed, that he mighte be §§LORDE both of deed and quyeck. But why iudget thou thy brother? Or thou other, why despyest thou thy brother? We shal all be broughte before § iudgmēt seate of Christ. For it is wryttē: As truly as I lyue, (sayeth the LORDE) all knees shal bowe vnto me,<sup>a</sup> & all tūges shal knowlege vnto God. Thus shal euery one of vs geue accomptes for himselfe vnto God. Let vs not therfore iudge one another eny more. But iudge this rather, ŷ nomā put a stombeling blocke or an occasion to fall in his brothers waye. * I knowe, & am full certified in ŷ LORDE Iesu, ŷ there is nothinge cōmen of it selfe: but vnto him ŷ iudgeth it to be cōmen, to him is it cōmen. But yf thy brother be greued ouer thy meate, thē walkest thou not now after charite. Destroye not with thy meate, him, for whom Christ dyed.

Se therfore that youre treasure be not euell spokē of. For the kyngdome of God is not meate and drynke, but righteousnes, & peace, and ioye in the holy goost. He that in these thinges serueth Christ, pleaseth God, & is cōmended of mē. Let vs therfore folowe those thinges which make for peace, & thinges wherewith one maye edifye another. Destroye not ŷ worke of God for eny meates sake. <sup>a</sup>All thinges truly are cleane, but it is euell for ŷ mā, which eateth with hurte of his cōscience.† It is moch better ŷ thou eate no flesh, and drynke no wyne, nor eny thinge, wherby thy brother stomblesh, or falleth, or is made weake. Hast thou faith, haue it with thy selfe before God. Happye is he, that cōdemneth not him selfe in ŷ thinge which he alloweth. But he that maketh conscience of it and yet eateth, is dampned: because he doth it not of faith. For † what so euer is not of faith, that same is synne.

The xii. Chapter.

WE that are stronge ŷought to beare ŷ fraylnesse of them which are weake, and not to stonde in oure awne consaytes. Let euery one of vs ordre himselfe so, that he please his neighbour vn to his welth, and edifienge: For Christ pleased not himselfe, but as it is written: <sup>c</sup>The rebukes of them which rebuked the, are fallen vpon me. ¶ What so euer thinges are wrytē a fore tyme, are wrytten for oure learynge, that we thorow pacience and comforte off the scriptures, might haue hope. The God of pacience and consolacion graunte you to be like mynded one towarde another, acordinge vnto Iesu Christ, that ye beyngē of one mynde, maye with one mouth prayse God the father of oure LORDE Iesu Christ.

Wherfore receaue ye one another, as Christ hath receaued you to the prayse off God. But I saye that Christ Iesu was a mynister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to cōfirme the promyses made vnto the fathers, and that the Heythen mighte prayse God because of mercy, as it is wrytten: <sup>d</sup>For this cause wyl I prayse the amōge the Gētyles, and synge vnto thy name. And agayne he sayeth: <sup>e</sup>Reioyce ye Heythen with his people. And agayne: <sup>f</sup>Prayse the LORDE all ye Gētyles, and laude him all ye naciōs. And agayne Esay sayeth: There shalbe the rote of Iesse, and he that shal ryse to rule the Gētyles, in him shal the Gētyles trust. <sup>g</sup>The God off hope fyll you with all ioye and peace in beleuynge, ŷ ye maye be plenteous in hope thorow ŷ power of the holy goost.

I my selfe am full certified of you (my brethren) that ye youre selues are full of goodnes, fylled with all knowlege, so that ye are able to exhorte one another. Neuertheles (brethre) I haue somewhat more boldly wrytten vnto you, as one that putteth you in remembrance, for the grace that is geuē me of God, that I shulde be a mynister of Iesu Christ amonge the Heythen, to declare the gospell of God, that the Heythen mighte be an acceptable offerynge vnto God, sanctified by the holy goost. Therfore maye I boost myselfe thorow Iesu Christ, that I medle with thinges perteynyngē vnto God. For I durst not speake ought, excepte Christ had wroughte the same by me, to make the Heythen obediēt thorow worde and dede, thorow the power of tokens and wonders, and thorow the power of the sprete of God, so that from Ierusalem, and roūde aboute vnto Illyricon, I haue fylled all with the Gospell of Christ. So hane I enforced my selfe to preach ŷ Gospell, not where Christes name was knowne, lest I shulde buyde on another mans foundation, but as it is wrytten: To whom he was not spoken of, they shal se: <sup>h</sup>and they that haue not herde, shal vnderstonde. This is also the cause, wherfore I haue bene oft tymes let to come vnto you. But now syth I haue nomore place in these countrees, hauynge yet a desyre many yeares sence to come vnto you,

But now go I to Ierusalem, to mynister vnto the sayntes. For they of Macedonia and Achaia haue wyllingly prepared a comen colleccion together, for the poore sayntes at Ierusalem. They haue done it wyllingly, and their detters are they. * For yf y Heythen be made partakers off their spiritual thinges, their dutye is to mynister vnto the in bodely thinges. Now when I haue performed this, and haue broughte the this frute sealed, I wil take my iourney by you in to Spayne. But I am sure when I come vnto you, that I shal come with y full blessinge of the Gospell of Christ.

I beseke you brethren thorow oure LORDE Iesu Christ, and thorow the loue of the sprete, y ye helpe me in my busynes with youre prayers vnto God for me, that I maye be deluyered from the vnbeleuers in Iewrye and that this my seruyce which I do to Ierusalem, maye be accepted of the sayntes, y I maye come vnto you with ioye by y wyll of God, and refreshe my selfe with you. The God of peace be with you all. Amen.

The vii. Chapter.

I COMMENDE vnto you Phebe oure sister, which is a mynister of the congregacion of Cenchrea, that ye receaue her in the LORDE, as it be cometh the sayntes, and that ye helpe her in what soeuer busynesse she hath neade off you. For she hath succoured many, and myne awne selfe also.

Grete Prisca and Aquila my helpers in Christ Iesu, which for my life haue layed downe their awne neckes: vnto whom not I onely geue thanks, but all the congregacions of the Heythen. Grete the congregacion also in their house. Salute Epenetos my beloued, which is y first frute amogē the of Achaia i Christ. Grete Mary, which hath bestowed moch labour on vs. Salute Andronicus and Iunia my cosens, and felowe presoners, which are auncient Apostles, and were before me in Christ. Grete Amplias my beloued in y LORDE. Salute Vrbān oure helper in Christ, and Stachis my beloued. Salute Apelles approued in Christ. Salute them which are of Aristobolus housholde. Salute Herodion my kynszman. Grete the which are of Narcissus housholde in the LORDE. Salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, which haue laboured in y LORDE. Salute my beloued Persida, which hath laboured moch and y LORDE. Salute Rufus y chosen in y LORDE: and his mother and myne. Grete Asyncritus, Phlego, Herman, Patrobas, Herman, and y brethre with the. Salute Philologus and Iulia, Nerius and his sister, and Olympia, and all the sayntes with the. Salute one another with an holy kysse. The cōgregacions of Christ salute you.

I beseke you brethren, marke them which cause deuyson and geue occasions of euell, contrary to y doctryne which ye haue learned, and avoyde them. For they y are soch, serue not the LORDE Iesu Christ, but their awne belly: and thorow swete preachinges and flatering wordes, they disceue y hertes of y innocentes. For youre obedience is published amonge all men, therefore am I glad of you.

But yet I wolde haue you wyse in that which is good, and symple in euell. The God of peace treade Sathan vnder your fete shortly. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with you. y Timotheus my helper, and Lucius, and Iason, and Sopater my kynsmē salute you. Tertius which haue writtē this epistle in y LORDE, salute you. Gaius myne ooste and y oost of y whole cōgregacion saluteth you. Erastus y chāberlaine of y cite saluteth you and Quartus a brother saluteth you. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with you all Amē.

To him y is of power to stablyshe you, accordinge to my Gospell and preachinge of Iesu Christ, wherby is vttered y mystery which hath bene kepte secrete, sence y worlde begāne, but now is opened, and shewed by the scriptures of y prophetes, at the cōmaundemēt of the euerlastinge God, to set vp y obediēce of the faith amonge all Heythen: to the same God, which alone is wyse, be prayse thorow Iesus Christ for euer, Amen.

The first Epistle

of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

He commendeth the Corinthians, exhorteth thē to be of one mynde, & rebuketh the diuysion that was amonge them. Wordly wysdome is foolishnes before God, yee there is no wysdome but in the despyed crosse of Christ.

Chap. II.

It is not eloquence and glorious paynted wordes of wordly wysdome, that can edifie and conuerte soules vnto Christ: but the playne wordes of the scripture, for, they make mencion of him and his crosse.

Chap. III.

Paul rebuketh the sectes and authores therof. Christ is the fōudaciō of his church. No man ought to reioyce in men, but in God.

Chap. IIII.

The preachers are but ministers. Iudgment belongeth onely vnto God.

Chap. V.

After what maner Paul curseth the man, that had committed fornicacion with his mother in lawe.

Chap. VI.

He rebuketh thē for goinge to lawe together before the Heithen, and reproueth vnclennesse.

Chap. VII.

Of mariage, virginite and wyddowheade.

Chap. VIII.

He rebuketh thē that vse their lyberte to the slaunder of other, & sheweth how men ought to behaue thē towarde soch as be weake.

Chap. IX.

Loue forbeareth the thinge that she maye do by the lawe. He exorteth them to runne on forth in the course that they haue begonne.

Chap. X.

He feareth them with the ensamples of the olde Testament, and exorteth them to a godly conuersacion.

Chap. XI.

He rebuketh thē for the abuse and misordre that they had aboute the Sacramēt of the body and bloude of Christ, and bringeth them agayne to the first institucion.

Chap. XII.

The diuersite of the giftes of the holy goost, geuen to the cōforte and edifenge of one another, as the membres of a mans body serue one another.

Chap. XIII.

The nature and condicions of loue.

Chap. XIII.

Paul sheweth that the gift of prophecie, interpretinge, or preachinge, excelleth the gift of tungen, and how they ought both to be vsed.

Chap. XV.

The resurreccion of the deed.

Chap. XVI.

He putteth thē in remembraunce of the gadderynge for the poore christē at Ierusalē, and concludeth his epistle with the salutacions of certayne louynge brethren.

The first Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

The first Chapter.

A PAUL, called to be an Apostle of Iesus Christ thorow  $\text{f}$  will of God, and brother \* Sosthenes, vnto the congregacion off God which is at Corinthum, to them that are  $\dagger$  sanctified in Christ Iesus, sayntes by callinge, with all them that call vpon the name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, in euery place both off theirs and oures.  $\dagger$  Grace be with you and peace from God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

I thake my God allwayes on youre behalfe, for the fauoure of God which is geuē you in Iesus Christ, that in all poyntes ye are made ryche by him, in euery worde, and in all maner of knowledge (euē as  $\text{f}$  preachinge of Christ is confirmed in you) so that ye wante nothinge in eny gifte, and wayte but for the appearinge of oure LORDE Iesus Christ: which shal strength you also vnto  $\text{f}$  ende, that ye maye be blamelesse in the daye of oure LORDE Iesus Christ.  $\S$  For God is faithfull, by whō ye are called vnto the fellowshippe of his sonne Iesus Christ oure LORDE.

B But I beseke you brethrē thorow the name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, that ye all speake one thinge, and let there be no discension amonge you, but that ye be perfecte in one meynnge. For it is shewed me (my brethren) of you, by them which are of  $\text{f}$  housholde of Cloes, that there is stryfe amonge you. I speake of that, which euery one of you sayeth: I holde of Paul. Another, I holde of  $\parallel$  Apollo. The thirde, I holde of Cephas. The fourth, I holde off Christ. Is Christ then deuyded in partes? Was Paul crucified for you? Or were ye baptysed in  $\text{f}$  name of Paul? I thanke God that I haue baptised none of you, but Crispus and Gaius: lest eny shulde saye,  $\text{f}$  I in myne awne name had baptised. I baptysed also  $\text{f}$  housholde of Stephana. Farthermore knowe I not, whether I baptysed eny other. For Christ sent me not to baptysse, but to preach the Gospell, not with wysdome of wordes, lest  $\text{f}$  crosse of Christ shulde haue bene made of none effecte.

For the worde of  $\text{f}$  crosse is foolishnesse C to thē that perishe  $\text{¶}$  but vnto vs which are saued, it is the power of God. For it is wryttē: \*\* I wyl destroye the wysdome of the wyse,  $\text{¶}$  wil cast away the vnderstandinge of  $\text{f}$  prudēt. Where are the wyse? Where are  $\text{f}$  scribes? where are  $\text{f}$  disputers of this worlde? Hath not God made the wysdome of this worlde foolishnesse? For in so moch as the worlde by the wysdome therof knewe not God in his wysdome, it pleased God thorow foolish preachinge to saue them  $\text{f}$  beleue. For  $\text{¶}$  the Iewes requyre tokens, and the Grekes axe after wysdome. But we preach Christ the crucified: to the Iewes an occasion off fallinge, and vnto the Grekes foolishnes. But vnto them that are called (both Iewes and Grekes) we preach Christ the power of God and  $\text{¶}$  the wysdome off God.

D For the foolishnes of God is wyser then men: and the weaknes of God is strōger thē men. Brethren loke on youre callinge, how that  $\text{§}$  not many wysemē after the flesh, not many mightie, not many of hye degre are called: but that foolish is before the worlde, hath God chosen, that he mighte cōfounde the wyse: And that weake is before  $\text{f}$  worlde, hath God chosen, y he mighte confounde the mightye. And the vyle and despyed before the worlde hath God chosen, yee and that which is nothinge, that he mighte destroye that which is oughte, that no flesh shulde reioyse in his presence. Of the same are ye also in Christ Iesu, which of God is made vnto vs wysdome and \*righteousnes, and †sanctificatione and redēpcion, that, accordinge as it is wrytten: ‡ He that reioyseth, shulde reioyse in the LORDE.

The ij. Chapter.

AND I brethrē, whā I came vnto you came not with hye wordes or hye wysdome, to shewe vnto you the preachinge of Christ. For I shewed not forth my selfe amonge you that I knewe eny thinge, saue onely Iesus Christ, euen the same that was crucified. And I was amonge you in weaknes, and in feare, and in moch tremblinge: § and my worde and my preachinge was not with entysinge wordes of mans wysdome, but in shewinge of the sprete and of power: that youre faith shulde not stonde in the wysdome of men, but in the power of God.

That we speake of, is wysdome amonge thē y are perfecte: not y wysdome of this worlde, nether of the rulers of this worlde which go to naughte: but we speake of the wysdome of God, which is in secrete and lyeth hyd: which God ordeyned before the worlde vnto oure glorie: ¶ which none of y rulers of this worlde knewe. For yf they had knowne it, they had not crucified the LORDE of glorie, but as it is wrytten: ¶ The eye hath not sene, and the eare hath not herde, nether hath it entred in to the hert of man that God hath prepared for them that loue him.

But God hath opened it vnto vs by his sprete. ** For the sprete searcheth out all thinges, yee euen the depennesses of the Godheade. For what mā knoweth what is in man, saue the sprete of mā which is in him? Euen so no man knoweth what is in God, saue y sprete of God. As for vs, we haue not receaued the sprete of this worlde, but the sprete which cōmeth of God, so that we cā knowe what is geuē vs of God: which we also speake, not with connyng wordes of mā wysdome, but with the cōnyng wordes of the holy goost, and iudge spirituall matters spirituallly. Howbeit the naturall man perceaueth nothinge of y sprete of God. It is foolishnes vnto him, and he can not perceauē it: for it must be spirituallly discerned.†† But he that is spirituall, discusseth all thinges, and he is iudged of noman. ‡† For who hath knowne y mynde of the LORDE? Or who shal enfourme him? But we haue the mynde of Christ.

The iij. Chapter.

AND I brethren, coulde not speake vnto you as vnto spirituall, but as vnto carnall, euen as vnto babes in Christ. §§ I gaue you mylke to drynke, and not meate, for ye mighte not then awaye withall, nether maye ye yet euen now, in so moch as ye are yet fleshye. For ¶ seyng there is enuyenge, stryfe, and discencion amonge you, are ye not fleshy, ¶ walke after y maner of men? For whan one sayeth: ¶ I holde of Paul: another, I holde of Apollo, are ye not thē fleshye? What is Paul? What is Apollo? Euē mynisters are they, by whom ye are come to the beleue, and the same, accordinge as the LORDE hath geuen vnto euery man. I haue plantēd, Apollo hath watred, ¶¶ but God hath geuen the increace. So then nether is he that planteth, eny thinge, nether he that watreth, but God which geueth the increace. As for him that planteth, and he that watreth, y one is as the other: but yet shal euery one re-ceaue his rewarde accordinge to his labour. For we are Gods labourers, ye are Gods huszbandry, ye are Gods buyldinge.

Accordinge to the grace of God which is geuen vnto me, as a wyse buylder haue I layed the foundacion, but another buyldeth thereon. Yet let euery man take hede how he buyldeth thereon. *** For other foundacion can noman laye, then that which is layed, the which is Iesus Christ. But yf eny man buylde vpon this foundacion, golde, syluer, precious stones, tymber, haye, stobble, euery mā worke shal be shewed. ††† For the daye of the LORDE shal declare it, which shal be shewed with fyre: and the ††† fyre shal trye euery māns worke what it is. Yf eny mans worke that he hath buylde theron, abyde, he shal receaue a rewarde: Yf eny mans worke burne, he shal suffre losse: but he shal be sauēd himselfe, neuertheles as thorow fyre.

* Knowe ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the sprete of God dwelleth in you? Yf eny man defyle the tēple of God, him shal God destroye. For the temple of God is holy, which ye are. Let no mā disceaeue himselfe. Yf eny man thinke himselfe wyse amōge you, let him become a foole in this worlde, that he maye be wyse. For t̄the wysdome off this worlde is foolishnes with God. For it is wrytten: † He compaseth the wyse in their craftynesse. And agayne: § The LORDE knoweth the thoughtes of the wyse, that they are vayne. Therefore let no man reioyse in men. For all is youre, whether it be Paul or Apollo, whether it be Cephas or the worlde, whether it be life or death, whether it be presente or for to come. All is youre, but ye are Christes, and Christ is Gods.

The iiij. Chapter.

A LET euery man this wyse esteeme vs, I enen for the mynisters of Christ,<sup>a</sup> and stewardes of the †secretes of God. Now is there no more requyred of the stewardes, then, that they be founde faithfull. † It is but a small thinge vnto me, that I shulde be iudged of you, or of mans daye, nether iudge I myne awne selfe. I knowe noughte by my selfe, ** yet am I not therby iustified. It is the LORDE that iudgeth me. Therefore iudge ye nothinge before § tyme, vntyll the LORDE come, which shal bringe it to lighte that is hyd in darknesse, and opē the counceils of § hertes, and thē shal euery one haue prayse of God.

B These thinges brethren haue I described in myne awne preson ¶ in Apollos for youre sakes, that ye mighte lerne by vs, that noman counte hygher of him self, then aboue is wrytten, that one be not puft vp agaynst another for eny mans cause. For who preferreth the? † What hast thou that thou hast not receaued? Yf thou hast receaued it, why makest thou thē thy boost, as though thou haddest not receaued it? Now ye are full, now ye are made riche, ye raigne without vs, and wolde God ye dyd raigne, that we might raigne with you.

Me thynketh that God hath set forth vs Apostles for the lowest off all, † enen as those that are appoynted vnto death. For we are a gasynge stocke vnto § worlde and to the angels, and vnto men. We are fooles for Christes sake, but ye are wyse in Christ: We weake, but ye strōge: Ye honorable, but we despysed. Euen vnto this daye we hōger and thyrst, and are naked, and are boffetted with fystes, and haue no certayne dwellinge place, § and laboure and worke with oure awne handes. We are reuyled, † and yet we blesse: we are persecuted, and suffre it: We are euell spoken of, and we praye: We are become as it were the very outswepinges of § worlde, yee the of scowringe of all men vnto this tyme.

I wryte not this to shame you, but as my deare childrē I warne you. For though ye haue ten thousande instructours in Christ yet haue ye not many fathers. For I haue ¶ begotten you in Christ Iesu thorow § Gospell? Wherefore I exhorte you, *** be ye my folowers. For this cause haue I sent vnto you Timotheus (which is my deare sonne, and faithfull in the LORDE) that he maye put you in remembrance of my wayes, which are in Christ, euē as I teach euery where in all congregacions. Some are puft vp, as though I wolde come nomore at you. But I wil come to you shortly (††† yf the LORDE wyl) and wyl knowe, not the wordes of thē that are puft vp, but § power. For the kyngdome of God is not ¶ wordes, but in power. What wil ye? Shal I come vnto you with the rodd, or with loue and the sprete of mekenesse?

The v. Chapter.

THERE goeth a comen reporte, that there is whordome amōge you, and soch whordome, as is not once named amōge the Heythen, † that one shulde haue his fathers wife. haue determyned allready as though I were present (cōcernynge him that hath done this dede) in þ̄ name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, whā ye are gathered together with my sprete, and with the power of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, * to deluyner him vnto Sathan for the destruction of the flesh, that the sprete maye be saued in the daye of the LORDE Iesus.

¶ Your reioysinge is not good. † Knowe ye not that a litle leuen sowereth the whole lompe of dowe? Pourge out therfore the olde leuen, that ye maye be new dowe, like as ye are swete bred. For we also haue an † Easter lambe, which is Christ, that is offred for vs. Wherefore let vs † kepe Easter, not in þ̄ olde leuen, ner in the leuen of maliciounes, and wickednes, but in the swete bred of purenesse and of the trueth.

I wrote vnto you in the Epistle, that ye shulde haue nothinge to do with whoremōgers, ⁊ that meant I not at all of the whoremongers of this worlde, ether of the couetous, or of extorcioners, or of thē that worshippe ymages, for then must ye nedes haue gone out of the worlde. ¶ But now haue I wryttē vnto you, þ̄ ye shulde haue nothinge to do with them: (Namely,) yf there be eny man that is called a brother, and is an whoremonger, or couetous, or a worshipper of ymages, ether a raylar, or a dronkarde, or an extorcioner, † with soch shal ye not eate. For what haue I to do to iudge them that are without? Do ye not iudge thē that are within? As for them that are without, God shal iudge them. ** Put awaye frō you him that is euell.

The vi. Chapter.

¶ HOW dare one off you hauynge busynes with another, go to lawe before the vnrighteous, and not before the sayntes? † Do ye not knowe that the sayntes shal iudge the worlde? Yf the worlde then shalbe iudged off you, are ye not good ynough to iudge small matters? Knowe ye not that we shal iudge the angels? how moch more thinges that pertaine to the tēporall life? Therfore yf ye haue iudgmentes of temporall matters, take them that are despyed in the congrega-cion, and set them to be iudges. This I saye to youre shame. Is there vtterly no wyse man amōge you? What not one at all, that can iudge betwene brother ⁊ brother? but one brother goeth to lawe with another, and that before the vnbeleuers?

Now therfore is there vtterly a faute amōge you, that ye go to lawe one with another. † Why rather suffre ye not wronge? Why suffre ye not youre selues rather to be defranded? but ye youre selues do wrōge and defraude, and that euen the brethrē. Knowe ye not that þ̄ vnrighteous shal not inheret the kyngdome of God? Be not disceaue. † Nether whoremongers, ner worshippers off ymages, ner breakers off wedlocke, ner weakkings, nether abusers of them selues with mankynde, ner thenes, nether the couetous, ner drōkardes, ner cursed speakers, ner extorcioners shal inheret the kyngdome of God. And soch haue some of you bene, but ye are washed, ye are sanctified, ye are made righteous by the name of the LORDE Iesus, and by the sprete of oure God.

I maye do all thinges, but all † thinges are not profitable. I maye do all thinges, but I wil be broughte vnder no mā's power. Meates are ordeyned for þ̄ bely, ⁊ the bely for meates. But God shal destroye both it and them. The body belongeth not vnto whordome, but vnto the LORDE, and the LORDE vnto the body. ¶ God hath rayسد vp the LORDE, and shal rayse vs vp also by his power. Knowe ye not that youre bodies are the mēbres of Christ? Shal I now take the mēbres of Christ, and make them the mēbres of an harlot? God forbyd. Or do ye not knowe, that he which cleueth vnto an harlot, is one body? For they shalbe two († sayeth he) in one fleszhe. But he that cleueth vnto the LORDE, is one sprete.

Fle whordome. All synes þ̄ a man doth, are without the body. But he that commyteth whordome, synneth agaynst his awne body. *** Or knowe ye not that youre body is the temple of the holy goost? Whom ye haue of God, and are not youre awne? † For ye are dearly boughte. Prayse ye God therfore in youre body ⁊ in youre sprete, which are Gods.

The vij. Chapter.

AS concernynge the thinges wherof ye wrote vnto me, I answere: It is good for a man not to touche a woman. Neuertheles to avoyde whordome, let every man haue his awne wife, and let euery woman haue hir awne huszbande. Let the mā geue vnto the wife due beneuolence: likewise also the wife vnto ſ̃ man. The wife hath not power ouer hir awne body, but the huszbande: ¶ likewise the man hath not power ouer his awne body, but the wife. * Withdrawē not youre selues one frō another, excepte it be with the consent of both for a tyme, that ye maye geue youre selues vnto fastinge and prayer, and thē come together agayne, lest Sathan tempte you for youre incontynēcyē. But this I saye of fauoure, and not of commaundemēt. Howbeit I wolde rather ſ̃ all mē were as I am. Neuertheles euery one hath his proper gifte of God: one thus, another so. To them verely ſ̃ are vnmarried and to wedowes I saye: It is good for thē that they abyde also as I do. † But yf they can not absteyne, let them mary. For it is better to mary, then to burne.

But vnto them that are married, commaunde not I, but the LORDE, † that the wife separate not her selfe from the huszbande: but yf she separate her selfe, ſ̃ she remayne vnmarried, or be reconcyled to hir huszbande: and let not the huszbande put away his wife from him.

As for the other, vnto thē saye I, not ſ̃ LORDE: Yf eny brother haue an vnbeleuyng wife, and she is content to dwell with him, let him not put hir away. And yf a woman haue an vnbeleuyng huszbande, and he is content to dwell with her, let her not put him away. For the vnbeleuyng huszbande is sanctified by the wife, and the vnbeleuyng wife is sanctified by the huszbande: or els were youre children vnclane, but now are they holy. But yf the vnbeleuyng departe, let him departe. A brother or a sister is not boude in such cases, but God hath called vs in peace. § For what knowest thou O womā, whether thou shalt saue ſ̃ mā? Or what knowest thou O man, whether thou shalt saue the woman? But euen as God hath distributed vnto euery one ¶ and as the LORDE hath called every man, so let him walke: and so orden I in all congregacions.

CYf eny man be called beyng circumceysed let him take no Heythenshippe vpon him. Yf eny man be called in the Heythenshippe, let him not be circumceysed. Circumcision is nothinge, and vncircumcision is nothinge, but the keypynge of the commaundementes of God. Let euery one abyde in the callinge wherin he is called. ¶ Art thou called a seruauēt, care not for it: neuertheles yf thou mayest be fre, vse it rather. For he that is called in the LORDE beyng a seruauēt, is a fre man of the LORDE. Likewise he that is called beyng fre, is a seruauēt of Christ. ** Ye are dearly boughte, be not ye the seruantes of men. Brethren let euery one wherin he is called, therein abyde with God.

As concernynge virgins, I haue no commaundement of the LORDE, neuertheles I saye my goodmeanynge, as I haue optayned mercy of the LORDE to be faithfull. I suppose it is good for ſ̃ present necessite: for it is good for a man so to be. Art thou bounde vnto a wife, seke not to be lowsed: Art thou lowsed frō a wife, seke not a wife. But yf thou take a wife, thou synnest not. And yf a virgin mary, she synneth not. Neuertheles soch shal haue trouble in the fleszhe. But I fauoure you.

DHowbeit this I saye brethren: †† the tyme is shorte. Farthermore this is the meanynge, ſ̃ they which haue wyues, be as though they had none: and they that wepe, be as though they wepte not: and they that reioyse, be as though they reioysed not: ¶ they that bye, be as though they possessed not: ¶ they that vse this worlde, be as though they vsed it not. For the faszion off this worlde passeth awaye. ¶ But I wolde that ye shulde be without care. †† He that is syngle, careth for the thinges of the LORDE, how he maye please the LORDE. But he that is married, careth for the thinges of the worlde, how he maye please his wife, and is deuyded. A woman and a virgin that is syngle, careth for the thinges of the LORDE, that she maye be holy both in body ¶ also in sprete. But she that is married, careth for ſ̃ thinges of the worlde, how she maye please hir huszbande.

¶ This I saye for youre profit, not that I wil tangle you in a snare, but for that which is honest and comly vnto you, that ye maye cōtynually cleue vnto the LORDE without hynderaunce. But yf eny man thinke that it is vncomly for his virgin yf she passe the tyme of mariage, and yf nede so requyre, let him do what he lyst, he synneth not, let thē be coupled in mariage. Neuertheles he that purposeth surely in his hert, hauynge no nede, but hath power of his awne wyll, and determineth so in his hert to kepe his virgin, doth well. Fynally, he that ioyneth his virgin in mariage, doth well: but he that ioyneth not his virgin in mariage, doth better. *The wife is bounde to the lawe, as longe as hir huszbande lyueth. But yf hir huszbande slepe, she is at liberty to mary vnto whom she wil, onely that it be done in the LORDE. But she is happier yf she so abyde after my iudgment. I thinke verely that I also haue the sprete of God.

The iij. Chapter.

¶ AS touching things †offred vnto Idols. †we are sure yf we all haue knowlege. Knowlege puffeth a mā vp, but loue edifyeth. Neuertheles yf eny mā thinke yf he knoweth eny thinge, he knoweth not yet how he oughte to knowe. But yf eny man loue God, the same is knowne of him.

So are we sure now cōcernynge the meates offred vnto Idols, § that an Idoll is nothinge in the worlde, and that there is none other God but one. And though there be that are called goddes, whether in heauen or in earth (as there be goddes many and lordes many) yet haue we but one God, euen the father, ¶ of whō are all thinges, and we in him: ¶ one LORDE Iesus Christ, by whō are all thinges, and we by him.

¶ But euery man hath not knowlege: for some make yet ¶ conscience ouer the Idoll, and eate it as a thinge offred vnto Idols: and so their conscience beyng weake, is defyled. Neuertheles meate furthureth not vs vnto God. Yf we eate, we shal not therefore be the better: yf we eate not, we shal not therefore be the lesse. But take hede that this your liberty be not an occasion of fallynge vnto yf weake. For yf eny man se the (which hast knowlege) syt at the table in the Idols house, shal not his conscience whyle it is weake, be occasioned to eate of the Idoll-offerings? And so thorow thy knowlege shal the weake brother perishe, for whō Christ dyed. But whan ye synne so agaynst the brethren, and wounde their weake cōscience, ye synne agaynst Christ. Wherefore **yf meate offende my brother, I wyl neuer eate flesh, lest I offende my brother.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ AM I not an Apostle? Am I not fre? ¶ Haue I not sene Iesus Christ oure LORDE? Are not ye my worke in the LORDE? Yf I be not an Apostle vnto other, yet am I youre Apostle: for the seale of myne Apostelshippe are ye in the LORDE. Myne answere vnto them that axe me, is this: Haue we not power to eate and drynke? Haue we not power also to leade aboute a sister to wife, as well as other Apostles, and as the brethren of the LORDE, and †Cephas? Or haue onely I and Barnabas not power this to do? Who goeth a warfare at any tyme vpon his awne wages? Who planteth a vynyarde, and eateth not of the frute therof? Who fedeth a flocke, and eateth not of the mylke of the flocke?

¶ Saye I these thinges after the maner of men? Sayeth not the lawe the same also? For §§ it is wrytten in the lawe off Moses: Thou shalt not mosell the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corne. Doth God take thought for the oxen? Or sayeth he it not altogether for oure sakes? For no doute it is wryttē for oure sakes. For he that eareth, shulde eare vpon hope: and he yf throszheth, shulde troszhe vpon hope, yf he mighte be partaker of his hope. ¶ Yf we haue sowne vnto you spiritual thinges, is it a greate thīge yf we reape youre bodely thīges? But yf other be partakers of this power on you, wherefore are not we rather? ¶ Neuertheles we haue not vsed this power, but suffre all thinges, lest we shulde hynder the Gospell off Christ. Knowe ye not that they which laboure in the temple, haue their lyuynge of yf temple:

and they that wayte at the altare, enioye the altare? * Euen thus also hath LORDE ordeyned, that they which preach the Gospell, shulde lyue of y Gospell. † But I haue vsed none of these thinges.

¶ Neither wryte I therof, that it shulde be done so vnto me: for I had rather dye, thē that eny man shulde brynge my reioysinge to naughte. For in that I preach the Gospell, I neede not boost my selfe, for I must nedes do it. And wo vnto me, yff I preach not the Gospell. Yf I do it with a good wyll, I shal haue my rewarde: but yff I do it agaynst my wyll, yet is the office commytted vnto me. Wherefore thē shal I be rewarded? (Namely therfore) that I preach the Gospell, and do the same frely for naughte, that I abuse not my libertye in y Gospell. For though I am fre from all men, yet haue I made my selfe euery mans seruaunt, y I mighte wyne y moo. ‡ Vnto the Iewes I am become as a Iewe, to wyne y Iewes. To them that are vnder the lawe, I am become as though I were vnder the lawe, to wyne them which are vnder the lawe.

¶ Vnto them that are without lawe, I am become as though I were without lawe (where as yet I am not without the lawe of God, but am in y lawe of Christ) to wyne thē that are without lawe. To the weake, am I become as weake, to wyne the weake. § I am become of all fashions vnto euery man, to saue some at y leest. But this I do for the Gospels sake, that I mighte be partaker therof.

Knowe ye not, that they which runne in a course, runne all, yet but one receaueth the rewarde? Runne ye so, that ye maye optayne. Euery one that proueth mastrye, absteyneth from all thinges, and they do it, that they maye optayne a corruptible crowne, but we to optayne an vncorruptible crowne. I therefore so runne, not as at an vncertayne thinge: So fighte I, not as one y beateth y ayre: but I tame my body, and brynge it in to subieccion, lest whan I preach vn to other: I my selfe be a cast awaye.

that ye shulde be in the fellowshipe of deuels. Ye can not drynke of the cuppe of the LORDE and of the cuppe of the deuels. Ye can not be partakers of the LORDES table, and of the table of deuels. Or wyl we prouoke the LORDE? *I maye do all thinges, but all thinges are not profitable. I maye do all thinges, but all thinges edifye not. Let noman seke his awne profit, but let euery man seke anothers welth.

What soeuer is solde in the fleshmarket, that eate, and axe no question for conscience sake. † For the earth is the LORDES, and all y therein is. Yf eny of thē y beleue not, byd you to a feast, and yf ye be disposed to go, what soeuer is set before you, that eate, axinge no question for conscience sake.

But yf eny man saye vnto you: This is offred vnto Idols, thē eate not of it, for his sake that shewed it, and for hurtinge of conscience. (The earth is the LORDES and all that therein is.) Neuertheles I speake of † consciēce, not thine, but of y. For why shulde my liberty be iudged of another mā's cōscience? § For yf I take my parte with thankesgeuyng, why am I euell spoken of, for y thinge wherfore I geue thankes?

¶ Therefore whether ye eate or drynke, or what so euer ye do, do all to y prayse of God. Be not ye an occasion of fallinge, nether to the Iewes, ner to the Gentyles, ner to the congregacion of God, ¶ euē as I also please all men in all thinges, not sekinge myne awne profit, but the profit of many, that they mighte be sauēd. ** Folowe ye me, as I do Christ.

The xi. Chapter.

I COMMENDE you brethren, that ye remembre me in all poyntes, and kepe the ordinance, euē as I deliuered them vnto you. But I certifie you, that Christ is the heade of euery man. †† As for y man, he is the heade of y woman, but God is Christes heade. Euery man that prayeth or prophecietieth, and hath eny thinge on his heade, shameth his heade. But euery woman that prayeth or prophecietieth with vncouered heade, dishonesteth hir heade. For it is euen a lyke moch as yf she were shauen. Yf the womā be not couered, let hir heer also be cut of. But yf it be vncomely for a woman to haue hir heer cut of or to be shauen, then let hir couer hir heade. Neuertheles the man oughte not to couer his heade, † for so moch as he is the ymage and glory of God: but the womā is the glory of the man. §§ For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man. Nether was the man created for the womans sake, but the womā for the mans sake.

Therefore ought the woman to haue a power vpon hir heade, for the angels sakes. Neuertheles nether is the man without y woman, nether the woman without the mā in the LORDE. For as the woman is of the man, euen so commeth the man also by the woman, but all of God. Iudge ye by youre selues, whether it be comly, y a womā praye before God bare headed? Or doth not nature teach you, y it is a shame for a man yf he weere lōge heer, ¶ a prayse to y womā, yf she weere lōge heer? For hir heer is geuē heer to couer her withall. But yf there be eny man amōge you that hath lust to stryue, let him knowe, that we haue no such custome, nether the congregacions of God. But this must I warne you of: I commend it not, that ye come together not after a better maner but after a worse. First, whan ye come together in the congregacion, I heare, that there are discensions amonge you, and I partly beleue it. ¶ For there must be sectes amonge you, that they which are perfecte amonge you, mighte be knowne.

Now whan ye come together, the LORDES supper can not be kepte. For whan it shulde be kepte, euery mā taketh his awne supper afore. And one is hōgrie, another is drunkē. Haue ye not houses to eate and drynke in? Or despise ye y cōgregacion of God, and shame them that haue not? What shal I saye vnto you? Shal I prayse you? in this prayse I you not. That which I deliuered vnto you, receaued I of the LORDE. ¶¶ For the LORDE Iesus the same nighte in the which he was betrayed, toke the bred, ¶ gaue thankes, and brake it, and sayde: Take ye, ¶ eate ye, this is my body, which is broken for you. This do in the remembraunce of me. After the same maner also he toke y cuppe whan supper was done, and sayde: This cuppe is the new Testament in my bloude, this do (as oft as ye drynke it) in the remembrance of me. For as oft as ye shal eate of this bred, & drynke of this cuppe, ye shal shewe the LORDES death, vntyll he come.

D Wherfore who soeuer shal eate off this bred, and drynke off this cuppe of the LORDE vnworthely, shalbe giltye of the body and bloude of the LORDE. * But let a man examen himselfe, and so let him eate of this bred, and drynke of this cuppe. For he that eateth and drynketh vnworthely, eateth & drynketh his awne damnacion, because he maketh no differēce of the LORDES body. Therefore are there so many weake and sicke amōge you, and many slepe. † For yf we iudged oure selues, we shulde not be iudged. But whan we are iudged, we are chastened of ‡ LORDE, that we shulde not be dāned with the † worlde. Wherfore my brethren, whan ye come together to eate, tary one for another. But yf eny manonger, let him eate at home, that ye come not together vnto cōdemnacion. As for other thinges, I wil set them in order whan I come.

The xij. Chapter.

A S concernynge spirituall giftes (brethren) I wolde not that ye were ignoraunt. Ye knowe that ye were Heythē and wente youre wayes vnto dōme Idols, euē as ye were led. Wherfore I declare vnto you, § that no man speakynge thorow the sprete of God, defyeth Iesus. And no man can saye that Iesus is the LORDE, but by the holy goost.

* There are dyuerse giftes, yet but one sprete: and there are dyuerse offices, yet but one LORDE: and there are dyuerse operations || yet is there but one God, which worketh all in all. The giftes of the sprete are geuen vnto euery man to profit the cōgregacion. To one is geuen thorow the sprete the vtterance of wisdome: to another is geuen the vtterance of knowlege accordinge to the same sprete: to another, faith in the same sprete: to another, the giftes of healinge in the same sprete: to another, power to do miracles: to another, prophecience: to another, ¶ iudgement to discerne spretes: to another, dyuerse tungen: to another, the interpretation of tungen. These all doth § same onely sprete worke, and distributeth vnto euery man, accordinge as he will.

¶ For as the body is one, and hath yet many membres, neuertheles all the membres of the body though they be many, are yet but one body: euen so Christ also. For we are all baptysed in one sprete to be one body, whether we be Iewes or Gentyles, whether we be bonde or fre, and haue all ** dronkē of one sprete. For the body also is not one membre, but many. Yf the fote saye: I am not § hande, therefore I am not a membre of the body, is he therefore not a membre of § body? And yf the eare saye: I am not the eye, therefore am I not a membre of the body, is he therefore not a membre of the body? Yf all the body were an eye, where were then the hearinge? Yf all were hearinge, where then the smellinge? But now hath God set the membres, euery one seuerally in the body, as it hath pleased him. Neuertheles yf all the mēbres were one membre, where were then the body? But now are the membres many, yet is the body but one.

¶ The eye can not saye vnto the hande: I haue no nede of the: or agayne the heade vnto the fete, I haue no nede of you: but rather a greate deale the mēbres of the body which seme to be most feble, are most necessary: and vpon those membres of the body which we thinke least honest, put we most honestie on: and oure vncomly partes haue most beuty on. For oure honest membres neade it not. But God hath so measured § body, and geuen most honour vnto that mēbre which had nede, that there shulde be no stryfe in the body, but that the membres shulde indifferently care one for another. And yf one membre suffre, all the membres suffre with him: and yf one membre be had in honour, all the membres are glad with him also. But ye are the body of Christ, and membres, euery one of another.

And God hath ordeyned in the congregacion, first the † Apostles, secōdly prophetes, thirdly ‡ teachers, then doers of miracles, after that the giftes of healinge, helpers, gouerners, dyuerse tungen. Are they all Apostles? Are they all prophetes? Are they all teachers? Are they all doers of miracles? Haue they all the giftes of healing? Speake they all with tungen? Can they all interprete? But covet ye the best giftes. And yet shewe I you a more excellent waye.

The xiiij. Chapter.

ATHOUGH I spake with the tungen of men and angels, and yet had not loue, I were euen as sounninge brasse, or as a tynklinge Cymball. *And though I coulede prophecy, & vnderstode all secretes, and all knowlege, and had all faith, so † that I coulede moue moūtaynes out of their places, and yet had not loue, I were nothinge. And though I bestowed all my goodes to fede ‡ poore, and though I gaue my body euen that I burned, and yet haue not loue, it profiteth me nothinge.

Loue is pacient & courteous, loue enuyeth not, loue doth not growardly, is not puffed vp, dealeth not dishonestly, † seketh not hir awne, is not prouoked vnto anger, thynketh not euell, reioyseth not ouer iniquyte, but reioyseth in the trueth, beareth all things, beleeueth all things, hopeth all things, suffreth all things.

B Though prophecienges fayle, or tungen cease, or knowlege perishe, yet loue falleth neuer awaye. For oure knowlege is vnperfecte, and oure prophecienge is vnperfecte. But whā that which is perfecte, commeth, then shal the vnperfecte be done awaye. Whan I was a childe, I spake as a childe, I vnderstode as a childe, I ymagined as a childe. But as soone as I was a man, I put awaye childishnes. Now we se thorow a glasse in a darke speakynge, but thē shal we se face to face. Now I knowe vnperfectly: but thē shal I knowe euē as I am knowne. Now abydeyth faith, hope, loue, these thre: but the greatest of these is loue.

The xiiij. Chapter.

ABOUTE for loue. Couet spirituall giftes, but specially that ye maye prophceye. For he ‡ speaketh with tungen, speaketh not vnto men, but vnto God: for no man heareth him. Howbeit in ‡ sprete he speaketh misteries. But he that prophecieth, speaketh vnto men to edifienge, & to exhortacion, and to cōforte. He that speaketh with tungen, edifieth himselfe: but he that prophecieth, edifieth the cōgregacion. I wolde that ye all spake with tungen, but rather that ye prophecied. For greater is he that prophecieth, then he that speaketh with tūges: excepte he also expounde it, that the congregacion maye haue edifienge. But now brethren yf I come vnto you, and speake with tungen, what shal I profet you, excepte I speake vnto you ether by reuelacion or by knowlege, or by prophecienge, or by doctryne?

Likewyse is it also in ‡ things that geue sounde, and yet lyue not: whether it be a pype or an harpe, excepte they geue distyncte soundes from them, how shal it be knowne what is pypped or harped? And yf the trōpe geue an vncertayne sounde, who wil prepare him selfe to the battayll? Euen so ye like wyse, whan ye speake with tungen, excepte ye speake playne wordes, how shal it be knowne what is spokē? for ye shal but speake in ‡ ayre. So many kyndes of voyces are in the worlde, and none of them is without significacion. Yf I knowe not now what ‡ voyce meaneth, I shalbe an aleaunt vnto him that speaketh: & he that speaketh, shalbe an aleaunt vnto me. Euē so ye (for so moch as ye couet spirituall giftes) seke ‡ ye maye haue plentye to the edifienge of the congregacion. Wherefore let him that speaketh with tungen, praye, that he maye interprete also. Yf I praye with tungen, my sprete prayeth, but my vnderstōdinge bryngeth no man frute. How shal it be then? Namely thus: I wil praye with ‡ sprete, and wil praye with the vnderstōdinge also: I wil synge psalmes in the sprete, and wil synge psalmes with ‡ vnderstōdinge also.

But whan thou geuest thanks with ‡ sprete, how shal he that occupieth the rowme of the vnlearned, saye Amē at thy geuynge of thanks, seynge he knoweth not what thou sayest? Thou geuest well thanks, but the other is not edified. I thanke my God, that I speake with tungen more then ye all. Yet had I leuer in the cōgregacion to speake syue wordes with my vnderstōdinge ‡ I maye enfourme other also, rather then ten thousande wordes with tungen. ‡ Brethren be not children in vnderstōdinge, howbeit as concerninge maliciousnes be childrē, but in vnderstōdinge be perfecte. In the lawe it is wrytten: With other tungen and with other lippes wyl I speake vnto this people, and yet shal they not so heare me, sayeth the LORDE. † Therefore are tungen for a token, not to thē that beleue, but to them that beleue not. Contrary wyse, prophecienge, not to them that beleue not, but to them which beleue.

D Yf the whole cōgregacion now came together in to one place, & spake all with tungenes, and there came in they that are vnlerned, or they which beleue not, shulde they not saye, that ye were out of youre wyttes? But yff all prophecied, and there came in one ſ̄ beleueth not, or one vnlerned, he shulde be rebuked of them all, and iudged of all, and so shulde the secrete of his hert be opened, and so shulde he fall downe vpon his face, worshippinge God, and knowlegeing, that of a trueth God is in you. How is it then brethren? Whan ye come together, euery one hath a psalme, hath doctryne, hath a tunge, hath a reuelacion, hath an interpretacion. Let all be done to edifyenge. Yf eny mā speake with tungenes, let him do it him selfe beyng the seconde, or at the most him selfe beyng ſ̄ thirde, and one after another, and let one interpret it. But yf there be not an interpreter, then let him kepe sylence in the congregacion, howbeit let him speake to himselfe and to God. As for the prophetes, let two or thre speake *and let the other iudge. But yf eny reuelacion be made vnto another that sayeth, then let the first holde his peace.

E Ye maye all prophecie one after another that they all maye lerne, and that all maye haue comforte. And the spretes of the prophetes are subiecte vnto the prophetes. For God is not a God off discension, †but off peace, like as in all congregacions off the sayntes. † Let youre wyues kepe sylence in the cōgregacion, for it shal not be permytted vnto thē to speake, but to be vnder obedience, § as ſ̄ lawe sayeth also. But yf they will lerne eny thinge, let them axe their husbādes at home. For it becommeth not wemē to speake in the congregacion. Or sponse the worde of God from amonge you? Or is it come vnto you onely? Yf eny man thynke himselfe to be a prophet, or spirituall, let him knowe what I wryte vnto you, for they are the commaundementes of the LORDE. But yf eny man be ignoraunt, let him be ignoraunt. Wherefore brethren, couet to prophecie, and forbyd not to speake with tungenes. Let all thinges be done honestly and in order.

The xv. Chapter.

I DECLARE vnto you brethren, the Gospel that I haue preached vnto you (which ye haue also accepted, and in the which ye stōde, by the which also ye are saued) after what maner I preached it vnto you, yf ye haue kepte it, excepte ye haue beleued in vayne. For first of all I delynered vnto you that which I also receaued, how that Christ dyed for oure synnes accordinge to the scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose agayne ſ̄ thirde daye accordinge to the scriptures, and that he was sene of Cephas, then of the twolue: after that was he sene of mo then syue hundreth brethren at once, wherof there are yet many alyue, but some are fallen aslepe. Afterwarde was he sene of Iames, then of all the Apostles. Last of all was he sene of me also, as of one borne out of due tyme. ¶ For I am ſ̄ leest of the Apostles, which am not worthy to be called an Apostle, ¶ because I persecuted the congregacion of God. But by the grace of God I am that I am. And his grace in me hath not bene vayne, but I haue laboured more then they all: howbeit not I but the grace of God which is with me. Now whether it be I or they, thus haue we preached, and thus haue ye beleued.

But yf Christ be preached, that he is rysen from the deed, how saye then some amōge you, that there is no resurreccion of the deed? Yf there be no resurreccio of the deed, then is Christ not rysen. Yf Christ be not rysen, then is oure preachinge in vayne, and youre faith is also in vayne: yee and we are founde false witnesses of God, because we haue testified agaynst God, that he hath rayسد vp Christ, whom he hath not rayسد vp, yf the deed ryse not agayne. For yf the deed ryse not agayne, thē is Christ also not rysen agayne. But yf Christ be not rysen agayne, then is youre faith in vayne, and ye are yet in youre synnes: they also that are fallē a slepe in Christ, are perished. Yf in this life onely we hope on Christ, then are we of all men the most miserable.

But now is Christ rysen from the deed, and is become **ſ̄ first frutes of them that slepe. For by one man commeth death, and by one man the resurrection of the deed. For as they all dye in Adam, so shal they all be made alyue in Christ, but euery one in his order. The first is Christ, then they that belöge vnto Christ, whan he commeth. Then the ende, whā he shal delyuer vp the kyngdome vnto God the father, whan he shal put downe all rule, and all superiorite, & power. * For he must raygne, tyll he haue put all his enemies vnder his fete. The last enemy that shal be destroyed, is death, for he hath put all thinges vnder his fete. But whā he sayeth, that all thinges are put vnder him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which put all thinges vnder him. Whan all thinges shalbe subdued vnto him, then shal the sonne himselfe also be subiecte vnto him, which put all thinges vnder him, that God maye be all in all.

¶ Act. 8. a. and 9. a.

Or els what do they which are baptised ouer ſy deed, yf the deed ryse not at all? Why are they then baptysed ouer the deed? And why stonde we in ioperdy euery houre? By oure reioysinge which I haue in Christ Iesus oure LORDE, I dye daylie. That I haue foughte with beestes at Ephesus after ſy maner of men, what helpeth it me, yf the deed ryse not agayne? † Let vs eate and drynke, for tomorrow we shal dye. Be not ye disceaued. Euell speakinges corruppe good maners. Awake righte vp, and synne not: for some haue not ſy knowlege of God. This I saye to youre shame.

But some man mighte saye: How shal the deed aryse? And with what maner off body shal they come? Thou foole, † ſy which thou sowest is not quickened, excepte it dye. And what sowest thou? thou sowest not ſy body that shalbe, but a bare corne, namely of wheate, or of some other. But God geueth it a body as he wil, and vnto euery one of ſy sedes his owne body.

All fleszhe is not one maner of fleszhe, but there is one maner fleszhe of men, another of beastes, another of fiszhes, another of byrdes. And there are heauenly bodies, and there are earthy bodies: but the heauenly haue one glory, and ſy earthy another. The Sonne hath one clearnes, the Moone hath another clearnesse, and the starres haue another clearnesse, for one starre excelleth another in clearnesse: Euen so the resurrection of the deed. It is sowne in corrupcion, and shal ryse in vncorruption: It is sowne in dishonoure, & shal ryse in glory: It is sowne in weaknesse, and shal ryse in power: It is sowne a naturall body, & shal ryse a spirituall body.

Yf there be a naturall body, there is a spirituall body also. As it is wrytten: † The first man Adam was made in to a naturall life, and the last Adā in to a spirituall life. Howbeit the spirituall body is not the first, but ſy naturall, and then the spirituall. The first man is of the earth, earthy: ſy seconde mā is frō heauē, heauēly. As the earthy is, soch are they also that are earthy: and as ſy heauenly is, soch are they also ſy are heauenly. And as we haue borne the ymage of the earthy, so shal we beare the ymage of the heauenly also. This I saye brethern, that flesh & bloude can not inheret ſy kyngdome of God: nether shal corrupcion inheret vncorruption.

Beholde, I saye vnto you a mystery: † We shal not all slepe, but we shal all † be chaunged, and that sodenly and in the twinklynge of an eye, at the tyme of the last trompe. For the trompe shal blowe, and the deed shal ryse vncorruptible, and we shalbe chaunged. For this corruptible must put on vncorruption, and this mortall must put on immortalite. But whan this corruptible shal put on vncorruption, and this mortall shal put on immortalite, thē shal the worde be fulfilled that is wryttē: Death is swallowed vp in victory. ** Death, where is thy styng? Hell, where is thy victory? The styng of death is synne: The strength of synne is the lawe. But thanks be vnto God,† which hath geuē vs the victory thorow oure LORDE Iesus Christ. Therefore my deare brethrē, be ye stedfast, vnmoueable, & allwaye riche in the worke of the LORDE, for as moch as ye knowe, that youre labour is not in vayne in the LORDE.

of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

The first Chapter.

A PAUL an Apostle of Iesu Christ, by the will of God, and brother Timotheus. Vnto the congregacion of God which is at Corinthū, with all the sayntes which are i all Achaia. * Grace be with you, and peace frō God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

Blessed be God the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, the father of mercy and ꝑ God of all comforte, which comforteth vs in all oure trouble: in so moch ꝑ we are able to comforte them that are in eny maner of trouble, with the same comforte wherwith we oure selues are comforted of God. For as the afflicciōs of Christ are plenteous in vs, euen so is oure cōsolacion plenteous by Christ. But whether we haue trouble or comforte, it is done for youre welth. Yf it be trouble, it is done for youre cōforte and health, which health sheweth hir power, in that ye suffre the same afflicciōs which we suffre. Yf it be comforte, it is done also for youre comforte and health. Therefore is oure hope fast for you, in as moch as we knowe, that, like as ye are partakers of the afflicciōs, so shal ye be partakers also of the consolacion.

B Brethren we wolde not haue you ignoraunt of oure trouble, † which happened vnto vs in Asia, for we were greued out off measure passynge strength, so that we euen dispared of life, and had concluded in oure selues ꝑ we must nedes dye. But this was done, because we shulde not put oure trust in oure selues, but in God, which rayseth vp the deed to life agayne: which delyuered vs from so greate a death, and yet delyuereth daylie, On whom we trust, that he wil delyuer vs here after also, by the helpe of youre prayer for vs † that on oure behalfe many thanks maye be geuen by many personnes, for the gifte that is geuen vs.

For oure reioysinge is this, euen the testimony of oure conscience, that in synghenes ꝓ godly purenesse, not in fleshlye wysdome, but in the grace of God, we haue had oure conuersacion in the worlde, but most of all with you. For we wryte nothinge els vnto you, then that ye rede and also knowe. Yee ꝓ I trust that ye shal fynde vs vnto the ende, euen as ye haue founde vs partly.

For we are youre reioysinge, euē as ye also are oure ꝑ reioysinge in ꝑ daye of the LORDE Iesus. And in this confidence was I mynded the other tyme to come vnto you (that ye mighte haue yet another pleasure more) ꝓ † to passe by you in to Macedonia, ꝓ to come againe out of Macedonia vnto you ꝓ to be led forth to Iewrye warde of you.

Whan I thus wyse was mynded, dyd I vse lightnesse? Or are my thoughtes fleshly? Not so † but with me yee is yee, and nay is naye. O faitfull God, that oure worde vnto you hath not bene yee and naye. For Gods sonne Iesus Christ, which was preached amonge you by vs (namely, by me and Siluanus and Timotheus) was not yee and naye, but in him it was yee. For all the promyses of God are yee in him, ꝓ are Amē in him, to the prayse of God by vs. But it is God which stablysheth vs with you in Christ, and hath anoynted us, † and sealed us, and geuen the earnest of the sprete in oure hertes.

The ij. Chapter.

A BUT I call God to recorde vnto my soule, that to fanoure you<sup>a</sup> withall I came not agayne vnto Corinthum. Not that we are * lordes ouer youre faith, but we are helpers of youre ioye, for ye stonde in faith. But I determynd this with my selfe, that I wolde not come agayne to you in heynes. For yf I make you sory, who is it that shal make me glad, but the same which is made sory by me? And the same haue I wrytten vnto you, lest whā I come, I shulde take heynes of them, of whom I oughte to reioyse: for so-much as I haue this confidence in you all, that my ioye is the ioye of you all. For in greate trouble and anguysh of hert wrote I vnto you with many teares: not y<sup>e</sup> ye shulde be sory, but that ye mighte perceaue the loue, which I haue most specially vnto you.

B But yf eny man haue caused sorowe, the same hath not made me sory, but partely, lest I shulde greue you all. It is sufficient, that † the same man is so rebuked of many, so that from hence forth ye oughte the more to forgeue him and to comforte him, lest he be swallowed vp in ouer moch heynes. Wherefore I exhorte you, that ye shewe loue vpō him. For therefore dyd I wryte vnto you also, that I mighte knowe the profe of you, whether ye were obediēt in all thinges. But loke vnto whō ye forgeue eny thinge, I forgeue hī also. For I also, yf I forgeue ought vnto eny mā, that forgeue I for youre sakes in the rowme of Christ, lest we shulde be preuented of Sathan. For his thoughtes are not vnknowne vnto vs.

C But whā I came to † Troada to preach y<sup>e</sup> Gospell of Christ (and a dore was opened vnto me in y<sup>e</sup> LORDE) I had no rest in my sprete, because I founde not Titus my brother: but I toke my leue of them, and wente awaye in to Macedonia. Yet thanks be vnto God, which allwaye geueth vs the victory in Christ,§ and openeth y<sup>e</sup> sauoure of his knowlege by vs in euery place. For we are vnto God the good sauoure of Christ, both amonge thē y<sup>e</sup> are saved, & amonge them y<sup>e</sup> perishe.¶ To these, y<sup>e</sup> sauoure of death vnto death: but vnto y<sup>e</sup> other, the sauoure of life vnto life. And who is mete thereto? For we are not as many are, which choppe & chaunge with the worde of God, but enē out of purenesse, and out of God, in y<sup>e</sup> sighte of God, so speake we in Christ.

The iij. Chapter.

BEGYNNE we then agayne to prayse oure selues? Or nede we (as some other) of pistles of commédacion vnto you or letters of commédacion from you? Ye are oure epistle wrytten in oure hertes: which is vnderstonde and red of all mē, in that ye are knowne, how that ye are y<sup>e</sup> epistle of Christ, mynistrd by vs, and wryttē, not with ynke, but with the sprete of the luyngge God: ¶ not in tables of stone,** but in fleshy tables of the hert. Soch trust haue we thorow Christ to God warde, not that we are sufficient of oure selues to thinke eny thinge, as of oure selues,†† but oure ablenesse commeth of God, which hath made vs able, to be †† mynisters of the new Testament: not of the letter, but of the sprete. For the letter kylleth, but the sprete geueth life.

But yf the mynistracion y<sup>e</sup> kylleth thorow the letter, and was figured in stones, was glorious,§§ so that the childrē of Israel mighte not beholde the face of Moses, for y<sup>e</sup> clearnesse of his countenaūce, (which glory neuertheles is done awaye) how shal not y<sup>e</sup> mynistracion of y<sup>e</sup> sprete be moch more glorious? For yf the office that preacheth damnacon be glorious, moch more doth the office that preacheth righteousnes excede in glory. For y<sup>e</sup> other parte that was glorified is nothinge glorified in respecte of this excedeinge glory. For yf that which is done awaye, be glorious, moch more shal y<sup>e</sup> which remaineth, be glorious.

C Seynge then that we haue soch trust, we vse greate boldnesse, and do not as Moses,|| which put a vayle before his face, so that y<sup>e</sup> children of Israel mighte not se the ¶ endē of it, that is done awaye. But their myndes are blynded. *** For vnto this daye remaineth the same coueringe vntakē awaye in the olde Testament, whan they rede it, which in Christ is put awaye. But euen vnto this daye whan moyses is red, the vayle hangeth before their hertes: ††† Neuertheles whā they turne to the LORDE, the vayle shalbe taken awaye. ††† For the LORDE is a sprete: & where the sprete of the LORDE is, there is libertye. But now the glory of ꝑ LORDE appeareth in vs all with open face, and we are changed in to the same ymage, from one clearnes to another, euē as of the sprete of the LORDE.

The iij. Chapter.

THEREFORE seynge we haue soch an office (euē as mercy is come vpon vs) we faynte not, but cast from vs the clokes of vnhonestye, and walke not in craftines: nether corruppe we the worde of God but open the trueth, and reporte oure selues to euery mans consequence in the sighte of God.

Yf oure Gospell be yet hyd, it is hyd in them that are lost: amonge whom the God of this worlde *hath blynded ꝑ myndes of them which beleue not, that ꝑ lighte of the Gospell of the glory of Christ († which is the ymage of God) shulde not shyne vnto them. For we preach not oure selues, but Iesus Christ to be the LORDE, and oure selues yore seruantes for Iesus sake.

B For God † that cōmaunded the light to shyne out of darcknesse, ꝑ hath geuen a cleare shyne in oure hertes, ꝑ by vs ꝑ light of ꝑ knowlege of the glory of God mighte come forth, in the face of Iesus Christ.

But this treasure haue we in ¶ earthen vessels, that ꝑ power which excelleth might be of God, and not of vs. We are troubled on euery syde, yet are we not without shift. We are in pouertie, but not vterly without somewhat. We are persecuted, but we are not forsaken. We are oppressed, neuertheles we perish not. ¶ We allwayes beare aboute in oure body the dyenge of the LORDE Iesus ꝑ the life also of the LORDE Iesus might appeare in oure body. **For we which lyue, are alwayes deliyuered vnto death for Iesus sake, that the life also of Iesus might appeare in oure mortall flesh.

C Therefore is death now mightie in vs, but life in you. But seynge that we haue the same sprete of faith (acordinge as it is wrytten: † I beleued, and therefore haue I spokē.) we also beleue, ¶ therefore we speake, for we knowe that he, which rayseed vp ꝑ LORDE Iesus, shal rayse vs vp also by ꝑ meanes of Iesus, and shal set vs with you. For all things do I for youre sakes, † that the plētous grace by the thākesgeuyng of many, maye redounde to the prayse of God. Therefore are we not weery, but though oure outwarde man be corrupte, yet the inwarde is renewed daye by daye. §§ For oure trouble, which is but temporall and lighte, worketh an exceadinge and an eternall weighte of glorye vnto vs, which loke not on the thinges that are sene, but on them which are not sene. For ꝑ thinges which are sene, are temporall: but the thinges that are not sene, are eternall.

The v. Chapter.

WE knowe surely, ꝑ yf oure ¶ earthly house of this dwellynge were destroyed, we haue a buyldynge ordeyned of God, an house not made with handes, but euerlastynge in heauen. ¶¶ And in the same sighe we also after oure māson, which is from heauen: and longe to be clothed therwith, so yet, ***yf that we be founde clothed, and not naked. For as longe as we are in this tabernacle, we sighe and are grieved, for we had rather not be vnclothed, but to be clothed vpon, that mortalite might be swallowed vp of life. But he that hath ordeyned vs for this, is God, †† which hath geuen vs the earnest of the sprete. Therefore are we allwaye of good cheare, and knowe, that as longe as we dwell here in the body, we are not at home with the LORDE: for we walke in faith, and se him not. Neuertheles we are of good comforte, and had leuer to be absent from the body, ¶ to be at home with the LORDE.

B Wherefore, whether we be at home or frō home, we endeouore oure selues to please him. ††† For we must all appeare before the iudgment seate of Christ, ꝑ euery one maye receaue in his body, acordinge to ꝑ he hath done, whether it be good or bad. Seynge then that we knowe, how that the LORDE is to be feared, we fare fayre with men, but we are knowne well ynough vnto God: I trust also, that we are knowne in youre consciences. We praye not oure selues agayne vnto you, but geue you an occasion to reioyse of vs, ꝑ ye maye haue to reioyse agaynst them, which reioyse after the outwarde appearaunce, and not after the hert. For yf we do to moch, we do it vnto God: yf we kepe measure, we do it for youre sakes. For the loue of Christ constraeyneth vs, in as moch as we thus iudge, that yf one be deed for all, then are all deed. *And therfore dyed he for all, that they which lyue, shulde not hence forth lyue vnto them selues, but vnto him, which dyed for them and rose agayne.

C Therfore hence forth knowe we noman after  $\hat{y}$  flesh: and though we haue knowne Christ also after the flesh, yet knowe we him now so nomore. Therfore yf eny man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Olde thinges are past awaye, † beholde, all are become new. Neuertheles all thinges are off God, which hath reconceyled vs vnto himselfe by Iesus Christ, and hath geuen vs the office to preach the attonement. † For God was in Christ, and  $\S$  reconceyled the worlde vnto himselfe, and counted not ther synnes vnto them, and amonge vs hath he set vp the worde of  $\hat{y}$  attonemēt. Now thē are we messaungers in the rowme of Christ, euen as though God exhorted by vs. We beseke you now therfore in Christes steade, that ye be at one with God: ¶ for he hath made him which knewe no synne, to be  $\hat{y}$  synne for vs,  $\hat{y}$  we by his meanes shulde be that righteousnes, which before God is allowed.

The vi. Chapter.

A WE as helpers therfore exhorte you, that ye receaue not  $\hat{y}$  grace of God in vayne. For he sayeth: \*\* I haue herde the in the tyme accepted, and in the daye of saluacion haue I succoured the. Beholde, now is the accepted tyme, now is the daye of saluacion. Let vs geue no man occasion of euell, that oure office be not euell spoken of: but in all thinges let vs behaue oure selues as the †† ministers of God: in moch pacience, in troubles, in necessities, in anguysshes, in strypes, in presonmentes, in vprours, in labours, in watchinges, in fastynges, in purenesse, in knowlege, in longe sufferynge, in kyndnesse, in the holy goost, in loue vnfayned, in the worde of the trueth, in the power of God, by the armour of righteousnes on the rightehande and on the lefte, by honoure and dishonoure, by euell reporte and good reporte: as disceauers, & yet true: as vnkowne, and yet knowne: †† as dyenge, and beholde, we lyue: as chastened, and not kylled: as sorowynge, and yet allwaye mery: as poore, & yet make many riche: as hauynge nothinge, & yet possessynge all thinges.

O ye Corinthians, oure mouth is open vnto you, oure hert is made large. Ye are in no straytnesse on oure behalfe: but where as ye are in straytnesse, that do ye of youre owne hertely meanyng. I speake to you, as to childre, that haue like rewarde with vs. Set youre selues therfore at large.

C ¶ Beare not a straunge yock with the vnbeleuers. For what fellowshipe hath righteousness with vnrighteousnes? What company hath lighte with darknesse? ¶ How agreeth Christ with Belial? Or what parte hath the beleuer with the infydele? How acordeth  $\hat{y}$  tēple of God with ymages? Ye are the temple of the luyynge God, as sayeth God: I wyl dwell in them, and walke in them, and wyl be their God, & they shalbe my people. Wherfore come out from amonge them, and separate youre selues ¶¶ (sayeth the LORDE) and touche no vnclene thinge, so wyl I receaue you, & be youre father, & ye shalbe my sonnes and daughters, sayeth  $\hat{y}$  Allmightie LORDE.

The viij. Chapter.

A SEYNGE now that we haue soch promyses (dearly beloued) let vs clense oure selues from all fylthynges of the flesh and sprete, and growe vp to full holynes in  $\hat{y}$  feare of God. Vnderstode vs righte. We haue hurte no mā, we haue corrupte no man, we haue defrauded no man. I speake not this to cōdemne you, for I haue shewed you before, that ye are in oure hertes, to dye and to lyue with you. I am very bolde towarde you, I make moch boost of you, I am fylled with comforte, I am exceadyng ioyous in all oure tribulacion. \*\*\* For when we were come in to Macedonia, oure flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on euery syde: outward was fightinge, inward was feare. Neuertheles God that comforteth the abiecte,<sup>b</sup> comforted vs by the cōmyng of Titus.

B Not onely by his commynge, but also by the cōsolacion wherwith he was cōforted of you, whan he tolde vs youre desyre, youre wepyng, youre seruēt mynde for me, so ŷ I now reioyce ŷ more. For where as I made you sory by the letter, it repenteth me not, though I dyd repēte. For I se, that the same epistle made you sory (though it were but for a ceason). But now I reioyce, not that ye were sory, but that ye were sory to repent-aunce. For ye sorowed godly, so that in nothinge ye were hurte by vs. For godly sorowe causeth repentaunce vnto saluacion, not to be repented of: * but worldly sorowe causeth death. Beholde, where as ye haue had godly sorowe, what diligence hath it wrought in you? Yee a sufficient answer, displeasure, feare, desyre, a seruēt mynde, punyshment. For in all poyntes ye haue shewed youre selues, that ye are cleare in that matter.

C Wherefore though I wrote vnto you, yet is it not done for his cause that dyd hurte, nether for his cause that was hurte, but that youre diligence (which ye haue for vs in the sighte of God) mighte be manifest with you. Therefore are we comforted, because ye are comforted: but exceddingly the more ioyed we, for the ioye of Titus, because his sprete was refreshed of you all. I am therefore not now ashamed, though I boasted my selfe vnto him of you: but like as all is true that I haue spokē vnto you, euen so is oure boasting vnto Titus founde true also. And his inwarde affection is more abundaunt towardes you, whan he remembreth the obedience of you all, how ye receaued him with feare and trēblyng. I reioyse, that I maye be bolde ouer you in all thinges.

The viij. Chapter.

A I DO you to wit (brethren) the grace of God, which is geuē in the congregacions of Macedonia. For their reioysing was most abundaunt, whan they were tryed by moch trouble: & though they were exceddinge poore, yet haue they geuē exceddinge richely, and that in synghenesse. For to their power (I beare recorde) yee and beyonde their power, they were wyllinge of their awne acorde, and prayed vs with greate instaunce, that we wolde receaue their benefite and fellowshipe of the † hādreachinge that is done for the sayntes: And not as we lokod for, but gaue ouer them selues first to the LORDE, and afterwarde vnto vs by ŷ wyl of God, so that we coulde not but desyre Titus, that like as he had begonne afore he wolde euen so accomplish the same beniuolence amonge you. Now as ye are riche in all poyntes, in faith and in worde, and in knowlege, and in all diligence, and in youre loue towardes vs, euen so se that ye be plenteous also in this beniuolēce. This I saye not as commaūdyng, but seynge, other are so diligent, I proue youre loue also, whether it be perfecte or no. For ye knowe the liberalite of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which though he be riche, yet for youre sakes he became poore, ŷ ye thorow his pouerte mighte be made riche.

And my counsell herin I geue, for this is profitable for you, which haue begonne a yere ago, not onely to do, but also to wyll. But now perfourme the dede also, that like as there is a ready mynde to wil, there maye be a ready mynde also to perfourme the dede † of that which ye haue. ŷ For yf there be a wyllinge mynde, it is accepted accordinge to that a man hath, not accordinge to that he hath not. This is not done to the intent, that other shulde haue ease, and ye cōbraunce, but that it be a lyke. Let youre abundaunce sucke their lacke in this tyme off derth, that their abundaunce also hereafter maye supplee youre lacke, that there maye be equalite. As it is wrytten: "He ŷ gathered moch, had not the more: and he that gathered little, wanted nothinge. Thākes be vnto God, which put in the hert of Titus, the same diligence towardes you. For he accepted the request in dede, yee he was rather so well wyllinge, that of his awne acorde, he came vnto you.

C We haue sent with him that brother, whose prayse is in the Gospell thorow out all the congregacions. Not onely that, but he is chosen also of the congregacions, to be a felowe with vs in oure iourney, for this beniuolence that is mynistrd by vs vnto the prayse of the LORDE, and to sterc vp youre prompte mynde, and to bewarre, lest eny mā reporte euell of vs because of this plenteousnes, which is mynistrd by vs: † and therefore make we prouision for honest things, not onely before the LORDE, but also before men.

We haue sent with them also a brother of oures, whom we haue oft proued diligēt in many things, but now moche more diligent. And this haue we done in greate hope towarde you, whether it be for Titus sake (which is my felowe and helper amonge you) or for oure brethrē (which are Apostles of the cōgregacions, & the prayse of Christ.) Shewe now the prove off youre loue and off oure boastinge of you, vnto these, and opely in the sighte of the cōgregacions.

The ix. Chapter.

A OF the *handreachinge vnto ŷ sayntes, it is no nede for me to wryte vnto you: for I knowe youre redynesse of mynde, wherof I boast my selfe amonge them of Macedonia, and saye: Achaia was ready a yeaere agoo. And youre feruentnesse hath prouoked many. Neuertheles yet haue we sent these brethren, lest oure reioysinge ouer you shulde be in wayne in this behalfe, that ye mighte be ready, as I haue reported of you: lest whan they of Macedonia come with me, and fynde you vnprepared, we (I wyl not saye ye) shulde be ashamed in this presumption of boastinge.

B Wherefore I thoughte it necessary to exhorte the brethren, to come before hande vnto you, for to prepare this blessinge promysed afore, that it mighte be ready, so that it be a blessinge, and not a defraudyng. This I thinke: that †he which soweth litle, shal reape litle also: and he ŷ soweth plenteously, shal likewyse reape plenteously, euery one acordynge as he hath purposed in his hert, not grudgingly, or of compulsion. ‡For God loueth a chearfull geuer. God is able to make you riche in all grace, ŷ ye in all thinges hauynge sufficiēt to the vttemost, maye be riche to all maner of good workes. As it is wrytte: "He hath sparsed abrode & geuē to ŷ poore, his righteousnes remaineth for euer.

C He that geueth sede vnto the sower, shal mynistrer bred also for fode, and shal multiplie youre sede, and increase the frutes of youre righteousnes, that in all thinges ye maye be made riche vnto all singlenesse, which causeth thorow vs, thankesgeuyng vnto God. For the hādreachinge of this colleeccion not onely suppleeth the nede off the sayntes, but also is abūdaunt herin, that for this laudable mynistracion many mighte geue thākes vnto God, and prayse God for youre obedient professyng of the Gospell of Christ, & for youre synglenesse in distributyng vnto thē, and to all men, and in their prayer for you, which longe after you, for the abūdaunt grace of God in you. Thankes be vnto God for his vnoutspeakeable gifte.

The x. Chapter.

I PAUL my selfe beseke you by the mekenesse and softnesse off Christ, which when I am present amonge you, am of small reputacion, but am bolde towarde you beyng absent. I beseke you that I nede not be bolde whan I am present, & to vse ŷ boldnesse wherwith I am supposed to be bolde, agaynst some, which repute vs as though we walked after ŷ flesh: for though we walke in the flesh, yet fighte we not after a fleshly maner. For the ŷwapens of oure warre are not fleshly, but mightie before God to cast downe strōge holdes, wherwith we ouerthrowe ymaginacions, & euery hye thinge ŷ exalteth it selfe agaynst the knowlege of God, and bryng in to captiuite all vnderstandinge to the obedience of Christ, & are ready to take vengeance on all disobedience, whan youre obediēce is fulfilled. Loke ye on thinges after ŷ vtter appearaūce?

B Yf eny man trust of himselfe ŷ he is Christes, let him thinke this also by himselfe, ŷ like as he is Christes, euē so are we Christes also. And though I shulde boast my selfe somewhat more of oure auctorite ¶ which ŷ LORDE hath geuē vs to edifye and not to destroye, it shulde not be to my shame. This I saye, lest I shulde seme, as though I wente aboute to make you afayed with letters. For the pistles (saye they) are sore and stronge, but his bodely presence is weake, and his speache rude. Let him ŷ is soche, thinke on this wyse, that as we are in worde by letters whā we are absente, soch are we also in dede whan we are present. For we darre not reken or compare oure selues, vnto some that prayse them selues: Neuertheles whyle they measure them selues by them selues, and holde onely of them selues, they vnderstonde nothinge.

C Howbeit we wil not boast oure selues aboue measure, but onely acordinge to the measure of the rule, wherwith God hath distributed vnto vs the measure to reach euen vnto you. For we stretch not oure selues to farre as though we had not reached vnto you. For euen vnto you haue we come with the Gospell of Christ, and boast not oure selues out of measure in other mens laboures: Yee and we hope when youre faith is increased in you, that we wil come farther (acordinge to oure measure) and preach the Gospell vnto them that dwell beyonde you, and not to reioyse in that, which is prepared with another mans measure.

The xi. Chapter.

A LET him that reioyseth, reioyse in the LORDE: for he ŷ *prayseth him selfe, is not allowed, but he whō ŷ LORDE prayseth. Wolde God ye coulde suffre me a litle in my foloshnes, yet do ye forbear me. For I am gelous ouer you with godly gelousy. For I haue married you vnto one mā, to brynge a chaste virgin vnto Christ. But I feare, lest † as ŷ serpēt begyled Eue with his sutteltie, eue so youre wyttes shulde be corrupte from the synglenesse that is in Christ. For yf he that commeth vnto you, preach another Iesus, whom we haue not preached, or yf ye receaue another sprete, ŷ ye haue not receaued, or another Gospell which ye haue not accepted, ye might right well haue bene cōtent. For I suppose that I am no lesse thē the hye Apostles are. And though I be rude in speakynge, yet am I not rude in knowlege. Howbeit amōge you I am knowne to the vttemost. Or dyd I synne therein because I submytted my selfe, that ye mighte be exalted?

B For I preached vnto you the Gospell of God † frely, and robbed other cōgregacions, and toke wages of thē, to preach vnto you. § And when I was present with you, and had nede, I was greuous to no man: ¶ for ŷ which was lackynge vnto me, the brethren which came fro Macedonia, supplied. And in all thinges I kepte my selfe so, ŷ I shulde not be greuous to you, & so wyl I kepe my selfe. As surely as the trueth of Christ is in me, this reioysing shal not be taken fro me in the regions of Achaia. Wherefore? Because I shulde not loue you? God knoweth. Neuertheles what I do and wyl do, that do I to cut away occasion, from thē which seke occasion, that they mighte boast thē selues to be like vnto vs. For soch false Apostles & disceatfull workers fashion them selues like vnto the Apostles of Christ. And that is no maruell: for Sathan himselfe is chaunged in to ŷ fashion of an angell of light. Therefore is it no greate thinge, though his mynisters fashion them selues as though they were the preachers of righteousnes, ¶ whose ende shalbe acordinge to their dedes.

I saye agayne, lest eny man thynke that I C am folish: or els take me euen now as a fole, ŷ I maye boast my selfe a litle also. That I speake now, that speake I not after the LORDE, but as it were in folishnes, whye we are now come to boasting: Seynge that many boast them selues after ŷ flesh, I wil boast my selfe also. For ye suffre foles gladly, in so moch as ye youre selues are wyse. For ye suffre euen yf a man brynge you in to bondage, yf a man put you to dishonesty, yf a man take ought frō you, yf a man exalte him selfe ouer you, yf a man smyte you on the face. I speake concernynge rebuke, as though we were weake.

Wherin so euer now eny man darre be bolde (I speake folishly) therein darre I be bolde also. They are Hebrues, so am I. They are Israelites, euen so am I. They are the sede of Abraham, so am I. They are the mynisters of Christ (I speake as a fole) I am more: in laboures more abūdaunt, in strypes aboue measure, in presonmentes more plentifulously, in death oft. ** Of the Iewes receaued I fyue tymes fortye strypes, one lesse. †† Thyryse was I beaten with roddes. ‡ I was once stoned, § I suffred thyryse shypwracke: nyghte and daye haue I bene in the depe of the see: I haue oft iourneyed: I haue bene oft in paretls of waters, in paretls amonge murthurers, in paretls amonge the Iewes, in paretls amonge the Heythen, in paretls in cities, in paretls in the wylderners, in paretls vpon the See, in paretls amonge false brethrē, in labour & trauaile, in moch watchinges, in honger and thyrst, in moch fastinges in colde and nakednesse: Besyde those thynges which are out-warde, namely my daylie combrance, my daylie care for all cōgregacions. * Who is weake, and I be not weake? Who is offended, ⁊ I burne not? Yf I must nedes make my boast, I wil boast my selfe of myne infirmyte. God ꝑ father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which is blessed for euer, knoweth that I lye not. †At Damascōn the gouernoure of ꝑ people vnder kynge Aretas, kepte ꝑ cite of the Damascenes, ⁊ wolde haue taken me, and at a wyndowe was I let downe in a basket thorow the wall, ⁊ so escaped his handes.

The xij. Chapter.

IT profiteth me nothinge (no doute) to boaste. Neuertheles I wil come to ꝑ visions and reuelacions off the LORDE. I knowe a man in Christ aboue fourtene yeares a goo (whether he was in ꝑ body, I can not tell: or whether he was out of the body, I can not tell, God knoweth.) the same was taken vp in to the thirde heauen: and I knowe the same man (whether he was in ꝑ body or out of the body, I can not tell, God knoweth) how that he was takē vp in to Paradise, and herde wordes not to be spoken, which no man can vtter. Here of will I boast, but of my selfe wil I make no boast, excepte it be of myne infirmities. And though I wolde boast my selfe, I dyd not foolishly, for I wolde saye the trueth. But I refrayne my selfe, lest eny mā shulde thinke of me aboue ꝑ he seyth in me, or heareth of me. †And lest I shulde exalte my selfe out of measure because of the hie reuelacions, there is a warnynge geuen vnto my flesh, euen ꝑ messaunger of Satan, to buffet me, that I shulde not exalte my selfe out off measure: for ꝑ which I besoughte the LORDE thryse, that it mighte departe fro me. And he sayde vnto me: My grace is sufficiēt for the. For my strength is made perfecte thorow weaknes. Very glad therefore wil I reioyse in my weaknes, that the strength of Christ maye dwell in me.

33 Therefore am I contente in infirmities, in rebukes, in necessities, in persecucions, in anguysches for Christes sake: for whā I am weake, thē am I strōge. I am become a fole ī boasting my selfe: Ye haue cōpelled me. For I oughte to be cōmended of you, ꝑ in so moch as I am in nothinge inferior to ꝑ hie Apostles. Though I be nothinge, yet are ꝑ tokens of an Apostle wrought amōge you, with all paciēce, with signes, ⁊ with wōders ⁊ with mightie dedes. For what is it, wherin ye are inferiours to the other congregacions? excepte it be ꝑ I haue not bene greuous vnto you. Forgeue me this wrōge. Beholde, I am ready the thirde tyme to come vnto you, and wyl not be chargeable vnto you. ¶ For I seke not yours, but you. For ꝑ childrē ought not to gather treasure for the elders, but the elders for the children. I wil very gladly bestowe, and wyl be bestowed for youre soules: though ꝑ more I loue you, the lesse am I loued agayne.

But let it be so that I greued you not, neuertheles for so moch as I was craftye, I toke you with gyle. Haue I defrauded you by eny of thē, whō I sent vnto you? I desyred Titus, ⁊ with him I sent a brother: dyd Titus defraude you? Haue we not walked in one sprete? Wēte we not in like fotesteppes? Agayne, thynke ye ꝑ we excuse oure selues? We speake in Christ in the sighte off God. But all this (dearly beloued) is done for youre edifyenge. For I feare, lest whan I come, I shal not fynde you soch as I wolde: and lest ye shal fynde me soch as ye wolde not: lest there be amonge you, debates, envyenges, wrathes, stryuynges, bacbytinges, whysperinges, swellinges, vprours: lest whan I come agayne, God bringe me lowe amōge you ⁊ lest I be constrayned to bewayle many of thē ꝑ haue synned before, ⁊ haue not repented ouer ꝑ vncleennesse and whordome, and wantonnes, which they haue cōmytted.

The xij. Chapter.

NOW come I the thirde tyme vnto you. ¶ In the mouth of two or thre witnesses shal euery matter be stablized. I haue tolde you before, ⁊ tell you before as present ꝑ seconde tyme, ⁊ wryte it now beyng absent, vnto thē which in tyme passed haue synned, ⁊ to all other: ⁊ yf I come agayne, I wil not spare, seyng that ye seke experiece of him, ** which speaketh in me, euen Christ, which amonge you is not weake, but is mightie amōge you. ## The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Galathians.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

Paul rebuketh them, because they were fallen away from the gospel, sheweth his awne cōuersion, magnifieth his office and apostelshippe, and declareth himself to be equall with the hye apostles.

Chap. II.

He withstondeth Peter in the face, and proueth, that the lawe and circumcision are not necessary to saluacion.

Chap. III.

He rebuketh the vnstedfastnesse of the Galathians, shewing the vnperfectnesse of the lawe, and declareth neuerthelesse that it was not geuen for naught.

Chap. IIII.

Paul sheweth that thorow Christ we be delyuered from the lawe, and rebuketh the vnthankfulnesse of the Galathians.

Chap. V.

He laboureth to drawe them awaye from circūcision, sheweth them the battayll betwixte the sprete and the flesh, and the frutes of them both.

Chap. VI.

He exorteth them to brotherly loue, and one to beare with another. In the ende he warneth them to beware of circūcision.

The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Galathians.

The first Chapter.

A PAUL an Apostle (not of men, nor by mā, but by Iesus Christ & by God the father, which rayseed him vp frō ſ̄ deed) & all the brethrē which are with me. Vnto the cōgregaciōs in Galacia. * Grace be with you, and peace frō God the father, and oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which gaue him selfe for oure synnes, that he mighte deliuer vs from this present euel worlde, accordinge to the wyll of God oure father, to whom be prayse for euer and euer. Amen.

I maruell ſ̄ ye are so soone turned (from him that called you in the grace of Christ) vnto another Gospell: which is nothinge els, but that there be some, which trouble you, and intende to peruerthe the Gospell of Christ.

33 Neuertheles though we oure selues, or an angell from heauē preach vnto you eny other Gospell, thē ſ̄ which we haue preached vnto you, the same be acursed. As we haue sayde afore, so saye we now agayne: Yf eny mā preach vnto you eny other thinge, thē ſ̄ ye haue receaued, ſ̄ same be acursed. Preach I men now or God? Or go I aboute to please men? Yf I shulde yet please men, I were not the seruauit of Christ.

But I certifye you brethren, ſ̄ the Gospell which is preached of me, is not of men. For I nether receaued it ner lerned it of mā, but by the reuelacion of Iesus Christ. For ye haue herde of my conuersacion afore tyme in the Ieweshippe, how that beyōde measure I persecuted the cōgregacion of God, and spoyled it, and preuayled in the Ieweshippe aboute many of my companyons in my nacion, & was a moch more feruent manteyner of the tradicions of the fathers.

C But whan it pleased God which separated me fro my mothers wombe, and called me by his grace, for to declare his sonne in me, that I shulde preach him thorow the Gospell amonge the Heythen, immediatly I commened not of the matter with flesh and bloude: nether came I to Ierusalem vnto them which were Apostles before me: but wente my wayes in to Arabia, and came agayne to Damascon. Then after thre yere I came to Ierusalē to se Peter, and abode with him fyfene dayes. As for the other Apostles, I sawe none of them, saue Iames the LORDES brother.

The things that I wryte vnto you, beholde, ſ̄ God knoweth, I lye not. After that wente I in to the coastes of Syria and Celicia: but of face I was vnknowne to ſ̄ Christen congregacions in Iewrye. Neuertheles they had herde onely, that: He that persecuted vs in tyme passed, preacheth now ſ̄ faith which some tyme he destroyed: and they praysed God in me.

The ij. Chapter.

THEN after fourtene yeaues, ¶ I wente vp A agayne to Ierusalē with Barnabas, and toke Titus with me also. But I wente vp by reuelacion, and commened with thē of ſ̄ Gospell, which I preach amonge the Heythē: but specially with thē which were in reputacion, lest I shulde runne or had runne in vayne. ¶ But Titus which was also with me, was not compelled to be circūcysed, though he was a Greke: and that because of certayne incomers beyng false brethrē, which came in amōge other, to spye out oure libertye, which we haue in Christ Iesus, that they might bryng vs in to bondage: To whom we gaue no rowme, no not for the space of an houre, as concernynge to be broughte in to subieccion: ŷ the trueth of the Gospell mighte contynue with you.

As for thē that semed to be greate, what they were in tyme passed, it maketh no matter to me. * For God loketh not on the outward appearance of men. Neuertheles they which semed greate, taught me nothinge: but contrary wyse, whan they sawe that the Gospell ouer the vncircumcision was cōmytted vnto me, as ŷ Gospell ouer ŷ circumcision was cōmytted vnto Peter. (For he ŷ was mightie with Peter to the Apostleshippe ouer the circumcision, the same was mightie with me also amōge the Heythen) they perceaued the grace that was geuen vnto me.

Iames and Cephas and Ihon, which semed to be pilers, gaue me and Barnabas ŷ righte handes, and agreed with vs, that we shulde preach amōge the Heythē, and they amōge the Iewes: onely that we shulde remēbre the poore, † which thinge also I was diligent to do.

But whā Peter was come to Antioche, I withstode him in ŷ face: for he was worthy to be blamed. For afore there came certayne from Iames, he ate with the Heythē. But whā they were come, he withdrew and separated himselfe, fearinge thē which were of the circumcision. And the other Iewes dyssembled with him likewise, in so moch ŷ Barnabas was brought in to their symulacion also. But whan I sawe that they walked not right after ŷ trueth of the Gospell, I sayde vnto Peter openly before all: Yf thou beyng a Iewe, lyuest after the maner of the Gentyles, and not as do the Iewes, why caustest thou the Gentyles then to lyue as do the Iewes?

† Though we be Iewes by nature, and not synners of the Gentyles, yet (in so moch as we knowe, that a man is not made righteous by the dedes off the lawe, but by the faith on Iesus Christ) we haue beleued also on Iesus Christ, ŷ we might be made righteous by the faith of Christ, and not by the dedes of the lawe, because that by the dedes of the lawe no flesh shal be iustified.

Yf we then which seke to be made righteous by christ, shulde be yet founde synners oure selues, is not Christ then the mynister of synne? God forbyd. For yf I buylde agayne ŷ which I haue destroyed, then make I my selfe a trespasser. But I thorow the lawe am deed vnto the lawe, that I might lyue vnto God. I am crucified with Christ, yet do I lyue: neuerthelesse now not I, but Christ lyueth in me. For ŷ life which I now lyue in ŷ fleshe, I lyue in the faith of ŷ sonne of God ŷ which loued me, and gaue himselfe for me. I cast not awaye the grace of God. For yf righteousnes come by the lawe, then dyed Christ in vayne.

The iij. Chapter.

O YE folishe Galathiās, who hath bewitched you, that ye shulde not beleue the trueth? To whō Iesus Christ was describēd before the eyes and amōge you crucified. This onely wolde I lerne of you: Receauē ye the sprete by the dedes of the lawe, or by the preachinge of the faith? Are ye so vnwyse? Ye beganne in the sprete, wolde ye ende now thē in the flesh? Haue ye suffred so moch in vayne? Yf it be els in vayne. He that geueth you the sprete, and doth soch greate actes amōge you, doth he it thorow the dedes of the lawe, or by ŷ preachinge of the faith? ¶ Euen as Abrahā beleued God, and it was counted vnto him for righteousness. Thus ye knowe, that they which are of faith, are Abrahams children.

The scripture sawe afore hāde, that God iustificieth the Heythen thorow faith. Therefore shewed it glad tydinges afore vnto Abraham, and sayde: † In the shal all the Heythen be blessed. So then they which be of faith, are blessed with faithfull Abraham. For as many as go aboute with the workes of the lawe, are vnder ŷ curse: For it is wryttē: ** Cursed be euery man, which cōtynueth not in all thinges that are wryttē in the boke of the lawe, to do them. That no man is iustified by the lawe in the sighte of God, it is euydēt: †† For ŷ iust shal lyue by his faith. The lawe is not of faith, †† but the mā that doth ſame, ſhal lyue therin. But Chriſt hath deliyuered vs from ſ curſe of the lawe, whan he became a curſe for vs. (For it is wryttē: * Cursed is euery man that hangeth on tre) ſ the blyſſynge of Abraham mighte come on the Gentyles in Chriſt Ieſu, and ſ we might ſo receaue ſ promyſed ſprete, thorow faith.

¶ Brethren, I wil ſpeake after the maner of men. Though it be but a māſ Teſtamēt, yet no man deſpyſeth it, or addeth eny thinge therto, † whan it is confirmed. To Abraham and his ſede were the promyſes made. He ſayeth not: In the ſedes, as in many, but in thy ſede, as in one, which is Chriſt. This Teſtament (I ſaye) which afore was confirmed to Chriſt warde, is not diſannulled (that the promes ſhulde be made of none affecte) by the lawe † which was geuen beyonde foure hundredth & thirtiē yeares thereafter. † For yf the enheritaunce be gotten by the lawe, then is it not geuen by promes. But God gaue it frely vnto Abraham by promes.

¶ Wherefore thē ſerueth the lawe? ¶ It was added becauſe of tranſgreſſion, tyll the ſede came, to the which the promes was made. ¶ And it was geuen of angels, by the hande of the **mediatoure. A mediatour is not a mediatour of one onely, but God is one.

¶ Is the lawe then agaynſt the promyſes of God? God forbyd. Howbeit yf there had bene geuen a lawe which coulde haue geuē life, thē no doute righteouſnes ſhulde come of the lawe. † But ſ ſcripture hath ſhut vp all vnder ſynne, that ſ promes ſhulde come by the faith on Ieſus Chriſt, geuē vnto thē that beleue. Before faith came, we were kepte and ſhut vp vnder the lawe, vnto the faith which ſhulde afterwarde be declared. Thus ſ lawe was oure ſcolemaſter vnto Chriſt, that we might be made righteous by faith. But now that faith is come, we are nomore vnder the ſcolemaſter. † For ye all are the children of God by the faith in Chriſt Ieſu. §§ For as many of you as are baptysed, haue put on Chriſt. Here is nether Iewe ner Greke: here is nether bōde ner fre: here is nether man ner woman, for ye are all ¶ one in Chriſt Ieſu. Yf ye be Chriſtes, thē are ye Abraham's ſede and heyres acordynge to the promes.

The iij. Chapter.

BUT I ſaye: As longe as the heyre is a childe, there is no difference betwene him and a ſeruaunt, though he be lord of all ſ goodes: but he is vnder tuters and gouerners, vntyll the tyme appoynted of the father. Euen ſo we alſo, whā we were children, were in bondage vnder the outwarde tradicions. But whan the tyme was fulfilled, God ſent his ſonne, borne of a womā, ¶ and put vnder the lawe, to redeme them which were vnder the lawe, that we mighte receaue ſ childſhippe. *** For ſo moch thē as ye are children, God hath ſent the ſprete of his ſonne in to oure hertes, which cryeth: Abba, deare father. Wherefore now, thou art not a ſeruaunt, but a ſonne. Yf thou be a ſonne, then art thou the heyre of God thorow Chriſt. Notwithſtandinge whan ye knewe not God, ye dyd ſeruyce vnto them, which by nature are no Goddes. But now ſeynge ye knowe God (yee rather are knowne off God) how is it †† that ye turne you backe agayne vnto the weake and beggerly tradicions, wher vnto ye deſyre agayne a freſh to be in bondage?

¶ Ye obſerue dayes and monethes, and tymes and yeares. I am in feare of you, leſt I haue beſtowed labour on you in vayne. Brethrē I beſeke you, be ye as I am, for I am as ye are. Ye haue not hurte me at all. C Tell me ye that wylbe vnder the lawe, haue ye not herde the lawe? For it is wrytten, that Abraham had two sonnes * the one by a bonde mayde, † the other by a fre woman. As for him that was of the böde mayde, he was borne after ‡ flesh: but he which was of the fre woman, was borne by promes. These wordes betoken somwhat. For these wemen are the two Testamentes: The one from the mount Sina, that gendreth vnto bondage, which is Agar. For Agar is called in Arabia § mount Sina, and reacheth vnto Ierusalem which now is, and is in bondage with hir children.

‡ But Ierusalem that is aboue, is the fre woman, which is the mother of vs all. For it is wryttē: § Reioyse thou baren, that bearest no childrē: breake forth and crye thou ¶ trauaylest not, for the desolate hath many mo childrē, then she which hath an huszbande. As for vs (brethren) we are the children of Isaac acordinge to the promes.

|| But like as at that tyme, he that was borne after the flesh, persecuted him ¶ was borne after the sprete, euen so is it now also. But what sayeth the scripture? * Put awaye the bonde mayden and hir sonne: for the sonne of ¶ bondmayde shal not be heyre with ¶ sonne of the fre woman. So now brethren, we are not children of the bonde mayde, but of the fre woman.

The v. Chapter.

A STONDE fast therfore in the libertye wherwith Christ hath made vs fre, and be not wrapped agayne in the yocke off bondage. Beholde, I Paul saye vnto you: Yf ye be circumcysed, Christ profiteth you nothinge at all. I testifye agayne vnto euery man which is circumcysed, that he is bounde to kepe the whole lawe. Ye are gone quyte from Christ, as many off you as wylbe made righteous by the lawe, and are fallen from grace. But we wayte in the sprete off hope, to be made righteous by faith.† For in Christ Iesu nether is circumcision eny thinge worth ner vncircumcision, but faith which ** by loue is mightie in operacion. Ye ranne well, who was a let vnto you, that ye shulde not obeye the trueth? Soch counsell is not of him that hath called you.†† A litle leuen sowreth the whole lompe of dowe.

B I haue trust towarde you in § LORDE, that ye wylbe none otherwyse mynded. But he that troubleth you, shal beare his iudgment, what so euer he be. Brethren yf I yet preach circumcision, why do I suffre persecucion? then had the slaunder off the crosse ceased. Wolde God they were roted out frō amōge you, which trouble you. But brethrē, ye are called vnto libertie, onely let not youre libertie be an occasion vnto the flesh, but by loue serue one another. For all the lawe is fulfilled in one worde, namely in this:‡ loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. But yf ye byte and deuoure one another, take hede, that ye be not consumed one of another.

C I saye: Walke in the sprete, and so shal ye not fulfill the §§ lustes off the fleshe. For the flesh lusteth agaynst the sprete, and the sprete agaynst the flesh. These are contrary one to the other, so that ye can not do that which ye wolde: But and yf ye be led of the sprete, then are ye not vnder the lawe.|| The dedes of ¶ flesh are manifest, which are these: Aduoutrye, whordome, vnclēnes, wantānes, Idolatrye, witchcraft, hatred, variaunce, zele, wrath, stryfe, sedicion, sectes, envyeenge, murthur, dronkennes, glotony, and soch like: of the which I tell you before, as I haue tolde you in tyme past, ¶¶ that they which commytte soch, shal not inheret the kyngdome of God.*** But the frute of the sprete, is loue, ioye, peace, longe sufferinge, gēlenes, goodnesse, faithfulness, mekenesse, tēperauce,††† Agaynst soch is not ¶ lawe:‡‡ But they that are Christes, haue crucified their flesh, with the lustes and desyres.

The vi. Chapter.

A YF we lyue in the sprete, let vs walke also in the sprete. Let vs not be vayne glorious, prouokinge one another, and envyeenge another. Brethren, Yf eny mā be ouertaken of a faute, ye which are spirituall, enfourme him with a meke sprete: and conside thine owne selfe, that thou also be not tempted. §§§ Beare ye one anothers burthē, and so shal ye fulfill the lawe of Christ. But yf eny man thinke himselfe to be somewhat (whan in dede he is nothinge) the same disceaueth himselfe. Let euery man proue his owne worke, and thē shal he haue reioysinge in his awne selfe, and not in another. For * euery one shal beare his owne burthen.

† But let him that is taughte with the worde, mynister in all good thinges, vnto him that teacheth him. Be not disceaued, God wil not be mocked. ‡ For what soeuer a man soweth, that shal he reape. He that soweth vpon the flesh, shal of the flesh reape destruction: But he that soweth vpon ŷ sprete, shal of the sprete reape life euerlastinge. § Let vs not be weery of well doynge: for whā the tyme is come, we shal reape without ceassing. Whyle we haue tyme therfore, let vs do good vnto all men || but specially vnto thē which are of ŷ housholde of faith.

They that wil please in the flesh, constrayne you to be circumcysed, onely lest they shulde be persecuted with the crosse of Christ. For euē they them selues which are circumcysed, kepe not the lawe, but wolde haue you circumcysed, that they mighte reioyse in youre flesh. But God forbyd that I shulde reioyse, saue onely in the crosse of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, wherby the worlde is crucified vnto me, and I vnto the worlde. ¶ For in Christ Iesu nether circūcision awayleth eny thinge, ner vncircumcision, but a new creature. ** And as many as walke acordynge to this rule, peace and mercy be vpon thē, and vpon Israel of God. From hence forth let no man put me to busynesse, †† for I beare in my body the markes of the LORDE Iesu. Brethren, the grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with youre sprete Amen.

The Epistle

of the Apostle S. Paul to the Ephesians.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

The euerlastinge ordinaunce and eleccion of God in sauynge all men thorow Christ Iesus his sonne. We are ordered vnto good workes. The dominion of Christ.

Chap. II.

Paul sheweth them what maner of people they were before their conuersion, and what they are now in Christ.

Chap. III.

He sheweth the cause of his presonment, desyareth them not to faynte because of his trouble, and prayeth God to make the stedfast in his sprete.

Chap. IIII.

He exhorteth them vnto mekenes, longe sufferinge, vnto loue and peace, euery one to serue and edifie another with the gifte that God hath geue him, to bewarre of straunge doctrine, to laye asyde the olde conuersacion of gredy lustes, and to walke in a new life.

Chap. V

He exhorteth them vnto loue, warneth them to bewarre of vncleannes, cuvetousnesse, foolish talkynge and false doctryne: to be circumspecte, to avoide dronkennesse, to reioyse and to be thankfull towarde God, to submytt the selues one to another, He teacheth how wemen shulde obeye their huszbodes, and how louyngly men ought to intreate their wyues.

Chap. VI.

How children shulde behaue them selues towarde their fathers and mothers: Likewyse fathers towarde their children: Seruauntes towarde their masters: Agayne, masters towarde their seruauntes. An exhortacion to the spirituall battayll, and what weapens christen men shulde fight withall.

The Epistle

of the Apostle S. Paul to the Ephesians.

The first Chapter.

PAUL an Apostle of Iesus Christ by the will of God. To y sayntes which are at Ephesus, to the that beleue on Iesus Christ.

* Grace be with you and peace from God oure father, and fro the LORDE Iesus Christ.

Blessed be God the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which hath blessed vs with all maner of spirituall blessinge in heavenly thynges by Christ accordinge as he had chosen vs by him, or euer the foundation of the worlde was layed, that we shulde be holy and without blame before him in loue, and ordeyned vs before, to receaue vs as children thorow Iesus Christ, accordinge to the pleasure of his will, vnto the prayse of the glory of his grace, wherby he hath made vs accepted in the Beloued, in whom we haue redempcion thorow his bloude (namely) the forgeuenes of synnes, accordinge to y riches of his grace, which he hath shed vpon vs abundantly in all wysdome and prudēce: and hath opened vnto vs the mystery of his wil accordinge to his pleasure, which he had purposed in himselfe, † it shulde be preached *whā the tyme was full come, that all thinges shulde be gathered together by Christ, both the thinges which are in heauen, and also the thinges that are vpon earth, euen by him, by whom also we are come to the inheritance † that were therto predestinate before, accordinge to † purpose of him, which worketh all thinges after † counsell of his owne wyll, that we mighte be to the prayse of his glory, euen we that before beleued on Christ, on whō also ye beleued, after that ye herde the worde of trueth, namely † Gospell of youre saluacion: wherein when ye beleued, ye were † sealed with the holy sprete of promes, which is the earnest of oure inheritance to oure redempcion, that we mighte be his owne to the prayse off his glory.

¶ Wherefore I also, (in so much as I haue herde of the faith which ye haue in † LORDE Iesu, and of youre loue vnto all † sayntes) ceasse not to geue thanks for you, and make mencion of you in my prayers, that † God of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, the father of glory maye geue vnto you the sprete of wysdome, and open vnto you the knowlege of himselfe, and lighten the eyes of youre vnderstandinge, that ye maye knowe what is the hope of youre callinge, and what the riches of his glorious enheritaunce is vpon the sayntes, † what is the exceedinge greatnesse of his power towarde vs, which beleue accordinge to † workynge of his mightie power, which he wroughte in Christ, when he rayseed him vp frō the deed,§ and set him on his righte hāde ī heauēly thinges, aboue all rule, power, and mighte, and dominaciō, and aboue all that maye be named, not onely in this worlde, but also in † worlde to come. ¶ And hath put all thinges vnder his fete, and hath made him aboue all thinges¶ the heade of the cōgregacion, which is his body, and the fulnesse of him that fylleth all in all.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ AND quickened you also, when ye were deed thorow trespasses and synnes, in the which in tyme past ye walked, accordinge to the course off this worlde, and after the prynce that ruleth in the ayre namely, after † sprete, which now worketh in the children of vnbeleue,** amonge whom we also had oure conuersacion in tyme past in the lustes of oure flesh, and dyd the wyll of the flesh and of the mynde, and were naturally the children of wrath, euen as well as other.

But God which is riche in mercy thorow his greate loue wherwith he loued vs euē whā we were deed in synnes, hath quickened vs in Christ (†† for by grace are ye sauēd) and hath rayseed vs vp with him, and set vs with him in heauēly thinges thorow Christ Iesu, † in tymes to come he mighte shewe the exceedinge riches of his grace, in kyndnesse to vs warde in Christ Iesu. For by grace are ye sauēd thorow faith, and that not of youre selues, For it is † gifte of God, not of workes, lest eny mā shulde boast him selfe. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Iesu †† vnto good workes, to † which God ordeyned vs before, that we shulde walke in them.

Wherefore remēbre, that ye (which afore tyme were Gentyles after the flesh, and were called vncircumcision, of thē that are called §§ circumcision after the flesh, which circumcision is made with the hande) that ye at the same tyme were without Christ, and reputed aleauntes from the comen welth of Israel, and were straungers from the Testamentes of promes, therefore had ye no hope, and were without God in this worlde. But now ye that be in Christ Iesu, and afore tyme were farre of, are now made nye by the bloude of Christ.

For he is oure ¶¶ peace, which of both hath made one, and hath broken downe the wall, that was a stoppe between vs, and hath also thorow his flesh put awaye the cause off hatred (namely the lawe of the commaundemētes contayned in the lawe wrytten) that of twayne he mighte create one new man in him selfe, and make peace, and to reconcyle both vnto God in one body thorow the crosse, and so he slewe † hatred thorow his owne selfe, and came ¶¶ and preached peace in the Gospell, vnto you which were afarre of, and to thē that were nye. For thorow him we both haue intrance in one sprete vnto the father.

The iiij. Chapter.

A FOR this cause I Paul am † a presoner of Iesus Christ for you Heythen, acordinge as ye haue herde of ‡ office of the grace of God which is geuen me to you warde. For by ‡ reuelacion was this mystery shewed vnto me, as I wrote aboue in fewe wordes: wherby whan ye rede it, ye maye perceaue myne vnderstandyng in ‡ mystery of Christ, which (mystery) in tymes past was not opened vnto the childre of mē as it is now declared to his holy Apostles and prophetes by the sprete: namely, that the Heythen shulde be inheritors also, and of the same body, and partakers of his promes in Christ by the Gospell, wherof I am made a mynister acordinge to the gifte of the grace of God, which is geuē me acordinge to the workyng of his power.

B Vnto me ‡ the leest of all sayntes is this grace geuen, that I shulde preach amonge the Heythe ‡ vnsearcheable riches of Christ, and to make all men se, what is the fellowship of the ‡ mystery, which frō the begynnynge of the worlde hath bene hyd in God, which made all thynges thorow Iesus Christ: to the intent that now vnto the rulers and powers in heauē mighte be knowne by the congregacion the manifolde wysdome off God, acordinge to ‡ eternall purpose, which he hath shewed in Christ Iesu oure LORDE by whom we haue boldnesse and inтраunce in all confidēce thorow faith on him. Wherfore I desyre that ye faynte not because of my tribulacions, ‡ I ** suffre for you, which is youre prayse.

C For this cause I bowe my knees vnto the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which is the true father, ouer all that is called father in heauen and in earth, that he graunte you (acordinge to ‡ riches of his glory) to be strengthened with power by his sprete in ‡ inwarde mā, that Christ maye dwell in youre hertes by faith, that ye beyng rote and grounded in loue, maye be able to cōprehende with all sayntes, what is the bredth, and the length, and the deepth, and the heyth: and to knowe the loue of Christ, which loue yet passeth all knowlege: that ye maye be fylled with all maner of fulnesse of God.

Vnto him that is able to do exceedinge abundantly, aboue all that we axe or vnderstande (acordinge to ‡ power that worketh in vs) be prayse in the congregacion, which is in Christ Iesu, at all tymes for euer and euer, Amen.

The iiij. Chapter.

I THERFORE which am presoner in the LORDE, exhorte you, that ye walke as it becōmeth youre callinge wherin ye are called, with all humblesnes off mynde and mekenes, and longe sufferinge, forbearinge one another in loue, and be diligent to kepe the vnite of the sprete thorow the bonde of peace. One body and one sprete, euē as ye are called in one hope of youre callinge. One LORDE, one faith, one baptyme, one God and father of vs all, which is aboue all, and thorow all, and in you all.

† Vnto euery one of vs is geuen grace, acordinge to the measure off the gifte off Christ. Therfore sayeth he: † He is gone vp an hye, and hath led away captiuyte captiue, and hath geuē giftes vnto men. That he wente vp, what is it, but that he first came downe in to ‡ lowest partes of ‡ earth? §§ He that came downe, is euen the same which is gone vp aboue all heauens, to fulfill all. || And ‡ same hath set some to be Apostles, some to be prophetes, some to be Euangelists, some to be shepherdes & teachers, wherby the sayntes mighte be coupled together thorow comen seruyce to the edificatione of ‡ body of Christ, tyll we all come vnto one maner of faith and knowlege of the sonne of God, and become a perfecte man in to the measure of the perfecte age of Christ ¶ that we be nomore children, ***waueringe & caried aboute with euery wynde of doctryne thorow the wickednes of men and craftynes, wherby they laye awayte for vs to disceauē vs.

B But let vs folowe the trueth in loue, and in all thinges growe in him, * which is the heade, euen Christ, in whom all the body is coupled together, and one membre hangeth by another throw out all ſoyntes. † Wherby one mynistrcth vnto another (acordinge to the operacion as euery membre hath his meares) and maketh, that ſ body groweth to the edifiſhinge of it ſelfe in loue.

This I ſaye therefore, and teſtifye in the LORDE, that ye walke nomore as ſ other Heythen walke in the vanite of their mynde, blynded in their vnderſtondinge, beyng ſtraungers frō the life which is in God thorow the ignorance that is in them, becauſe of the blyndnes of their hert: which beyng paſt repentance, haue geue them ſelues ouer vnto wantonnes, to worke all maner of vnclennes euen with gredynesse.

C But ye haue not ſo learned Christ, yf ſo be that ye haue herde of him, ⁊ are taught in him, euen as the trueth is in Ieſu. So then as concernynge the conuerſacion in tyme paſt † laye from you that olde man which marreth himſelfe thorow diſceauable luſtes: but be ye renued in the ſprete of youre mynde, and put on that new man, which is ſhaped after God, in true righteouſnes and holyenes. § Wherefore put away lyenge, and ſpeake euery man the trueth vnto his neyghboure, for as moch as we are membres one of another. || Be angrie, but ſynne not. ## The v. Chapter.

BE ye the † followers therfore of God as deare children, and walke in loue, euen as Christ loued vs, and §§ gaue him ſelfe for vs an offerynge and ſacrifice of a ſwete ſauoure vnto God. As for whordome and all vnclennes, or couetouſnes, let it not be named amōge you, as it becommeth ſayntes: || nether fylthines, ner foliſh talkynge, ner ieastyng (which are not comly) but rather geuyng of thakes. ¶¶ For be ſure, that no whore monger, or vnclane perſon, or couetous perſon (which is a worſhipper off ymages) hath inheritance in the kyngdome of Christ and of God. *** (Let no man diſceau you with vayne wordes) for becauſe of theſe commeth the wrath of God vpon the children of vnbeleue. Be not ye therfore companions with them. For ſometyme ye were darkneſſe, ††† but now are ye lighte in the LORDE.

Waſke as the children of lighte. †† (For the frute of the ſprete is all maner of goodnes, and righteouſnes and trueth:) and proue what is pleaſynge vnto the LORDE, and haue no fellſhippe with ſ vnfrutefull workes of darknes, but rather rebuke the. For it is ſhame euen to name thoſe thinges, which are done of them in ſecrete. But all thinges are maniſt, whan they are rebuked of the lighte. For what ſo euer is maniſt, that ſame is lighte. their huszbandes, as vnto the LORDE.
 * For the huszbande is the wyues heade, euē as Christ also is the heade of the congregacion, and he is the Sauoure of his body. Therefore as the congregacion is in subieccion to Christ, likewise let the wyues be in subieccion to their huszbandes in all thinges.

Ye huszbandes loue youre wyues, euen as Christ loued the congregacion, † and gaue himselfe for it, to sanctifie it, ‡ and clensed it in the fountayne of water by the worde, to make it vnto himselfe a glorious congregacion, hauynge no spot ner wrynkle, ner eny soch thinge, but that it shulde be holy and without blame.

So oughte men also to loue their wyues, euen as their awne bodies. He that loueth his wife, loueth him selfe. For no mā euer yet hated his awne fleszhe, but norisheth and cherissheth it, euen as the LORDE doth also the congregacion. For we are membres of his body, of his flesh and of his bones. § For this cause shal a man leaue father and mother, and cleue vnto his wife, and they two shal be one flesh: This is a greate secreete: but I speake of Christ and the congregacion. Neuertheles do ye so, that euery one of you loue his wife euen as himselfe: but let the wife feare hir huszbande.

The vi. Chapter.

YE children, obey youre elders in the LORDE, for that is righte. Honour thy father and thy mother (¶ That is the first commaundement, that hath eny promes) that thou mayest prospere, and lye longe vpon earth. And ye fathers, prouoke not your children vnto wrath, but brynge the vp in the nourture and informacion of the LORDE.

** Ye seruantes, obey youre bodely masters, with feare and trembylynge, in synglenes of youre hert, euen as vnto Christ, not with seruyce onely in the eye sighte, as men pleasers: but as the seruantes off Christ, doynge the wyll off God from the hert with good wyll. Thynke that ye serue the LORDE and not mē: and be sure, that what good soeuer a man doth, he shal receaue it agayne of the LORDE, whether he be bonde or fre.

And ye masters, do euen the same vnto the, puttynge away threatenynge, and knowe that euen youre master also is in heauen, †† nether is there eny respecte of personnes with him.

Fynally my brethren, be stronge in the LORDE, and in the power of his mighte: put on the armour of God, that ye maye stonde stedfast agaynst the craftie assautes off the deuell. For we wrestle not agaynst flesh and bloude, but agaynst rule, agaynst power namely, agaynst the rulers of the worlde, of the darknesse of this worlde, agaynst y sprete of wickednes vnder the heauen. For this cause take ye the armour of God, y ye maye be able to resiste in the euell daye, and stonde perfecte in all thinges.

‡ Stonde therefore, and youre loynes gyrd aboute with the truth, hauynge on the brest plate of righteounes, and shod vpō youre fete with the gospell of peace, that ye maye be prepared: Aboue all thinges take holde of the shyld of faith, wherwith ye maye quenche all the fyrie dartes of the wicked. And take the helmet of saluacion, ⁊ the swerde of the sprete, which is the worde of God.

§ And praye allwayes with all maner of prayer and supplication in the sprete, and watch there vnto with all instaunce and supplicacion for all sayntes and for me, ¶ that the worde maye be geuen me, that I maye open my mouth boldly, to vtter the secretes of the Gospell, wherof I am a messaunger in bondes, that I maye speake therein frely, ¶ as it becommeth me to speake.

But that ye maye also knowe, what case I am in, and what I do, Tichicus my deare brother and faithfull mynister in the LORDE, shal shewe you all: whom I haue sent vnto you for the same cause, that ye mighte knowe what case I stonde in, and that he mighte comforte youre hertes.

Peace be vnto the brethrē, and loue with faith, from God the father, ⁊ from the LORDE Iesu Christ. Grace be with all them that loue oure LORDE Iesus Christ vnfaynedly. Amen.

The Epistle

of the Apostle S. Paul to the Philippians.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

He exhorteth them to increase in loue, in knowlege and experience of godly thinges: maketh mention of his presonment at Rome, is glad to heare Christ preached, is cōtent ether to dye or lyue, and prayeth them to lede a godly conuersacion, to be of one mynde, and to feare no persecucion.

Chap. II.

He exhorteth them to vnite and brotherly loue, and to bewarre of strife and vayne glory:

And for a sure ensample he layeth Christ before them.

Chap. III.

He warneth thē to beware of false teachers, whom he calleth dogges and enemies of Christ, and reproveth māns owne rightcousnesse.

Chap. IIII.

He saluteth certayne of them, exhorteth them to be of honest conuersacion, and thanketh them because of the prouysion, that they made for him beyng in preson.

The first Chapter.

A PAUL and Timotheus the seruantes of Iesu Christ. Vnto all the sayntes in Iesu Christ, which are at Philippos, with the Bischoppes and * mynisters.

Grace be with you and peace from God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

† I thanke my God, as oft as I remēbre you (which I allwayes do in all my prayers for you all, and praye with gladnesse) because of youre fellowship which ye haue in the Gospell from the first daye vnto now, and am surely certified of this, ‡ he which hath begonne that good † worke in you, shal go forth with it vntyll § daye of Iesus Christ: as it becommeth me to iudge of you all, because I haue you in my hert, as those that are partakers with me of grace in my bondes, in defendinge and stablyshinge of the Gospell.

B For God is my § recorder, how I lōge after you all euen frō the very hert rote in Iesus Christ. ¶ And for the same I praye, † youre loue maye increase more & more in all maner of knowlege and in all experience, † ye maye proue what is best, that ye maye be pure, & soch as hurte no mans conscience, vnto the daye of Christ: fylled with the frutes of righteousnes, which come by Iesus Christ vnto the glorie and prayse of God.

I wolde ye vnderstode brethren, that my busynes is happened vnto the greater furtheraunce of the Gospell, so that my bondes in Christ are manifest thorow out all † iudgmēt hall, and in all other places: In so moch that many brethren in the LORDE, are boldened thorow my bōdes, and darre more largely speake the worde without feare. Some (no doute) preach Christ of enuye and stryfe, but some of good wil. The one parte preacheth Christ off stryfe and not purely, supposynge to adde more aduersite vnto my bondes. The other parte of loue, for they knowe that I lye here for the defence of the Gospell.

What then? So that Christ be preached C all maner of wayes (whether it be done by occasion or of true meaninge) I reioyce therin, and wil reioyce. For I knowe that the same shal chaunce to my saluacion, * thorow youre prayer and mynistrynge of the sprete of Iesu Christ, as I loke for and hope, that in nothinge I shalbe ashamed: but y with all cōfidence (as allwayes in tymes past, euē so now) Christ shalbe magnified in my body whether it be thorow life or thorow death. For Christ is to me life, & death is to me auantage. But in as much as to lyue in y flesh is frutefull to me for the worke, I wote not what I shal chose, for both these thinges lye harde vpon me. † I desyre to be loused, & to be with Christ, which thinge were moch better (for me) but to abyde in the flesh is more nedefull for you.

D And this am I sure of, that I shal abyde, and contynue with you all, for the furtheraunce and ioye of youre faith, that ye maye abundantly reioyce in Christ Iesu thorow me, by my cōmyng to you agayne. Onely let youre conuersacion be ‡ as it becommeth the Gospell of Christ, that whether I come & se you, or els be absent, I maye yet heare of you that ye cōtinue in one sprete and one soule, labouryng (as we do) to mayntayne the faith of the Gospell, and in nothinge fearinge youre aduersaries, which is to them a token off perdition, but vnto you of saluacion, and that of God. For vnto you it is geuen, not onely that ye shulde beleue on Christ, but also suffre for his sake, and to haue euen the same fighte, which ye haue sene in me, and now heare of me.

The ij. Chapter.

A YF there be amonge you eny consolacion in Christ, yf there be eny comforte of loue, yf there be eny fellowshipe off the sprete, yf there be eny compassion and mercy, fulfill my ioye, that ye drawe one waye, hauyng one loue, beyng of one accorde, and of one mynde: that there be nothinge done thorow stryfe and vayne glory, but that thorow mekenesse of mynde euery man esteeme another better then himselfe: and let euery mā loke not for his awne profet, but for the profet of other.

Let the same mynde be in you, that was in Christ Iesu: which beyng in the shappe of God, thought it not robbery to be equall with God, but made him selfe of no reputacion, and toke vpon him the shappe of a seruauant, § became like another man, and was founde in his apparell as a man: he humbled himselfe, and became obedient vnto the death, euen vnto the death of the crosse.

¶ Therefore hath God also exalted him, and geuen him a name, which is aboue all names, ¶ that in the name of Iesus euery kne shulde bowe, both of thinges in heauen, of thinges vpō earth, and of thinges vnder the earth, and that all tungen shulde confesse, that Iesus Christ is the LORDE vnto the prayse of God the father.

Wherefore my dearly beloued, as ye haue allwayes obeyed (not onely in my presence, but now also moch more in my absence) euen so worke out youre awne saluacion with feare and tremblyng. ** For it is God which worketh in you both the wyll and the deed, euen of his owne good wyll. Do all thinges without murmurynges and disputynges, that ye maye be faultles and pure, and the childrē of God †† without rebuke, in the myddes of y croked and peruerse nacion, ‡‡ amonge whom se that ye shyne as lightes in the worlde, holdinge fast the worde of life, vnto my reioysyng in the daye of Christ, that I haue not runne in vayne, nether laboured in vayne. §§ Yee and though I be offred vp vpō the offeryng & sacrifice of youre faith, I am glad, and reioyce with you all: be ye glad also, and reioyce ye with me.

I trust in the LORDE Iesus, to sende Timotheus shortly vnto you, that I also maye be of good comforte, whan I knowe what case ye stonde in. For I haue no man that is so like mynded to me, which with so pure affeccō careth for you: for all other seke their awne, not that which is Iesus Christes. But ye knowe the profe of him: for as a childe vnto the father, so hath he mynistered vnto me in the Gospell. Him I hope to sende, as soone as I knowe how it wyll go with me. But I trust in the LORDE, that I also my selfe shal come shortly.

Neuertheles I thoughte it necessary to sende vnto you the brother Ephraditus, which is my companyon in labour and felowe soudyer, and youre Apostell, and my mynister at my nede, for so moch as he longed after you all, and was full of heuynes, because ye had herde that he was sicke. And no doute he was sicke, and that nye vnto death: but God had mercy on him, and not on him onely, but on me also, lest I shulde haue had sorowe vpon sorowe.

I haue sent him therefore the more haistely, that ye mighte se him, and reioyce agayne, and that I also mighte haue the lesse sorowe. Receaue him therefore in the LORDE with all gladnes,* and make moch of soche: for because of the worke of Christ, he wente so farre, that he came nye vnto death, and regarded not his life, to fulfyll that seruyce which was lackynge on youre parte towarde me.

The iij. Chapter.

MOROUER my brethren, reioyce in the LORDE. Where as I wryte euer one thinge vnto you, it greueth me not, and maketh you the surer. Bewarre off dogges, bewarre of euell workers, bewarre off discension: †for we are the circumcision, euen we that serue God in the sprete, and reioyce in Christ Iesu, and haue no confidence in the flesh, though I haue wherof I mighte reioyce in y flesh. Yf eny other mā thinke that he hath wherof he mighte reioyce in the flesh, moch more I, which was circūcysed on the eight daye, one of the people of Israel, of the trybe off Ben Iamin, an hebrue of the Hebrues: as concernynge the lawe †a Pharise: as concernynge seruientnes §I persecuted the cōgregacion: and as touchinge the righteousnes which is in the lawe, I was vnrebukable.

¶ But the thinges that were vantage vnto me, haue I counted losse for Christes sake. Yee I thinke all thinges but losse, for that excellent ¶ knowleges sake of Christ Iesu my LORDE: for whom I haue counted all thinge losse, and do iudge them but donge, that I mighte wyne Christ, † be founde in him, not hauynge myne awne righteousnes which commeth of the lawe, but by the faith of Christ (namely) the righteousnes which commeth of God in faith, to knowe him and the vertue of his resurreccion, and the fellowshippe of his passion, **that I maye be conformable vnto his death, yf by eny meanes I mighte attayne to the resurreccion from the deed. Not that I haue attayned vnto it all ready, or that I am already perfecte: but I folowe, yf I maye comprehend that, wherin I am comprehended off Christ Iesu. Brethren, I counte not my selfe yet that I haue gotten it: but one thinge I saye: I forget that which is behynde, and stretch my selfe vnto that which is before, † preace vnto y marck apoynted, to optayne the rewarde of the hie callynge of God in Christ Iesu.

Let vs therefore (as many as be perfecte) C be thus wyse mynded: and yf ye be otherwyse mynded, I praye God open euen this vnto you. Neuertheles in that wher vnto we are come, let vs procede by one rule, that we maye be of one accorde. †† Brethren, be ye y followers of me, and loke on thē which walke euē so as ye haue vs for an ensample. For many walke (off whom I haue tolde you often, but now I tell you wepyng) euē enemies of the crosse of Christ, whose ende is damnacion, †† whose God is the bely, † whose glory shalbe to their shame, which are earthly mynded. §§ But oure conuersacion is in heauen, from whence we loke for the Sauoure Iesu Christ y LORDE, ¶ which shal chaūge oure vyle body, y it maye be like fashioned vnto his glorious body, acordinge to y workynge wherby he is able to subdue all thinges vnto himselfe.

I reioyce greatly in y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, that now at the last ye are reuyned agayne to care for me, as ye cared for me afore, but ye lacked oportunitie. ### The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

He geueth thanks vnto God for their faith, loue, and hope: prayeth for their increase and sheweth how we are the kyngdome of God, optayned by Christ, which is the heade of the congregacion.

Chap. II.

What greate care Paul toke for all congregacions. He exhorteth them to be stedfast in Christ, to beware of false teachers and worldly wysdome, and descrybeth the false prophetes.

Chap. III.

He putteth them in remembraunce of the spirituall resurrecciō, to laye asyde all maner of corrupte luyynge, to be frutefull in all godlynesse and vertue, and sheweth all degrees their dutye.

Chap. IIII.

He exhorteth them to be feruent in prayer, to walke wysely vnto them that are not yet come to the true knowlege of Christ, and so saluteth them.

The first Chapter

A PAUL an Apostle of Iesu Christ by the will of God, and brother Timotheus.

To y<sup>e</sup> sayntes which are at Colossa and brethren that beleue in Christ.

Grace be with you and peace from God oure father & frō the LORDE Iesus Christ.

*We geue thanks vnto God and the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, prayenge allwayes for you (sence we herde of youre faith in Christ Iesu, and of youre loue to all sayntes) for y<sup>e</sup> hopes sake which is layed vp in stoare for you in heauen: of the which ye haue herde before by the worde of trueth in the Gospell, which is come vnto you, euē as it is in to all the worlde: and is frutefull, as it is in you, sence y<sup>e</sup> daye y<sup>e</sup> herde and knewe the grace of God in y<sup>e</sup> trueth, as ye learned of † Epaphras oure deare felowe seruauant, which is a faithfull mynister of Christ for you, which also declared vnto vs youre loue in the sprete.

‡ For this cause we also, sence the daye y<sup>e</sup> we herde of it, ceasse not to praye for you, & desyre that ye mighte be fullylled with the knowlege of his will, in all wysdome and spirituall vnderstandinge, that ye mighte walke worthy off the LORDE, to please him in all thinges, § and to be frutefull in all good workes, and growe in the knowlege of God: ¶ to be strengthened with all power acordinge to the mighte of his glory, to all pacience and long-sufferynge with ioyfulness, and geue thanks vnto the father, which hath made vs mete for the enheritaunce of sayntes in lighte.

B Which hath deluyered vs frō the power of darknesse, & translated vs in to the kyngdome of his deare sonne (¶ in whom we haue redempcion thorow his bloude, namely, the forgeuenes of synnes.) ¶ Which is the ymage of the inuisyble God, first begottē before all creatures. ¶ For by him were all thinges created, that are in heauen and earth, thinges vysible and thinges inuisible, whether they be maiesties or lordshippes, ether rules or powers: All thinges are created by him and in him, and he is before all thinges, and in him all thinges haue their beyng.

and first begotten from the deed, that in all thinges he mighte haue the preemynence. For it pleased the father, that in him shulde dwell all § fulnesse, and that by him all thinges shulde be ¶ reconciled vnto himselfe, whether they be thinges vpon earth or in heauen, that thorow the bloude on his crosse he mighte make peace euen thorow his owne selfe. And you (which were in tymes past straungers and enemies, because youre myndes were set in euell workes) hath he now reconcyled in the body of his flesh thorow death, ¶ to make you holy, and vnblameable & with out faute in his awne sighte, yf ye contynue grounded and stablished in the faith, and be not moued awaye from y<sup>e</sup> hope of the Gospell, wherof ye haue herde: which is preached amonge all creatures y<sup>e</sup> are vnder heauen, wherof I Paul am made a mynister.

¶ Now ioye I in my sufferynges, which I suffre for you, and fulfill that which is beynde of the passions of Christ in my flesh, for his bodies sake, which is the congregacion, ¶ wherof I am made a mynister, acordinge to y<sup>e</sup> Godly office of preaching, which is geuen vnto me amonge you, that I shulde richely preach the worde of God, namely, that ¶ mystery which hath bene hyd sence the worlde beganne, and sence the begynnynge of tymes: but now is ¶ opened vnto his sayntes, to whom God wolde make knowne the glorious riches of this mistery amōge y<sup>e</sup> Heythen: which (riches) is Christ in you, euē he that is the hope of glory, whō we preach, and warne all men, and teach all men in all wysdome, to make euery man perfecte in Christ Iesu: Wherin I also laboure, and stryue acordinge to the workynge of him which worketh mightely in me

I WOLDE ye knewe what fightinge I haue ¶ for youre sakes, and for them of Laodicea, and for as many as haue not sene my personne in the flesh, that their hertes mighte be comforted and knytt together in loue, to all riches of full vnderstōdinge, § which is in the knowlege of the mystery of God the father and of Christ, ¶ in whom are hyd all the treasures of wysdome and knowlege.

* This I saye, lest eny man shulde begyle you with entysinge wordes. † For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I present with you in the sprete: ioyenge, and beholdinge youre order and the stedfastnes of youre faith in Christ. ‡ As ye haue therefore receaued Christ Iesu the LORDE, euen so walke in him, and be roted & buylded in him, and be stedfast in faith, as ye haue learned: & be plenteous in the same in geuyng thanks.

§ Bewarre lest eny mā spoyle you thorow philosophy and disceatfull vanite after the tradicions of men, and after the ordinaices of the worlde, and not after Christ. ¶ For in him dwelleth all the fulnes of the Godheade bodely, and ye are complete in him, which is the heade of all rule and power: in whom also ye are circumcysed with † circumcision without handes, by puttynge of the synfull body of the flesh: (namely) with the circumcysion of Christ, ** in that ye are buried with him thorow baptyme: in whom ye are also rysen agayne thorow faith, that is wrought by the operacion of God, which rayseed him vp from the deed.

† And with him he quykened you, whan ye were deed in synnes, and in the vncircumcision of youre flesh, and hath forgeuen vs all synnes, and put out the handwrytynge that was agaynst vs (cōtayned in the lawe wrytten) and that hath he taken out of the waye, and fastened it to the crosse: ‡ And hath spoyled rule and power, and hath made a shewe of them openly, and triumphed ouer them in his awne persone.

¶ Let no man therefore trouble youre consciences aboute meate or drynke, or for a pece of an holy daye, as the holy daye of † newe Mone, or of the Sabbath dayes, §§ which are the shadowe of the thinges that were for to come: but the body selfe is in Christ. Let no man make you shote at a wronge mark, which after his owne chosynge walketh in humblenes and spiritualtye of angels, thinges which he neuer sawe, and is wayne, and puft vp in his owne fleshly mynde: and holdeth not himselfe to the heade, wherof the whole body by ioyntes and couples receaueth nourishment, and is knyt together, and so groweth to the greatnes that cometh of God.

* Wherefore yf ye be deed with Christ from the ordinaunces of the worlde, why are ye holden thē with soch tradicions, as though ye lyued after the worlde? As whan they saye: Touch not this, taist not that, handle not that. All these thinges do hurte vnto men, because of the abuse of them, which abuse cometh onely of the commaundementes and doctrynes of men: ¶ which thinges haue a shyn of wysdome thorow chosen spiritualtie and humblenes, and in that they spare not the body, and do the flesh no worshipec vnto his nede.

The first Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Tesselonians.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

He thanketh God for them, that they are so stedfast in faith and good workes, and receaue the gospell with soch earnest.

Chap. II.

He putteth them in mynde of the godly conuersacion that he led amonge them when he preached the gospell vnto them, thanketh God that they receaue his worde so frutefully, and excuseth his absence.

Chap. III.

He sheweth how greatly he was reioysed, whā Timothy tolde him of their faith and loue.

Chap. IIII.

He exhorteth them to stedfastnesse, to kepe them selues from synne and vnclenly cōuersacion, to loue one another: rebuketh ydilnesse, and speaketh of the resurreccion.

Chap. V.

He enfourmeth them of the daye of dome and cōmyng of the LORDE, exhorteth them to watch, and to regarde soch as preach Gods worde amonge them.

The first Chapter.

PAUL and Siluanus and Timotheus.
Vnto the cōgregacion of the Tesselonyans, in God the father and in the LORDE Iesus Christ.

Grace be with you, and peace from God oure father and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

*We geue thanks vnto God allwaye for you all, makinge mēcion of you in oure prayers without ceassyng, and call to remembraunce youre worke in the faith, and youre laboure in loue, & youre pacience in hope, *which is oure LORDE Iesus Christ before God oure father: Because we knowe (brethren, beloued of God) how that ye are electe: †for oure Gospell hath not bene with you in worde onely, but both in power and in the holy goost, and in moch certayntie, as ye knowe after what maner we were amonge you for youre sakes.

And ye became the folowers of vs and of the LORDE: and receaued the worde in moch affliction with ioye of the holy goost: so that ye were an example to all that beleued in Macedonia and Achaia. For frō you was the worde of the LORDE noysed out, not onely in Macedonia & Achaia, but ī all quarters also is youre faith ī God spred abroad so that it nedeth not vs to speake eny thinge at all. For they them selues shewe of you, what maner of entryng in we had vnto you, and how ye are turned vnto God from ymages, for to serue the lyuynge and true God, and to loke for his sonne †from heauē: whom he raysed vp from the deed, euen Iesus, which hath deluyred vs frō the wrath to come.

The ij. Chapter.

FOR ye youre selues (brethren) knowe of oure intraūce vnto you, how that it was not in vayne, but as we had suffred afore, & ¶ were shamefully intreated at Philippos (as ye knowe) we were bolde in oure God, *to speake vnto you ſ̄ Gospel of God with moch stryuyng. For oure exhortacion was not to brynge you to erreure ner yet to vnclennes, nether was it with gyle: but as we are alowed of God, that the Gospell shulde be commytted vnto vs to preache, euen so we speake, †not as though we wolde please me, but God, which tryeth oure hertes.

and 4. c.    † Act. 1. b.    § Ioh. 3. c.    ¶ Act. 16. c.

For we haue not gone aboute with flateringe wordes (as ye knowe) ner wayted for oure owne profit (‡ God is recorde) nether soughte we prayse of men, nether of you ner of eny other, whan we mighte haue bene chargeable vnto you as the Apostles off Christ, but we were tender amonge you.

33 Like as a norsse cherisheth hir children, euen so had we hartely affeccion towardes you, and wolde with good wyl haue dealte vnto you, not onely the Gospell of God, but oure lyues also, because ye were deare vnto vs.

Ye remembre brethren oure laboure and trauayle. § For daye and nighte wroughte we (because we wolde not be chargeable vnto eny of you) and preached the Gospell of God amonge you. Ye are witnesses, and so is God, how holyly and iustly and vnblameable we behaued oure selues amonge you that beleue: as ye knowe, how that as a father his children, euen so exhorted we and comforted and besoughte euery one of you, that ye wolde walke worthely before God, which hath called you vnto his kyngdome ¶ glory.

For this cause thanke we God without ceassyng, because that whā ye receaued of vs the worde of the preachinge of God, ye receaued it not as ſ̄ worde of men, but (euē as it is of a trueth) the worde of God, which worketh in you that beleue.

¶ For ye brethren are become the folowers off ¶ the congregacions off God which in Iewry are in Christ Iesu, so that ye haue suffred euen like thinges of youre kynsmen, as they haue suffred of the Iewes. Which as they put the LORDE Iesus to death, and their awne prophetes, euen so haue they persecuted vs also, and please not God, and are cōtrary to all men, **forbyddinge vs to speake vnto the Heythen that they mighte be sauēd, to fulfill their synnes allwaye: for the wrath is come vpon them allready vnto ſ̄ vttemost.

But we (brethren) for as moch as we haue bene kepte from you for a season, as concerninge the bodely presence, but not in the hert, we haue haisted the more with greate desyre to se you personally. Therefore wolde we haue come vnto you, (I Paul) two tymes, ††but Sathan withstode vs. For who is oure hope, or ioie, or crowne of ††reioysinge? are not ye it in ſ̄ sighte of oure LORDE Iesus Christ at his commyng? Yes ye are oure prayse and ioie.

WHERFORE sence we coulde no longer a forbeare, we thoughte it good to remayne at §§ Athens alone, ¶ sent Timotheus oure brother and mynister of God, and oure helper in ſ̄ gospell of Christ, to stablysh you and to comforte you in youre faith, that noman shulde be moued in these troubles: (for ye youre selues knowe, that we are euen appoynted there vnto. And whan we were with you, we tolde you before, that we shulde suffre tribulacion, euen as it is come to passe, ¶ as ye knowe.) For this cause seyng I coulde no longer forbeare, I sent, that I mighte haue knowledge of youre faith, lest happily the tempter had tempted you, and lest oure laboure had bene in vayne.

But now that Timotheus is come frō you b3 vnto vs, and hath shewed vs of youre faith and loue, ¶ how that ye haue allwaye good remembraunce of vs, desyringe to se vs as we also longe to se you: therefore brethren we haue consolacion in you in all oure trouble and necessite thorow youre faith. For now are we alyue, yf ye stonde stedfast in ſ̄ LORDE. For what thanks can we recompēce to God agayne for you, because of this ioie that we haue concerninge you before oure God? We praye exceedingly daye and nighte, that we mighte se you presently, and fulfill that which is lackyng in youre faith.

God himselfe oure father ¶ oure LORDE Iesus Christ gyde oure iourney vnto you. But the LORDE increace you, ¶ make you flowe ouer in loue one towarde another, and towarde all men (euen as we do towarde you) that youre hertes maye be stable and vnblameable in holynes before God oure father, at the

The iiii. Chapter.

FURTHERMORE we beseke you brethren and exhorte you in the LORDE Iesus, that ye increace more and more, euen as ye haue receaued of vs how ye oughte to walke and to please God. For ye knowe what commaundementes we gaue you by oure LORDE Iesus Christ. For this is the * will of God, euen youre sanctifienge, that ye shulde absteyne from whordome, † ‡ every one of you shulde knowe how to kepe his vessell in holynes and honoure, † not in the lust of concupiscence, † as the Heythen which knowe not God. And that no man go to farre, ner defraude his brother in bargayninge. For the LORDE is the auenger of all soch thinges, as we haue sayde † testified vnto you afore tyme. For God hath not called vs to vnclemensse, but vnto holynes. § He therefore that despyseth, despyseth not man, but God, ¶ which hath geuen his holy sprete in to you.

But as touchinge brotherly loue, ye nede not that I wryte vnto you, ¶ for ye youre selues are taught of God to loue one another: yee and that thinge ye do vnto all the brethrē, which are thorow out all Macedonia. But we beseke you brethren that ye increace yet more and more, and that ye study to be quyet, and to medle with youre awne busynesse, ** and to worke with youre awne hādes, as we commaunded you, that ye maye walke honestly towarde thē that are without, and that nothinge be lackynge vnto you.

We wolde not brethren that ye shulde be ignoraunt concernynge them which are fallen a slepe, that ye sorowe not as other do which haue no hope. For yf we beleue that Iesus dyed and rose agayne, euen so thē also which slepe by Iesus, shal God brynge with him. For this we saye vnto you in the worde of the LORDE, † that we which lyue and are remainynge in the cōmyng of the LORDE, shal not come yer they which slepe. † For the LORDE himselfe shal come downe frō heauen with a shout and voyce of † Archangell and with the trompe of God, and the deed in Christ shal aryse first: then shal we which lyue and remayne, be caught vp with them also in the cloudes, to mete the LORDE in the ayre, and so shal we euer be with the LORDE. Wherefore comforte youre selues one another with these wordes.

The v. Chapter.

BUT of † tymes and seasons (brethrē) it is no nede to wryte vnto you. For ye youre selues knowe perfectly, that † the daye of the LORDE shal come euen as a thefe in the nighte. For whan they shal saye: Tush, It is peace, there is no daunger, ¶ then shall soden destruccion come vpō thē, euen as the payne of a woman traauyng with childe, and they shal not escape. But ye brethren are not in darknes, that that daye shulde come on you as a thefe. Ye are alltogether children of lighte, and children of the daye. We are not of the night, nether of darknesse.

¶ Therefore let vs not slepe as do other, but let vs watch, and be sober. For they that slepe, slepe in the nighte: and they that be drunken, are drunken in the nighte. But let vs which are of the daye, be sober, armed with the brestplate of faith and loue, and with † helmet of hope to saluacion.

For God hath not appoynted vs vnto wrath, but to optayne saluacion by † meanes of oure LORDE Iesu Christ, which dyed for vs: that whether we wake or slepe, we shulde lyue together with him. Wherefore comforte youre selues together, and edifye one another, euen as ye do.

We beseke you brethren, *** that ye knowe them which laboure amonge you, and haue the ouersight of you in the LORDE, and geue you exhortacion, that ye haue thē the more in loue for their workes sake, and be at peace with them. We desyre you brethrē, warne them that are vnruely, cōforte the feble mynded, forbear the weake, be pacient towarde all men. † Se that none recompence euell for euell vnto eny man: but euer folowe that which is good, both amōge youre selues and to all men.

For it is a righteous thinge with God, to recōpence tribulacion vnto thē y trouble you: but vnto you which are troubled, rest with vs, * whā the LORDE Iesus shal shewe himselfe from heauen, with the angels of his power, and with flammynge fyre, to geue vengeaūce vnto them that knowe not God, † and to them that obeye not the Gospell of oure LORDE Iesus Christ. * Which shalbe punyshed with euerlastinge damnacion, + from y<sup>e</sup> presence of the LORDE, and from the glory of his power, whan he shal come to be glorified in his sayntes, and to become maruelous in all them that beleue: because ye haue beleued oure testimony vnto you of the same daye. Wherefore we praye allwayes for you, that oure God make you worthy of y<sup>e</sup> callinge, and fulfill all delectacion of goodnes, and the worke of faith in power, that y<sup>e</sup> name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ maye be prayseed in you, and ye in him, accordinge to the grace of oure God, and of the LORDE Iesus Christ.

The ij. Chapter.

A WE beseke you brethren by the comynge of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, and in that we shal assemble vnto him, that ye be not sodenly moued frō youre mynde, and be not troubled, nether by spretc, nether by wordes, ner yet by letter, which shulde seme to be sent from vs, as though y<sup>e</sup> daye of Christ were at hande. Let noman disceaue you by eny meanes. For the LORDE commaeth not, excepte the † departynge come first, and that that Man of synne be opened, euen the sonne of perdition, which is an aduersary, and is exalted aboue all y<sup>e</sup> is called God or Gods sernyce, so that he sytteth as God in the § temple of God, ¶ and boasteth himselfe to be God

Remembre ye not, that whan I was yet with you, I tolde you these thinges? And now ye knowe what withholdeth it, enē that it mighte be vttered at his tyme. (¶ For the mystery of the iniquyte worketh allready, tyll he which now onely letteth, be takē out of the waye.) And then shal that wicked be vttered, ** whom the LORDE shal cōsume with y<sup>e</sup> sprete of his mouth, ¶ shal destroye with the appearance of his comynge: euen him, whose comynge is after the workynge of Sathan † with all lyenge power, and signes and wonders, and with all deceauablenes of vnrighteousnes amonge them that perishe, because they receaued not the loue of y<sup>e</sup> trueth, that they might haue bene saued. †† Therefore shal God sende them strōge delusion, that they shulde beleue lyes, y<sup>e</sup> all they might be dāned, which beleued not the trueth, but had pleasure in vnrighteousnes.

But we are bounde to geue thanks allwaye vnto God for you, brethren beloued of the LORDE, because that God hath from the begynnynge chosen you to saluacion in the sanctifyinge of the sprete and in beleuynge of the trueth, whervnto he hath called you by oure Gospell, to optayne the glory of oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

Therefore brethren stonde fast, and kepe the ordinaunces which ye haue lerned, whether it were by oure preachinge or by epistle. But oure LORDE Iesus Christ himselfe, and God oure father, which hath loued vs and geuen vs euerlastinge consolacion, and a good hope thorow grace, comforte youre hertes, and stablysh you in all doctryne ¶ good doynge.

The iij. Chapter.

FURTHERMORE brethren §§ praye for vs, that the worde of God maye haue fre passage and be glorified as it is with you, and that we maye be deluyered from vnreasonable and euell mē. ¶¶ For faith is not euery mā. which beleue and knowe the trueth. ‡ For euery creature off God is good, and nothinge to be refuſed, ꝑ is receaued with thankes-geuynge: for it is ſanctified by the worde of God and prayer. Yf thou ſhalt put the brethren in remembrance of theſe thinges, thou ſhalt be a good myniſter of Ieſu Chriſt, § which haſt bene noriſhed vp in the wordes of faith and of good doctryne, which thou haſt folowed hitherto.

But y younger wedowes refuse. For whan they haue begonne to waxe wanton agaynst Christ, then wil they mary, hauynge their damnacion, because they haue brokē y first faith. Besydes this they are ydell, and lerne to runne aboute frō house to house. § Not onely are they ydell, but also tryflinge & busybodies, speakynge thinges which are not comly.

¶ I wil therfore that the yonger wemen mary, beare children, gyde the house, to geue y aduersary no occasion to speake euell. For some are turned back allready after Sathā. Yf eny man or woman that beleueth haue wedowes, let them make prouysion for thē, and let not the congregacion be charged: that they which are righte wedowes, maye haue ynough.

The vi. Chapter.

Se that they which haue beleuynge masters, despyse them not because they are brethrē, but rather do seruyce, for so much as they are beleuynge, and beloued, and partakers of the benefite.

These thinges teach and exhorte. Yf eny mā teach otherwyse, and agreeth not vnto the wholsome wordes of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, and to the doctryne of godlynes, he is pult vp, and knoweth nothinge, but waysteth his brayne aboute questions and stryuynges of wordes: §§ wherof sprynge envye, stryfe, raylings, euell surmysinges, vayne disputaciōs of soch men as haue corrupte myndes, ¶ and are robbed of the trueth, which thynte that godlynes is lucre: From soch separate thy selfe. ## The seconde Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to Timothy.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

Paul exhortheth Timothy to stedfastnesse and pacience in persecucion, and to continue in the doctryne that he had taught him. A commendacion of Onesiphorus.

Chap. II.

Like as in the first chapter, so here he exhortheth him to be constant in trouble, to suffre manly, and to byde fast in the wholsome doctrine of oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

Chap. III.

He prophecieth of the paelous tymes, setteth out ypocrites in their colours, telleth vs what they be within, for all their fayre faces outwardly. Persecucion for the gospell.

Chap. IIII.

He exhortheth Timothy to be seruēt in the worde, and to suffre aduersite: maketh mension of his awne death, and byddeth Timothy come vnto him.

The first Chapter.

PAUL an Apostle of Iesus Christ, by the wyll of God, to preach the promes of y life which is in Christ Iesu.

Wherefore I warne the, that thou stere vp  $\text{f}$  gifte of God which is in the by puttyng on of my haudes. \*For God hath not geuen vs the sprete of feare, but of power, and of loue, and of right vnderstandyng.

For I knowe whom I haue beleued, and am sure that he is able to kepe that which I haue commytted vnto his kepyng agaynst that daye.

C \*\* Holde the after  $\text{f}$  ensample of the wholesome wordes, which thou heardest of me, concernyng faith and loue in Christ Iesu. This hye charge kepe thou thorow the holy goost, which dwelleth in vs. This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia, be turned fro me, of which sorte are Phigelus and Hermogenes. The LORDE geue mercy vnto the house of † Onesiphorus: for he oft refreszhd me, and was not aszhamed of my cheyne: but whan he was at Rome † he sought me out very diligently, and founde me. The LORDE graunte vnto him, that he maye fynde mercy with the LORDE in that daye. And how moch he mynistred vnto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well.

The ij. Chapter.

THOU therfore my sonne, be stronge A thorow the grace which is in Christ Iesu. And what thinges thou hast herde of me by many witnesses,  $\text{f}$  the same commytte thou vnto faithfull men, which are apte to teach other. Thou therfore suffre affliction as a good soudyer off Iesu Christ. No mā that warreth, tangleth him selfe with worldly busynesses,  $\text{f}$  that because he wolde please him, which hath chosen him to be a soudyer. And though a man stryue for a mastrye, yet is he not crowned, excepte he stryue lafully. ¶ The huszbandman that laboureth, must first enioye the frutes. Consydre what I saye. The LORDE shal geue the vnderstandyng in all thinges.

Remembre that Iesus Christ, beyng  $\text{f}$  of the sede of Dauid, rose agayne fro the deed, acordyng to my Gospell, where in I suffre as an euell doer euen vnto bandes: but the worde of God is not bounde. \*\*\* Therfore suffre I all for the electes sakes, that they also mighte optayne the saluacion in Christ Iesu with eternal glory.

B This is a true sayenge: †† Yf we be deed with him, we shal lyue with him also: †† Yf we be pacient, we shal also raigne with him:  $\text{f}$  Yf we denye him, he also shal denye vs: ¶ Yf we beleue not, yet abyedeth he faithfull, he can not denye himselfe. Of these thinges put thou them in remembraunce, and testifye before the LORDE, that they stryue not aboute wordes, which is to no profit, but to peruerthe the hearers.

Study to shewe thy selfe vnto God a laudable workman, that nedeth not to be ashamed, deuydng the worde of trueth iustly. ¶¶ As for vngostly and vayne talkynges, eschue them: for they helpe moch to vngodlynes, and their worde fretteth as doth a canker: Of whose nombre is \*\*\* Hymeneus  $\text{f}$  Philetus, which as concernyng the trueth haue erred, sayenge, that the resurreccion is past already, and haue destroyed the faith of dyuerse personnes.

But yf a man pource himselfe from soch felowes, he shalbe a vessel sanctified vnto honoure, mete for the LORDE, and prepared vnto all good workes. †Fle thou the lustes of youth, but folowe righteousness, faith, loue, peace, with all them that call vpon the LORDE with pure hert. ‡As for folish questions and soch as teach not, put them frō the: for thou knowest that they do but gēder stryfe. The seruauant of the LORDE ought not to stryue, but to be gentle vnto euery man: *apte to teach, one that can forbear the euell, one y can §with mekenesse enfourme them y resist: yf God at eny tyme wyl geue them repentance for to knowe the trueth, and to turne agayne from the snare of the deuell, which are holden in preson of him at his will.

The iij. Chapter.

BUT this shalt thou knowe,<sup>b</sup> that in the last dayes shal come parelous tymes. For there shalbe mē which shal holde of thē selues, couetous, boasters, proude, cursed speakers, dyshobedient to their elders, vnthankfull, vngostly, vnkynde, truce breakers, false accusers, ryatours, fearce, despyers of them which are good, traytours, heady, hye mynded, gredy vpon voluptuousnes more then the louers of God, hauynge a shyne off godly lyuynge, but denyenge the power therof. And soch avoyde. ¶Of this sorte are they which rūne frō house to house, & brynge in to bondage wemē ladē with synne: which (wemen) are led with dyuerse lustes, euer lernynge, and are neuer able to come vnto the knowlege of the trueth.

¶ But like as Iannes and Iābres withstode Moses, euen so do these also resist the trueth: mē they are of corrupte myndes, and lewde as cōcernynge y faith: but they shal preuayle no longer. For their folishnes shal be manifested vnto all men, as theirs was.

But thou hast sene the experience of my doctryne, my faszhion of lyuynge, my purpose, my faith, my longsufferynge, my loue, my patience, my persecutions, my afflictions, which happened vnto me **at Antioche, at Iconium, at Lystra, which persecutions I suffred patiently, and from thē all the LORDE delyuered me. †Yee and all they that wil lyue godly in Christ Iesu, must suffre persecucion. But the euell men and disceauers shal waxe worse and worse, disceaunye and beyng disceaue.

‡But contynue thou in the thinges that thou hast lerned, which also were comytted vnto the, seynge thou knowest of whō thou hast learned them, And for so moch as thou hast knowne holy scripture of a childe, the same is able to make y wyse vnto saluacion thorow the faith in Christ Iesu. §§For all scripture geuē by inspiration of God, is profitable to teach, to improue, to amende, and to instructe in righteousness, that a man off God maye be perfecte, and prepared vnto all good workes.

The iij. Chapter.

ITESTIFYE therefore before God & before the LORDE Iesu Christ, which shal come to iudge the lyuynge and the deed, at his appearynge in his kyngdome: Preach thou the worde, be feruent, be it in season or out of season: Improue, rebuke, exhorte with all longe sufferynge and doctryne. For the tyme wil come, when they shal not suffre wholsome doctryne, but after their awne lustes shal they (whose eares ytche) get them an heape of teachers, and shal turne their eares from the trueth, and shalbe geuen vnto fables. But watch thou in all thinges, suffre aduersite, do the worke of a preacher of the Gospell, fulfill thine office vnto the vttemost.

¶ For I am now ready to be offered, and the tyme of my departynge is at honde. I haue foughte a good fighte: I haue fulfilled the course: I haue kepte the faith. From hence forth there is layed vp for me ¶¶a crowne of righteousness, vch the LORDE the righteous iudge shal geue me in y daye: Howbeit not vnto me onely, but vnto all them that loue his cōmyng. \* Vnto Titus my naturall sonne after  $\text{f}$  comen faith.

Grace, mercy, and peace from God the father, and frō the † LORDE Iesu Christ oure Sauoure.

B For this cause left I the in Creta, that thou shuldest perfourme that which was lackynge, and shuldest ordeyne Elders in euery cite, as I appoynted  $\text{f}$ . Yf eny be blamelesse, the huszbande of one wife, hauynge faithfull children, which are not slaundred of ryote, nether are dishobedient. † For a Bisshoppe must be blamelesse, as the  $\text{f}$  stewarde of God: not wylfull, not angrie,  $\text{||}$  not geuen vnto moch wyne, no fyghter, not gredye of filthye lucre: but harbarous, one that loueth goodnes, sober mynded, righteous, holy, temperate, and soch one as cleueth vnto the true worde of doctryne: that he maye be able to exhort with wholsome lernynge,  $\text{a}$  to improue them that saye agaynst it.

C ¶ For there are many dishobedient, and talkers of vanite, and disceauers of myndes: namely they of the circūcision, whose mouthes must be stopped: \*\* which peruerte whole houses, teachinge thinges which they oughte not, because of filthye lucre. One of them selues euen their awne prophet, sayde: †† The Cretayns are alwayes lyars, euell bestes, and slowe belies. This witness is true. Wherefore rebuke them sharply,  $\text{f}$  they maye be sounde in the faith, and not to take hede vnto Iewes fables and commaundementes of men, which turne them awaye from the trueth. †† Vnto  $\text{f}$  cleane are all thinges cleane:  $\text{§§}$  but to the vnclene  $\text{a}$  vnbeleuers, there is nothinge cleane, but both their mynde  $\text{a}$  conscience is defyled. They saye that they knowe God, but with the dedes they denye him: for so moch as they are abhominable and dishobedient, and vnmete to all good workes.

The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul vnto Philemon.

The summe of this Epistle.

He reioyseth to heare of the faith and loue of Philemon, whom he desyreh to forgeue his seruāūt Onesimus, and louyngly to receaue him agayne.

¶ PAUL the presoner of Iesu Christ, and brother Timotheus.

Vnto Philemon the beloued, and oure helper, and to the beloued Appia, and to Archippus oure felowe soudyer, and to the congregacion in thy house.

Grace be with you, and peace from God oure father and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

I thanke my God, makyng mencion all wayes of the in my prayers (for so moch as I heare of thy loue and faith which thou hast on the LORDE Iesu, and towarde all sayntes) that oure comen faith maye be frutefull in the, thorow knowlege of all ſ̄ good that ye haue in Christ Iesu. Greate ioye and consolacion haue I in thy loue. For by the (brother) the sayntes are hertely refrezhed.

Wherefore though I haue great boldnes in Christ to commaunde the that which becometh the, yet for loues sake I rather beseke ſ̄, though I be as I am, euē Paul aged, and now a presoner also of Iesu Christ. I beseke the for my sonne * Onesimus (whom I haue begotten in my bondes) which in tyme past was to the vnprofitable, but now profitable both to the and me. Whom I haue sent agayne: but receaue thou him (that is) euen myne awne hert. For I wolde haue kepte him styll with me, that in thy steade he might haue mynistred vnto me in þ̄ bondes of þ̄ Gospell: Neuertheles without thy mynde wolde I do nothinge, that þ̄ good which thou dost, shulde not be of compulsion, but wyllyngly.

C Happly he therefore departed for a season, that thou shuldest receaue him for euer: not now as a seruaunt, but aboue a seruaunt, euen a brother beloued, specially to me, but how moch more vnto þ̄, both in þ̄ flesh and in the LORDE? Yf thou holde me for thy companyon, receaue him then euen as my selfe.

But yf he haue hurte the, or oweth the oughte, that laye to my charge. I Paul haue wrytten it with myne awne hande, I wil recompence it: so that I do not saye vnto þ̄, how that thou owest vnto me euen thine owne selfe. Euen so brother, let me enioye the in the LORDE: refresh thou my hert in the LORDE.

Trustinge in thine obediēce, I haue wrytten vnto the, for I knowe that thou wilt do more then I saye. Morouer prepare me lodginge, for I hope that thorow youre prayers I shalbe geuen vnto you. There saluteth the, Epaphras my felowe presoner in Christ Iesu, Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, Lucas, my helpers. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with youre sprete, Amen.

The first Epistle of the Apostle S. Peter.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

He sheweth that thorow the abundaunt mercy of God we are begotten agayne to a lyuely hope: and how faith must be tried: how the saluacion in Christ is no newes, but a thinge prophced of olde. He exhorteth them to a godly conuersacion, for so moch as they are now borne a new by the worde of God.

Chap. II.

He exhorteth men to laye asyde all vyce, sheweth that Christ is the foundation wher vpon they be buylt, prayeth them to absteyne frō fleshly lustes, and to obeye worldly rulers. How seruauntes shulde behaue them selues towarde their masters. He exhorteth to suffre after the ensample of Christ.

Chap. III.

How wyues ought to ordre them selues towarde their huszbandes and in their apparell. The dutye of mē towarde their wyues. He exorteth all men to vnite and loue, and patiently to suffre trouble. Of true baptyme.

Chap. IIII.

He exhorteth men to ceasse from synne, to spende no more tyme in vyce, to be sober and apte to prayer, to loue ech other, to be pacient in trouble, and to bewarre that no man suffre as an euell doer, but as a Cristen man, and not to be ashamed.

Chap. V.

A speciall exhortacion for all bisshoppes or prestes to fede the flocke of Christ, and what their dutie is, and what reward they shal haue yf they be diligēt. He exhorteth yonge personnes to submytt thē selues to the elder, euery one to loue another, to be sober, & to watch, that they maye resist the enemye.

The first Chapter.

PETER an Apostle of Iesu Christ, to thē that dwell here and there as straungers thorow out Pontus, Galacia, Capadocia, Asia and Bitinia, electe accordinge to the foreknowledge of God the father thorow sanctificatione of the sprete, vnto obedience and *sprenklynge of the bloude of Iesus Christ.

Grace and peace be multiplied with you.

† Blessed be God and the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which accordinge to his greate mercy hath begotten vs agayne vnto a lyuely hope ‡ by the resurrection of Iesus Christ from the deed, to an vncorruptible and vndefyled inheritaunce, which neuer shal fade awaye, but is reserved in heauen for you that are kepte by the power of God thorow faith to saluacion, which is prepared all ready to be shewed in the last tyme: in the which ye shal reioyce, though now for a litle season (yff nede requyre) ye are in heynes thorow manyfolde temptacions: that youre faith once tryed (beynge moch more precious then the corruptible golde that is tryed thorow the fyre) might be founde vnto laude, glory and honoure at the appearynge of Iesus Christ: whom ye haue not sene, and yet loue him: § in whom now ye beleue, though ye se him not. Euen so shal ye reioyce also with vnoutspeakable and glorious ioye, receauynge the ende of youre faith, euen the saluacion of youre soules.

Of which saluacion the prophetes haue enuyred and searched, which prophecied off the grace that shulde come vpon you: searchinge whan or at what tyme the sprete off Christ that was in them, shulde signifye, which (sprete) testified before the passions that shulde come vnto Christ, and the glory that shulde folowe after. Vnto the which (prophetes) it was declared, that not vnto them selues, but vnto vs they shulde mynister the thinges which are now shewed vnto you, by them which thorow § holy goost sent downe from heauen, haue preached vnto you the thinges || which the angels delyte to beholde.

Wherefore gyrded op the ¶ loynes off youre mynde, be sober, and trust perfectly on the grace that is brought vnto you, by the declaringe of Iesus Christ, as obedient childrē, not faszhionynge youre selues to youre olde lustes of ignoraunce: but as he which hath called you is holy, euē so be ye holy also in all youre conuersacion: for it is wryttē: ** Be ye holy, for I am holy.

And yf so be that ye call on the father, which without respecte of personnes iudgeth †† accordynge to euery mans worke, se § ye passe § tyme of youre pilgremage in feare: ‡ and knowe, that ye were not redemed with corruptible syluer and golde, from youre vayne conuersacion (which ye receaued by the tradiciōs of the fathers)§§ but with the precious bloude of Christ, as of an innocēt and vndefyled lambe, which was ordeyned before the worlde was made, but is declared in these last tymes |||| for youre sakes, which thorow him beleue on God, that raysed him vp from the deed, ¶ and hath geuē him the glory, that ye might haue faith ¶ hope in God: Euen ye which haue purified youre soules *** in obeyenge the trueth thorow the sprete, to loue brotherly without faynynge, ¶ feruently one to loue another with a pure hert, as they that are borne a new, not of corruptible sede, but of vncorruptible, euē by the lyuynge worde of God, which endureth for euer. ††† For all flesh is as grasse, and all the glory of man is as the floure of grasse. The grasse withereth, ¶ the floure falleth awaye, but the worde of the LORDE endureth for euer. This is the worde, that is preached amonge you.

The ij. Chapter.

WHERFORE laye asyde all maliciousnes and all gyle, and ypocrisie, and envye, and all bacbytinge, ⁊ *as new borne babes desyre that reasonable mylke, which is without corrupcion, that ye maye growe therin, yf so be that ye haue † tasted how friendly the LORDE is. Vnto whom ye are come, † as to the lyuynge stone, which is disallowed of men, but chosen of God and precious. And ye also as lyuynge stones are made a spirituall house, and an holy presthode, to offere vp § spirituall sacrifices, acceptable vnto God by Iesus Christ. Wherefore it is conteyned in the scripture: || Beholde, I put in Sion an heade corner stone, electe ⁊ precious, and he that beleueth on him, shal not be cofounded. Vnto you therefore which beleue, he is precious: but vnto them that beleue not, is § same stone which the ¶ buylders refused, made the heade stone in the corner,** and a stone to stamble at, and a rock to be offended at, namely in the which stamble at § worde, and beleue not that wheron they were set.

B † But ye are that chosen generacion, that kyngly presthode, that holy nacion, that peculiar people, § ye shulde shewe the vertues of him, which hath called you out of darkness in to his maruelous light: † Euen you which in tyme past were not a people, but now are the people of God: which were not vnder mercy, but now haue optayned mercy.

Dearly beloued, I beseke you as straungers and pilgrims, § absteine fro the fleshly lustes, which fighte agaynst the soule, and lede an honest conuersacion amonge the Heythen, || that they which bacbyte you as euell doers, maye se youre good workes, and prayse God in the daye of visitacion.

“Submytte youre selues vnto all maner ordinance of men for the LORDES sake: whether it be vnto the kynge as vnto § chefe heade, or vnto rulers, as vnto them that are sent of him, for the punishment of euell doers, but for the prayse of the that do well. For so is the will of God, that ye with well doyng shulde put to sylence the ignorance of folish men: as fre, and not as hauynge the libertye for a cloke of wickednes, but euē as the seruantes of God. Honoure all men. Loue brotherly fellowshipe. Feare God. ¶¶ Honoure the kynge.

*** Ye seruantes, obey youre masters with all feare: not onely yf they be good and courteous, but also though they be frowarde. For that is grace, yf a man for conscience towards God endure grefe, and suffre wronge. For what prayse is it, yf whā ye be buffeted for youre fautes, ye take it paciently? †† But yf whan ye do well, ye suffre wronge, and take it paciently, that is grace with God. For here vnto are ye called, for so moch as Christ also suffered for vs, leauynge vs an †† ensample, that ye shulde folowe his foteystepes, which dyd no synne, nether was there gyle founde in his mouth: §§ which whan he was reuyled, reuyled not agayne: whā he suffred, he threatened not: but commytted the cause vnto him, that iudgeth righteously: |||| which his owne selfe bare oure synnes in his body vpon the tre, that we shulde be delyuered from synne, ⁊ shulde lyue vnto righteousnes: by whose strypes ye were healed. ¶¶ For ye were as shepe goynge astraye, but now are ye turned vnto the shepherde and Bischoppe of youre soules.

The seconde Epistle of the Apostle S. Peter.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

For so much as the power of God hath geuen them all thinges pertayninge vnto life, he exhorte thē to flye the corrupcion of worldly lust, to make their callinge sure with good workes and frutes of faith. He maketh mention of his owne death, declaringe the LORDE Iesus to be the true sonne of God, as he himself hath sene vpon the mount.

Chap. II.

He prophecieth of false teachers, and sheweth their punyshment.

Chap. III.

He exhorte men to bewarre of soch as wolde make thē beleue, that the daye of the LORDE were slacke in commynge: prayeth them to lede a godly life, and to loke verely for the commynge of the LORDE, whose lōge tarienge is saluacion, and because he wolde haue no man lost, but wolde receaue all mē to repentaunce.

The first Chapter.

SYMON Peter a seruaũt and an Apostle of Iesus Christ.*

Vnto thē which haue optayned like faith with vs in the righteousnes that cometh of oure God, and Sauioure Iesus Christ.

* Grace and peace be multiplied with you throw the knowlege of God and of Iesus Christ oure LORDE.

For so moch as his godly power hath geuen vs all thinges (that pertayne vnto life and godlynnes) throw the knowlege of him that hath called vs by his owne glorie and power, wherby the excellent and most greate promyses are geuē vnto vs: namely, that ye by the same shulde be partakers of the godly nature, yf ye flye the corrupte lust of the worlde: Geue ye all youre diligence therefore here vnto, and in youre faith mynister vertue: in vertue, knowlege: in knowlege, temperance: in temperance, pacience: in pacience, godlynnes: in godlynnes, brotherly loue: in brotherly loue, generall loue. For yf these thinges be plenteous in you, they will not let you be ydle nor vnfrutefull in y knowlege of oure LORDE Iesus Christ. But he that lacketh these thinges, is blynde, & gropeth for the waye with the hāde, and hath forgotten, that he was clesned from his olde synnes.

Wherfore (brethrē) geue the more diligence to make youre callinge and eleccion sure: for yf ye do soch thinges, ye shal not fall, and by this meanes shal there be plenteously mynistered vnto you an entrynge in vnto y euerlastinge kyngdome of oure LORDE and Sauioure Iesus Christ.

Therefore wil I not be negligēt to put you allwayes in remembraunce of soch thinges: though ye knowe them youre selues, and be stablished in the present trueth. Notwithstandinge I thinke it mete, as lōge as I am in this † tabernacle, to stere you vp by puttinge you in remembraunce. For I am sure, that I must shortly put of my tabernacle, euen as oure LORDE Iesus Christ hath shewed vnto me. Yet wyl I do my diligēce, that allwaye after my departyng ye maye haue wherewith to kepe these thinges in remembraunce.

For we folowed not deceaueable fables, whan we declared vnto you the power and comynge of oure LORDE Iesus Christ: † but with oure eyes we sawe his maiestie, whan he receaued of God the father honoure & prayse, by a voyce that came vnto him from the excellent glory, after this maner: § This is my deare sonne, in whom I haue delyte. And this voyce herde we broughte downe frō heauen, whan we were with him on the holy mount.

We haue also a sure worde of prophecie, and ye do well that ye take hede therunto, as vnto a lighte || that shyneth in a darke place vntyll the daye dawne, and the daye starre aryse in youre hertes. And this shal ye knowe first, that no prophecie in the scripture is done of eny priuate interpretacion. ¶ For the prophecie was neuer broughte by the wyll of man, but the holy men of God spake, as they were moued of y holy goost.

The ij. Chapter.

BUT there were false prophetes also amonge the people, ** euen as there shalbe false teachers amonge you likewise, which preuely shal bryng in damnable sectes, euen denyenge the LORDE that hath boughte them, and shal bryng vpon them selues swift damnacion: and †† many shal folowe their damnable wayes, by whō the waye of the trueth shal be euell spokē of: and thorow cuvetousnes shal they with fayned wordes make marchaundise of you, vpō whō the iudgment is not negligēt in tarienge of olde, and their damnacion slepeth not.

‡‡ For yf God spared not the angels that synned, but cast them downe with the cheynes of darknes in to hell, and delyuered thē ouer to be kepte vnto iudgment: §§ Nether spared the olde worlde, but sauēd Noe the preacher of righteousnes himselfe beyng y eight, and brought the floude vpō the worlde of the vngodly: ||| And turned the cities of Sodom and Gomor in to ashes, ouerthruw them, damned them, and made on them an ensample, vnto those that after shulde lye vngodly: And delyuered iust Loth which was vexed with the vngodly conuersacion of y wicked. and dwelt amonge them, so that he must nedes se it and heare it, his righteous soule was greued from to daye to daye with their vnlauffull dedes. * The LORDE knoweth how to deliyuer the godly out of tentacion, and how to reserue the viiust vnto the daye of iudgment for to be punyshed: but specially them that walke after the flesh in y lust of vncleennes, and despyse the rulers: beyng presumptuous, stubborn, and feare not to speake euell of the y are in auctorite † whā the angels yet which are greater both in power and might, beare not that blasphemous iudgment agaynst them of the LORDE. ‡ But these are as y brute beestes, which naturally are broughte forth to be takē and destroyed: § speakeyng euell of y they knowe not, and shal perishe in their owne destruction, and so receaue y rewarde of vnrighteousnes.

They counte it pleasure to lyue deliciously for a season: Spottes are they and fylthynes: lyuyng at pleasure and in disceauable wayes: feastyng with that which is yowres, hauyng eyes full of adoutrye, and cā not cease from synne, entyng vnto vntable soules: hauyng an hert exercysed with couetousnes: they are cursed children, and haue forsaken the righte waye, and are gone astraye: folowinge the waye of || Balaam the sonne of Bosor, which loued the rewarde of vnrighteousnes: but was rebuked of his iniquyte. The tame and domme beast spake with mā's voyce, and forbad the foolishnes of y prophet.

These are welles without water, and ¶ cloudes caried aboute of a tēpest: to whō y myst of darknesse is reserued for euer. For they speake y proude wordes of vanite, vnto y vttemost, and entye thorow wantannes vnto y luste of the flesh, euen them that were cleane escaped, and now walke in erreure: and promise them libertye, where as they them selues are seruantes off corrupcion. ** For off whom so euer a man is ouercome, vnto the same is he in bondage. †† For yf they (after they haue escaped from the fylthynes of the worlde, thorow the knowledge of y LORDE and Sauoure Iesus Christ) are yet tangled agayne therin and ouercome, ‡‡ then is the latter ende worse vnto them then the begynnyng. For it had bene better for them, not to haue knowne the waye of righteousness, then after they haue knowne it, §§ to turne from the holy commaundement, that was genen vnto them. It is happened vnto them acordyng vnto the true prouerbe: ||| y dogg is turned to his vomite agayne: and y sowe that was waszhed, vnto hir walowyng in the myre.

The iij. Chapter.

THIS is the seconde Epistle that I now wryte vnto you (ye dearly beloued) wherin I stere vp and warne youre pure mynde, that ye maye remembre the wordes, which were tolde before of the holy prophetes: and also the commaundement of vs, that be the Apostles of the LORDE and Sauoure.

This first vnderstonde, ¶¶ that in the last dayes there shal come mockers, which wyll walke after their awne lustes, and saye: *** Where is the promes of his commynge? For sence the fathers fell on slepe, euery thinge contynueth as it was from the begynnyng of y creature. This they knowe not (and that wylfully) how that the heauens were afore tyme also, and the earth out of the water, ¶ was in the water by the worde of God, ††† yet was the worlde at that tyme destroyed by the same with the floude. But the heauens which are yet, and y earth, are kepte in stoare by his worde, to be reserued ‡‡ vnto fyre agaynst the daye of iudgment and damnacion of vngodly men.

Dearly beloued, be not ignoraunt of this one thinge, §§§ how that one daye is with the LORDE as a thousande yere: and a thousande yere as one daye. The LORDE is not slacke to fulfill his promes (as some mē counte slacknesse) but is |||| paciēt to vs warde, ¶¶¶ and wyl not that any mā shulde be lost, but that euery man shulde amende himselfe. Neuertheles **** the daye of the LORDE shal come euen as a thefe in the night: in the which (daye) the heauens shal perishe with a greate noyse, and the Elementes shal melte with heate, and the earth and y workes that are therin, shal burne.

Neuerthelcs * we loke for a new heauen and a new earth (acordynge to his promes) wherin dwelleth righteousnes.

Ye therefore beloued, seynge ye knowe it before hande, bewarre, lest ye also be plucte awaye thorow the erreure of ȳ wicked, and fall from youre owne stedfastnes. But growe in grace, and in the knowlege of oure LORDE and Sauoure Iesus Christ. To him be prayse now and for euer, Amen.

The first Epistle of the Apostle and Euangelist S. Ihon.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

True wytnesse of the euerlastinge worde of God.
The bloude of Christ is the purgacion from synne. No man is without synne.

Chap. II.

Christ is oure aduocate. Of true loue, and how it is tryed.

Chap. III.

The synguler loue of God to warde vs: and how we agayne oughte to loue one another.

Chap. IIII.

Difference of spretes, and how the sprete of God maye be knowne from the sprete of erreure. Of the loue of God and of oure neighbours.

Chap. V.

To loue God, is to kepe his commaundemētes. Faith ouercommeth the worlde. Euerlastinge life is in the sonne of God. Of the synne vnto death.

The first Chapter.

¶ THAT which was from ȳ begynnyng, which we haue herde, which * we haue sene with oure eyes, which we haue loked vpon, † and oure handes haue handled of the worde of life: and the life hath appeared, and we haue sene, and beare wytnes, and shewe vnto you ȳ life that is euerlastinge, † which was with the father, and hath apared vnto vs. That which we haue sene † herde, declare we vnto you, that ye also maye haue fellowshipe with vs, and that oure fellowshipe maye be with the father and with his sonne Iesus Christ. And this wryte we vnto you, † that youre ioye maye be full.

And this is the tydinges which we haue herde of him, † declare vnto you, that God is lighte, and in him is no darknes at all. Yf we saye that we haue fellowshipe with him, and yet walke in darknes, we lye, and do not the trueth. But yf we walke in lighte, euen as he is in lighte, then haue we fellowshipe together, * and the bloude of Iesus Christ his sonne clenseth vs from all synne.

† Yf we saye that we haue no synne, we disceauoure oure selues, and the trueth is not in vs. ‡ But yf we knowlege oure synnes, he is faithfull and iust to forgeue vs oure synnes, ¶ to clense vs from all vnrighteousnes. Yf we saye, we haue not synned, we make him a liar, and his worde is not in vs.

The ij. Chapter.

MY litle children, these thinges wryte I vnto you, that ye shulde not synne: and yf eny man synne, we haue an ¶ aduocate with the father, euen Iesus Christ which is righteous: ¶ and he it is that optayneth grace for oure synnes: not for oure synnes onely, but also for the synnes of all the worlde. And hereby are we sure that we knowe him, yf we kepe his cōmaundemētes. ¶ He that sayeth: I knowe him, and kepeth not his cōmaundemētes, is a liar, and the trueth is not in him, But who so kepeth his worde, in him is the loue of God perfecte in dede. ** Hereby knowe we, that we are in him. He ¶ sayeth he abyedeth in him, oughte to walke euen as he walked.

Brethren, I wryte no new commaundement vnto you, but that olde commaundement, which ye haue herde from the begynnyng. The olde cōmaundement is the worde, which ye haue herde from the begynnyng. Agayne, †† a new cōmaundemēt wryte I vnto you, a thinge that is true in him ¶ also in you: for the darknesse is past, and the true lighte now shyneth.

¶ He that sayeth he is in lighte, and hateth his brother, is yet in darknesse. He ¶ loueth his brother, abyedeth in the lighte, and there is none occasion of euell in him. But he ¶ hateth his brother, is in darknes, and walketh in darknes, and can not tell whither he goeth, for ¶ darknes hath blynded his eyes.

Babes, I wryte vnto you, † that youre synnes are forgeuen you for his names sake. I wryte vnto you fathers, how that ye haue knowne him which is from ¶ begynnyng. I wryte vnto you yonge mē, how that ye haue ouercome the wicked. I wryte vnto you litle children, how that ye haue knowne the father. I haue wrytten vnto you fathers, how that ye haue knowne him, which is frō the begynnyng. I haue wrytten vnto you yonge men, how that ye are stronge, and the worde of God abyedeth in you, and ye haue ouercome that wicked.

Se that ye loue not the worlde, nether ¶ things that are in the worlde. Yf eny man loue the worlde, the loue of the father is not in him: for all that is in the worlde (namely the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pryde of life) is not of the father, but of the worlde. And the §§ worlde passeth awaye and the lust therof. But he that fulfylleth the wyll of God, abyedeth for euer.

Litle children, it is the last houre, and (as ye haue herde that ¶ Antechrist shal come) euen now are there many become Antechristes already: wherby we knowe, that it is ¶ last houre. They wente out ¶ frō vs, but they were not of vs: for yf they had bene of vs, they wolde no doute haue contynued with vs. But *** that they maye be knowne, how that they are not all of vs.

But ye haue the ††† anyoyntinge of him ¶ is holy, ¶ ye knowe all thiges. I haue not wryttē vnto you, as though ye knewe not ¶ trueth but ye knowe it, ¶ are sure, ¶ no lye cōmeth of ¶ trueth. Who is a liar, but he ¶ denyeth ¶ Iesus is Christ? The same is ¶ Antichrist, ¶ denyeth the father ¶ sonne. Whosoever denyeth the sonne, the same hath not the father. Loke what ye haue herde now from ¶ begynnyng, let the same abyde in you. Yf ¶ which he herde from the begynnyng shal remayne in you, then shal ye also abyde in ¶ sonne and in the father. And this is the promys ¶ he hath promysed vs, euē eternal life.

This haue I wryttē vnto you cōcerninge thē that disceane you. ††† And the anyoyntinge which ye haue receaued of him, dwelleth in you: ¶ ye nede not ¶ eny mā teach you, but as the anyoyntinge teacheth you all thiges, euen so is it true, ¶ is no lye. And as it hath taughte you, euē so abide ye therin. And now babes, abyde in hī, ¶ whā he shal appeare, we maye be bolde, & not be made ashamed of him at his commynge. Yf ye knowe y he is righteous, knowe also that he which doth righteousnes, is borne of him.

The iij. Chapter.

BEHOULDE what loue the father hath shewed on vs, y we shulde be called the childre of God. Therefore y worlde knoweth you not, because it knoweth not him. Dearly beloued, we are now y * childre of God, and yet hath it not appeared what we shalbe. † But we knowe y when he shal appeare, we shal be like him: for we shal se him as he is. And euery man y hath this hope in him, pourgeth him selfe, euen as he is pure. Who so euer comytteth synne, comytteth vnrighteousnes also, and synne is vnrighteousnes. ‡ And ye knowe that he appeared to take awaye oure synnes: and in him is no synne. Who so euer abyedeth in him, synneth not: who soeuer synneth, hath not sene him nether knowne him.

BBabes, let noman disceaue you. He that doeth righteousness, is righteous, euen as he is righteous. He that comytteth synne, is of the deuell: § for the deuell synneth sence y begynnynge. For this purpose appeared the sonne of God, to lowse the workes of the deuell. || Who so euer is borne of God, synneth not: for his ¶ sede remaineth in him, & he ca not synne, because he is borne of God. ** By this are the children of God knowne & the children of the deuell. Who so euer doeth not righteousness, is not of God, nether he that loueth not his brother.

For this is the tydings which ye haue herde from the begynnynge, that ye shulde loue one another, †† not as Cain, which was of the wicked, and slewe his brother. And wherfore slewe he him? euen because his awne workes were euell, and his brothers righteous. ‡‡ Maruayle not (my brethren) though the worlde hate you. We knowe y we are trslated from death vnto life, because we loue the brethren. He that loueth not his brother, abyedeth in death. §§ Who soeuer hateth his brother, is a manslayer. ¶¶ And ye knowe that a manslayer hath not eternall life abyding in him.

CHereby haue we perceaused loue, that he gaue his life for vs, and therfore ought we also to geue oure lyues for the brethrē. But he y hath this worlde good, & seyth his brother haue nede, and shutteth vp his hert frō him, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? My litle children, ||| let vs not loue with worde nether with tounge, but with y dede, and with the trueth. Hereby knowe we, that we are of the verite, and can quyetue oure hertes before him. But yf oure hert condemne vs, God is greater thē oure hert, and knoweth all thinges. Dearly beloued, yf oure hert condemne vs not, then haue we a fre boldnes to God warde. ¶¶ And what so euer we axe, we shal receaue it: because we kepe his cōmaundemētes, and do those thinges, which are pleasaunt in his sighte.

And this is his cōmaundement, that we beleue on y name of his sonne Iesus Christ, and loue one another, *** as he gaue cōmaundement. And he that kepeth his cōmaundementes, dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby knowe we that he abyedeth in vs, euen by the sprete which he hath geuen vs.

The iij. Chapter.

DEARLY beloued, beleue not ye euery sprete, ††† but proue the spretes, whether they be of God. For many false prophetes are gone out in to the worlde. Hereby shal ye knowe the sprete of God: Euery sprete which confesseth, that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God: And euery sprete which confesseth not that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not off God. And this is that sprete of Antechrist, off whom ye haue herde, how that he shal come, and euen now allready is he in the worlde. Litle children, ye are off God, and haue overcome them: for greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the worlde. They are off the worlde, therefore speake they off the worlde, and the worlde herkeneth vnto them. We are of God, †††† and he that knoweth God, herkeneth vnto vs: he that is not of God, heareth vs not. Hereby knowe we the sprete of trueth, and y sprete of erreure.

Dearly beloued, let vs loue one another, for loue commeth of God. And euery one y loueth, is borne of God, and knoweth God. He that loueth not, knoweth not God: for God is loue. * By this appeared the loue of God to vs warde, because that God sent his onely begotten sonne in to this worlde, that we mighte lyue thorow him. Herein is loue, not that we loued God, but that he loued vs, † and sent his sonne to make aghremēt for oure synnes.

Dearly beloued, yf God so loued vs, we oughte also to loue one another. ‡ No man hath sene God at eny tyme. Yf we loue one another, God dwelleth in vs, and his loue is perfecte in vs. Hereby knowe we that we dwell in him, and he in vs, because he hath geuen vs of his sprete. And we haue sene, & testifie that the father sent the sonne to be the Sauoure of the worlde. § Whosoever now confesseth ¶ Iesus is the sonne of God in him dwell-eth God, and he in God: and we haue knowne and beleued the loue that God hath to vs.

¶ God is loue, and he that dwelleth in loue dwelleth in God, and God in him. Here in is the loue perfecte with vs, that we shulde haue a fre boldnesse in the daye of iudgment: for as he is, euē so are we in this worlde. Feare is not in loue, but perfecte loue casteth out feare: for feare hath paynefulnes. He that feareth, is not perfecte in loue.

Let vs loue him, for he loued vs first. ¶ Yf eny man saye: I loue God, & yet hateth his brother, he is a lyar. For he that loueth not his brother whom he seyth, how can he loue God, whom he seyth not? And this comaundement haue we of him, ¶ that he which loueth God, shulde loue his brother also.

The b. Chapter.

¶ WHO so euer beleueth that Iesus is Christ,** is borne of God. And who soeuer loueth him that begat, loueth him also which was begotten of him. By this we knowe that we loue Gods children, whan we loue God, and kepe his commaundementes. For this is the loue of God, that we kepe his commaundementes, †† and his commaund-mentes are not greuous. For all that is borne of God, ouer commeth the worlde: and this is the victory that ouercommeth the worlde, euē oure faith. Who is it ¶ ouercommeth the worlde, but he which beleueth that Iesus is the sonne of God?

This is he that cometh with water and bloude, euen Iesus Christ: not with water onely, but with water and bloude.† And it is the sprete that beareth wytnes: for the sprete is the trueth. (For there are thre which beare recorde in heauen: the father, the worde, and the holy goost, & these thre are one.) And there are thre which beare recorde in earth: the sprete, water and bloude, and these thre are one.

Yf we receaue the witnesse of men, the witnesse of God is greater: for this is the wytnesse of God, which he testified of his sonne. §§ He that beleueth on ¶ sonne of God, hath the wytnes in him selfe. He that beleueth not God, hath made him a lyar. And this is that recorde, euen ¶ God hath geuē vs euerlastinge life. ¶ And this life is in his sonne. He that hath the sonne of God, hath life: He that hath not the sonne of God, hath not life.

These thinges haue I wryttē vnto you, which beleue on the name of the sonne of God, that ye maye knowe, how that ye haue eternall life, and that ye maye beleue on ¶ name of the sonne of God. And this is the fre boldnesse which we haue towarde him, that yf we axe eny thinge acordinge to his wyll, he heareth vs. And yf we knowe that he heareth vs what so euer we axe, then are we sure that we haue ¶ petitions, which we haue desyred of him.

Yf eny man se his brother synne a synne not vnto death, let him axe, and he shal geue him life, for the ¶ synne not vnto death. There is a ¶ synne vnto death, for the which saye I not that a man shulde praye. All vnrighteousnes is synne, and there is synne not vnto death.

We knowe, that whosoever is borne off God, synneth not: but he that is begottē of God, kepeth himselfe, & ¶ wicked toucheth him not. We knowe that we are of God, & the worlde is set alltogether on wickednes. But we knowe, that the sonne of God is come, *** and hath geuen vs a mynde, to knowe him which is true: and we are in him ¶ is true, in his sonne Iesu Christ. This is the true God, and euerlastinge life. Babes kepe youre selues from ymagines. Amen.

He wryteth vnto a certayne lady, reioyseth that her children walke in the trueth, exhorteth thē vnto loue, warneth them to beware of soch disceauers as denye that Iesus Christ came in the flesh, prayeth them to contynue in the doctryne of Christ, and to haue nothinge to do with them that bringe not this lernynge.

THE Elder. To y<sup>e</sup> electe lady and hir childrē whom I loue in the trueth: & not I onely, but all they also that haue knowne the trueth, for the truthe sake which dwelleth in vs, and shalbe with vs for euer.

Grace, mercy, and peace be with you frō the LORDE Iesus Christ y<sup>e</sup> sonne of the father in the trueth and in loue.

I am greatly reioysed, that I haue founde amonge thy children, them that walke in y<sup>e</sup> trueth, as we haue receaued a commaundement of the father. And now lady I beseke the (not as though I wrote a new commaundement vnto the, but the same which we haue had from the begynnyng) that we loue one another. And this is the loue, that we walke after his commaundementes.

This is the commaundement (as ye haue herde frō the begynnyng) that we shulde walke therein. * For many disceauers are come in to the worlde, which confesse not y<sup>e</sup> Iesus Christ is come in the flesh: this is a disceauer and an Antechrist. Take hede to youre selues, that we lose not that which we haue wrought, but that we maye receaue a full rewarde. Who so euer transgresseth, and abydeyth not in the doctryne of Christ, hath not God: he that abydeyth in y<sup>e</sup> doctryne of Christ, hath both the father and the sonne.

† Yf eny man come vnto you, and brynge not this doctryne, receaue him not in to the house, nether salute him: for he that saluteth him, is partaker of his euell dedes. I had many thinges to wryte vnto you: neuertheles I wolde not wryte with papyre and ynke, but I trust to come vnto you, and to speake with you mouth mouth, that oure ioye maye be full. The children of thy electe sister salute the. Amen.

He is glad of Gaius, that he walketh in the trueth: exhorteth him to be lounge vnto the poore christen in their persecucion, sheweth the vnkynde dealyng of Diotrefes, and the good reporte of Demetrius.

THE Elder. To the beloued Gaius, whom I loue in the trueth. My beloued, I wysse in all thinges, that thou prospere and fare well euen as thy soule prospereth. I reioysed greatly, whan the brethren came, and testified of the trueth that is in y<sup>e</sup>, how thou walkest in the trueth. I haue no greater ioye, thē to heare that my childrē walke in the trueth.

My beloued, * thou doest faithfully what so euer thou doest to the brethren and to straungers, which haue borne witness of thy loue before the congregacion: and thou hast done well that thou dydest brynge them forwarde on their iourney, worthely before God. For because of his names sake they wente forth, and toke nothinge of the Heythen. We therfore oughte to receaue soch, that we mighte be helpers vnto the trueth.

I wrote to the congregacion, but Diotri- 33

phes, which loueth to haue the preemynence amonge them, receaued vs not. Wherefore, yf I come, I wil declare his dedes which he doeth, ieastringe vpō vs with malicious wordes: nether is he therewith cōtent. Not onely he himselfe receaueth not the brethrē, but also he forbyddeth them that wolde, and thrusteth them out of the congregacion.

My beloued, folowe not y which is euell, but that which is good. He that doeth well, is of God: but he that doeth euell, seyth not God. Demetrius hath good reporte of all men, and of the trueth: yee and we oure selues also beare recorde, and ye knowe that oure recorde is true. I had many thinges to wryte, but I wolde not with ynke, and pen wryte vnto the. But I trust shortly to se the and so wyl we speake together mouth to mouth. Peace be with the. The louers salute the. ## The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Hebrues.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

How God dealt louingly with the of the olde tyme in sendynge them his prophetes, but moch more mercy hath he shewed vs in that he sent vs his owne sonne. Of the most excellent glory of Iesus Christ, which in all thinges is like to his father.

Chap. II.

He exhorteth vs to be obedient vnto the new lawe which Christ hath geuen vs and not to be offended at the infirmite and lowe degre of Christ: ¶ why? it was necessary that for oure sakes he shulde take soch an humble state vpon him, that he might be like vnto his brethren.

Chap. III.

He requyreth vs to be obedient vnto the worde of Christ, which is more worthy then Moses. The punyshment of soch as wyll nedes harden their hertes.

Chap. IIII.

The Sabbath or rest of the Christen. Punyshment of vnbeleuers. The nature of the worde of God.

Chap. V.

Christ is oure hye prest, the seate of grace, and more excellent then the hye prestes of the olde lawe.

Chap. VI.

He goeth forth with the thige that he beganne in the latter ende of the fyfft chapter, and exhorteth them not to faynt, but to be stedfast and patient: for so moch as God is sure in his promes.

Chap. VII.

He cōpareth the presthode of Christ vnto Melchisedech, but to be farre more excellent.

Chap. VIII.

The office of Christ is more worthy then the prestes office of the olde lawe, which was vnperfecte, and therfore abrogate.

Chap. IX.

The profit and worthynesse of the olde Testament, and how farre the new excelleth it.

Chap. X.

The olde lawe had no power to clēse away synne, but Christ dyd it with offerynge vp his body once for all. An exhortacion to receaue this goodnesse of God thākfūly with pacience and stedfast faith.

Chap. XI.

What faith is, and a commēdacacion of the same. The stedfast beleue of the fathers in olde tyme.

Chap. XII.

An exhortacion to be patient and stedfast in trouble and aduersite, vpon hope of euerlastinge rewarde. A commēdacacion of the new Testament aboue the olde.

Chap. XIII.

He exhorteth vs vnto loue, to hospitalite, to thinke vpon soch as be in aduersite, to maneyne wedlocke, to auoyde cuvetousnesse, to make moch of the that preach Gods worde, to beware of straunge lernynge, to be content to suffre rebuke with Christ, to be thankfull vnto God, and obedient vnto oure heades.

The first Chapter.

GOD in tyme past dyuersly & many wayes, spake vnto y<sup>e</sup> fathers by prophetes, but in these last dayes he hath spoken vnto vs by his sonne, * whom he hath made heyre of all thinges, by whom also he made the worlde. † Which (sonne) beyng the brightnes of his glory, & the very ymage of his substance, bearing vp all thinges with the worde of his power, ‡ hath in his owne personne poured oure synnes, and is set on the righte hande of the maiestie on hye: beyng eue as moch more excellēt thē y<sup>e</sup> angels, as he hath optayned a more excellēt s<sup>e</sup> name then they.

B For vnto which of the angels sayde he at eny tyme: ¶ Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the? And agayne: ¶ I will be his father, & he shalbe my sonne: And agayne, whā he bryngeth in the fyrst begottē sonne in to the worlde, he sayeth: ** And all the angels of God shal worshipec him. † And of the angels he sayeth: He maketh his angels spretes, ‡ his mynisters flāmes of fyre. But vnto y<sup>e</sup> sonne he sayeth: †† God, thy seate endureth for euer & euer: the cepter of thy kyngdome is a right cepter. Thou hast loued righteousnes, & hated iniquyte: wherfore God (which is thy God) hath anoynted the with the oyle of gladnesse aboue thy felowes. †† And thou LORDE in y<sup>e</sup> begynnynge hast layed the foundation of the earth, and y<sup>e</sup> heauē is the workes of thy handes, §§ they shal perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shal waxe olde as doth a garnēt, and as a vesture shalt thou chaunge them, and they shalbe chaunged. But thou art y<sup>e</sup> same, and thy yeares shal not fayle. Vnto which of the angels sayde he at eny tyme: ¶ Syt thou on my righte hāde, tyll I make thyne enemies thy fote stole? Are they not all mynistrynge spretes, sent to mynister for their sakes, which shalbe heyres of saluacion?

The ij. Chapter.

WHERFORE we ought to geue the more hede vnto the thinges which we haue herde, lest we periszhe. For yf the worde which was spokē by angels, was stedfast, and euery trāsgression and dishobediēce receaued a iust recompence of rewarde, how shal we escape, yf we despyse so greate a saluacion: which ¶ after that it beganne to be preached by the LORDE himselfe, *** was confirmed vpon vs, by them that herde it, God bearyng witness thereto, with tokens, wonders and dyuerse powers, and giftes of the holy goost according to his awne wyll.

B For vnto the angels hath he not subdued the worlde to come, wherof we speake. But one in a certayne place witnesseth & sayeth: ††† What is man, that thou art myndefull of him? or the sonne of man, that thou vysitest him? After thou haddest for a litle season made him lower thē y<sup>e</sup> angels, thou crownedst him with honour and glory, and hast set him aboute the workes of thy handes. Thou hast put all thinges in subieccion vnder his fete. †† In that he subdued all thinges vnto him, he lefte nothinge that is not put vnder him. Neuertheles now se we not all thinges yet subdued vnto him. But him, which for a litle season was made lesse then the angels, we se that it is Iesus: which is §§§ crowned with honour and glory for the sufferynge of death, that he by the grace of God, shulde taist of death for all men. For it became him, for whom are all thinges, and by whō are all thinges (after y<sup>e</sup> he had broughte many children vnto glory) that he shulde make the LORDE of their saluacion perfecte thorow sufferynge, for so moch as they all come of one, both he that sanctifieth, & they which are sanctified.

C For the which causes sake, he is not ashamed to call them brethren, sayenge: ¶¶¶ I will declare thy name vnto my brethren, and in the myddes of the cōgregacion wil I prayse the. And agayne: ¶¶¶ I wyl put my trust in him. And agayne: **** beholde, here am I and my children, which God hath geuen me.

For as moch then as the children haue flesh and bloude, †††† he also himselfe likewise toke parte with them, †††† y<sup>e</sup> he thorow death, mighte take awaye y<sup>e</sup> power of him, which had lordshippe ouer death, that is to saye, y<sup>e</sup> deuell: † that he mighte deluyr thē which thorow feare of death were all their life tyme in dānger of bōdage. For he in no place taketh on him the angels, but y<sup>e</sup> seade of Abraham taketh he on him. Wherefore in all things it became him to be made * like vnto his brethren, that he mighte be mercifull and a faithfull hie prest in thinges concernynge God, to make agrement for the synnes of ⁊ people. † For in that he himselfe suffred and was tempted, he is able to sucker them that are tempted.

The iij. Chapter.

WHEREFORE holy brethren, ye that are partakers of the heauily callynge, consyder the Embasseatour and hie prest of oure profession, Christ Iesus, which is faithfull to him that ordeyned him, euen as was † Moses in all his house. But this man is worthy of greater honoure then moyses, in as moch as he which prepareth the house, hath greater honoure in it, then the house it selfe. For every house is prepared of some mā: § but he that ordeyned all thinges, is God. And Moses verely was faithfull in all his house as a mynister, || to beare witnes of those thinges which were to be spoken afterwarde: But Christ as a sonne hath rule ouer his house, ¶ whose house are we, yf we holde fast the confidence and reioysinge of that ** hope vnto the ende.

Wherefore, as ⁊ holy goost sayeth: †† Todaye yf ye shal heare his voyce, harden not youre hertes, ‡ as in the prouokynke in the daye of temptacion in the wyldernes, where youre fathers tempted me, proued me, and sawe my workes fortye yeares longe. Wherefore I was greued with that generacion, and sayde: They erre euer in their hertes. But they knewe not my wayes, so that I sware in my wrath, that they shulde not enter in to my rest.

Take hede brethren, that there be not in eny of you an euell hert of vnbeleue, to departe from the luyngge God: but exhorte youre selues daylie, whyle it is called to daye, lest eny of you waxe harde harted thorow ⁊ disceatfulnes of synne. For we are become partakers of Christ, yf we kepe sure vnto ⁊ ende the begynnynge of the substāce, solong as it is sayde: Todaye, yf ye shal heare his voyce, hardē not youre hertes, as in the prouocaciō. For some when they herde, prouoked. Howbeit not all they ⁊ came out of Egipte by Moses. But with whom was he displeased fortye yeares longe? Was he not displeased with them ⁊ synned, whose carcases were ouerthrowne in ⁊ wyldernes? §§ To whom sware he, ⁊ they shulde not enter in to his rest, but vnto thē ⁊ beleued not? And we ⁊ they coulede not enter in because of vnbeleue.

The iiii. Chapter.

LET vs feare therefore, lest eny of vs forsakyng the promes of entrynge in to his rest, shulde seme to come behinde: for it is declared vnto vs as well as vnto thē. But the worde of preaching helped not thē, whā they that herde it, beleued it not. (For we which haue beleued, enter in to his rest) acordynge as he sayde: Euen as I haue sworne in my wrath, They shal not enter in to my rest. And that (spake he) verely lōge after that the workes fro the begynnynge of the worlde were made: For he spake in a certayne place of the seuēth daye, on this wyse: ||| And God rested on the seuenth daye from all his workes. And in this place agayne: ¶¶ They shal not come in to my rest.

Seynge it foloweth thē, that some must enter there in to: and they, to whom it was first preached, entred not therin for vnbeleues sake, therefore appoynteth he a daye agayne after so longe tyme, and sayeth: Todaye (as it is rehearsed by David) Todaye yf ye shal heare his voyce, then harden not youre hertes. For yf Iosua had geuen them rest, thē wolde he not afterwarde haue spoken, of another daye. Therefore remayneth there yet a rest vnto the people of God. For he that is entred in to his rest, ceaseth from his workes, *** as God doth from his.

Let vs make haist therefore to enter in to that rest, lest eny man fall after the same ensample of vnbeleue. For ⁊ worde of God is quicke, and mightie in operacion, and sharper thē eny two edged swerde, and ††† entreth thorow, euen to the deuydinge of the soule ⁊ the sprete, and of ⁊ ioyntes ⁊ the mary, and is a iudger of the thoughtes ⁊ intētes of the hert, nether is there eny creature invisible in ⁊ sighte of him. But all thinges are naked ⁊ bare vnto ⁊ eyes of hī of whō we speake.

The b. Chapter.

A SEYNGE then that we haue a greate hye prest, euē Iesus ꝑ sonne of God, which is entred in to heauen, let vs holde oure profession. For we haue not an hye prest which cā not haue cōpassion on oure infirmities, but was in all poyntes tēpted, like as we are, but * without synne. Let vs therefore go boldly vnto the †scate of grace that we maye receaue mercy, and fynde grace to helpe in the tyme of nede.

B For euery hye prest that is taken frō amōge men, is ordeyned for men in thinges pertayninge to God, ‡ to offer giftes and sacrifices for synne: which can haue cōpassion on the ignoraunt, and on them that are out of the waye, for so moch as he himselfe also is compassed aboute with infirmyte. Therefore is he bounde to offer for synnes, as well for him selfe as for ꝑ people. And nomā taketh ꝑ honoure vnto himselfe, but he that is called of God, § as was Aaron.

C Euen so Christ glorified not himselfe to be made hye prest, but he ꝑ sayde vnto him: ¶ Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the. As he sayeth also in another place: ¶ Thou art a prest for euer after ꝑ order of Melchisedech. ** And in ꝑ dayes of his fleshe, he offered vp prayers ¶ supplications, with strōge cryenge ¶ teares vnto him ꝑ was able to saue him frō death: ¶ was herde also, because he had God in honoure. †† And though he was Gods sonne, yet lerned he obedience, by those thinges which he suffred. And he beyng made perfecte, became the cause of euerlastinge saluaciō, vnto all thē ꝑ obeye him, and is called of God an hye prest after the order of Melchisedech. Wherof we haue many thinges to saye, which are harde to be vttered, because ye are dull of hearynge. ††† For where as concernyng the tyme ye ought to be teachers, yet haue ye nede agayne, ꝑ we teach you the first preceptes of the worde of God: and are become such as haue nede of mylke, and not stronge meate. For euery one that is fed yet with mylke, is vnexperte in the worde of righteousness, for he is but a babe. But stronge meate belongeth vnto them ꝑ are perfecte, which thorow custome haue their wyttes exercysed to iudge both good and euell.

The bi. Chapter

WHERFORE let vs leaue the doctryne pertaynyng to the begynnynge of a Christen life, and let vs go vnto perfeccion: and now nomore laye ꝑ foundation of repētaunce from deed workes, and of faith toward God, of baptyme, of doctryne, of layenge on of hādes, of resurreccion of the deed, ¶ of eternall iudgment. And so wil we do §§ yf God permyte. ¶¶ For it is not possible, that they which were once lighted, and haue taisted of the heauēly gyfte, and are become partakers of the holy goost, ¶ ¶¶ haue taisted of ꝑ good worde of God, and of the power of the worlde to come, yf they fall awaye (and concernynge them selues crucifye the sonne of God afreszhe, and make a mocke off him) that they shulde be renued agayne vnto repentaunce.

B For the earth, that drynketh in the rayne, which commeth oft vpon it, and bringeth forth herbes mete for them that dresse it, receaueth blessinge of God: But ꝑ ground which beareth thornes and thistles, is nothinge worth, and nye vnto cursynge: whose ende is to be brent. Neuertheles (ye dearly beloued) we trust to se better of you, and ꝑ saluaciō is nyer, though we thus speake. *** For God is not vnrighteous, that he shulde forget youre worke and laboure of loue, which ye shewed in his name, whan ye mynistrd vnto the sayntes, and yet mynister. Yee and we desyre, that euery one of you shewe the same diligence, to the stablyshinge of hope euen vnto the ende, that ye faynte not, but folowe them which thorow faith and paciēce inheret the promyses. For whan God made promes to Abraham, because he had none greater to sweare by, ††† he sweare by himselfe, and sayde: Surely I wil blesse the and multiplye ꝑ in dede. And so he abode paciētly, and optayned the promes.

dauntly to shewe vnto the heyres of promes the stablenes of his counsell, added an oath  $\gamma$  by two immutable things (in the which it is vnpossible  $\gamma$  God shulde lye) we mighte haue a stronge consolacion: euen we, which are fled to holde fast the hope that is set before vs, which (hope) we haue as a sure and stedfast anker of oure soule. Which (hope) also entreth in, in to those things that are within  $\gamma$  vayle, whither the forerunner is for vs entred in, euē Iesus, which is made an hie prest for euer after  $\gamma$  order of Melchisedech.

The viij. Chapter.

THIS Melchisedech *kyng of Salem (which beyng prest of the most hie God, met Abraham as he returned agayne from the slaughter of the kynges, & blessed him, vnto whom Abraham also gaue tithes of all the goodes) first is by interpretacion kyng of righteousnes: after that is he kyng of Salem also (that is to saye, kyng of peace) without father, without mother, without kynne, and hath nether begynnyng of dayes, ner ende of life: but is likened vnto the sonne of God, and continueth a prest for euer.

But cōsider how greate a man this was, to whom the Patriarke Abraham gaue tithes of the spoyles. † And verely the children of Leui, when they receaue the presthode, haue a commaundement acordinge to the lawe, to take the tithes of the people, that is to saye, of their brethrē, though they also came out of the loynes of Abraham.

But he whose kynred is not counted amōge them, receaueth tithes of Abraham and blessed him that had the promes. Now is it so without all naysayenge, that the lesse receaueth blessinge of  $\gamma$  better. And here men that dye, receaue tithes. But there he receaueth tithes, of whom it is witnessed that he lyueth. And to saye the trueth, Leui himselfe also which receaueth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham: for he was yet in the loynes of his father Abraham, whan Melchisedech met him.

Yf now therfore perfection came by the presthode of the Leuites (for vnder the same (presthode) the people receaued the lawe) what neded it then furthummore, that another prest shulde ryse after the order of Melchisedech, and not after the order of Aaron?

‡ For yf the presthode be trāslated, the of necessite must the lawe be translated also. For he of whom these things are spoken is of another trybe, of the which neuer man serued at the altare.

For it is euidēt, § that oure LORDE ¶ spronge of the trybe of Iuda, to the which trybe Moses spake nothinge cōcernyng presthode, And it is yet a more euidēt thinge, yf after the symilitude of Melchisedech there aryse another prest, which is not made after  $\gamma$  lawe of the carnall commaundement, but after the power of the endlesse life (\* For he testifieth: Thou art a prest for euer after the order of Melchisedech) then the commaundement that wente before, is disanulled, because of his weaknesse, and vnprofitablenes. For the lawe made nothinge perfecte, but was an introduccion of a better hope, by  $\gamma$  which hope we drawe nye vnto God. And for this cause is it a better hope,  $\gamma$  it was not promysed without an oath. Those prestes were made without an oath, but this prest with an oath, by him that sayde vnto him: The LORDE sware, and wyl not repente: Thou art a prest for euer after the order of Melchisedech. Thus is Iesus become a stabliszher of so moch a better Testamēte.

And amonge them many were made prestes, because they were not suffred to endure by the reason of death. But this man, because that he endureth euer, hath an euerlasting presthode. Wherefore he is able also euer to saue them, that come vnto God by him: & lyueth euer, || to make intercession for vs.

For it became vs to haue soch an hie prest as is holy, innocent, vndefyled, separate from synners, and made hyer then heauen: which nedeth not daylie (§ as yonder hie prestes) to offere vp sacrifice first for his awne synnes, and then for the peoples synnes. For that dyd he once for all, whan he offered vp him selfe. ** For the lawe maketh men prestes which haue infirmitie: but the worde of the oath, that came sence the lawe, maketh the sonne prest, which is perfecte for euermore.

seate of maiestie in heauē: and is a mynister of holy thinges, and of the true Tabernacle, which God pitched, ⁊ not man. For euery hye prest is ordened to offre giftes and sacrifices: Wherefore it is of necessite, y this man haue somewhat also to offer. For he were not a prest, yf he were vpon earth, where are prestes y acordynge to the lawe offer giftes (which prestes serue vnto the ensample and shadowe of heauēly thinges, euen as the answer of God was geuen vnto Moses, whan he was aboute to fynish the Tabernacle: *Take hede (sayde he) that thou make all thinges accordinge to the patrone shewed the in the mount.) But now hath he optayned a more excellent office, in as moch as he is the mediatur of a better Testament, which was made for better promyses. For yf that first (Testament) had bene fautes, then shulde no place haue bene soughte for the secōde. For in rebukynge thē he sayeth: †Beholde, the dayes wyl come (sayeth the LORDE) that I wyl fynish vpō the house of Israel, and vpon the house off Iuda, a new Testament: not as the Testament which I made with their fathers, in that daye whan I toke them by the handes, to lede them out of the londe of Egipte: †for they contynued not in my Testament, and I regarded them not, sayeth the LORDE.

For this is the Testament, that I wil make with the house of Israell after those dayes, sayeth the LORDE. I wyl geue my lawes in their mynde, and in their hertes wyl I wryte them: §And I wil be their God, and they shal be my people: and they shal not teach euery mā his neyghboure, and euery man his brother, sayenge: knowe y LORDE, for they shal knowe me from the leest to the most of them: for I wil be mercifull ouer their vnrighteousnes: And on their synnes ⁊ on their iniquities wyl I not thynke eny more. In that he sayeth: A new, he weereth out y olde. Now y which is worne out and waxed olde, is ready to vanish awaye.

foretabernacle, wherin was y candilsticke, and the table, and the † shewe bred: and this is called y Holy. But beynde the seconde vayle was the Tabernacle which is called Holiest of all, which had the golden censor, and the ** Arke of the Testament ouerlaid rounde aboute with golde, wherin was the † golden pot with Manna, and Aarons rodd † that florished, and the tables of the Testament: Aboute therin were the Cherubins off glory ouersadowynge the Mercyseate: Of which thinges it is not now to speake particularly.

When these thinges were thus ordeyned, the prestes wente allwayes in to the first Tabernacle, and excuted y seruyce of God. §§ But in to the seconde wente the hye prest alone once in the yeaere, not without bloude, which he offred for himselfe and for the ignorance of the people. Wherwith the holy goost this signifyeth, that the ||| waye of holynes was not yet opened, whyle as yet the first Tabernacle was stoundynge. Which was a symilitude for the tyme then present, in the which were offred giftes and sacrifices, and coulde not make perfecte (as partaynyng to the conscience) him, that dyd the Gods seruyce onely with meates and drynkes, and dyuerse washinges, and iustifienges of the flesh, which were ordeyned vnto the tyme of reformation.

But Christ beynge an hye prest of good thinges to come, came by a greater and a more perfecte ¶ Tabernacle, not made with haudes, that is to saye, not of this maner buyldynge: nether by the bloude of goates or calues: *** but by his owne bloude entred he once for all in to the holy place, and hath founde eternall redempcion. For yff the bloude off oxen and off goates, ††† and the aszhes off the cowe whan it is sprenkled, haloweth the vnclane as touchynge the purification of the flesh, How moch more shal the bloude of Christ (which thorow the eternall sprete offred him selfe without spot vnto God) poure oure conscience from deed workes, ††† for to serue the lyuynge God? were vnder the first Testament) they which were called mighte receaue the promes of eternall inheritance. For where soeuer is a Testament, there must also be the death of him that maketh the testament.

* For a Testamēt taketh auctorite whan men are deed: for it is of no value, as longe as he that made it is aloue. For the which cause that first Testamēt also was not ordeyned without bloude. For whan all the commaundementes (acordinge to the lawe) were red of Moses vnto all the people, he toke y<sup>e</sup> bloude of calves and of goates, with water and purple wolle and ysope, and sprenkled the booke and all the people, sayenge: This is the bloude of the Testament, which God hath appoynted vnto you. And the Tabernakle and all the vessels of the Gods seruyce sprenkled he with bloude likewise. And almost all thinges are poured with bloude after the lawe: and without sheddynge of bloude is no remysion. It is necessary then, that the symilitude of heauenly thinges be purified with soche: but y<sup>e</sup> heauenly thinges them selues are purified with better sacrifices, then are those.

For Christ is not entred in to the holy places y<sup>e</sup> are made with handes (which are but symilitudes of true thinges) but in to the very heauen, for to appeare now before the face of God for vs: Not to offer himselfe oft<sup>r</sup> as the hye prest entreth in to the holy place euery yeare with straunge bloude: for the must he often haue suffred sence the worlde beganne. But now in the ende of the worlde hath he appeared once, to put synne to flight, by the offerynge vp of himselfe. And as it is appoynted vnto mē y<sup>e</sup> they shal once dye, and then cometh the iudgmēt: † Euē so Christ was once offred, to take awaye the synnes of many. And vnto them that loke for him, shal he appeare agayne without synne vnto saluacion.

The x. Chapter.

FOR the lawe y<sup>e</sup> which hath but the shadowe off good thinges to come, and not the thinges in their awne fashion, can neuer by the sacrifices which they offer yeare by yeare continually, make the commers there vnto perfecte: Els shulde they haue ceased to haue bene offred, because that the offerers once poured, shulde haue had nomore conscience of synnes. Neuertheles in those sacrifices there is made but a remembraunce of synnes euery yeare. ¶ For it is vnpossible y<sup>e</sup> the bloude of oxen and of goates shulde take awaye synnes. Wherefore whan he cometh in to the worlde, he sayeth: † Sacrifice & offerynge thou woldest not haue, but a body hast thou ordeyned me. Burntofferynges and synneofferynges hast thou not allowed. Then sayde I: Lo, I come. In the begynnyng of the booke it is wrytten of me, that I shulde do thy wyll O God. Aboue whā he had sayde: Sacrifice and offerynge, and burnt sacrifices & synneofferynges thou woldest not haue, nether hast allowed (which yet are offered after y<sup>e</sup> lawe). Thē sayde he: Lo, I come to do thy wil O God: there taketh he awaye the first, to stablysche the latter: In the which wyll we are sanctified by the offerynge vp of the body of Iesus Christ once for all.

And euery prest is ready daylie mynistringe, and oftymes offereth one maner of offerynges, which can neuer take awaye synnes. But this man whan he had offred for synnes, one sacrifice which is of value for euer, sat him downe on the righte hande of God, and from hence forth tarieth, ** tyll his foes be made his fote stole. For with one offerynge hath he made perfecte for euer, the that are sanctified. And the holy goost also beareth vs recorde of this, euen whan he sayde before: † This is the Testament, that I wyl make vnto them after those dayes, sayeth y<sup>e</sup> LORDE: I wyl geue my lawes in their hertes, and in their myndes wyl I wryte them, and their synnes and iniquities wyl I remēbre nomore. And where remysion of these thinges is, there is nomore offerynge for synne.

Seynge now brethrē, that we haue a † fre sure intrance in to that Holy place, by the bloude of Iesu (which he hath prepared vnto vs for a new and luyngge waye, thorow the vayle, that is to saye, by his flesh) and seyng also that we haue an hye prest ouer the house of God, let vs drawe nye with a true hert in a full fayth, sprenkled in oure hertes from an euell conscience, and washed in oure bodies with pure water: and let vs kepe the profession of oure hope without wauerynge (for he is faithfull that hath promysed) and let vs conside one another to y<sup>e</sup> prouokinge of loue and of good workes: and let vs not forsake the fellowship that we haue amōge oure selues, as the manner of some is: but let vs exhorte one another, and that so moch the more, because ye se that the daye draweth nye.

* For yf we synne wylfully after that we haue receaued the knowlege of the trueth, there remaineth vnto vs nomore sacrifice for synnes, but a fearfull lokinge for iudgement, and violent fyre, which shal deuoure y aduersaries. † He y despyseth Moses lawe, dyeth without mercy vnder two or thre witnesses: Of how moch sorer punyishment (suppose ye) shal he be counted worthy, which treadeth vnder fote the sonne of God, and coueteth the bloude of y Testamēt (wherby he is sanctified) an vnwholy thinge, & doth dishonoure to the sprete of grace? For we knowe him that hath sayde: † Vengeance is myne, I wil recompence, sayeth the LORDE. And agayne: § The LORDE shal iudge his people. It is a fearfull thinge to fall in to the handes of the lyuynge God.

But call ye to remēbraunce y dayes y are past, i y which after ye had receaued lighte, ye endured a greate fighte oſ aduersities: partly whyle all mē wōdred & gased at you for the shame and tribulacion that was done vnto you: and partly whyle ye became cōpanyons of them which so passed their tyme. For ye haue suffred with my bōdes, and toke a worth y spoylinge of youre goodes, and that with gladnes, knowynge in youre selues, how that ye haue in heauen a better & an enduringe substaunce. Cast not awaye therefore youre confidence, which hath so greate a rewarde. ¶ For ye haue nede of pacience, that after ye haue done the wil of God, ye mighte receaue the promes. ¶ For yet ouer a litle whyle, and then he that shal come, wyl come, and wyl not tary. ** But the iust shal lyue by his faith: And yf he withdrawe himselfe awaye, my soule shal haue no pleasure in him. As for vs, we are not of those which withdrawe them selues to damnacion: but of them that beleue to the wynnyng of the soule.

The xi. Chapter.

FAITH is a sure confidence of thinges which are hoped for, and a certaynte of thinges which are not sene. By it y Elders were well reported of. Thorow faith we vnderstonde, that the worlde and all the thinges which are sene, were made of naughte by the worde of God.

† By faith offered Abell vnto God a more plenteous sacrifice: by the which he optayned wytnesse, that he was righteous: God testifyenge of his giftes, by the which also he beynged deed, yet speaketh.

‡ By faith was Enoch takē awaye, that he shulde not se death: and was not founde, because God had taken him awaye. For afore he was taken awaye, he had recorde that he pleased God. But without faith it is vnpossible to please God. For he that commeth vnto God, must beleue that God is, & y he is a rewarder of them that seke him.

§ By faith Noe honoured God, after y he was warned of thinges which were not sene, & prepared the Arke, to y sauynge of his household: thorow the which Arke he condemned the worlde, and became heyre of the righteousness, which commeth by faith.

¶ By faith Abraham (whā he was called) obeyed, to go out in to the place, which he shulde afterwarde receaue to inheritance: and he wente out, not knowynge whither he shulde go.

By faith was he a straunger in the lōde of promes as in a straunge countre, & dwelt in tabernacles: and so dyd Isaac & Iacob, heyres with him of the same promes: for he looked for a cite which hath a foundation, whose buylder and maker is God.

By faith Sara also receaued strength to be with childe, and was delyuered of a childe whan she was past age, because she iudged him to be faithfull which had promysed. And therefore spronge there of one (ye euen off one which was as good as deed concernynge the body) so many in multitude ¶ as the starrs off the skye, and as the sonde off the See shore, which is innumerable.

All these dyed accordinge to faith, and receaued not the promyses, but sawe thē as farre off, and beleued them, and saluted them: ¶ and cōfessed, that they were straungers & pilgrims vpō earth. For they that saye soch thinges, declare, that they seke a naturall

By faith Abraham offered vp Isaac, whā he was tempted, and gaue ouer his onely begotten sonne, in whom he had receaued the promyses, of whom it was sayde: In Isaac shal thy sede be called: For he considered, y God was able to rayse vp agayne from the dead. Therefore receaued he him for an ensample.

By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau, concernynge thinges to come.

By faith Jacob, whan he was a dyenge, blessed both the sonnes off Ioseph, & bowed himselfe towarde the toppe of his cepter.

By faith Ioseph whan he dyed, remembred y departynge of the childrē of Israel, & gaue cōmaundemēt concernynge his bones.

By faith Moses whā he was borne, was hyd thre monethes of his Elders, because they sawe that he was a proper childe, nether feared they the kynges cōmaundemēt.

By faith Moses whan he was greates, refused to be called the sonne of Pharaos daughter: and chose rather to suffre aduersite with the people of God, then to enioye y pleasures of synne for a season: and esteemed the rebuke of Christ greater riches, then the treasure of Egipte: for he had respecte vnto the rewarde.

By faith he forsoke Egipte, and feared not the fiercenes of the kyng: for he endured, euē as though he had sene him which is inuisible.

By faith he helde Easter, and the effusion of bloude, lest he which slewe the firstborne, shulde touche them.

By faith they passed thorow the reed See as by drye londe: which whā the Egipcians assayed to do, they were drowned.

By faith the wallies of Iericho fell, whā they were compased aboute seven dayes.

By faith the harlot Raab perished not with the vnbeleuers, whā she had receaued the spyes to lodginge peaceably

And what shal I more saye? y tyme wolde be to shorte for me to tell of y Gedeon, off y Barac, and off y Samson, & off y Iephthae, & and off Daid, and y Samuel, and off the prophetes, which thorow faith subdued kyngdomes, wroughte righteousnes, optayned y promyses, stopped y mouthes off lyos y quenched the violēce of fyre, escaped y edge of the swerde, of weake were made stronge, became valeaunt in batayll, turned to flighte the armyes of the aleauntes, **the wemen receaued their deed agayne from resurrection. But other were racked, and accepted no delyuerance, that they mighte optayne the resurrection that better is.

Other taisted of mockinges and scourginges, of bondes also and prisonment: ††were stoned, were hewen a sunder, were tempted, were slayne with the swerde, ††wente aboute in shepe skynnes and goates skynnes, in nede, in tribulacion, in vexacion, which (men) the worlde was not worthy of: they wandred aboute in wyldernesses, vpon mountaynes, in dennes and caues of the earth. And these all thorow faith optayned good reporte, and receaued not y promes: because God had prouyd a better thinge for vs, that they without vs shulde not be made perfecte.

The Epistle of S. James.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

He exhortheth to reioyse in trouble, to be feruent in prayer with stedfast beleue, to loke for all good thinges from aboue, to forsake all vyce: and thankfully to receaue the worde of God, not onely hearynge it and speakyng of it, but to do thereafter in dede. True religion or deuocion what it is.

Chap. II.

He forbyddeth to haue eny respecte of personnes, but to regarde the poore as wel as the ryche, to be louyng and mercifull, and not to boast of faith where no dedes are: for it is but a deed faith, where no good workes folowe not.

Chap. III.

What good and euell commeth thorow the tonge. The dutye of such as be lerned. The difference betwixte the wysdome of the gospell and the wysdome of the worlde.

Chap. IIII.

Warre and fightyng commeth of voluptuousnesse. The frendshipe of the worlde is enemyte before God. An exhortacion to flye slaunder and the vanite of this life.

Chap. V.

He threateneth the wicked rych mē, exhortheth vnto pacience, to beware of swearyng, one to knowlege his fautes to another, one to praye for another, and one to laboure to bryng another to the trueth.

The first Chapter.

A JAMES the seruauant of God and of the LORDE Iesus Christ, sendeth gretinge to the xij. trybes which are *scattered here ⁊ there. My brethren, counte it exceedynge ioye whē ye fall in to diuers temptacions, for as moche as ye knowe, how ⁊ the ⁊ tryinge of youre faith bringeth pacience: and let pacience haue her perfect worke, ⁊ ye maye be perfecte and sounde, lakinge nothinge.

† Yf eny of you laeke wysdome, let him axe of God, which geueth to all men indifferentlye, and casteth no man in the teth: and it shal be geuē him. But let him axe in faith and wauer not. For he that douteth, is lyke the wawes of ⁊ See, tost of the wynde, and caried with violence. Nether let ⁊ man thinke that he shal receaue eny thinge of ⁊ LORDE. A wauerynge mynded mā ys vnstable in all his waies.

B Let the brother of lowe degre reioyce, in ⁊ he is exalted: and the rich, in ⁊ he is made lowe. For euē as the floure of ⁊ grasse shal he vanyshe awaye. The Sonne ryseth with heat and the grasse wydereth, ⁊ his floure falleth awaye, and the beautie of the fassion of it perissheth: euen so shal the ryche man perishe with his abundaunce.

Happy is the man that endureth in tēptacion, for when he is tryed, he shal receaue the crowne of life, which the LORDE hath promised to them that loue him.

Let no man saye when he is tempted, ⁊ he is tempted of God. For God tēpteth not vnto euell, nether tēpteth he eny man. But euery mā is tēpted, drawne awaye, ⁊ entysed of his awne cōcupiscēce. Thē whē lust hath conceaued, she bringeth forth synne, ⁊ synne when it is fynished, bringeth forth deeth.

Erre not my deare brethrē. § Euery good gifte, ⁊ euery parfait gift, is from aboue, and cōmeth downe from ⁊ father of light, with whom is no variableness, nether is he chaunged vnto darcknes. || Of his awne will begat he vs with the worde of life, that we shulde be the fyrst frutes of his creatures.

¶ Wherefore deare brethren, let euery man be swifte to heare, slowe to speake, and slowe to wrath. For the wrath of mā worketh not that which is righteous before God.

C Wherefore laye aparte all fylthines, all superfluite of maliciounes, ⁊ receaue with meknes ⁊ worde ⁊ is grafted in you, which is able to saue youre soules. ** And se that ye be doers of ⁊ worde ⁊ not hearers only, deceaunge youre awne selues. †† For yf eny heare the worde, and do it not, he is like vnto a mā that beholdeth his bodily face in a glasse. For assone as he hath lokod on himselfe, he goeth his waye, and forgetteth immediatly what his fasshion was. ‡ But who so loketh in ⁊ perfect lawe of libertie, and continueth therin (yf he be not a forgetfull hearer, but a doar of the worke) the same shalbe happie in his dede.

Yf eny man amonge you seme deuoute, ⁊ refrayne not his tōge: but deceaue his awne herte, this mannes deuocion is in vayne. Pure deuocion and vndefiled before God the father, is this: to visit the frendlesse and widdowes in their aduersite, and to kepe him selfe vnspotted of the § worlde.

The ij. Chapter.

BRETHREN, haue not the faith of oure A LORDE Iesus Christ ⁊ LORDE of glory in ||| respecte of persons. Yf ther come in to youre cōpany a mā with a goldē ryng and in goodly aparell, ⁊ ther come in also a poore man in vyle raymēt, ⁊ ye haue a respecte to him ⁊ weareth the gaye clothinge ⁊ saye vnto hi: Sit thou here i a good place, ⁊ saye vnto ⁊ poore, stonde thou there or sit here vnder my fote stole: are ye not parciall in youre selues, and haue iudged after euyll thoughtes?

Harken my deare beloued brethrē. ¶ Hath not God chosen the poore of this worlde, which are ryche in faith, and heyres of the kyngdom which he promysed to thē that loue him? But ye haue despised the poore. Are not the ryche they which oppresse you: ⁊ they which drawe you before iudges? Do not they speake euell of that good name after which ye be named.

B Yf ye fulfill the royall lawe acordinge to the scripture which saith: ¶ Thou shalt loue thyne neighbour as thy selfe, ye do well. But yf ye regarde one person more then another, ye cōmit synne, and are rebuked of the lawe as trāsgressours. *** Whosoeuer shal kepe the whole lawe, and yet fayle in one poynt, he is gyltie in all. For he that sayde: Thou shalt not commit adulterie, sayed also: thou shalt not kyll. Though thou do none adul-terie, yet yf thou kill, thou art a transgressor of the lawe. So speake ye, and so do as they that shalbe iudged by the lawe of libertie. *For ther shalbe iudgement merciles to him that sheweth no mercy, & mercy reioiseth against iudgment.

† What a wayleth it my brethrē, though a man saye he hath faith, when he hath no dedes? Can faith saue him? † If a brother or a sister be naked or destitute of daily fode, & one of you saye vnto them: Departe in peace, God sende you warmnes and fode: not withstōdinge ye geue them not tho thinges which are nedfull to the body: what helpeth it them? Euen so faith, yf it haue no dedes, is deed in it selfe.

C Ye & a man might saye: Thou hast faith, and I haue dedes: Shewe me thy faith by thy dedes: and I wil shewe the my faith by my dedes. Beleuest thou yf ther is one God? Thou doest well. § The deuils also beleue and tremble.

Wilt thou vnderstōde o thou vayne man that faith with out dedes is deed: Was not Abraham oure father iustified thorow workes when he offered Isaac his sonne vpon the aulter? Thou seist how yf faith wrought with his dedes, and through yf dedes was the faith made perfect: & the scripture was fulfilled which saith: ¶ Abraham beleued God and it was reputed vnto him for rightewesnes: and he was called yf frende of God. Ye se then how that of dedes a man is iustified, and not of faith only. ¶ Likewise also was not Raab the harlot iustified thorow workes, when she receaued the messengers, and sent them out another waye? For as the body, with oute the sprete is deed, euen so faith with out dedes is deed.

The iij. Chapter

A MY brethrē, be not euery man a **master, remēbrynge how that we shall receaue the more damnacion: for in many thinges we synne all. *Yf a man synne not in worde, the same is a perfecte man, & able to tame all the body. Beholde, we put bittes into the horses mouthes yf they shulde obeye vs, and we turne aboute all the body. Beholde also yf shyppes, which though they be so gret, and are dryuen of feare windes, yet are they turned about with a very smale helme, wither soeuer the violence of the gouerner wyll. Euen so the tōge is a lyttell member, and bosteth great thinges.

Beholde how gret a thinge a lyttell fyre B kyndleth, and the tonge is fyre, and a worlde of wyckednes. So is the tonge set amonge oure membres, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth a fyre all that we haue of nature, and is it selfe set a fyre euen of hell.

All the natures of beastes, and of byrdes, and of serpentis, and thinges of the see, are meked and tamed of the nature of mā. But the tōge can no man tame. Yt is an vruely euell full of deedly poyson. Therwith blesse we God the father, and therwith curse we men which †† are made after the similitude of God. Out of one mouth procedeth blessinge and cursyng. My brethrē these thinges ought not so to be. Doth a fountayne sende forth at one place swete water and bytter also? Can the fygge tree, my Brethren, beare oliue beries: ether a vyne beare fygges? So can no fountayne geue bothe salt water and freshe also. If eny man be wyse and endued with learnynge amonge you, let him shewe the C workes of his good cōuersacion in meknes that is coupled with wiszdome.

But yf ye haue bitter enuyenge and stryfe in youre hertes, reioyce not: nether be lyars agaynst the trueth. This wiszdome descendeth not from aboue: but is erthy, and naturall, and dyuelishe. For where enuyenge and stryfe is, there is vnstabilenes and all māner of euell workes. But the wiszdome that is frō aboue, is fyrst pure, thē peasable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good frutes, without iudgyng, and without simulation: yee, and the frute of rightewesnes is sownen in peace, of thē that mayntene peace.

The iij. Chapter.

A FROM whence commeth warre and fightynge amonge you: come they not here hence? euen of youre voluptuousnes that rayne in youre mēbres? Ye lust, and haue not. Ye envie and haue indignacion, and can not obtayne. Ye fight & warre, and haue not, because ye axe not. Ye axe & receaue not because ye axe amysse: euē to cōsume it vpō youre voluptuousnes. Ye adnouterars, & wemē that breke matrimonie: knowe ye not †† how that the frenshepe of yf worlde is ennimite to godwarde? Whosoeuer wilbe a frende of the worlde, is made y<sup>e</sup> enemie of god. Ether do ye thinke y<sup>e</sup> the scripture sayth in vayne. The *sprete y<sup>e</sup> dwelleth in you, lusteth euen contrary to enuie: but geueth more grace.

Submit your selues to God, and † resist the deuell, & he wil flye frō you. Drawe nye to God & he wil drawe nye to you. Clense youre hondes ye synners, and poure youre hertes ye wauerynge mynded. Suffre afflictions: sorowe ye and wepe. Let youre laughter be turned to mornyng, and youre ioye to heynynes. † Cast downe youre selues before the LORDE, and he shal lift you vp. Backbyte not one another, brethren. He that backbyteth his brother, and he y<sup>e</sup> iudgeth his brother, backbyteth the lawe, and iudgeth the lawe. But and yf thou iudge the lawe, thou art not an obseruer of the lawe: but a iudge. There is one lawe geuer, which is able to saue and to destroye. † What art thou that iudget another man?

§ Go to now ye that saye: to daye & to morow let vs go into soche a citie and continue there a yeaere, and bye and sell, and wyne: & yet cā not tell what shal happē to morowe. For what thinge is youre life? It is euen a vapoure that apereth for a lytell tyme, and thē vanysheth awaye: For that ye ought to say: † yf the LORDE wil, and yf we liue, let vs do this or that. But now ye reioyce in youre bostinges. All soche reioysynge is euell. Therefore † to him that knoweth how to do good, and doth it not, to him it is synne.

The b. Chapter.

¶ GOO to now ye riche men. Wepe, and howle on youre wretchednes<sup>a</sup> that shal come vpon you. Your riches is corrupte, youre garmetes are motheaten. Your golde & youre siluer are cancred, & the rust of them shalbe a witnes vnto you, & shal eate youre fleszhe, as it were fyre. Ye haue heaped treasure toggeder in youre last dayes: ** Beholde, the hyre of the labourers which haue reped downe youre felde (which hyer is of you kept backe by fraude) cryeth: and the cryes of thē which haue reped, are entred in to the eares of the LORDE Sabaoth. Ye haue liued in pleasure<sup>c</sup> on the earth and in wantannes. Ye haue noryszhed youre hertes, as in a daye of slaughter. Ye haue cōdemped and haue killed the iust, and he hath not resisted you.

Be pacient therefore brethren, vnto the cōmyng of the LORDE. Beholde, the huszbade man wayteth for the precious frute of y<sup>e</sup> earth, and hath longe pacience there vpon, vntill he receaue the erly and the latter rayne. Be ye also pacient therefore, and settle youre hertes, for the commyng of the LORDE draweth nye. Grodge not one agaynst another brethren, lest ye be damned. Beholde, the iudge stondesth before the dore. Take (my brethren) the prophetes for an ensample of sufferynge aduersitie, and of longe pacience, which spake in the name of the LORDE. Beholde we counte them happy which endure. Ye haue hearde † of y<sup>e</sup> paciēce of Iob, and haue known what ende the LORDE made. For the LORDE is very pitifull and mercifull.

But aboue all thinges my brethrē, swear not, nether by heauē, nether by earth, nether by eny other othe. Let youre ye be ye, and youre naye naye: lest ye faule in to ypocricy. Yf eny of you be euell vexed, let hi praye. Yf eny of you be mery, let him singe Psalmes. Yf eny be diseased amonge you, let him call for the elders of the congregacion, & let thē praye ouer him, and anoynte him with oyle in the name of the LORDE: and y<sup>e</sup> prayer of faith shal saue the sicke, and the LORDE shal rayse him vp: and yf he haue cōmitted synnes, they shalbe forgeuen him.

Knowlege youre fautes one to another: and praye one for another, that ye maye be healed. The prayer of a righteous man auayleth moche, yf it be seruēt. † Helias was a mā mortall euen as we are, and he prayed in his prayer, that it might not rayne: & it rayned not on the earth by the space of thre yeaeres and sixe monethes. § And he prayed agayne, and y<sup>e</sup> heauē gaue rayne, & y<sup>e</sup> earth brought forth her frute.

Brethren, yf eny of you erre frō the trueth and another conuert him, let y<sup>e</sup> same knowe that he which conuerted the synner from goynge astraye out off his waye, shal saue a soule frō death, and shal hyde the multitude of synnes.

The Epistle of S. Jude.

The summe of this epistle.

He rebuketh such as beyng blynded with their owne lustes, resist the trueth, & that we maye knowe them the better, he sayeth they be such as synne beastly agaynst nature, and despise rulers &c. He exhorteth vs to edifie one another, to praye in the holy goost, to continue in loue, to loke for the cōmyng of the LORDE, and one to helpe another out of the fyre.

IUDAS the seruauit of Iesus Christ, the brother off Iames. To thē which are called, and sanctified in God the father, and preserued in Iesu Christ. Mercy vnto you, and peace and loue be multiplied.

Beloued, when I gaue all diligence to wryte vnto you of the commen saluacion: it was nedefull for me to wryte vnto you, to exhorte you, that ye shulde continually laboure in the faith which was once geuē vnto the sayntes. * For there are certayne craftely crept in, of which it was wrytten afore tyme vnto soche iudgement. They are vngodly, and turne the grace of oure God vnto wantānes, and denye God the onely LORDE, and oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

My minde is therfore to put you in remēbraunce, for as moche as ye once knowe this, how that ŷ LORDE (after that he had deliuered the people out of Egypt) destroyed them which afterwarde beleued not.<sup>a</sup> † The angels also which kept not their first estate: but lefte their awne habitacion, he hath reserued in euerlastinge chaynes vnder darcknes vnto the iudgement of the greate daye: euen as † Sodom and Gomor, and the cities aboute them (which in lyke maner defiled them selues with fornicacion and folowed straunge fleszhe) are set forth for an ensample, and suffre the vengeance of eternall fyre. Lykewyse these dremers defyle the fleszhe, despyse rulers, and speake euell of them that are in auctorite.

‡ Yet Michael the archangell when he stroue agaynst the deuell, & disputed aboute the body of Moses, durst not geue raylinge sentence, but sayde: the LORDE rebuke the. ¶ But these speake euell off those thinges which they knowe not: and what thinges they knowe naturally, as beastes which are without reason, in tho thinges they corrupte them selues. <sup>a</sup> Wo be vnto thē, for they haue folowed the waye of Cain, and are vtterly geuē to the erreure of Balaam for lukers sake, and peryszhe in the treason of Core.

These are spottes which of youre kindnes feast togedder, without feare, fedyng the selues. <sup>c</sup> Cloudes they are withouten water, caried about of wyndes, and trees without frute at gadringe tyme, twyse deed and plucked vp by the rotes. They are the ragynge waues of the see, fominge out their awne shame. They are wandryng starres, to whō is reserued the myst of darcknes for euer.

† Enoch the seuenth from Adam prophedied before of suche, saienge: Beholde, the LORDE shal come with thousandes of sayntes, to geue iudgemēt agaynst all men, and to rebuke all that are vngodly amonge thē, of all their vngodly dedes, which they haue vngodly committed, and of all their cruell speakynges, which vngodly synners haue spoken agaynst him.

These are murmurers, complainers, walkynge after their awne lustes, whose mouthes speake proude thynges. They haue mē in greate reuerence because of avauntage. But ye beloued, remēber the wordes which were spoken before of the Apostles of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, how that they tolde you ŷ their shulde be begylers in the last tyme,<sup>d</sup> which shulde walke after their awne vngodly lustes. These are makers off sectes fleshlie, hauynge no sprete.

But ye derlye beloued, edifye youre selues in youre most holy faith, prayenge in the holy goost, and kepe youre selues in the loue of God, lokinge for the mercy of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, vnto eternall life. And haue cōpassion on some, separatinge thē: and other saue with feare, pullinge them out of the fyre, and hate the fylthy vesture of the fleshe.

Vnto him that is able to kepe you, that ye faule not, and to present you faultlesse before ŷ presence of his glory with ioye, ŷ is to save, to God oure saueoure which only is wyse, be glory, maestie, dominion, & power, now and for euer. Amen.

The first Chapter.

THE reuelacion of Iesus Christ, which God gaue vnto him, for to shewe vnto his seruauētes thiges which muste shortly come to passe. And he sent and shewed by his angel vnto his seruauent Ihon *which bare recorde of the worde of God, and of the testimony of Iesu Christe, and of all thinges that he sawe. †Happy is he ‡ that readeth, and they that heare the wordes of the prophesy and kepe thoo thinges which are wrytten therein. For the tyme is at honde.

Beholde, he cometh with cloudes, and all eyes shall se him: § they also which peersed him. And all kinredes of the earth shal wayle. Euen so. Amen. I am Alpha and Omega, the begynninge and the endinge, ¶ sayeth † LORDE almighty, which is and which was and which is to come.

I Ihon youre brother and cōpanyon in tribulacion, and in the kyngdome and paciēce which is in Iesu Christe, was in the yle of Pathmos for the worde of God, and for † witnessynge of Iesu Christe. I was in the sprete on a sondaye, and herde behynde me, a gret voyce, as it had bene of a trompe, sayenge: I am Alpha and Omega, the fyrst and † laste. That thou seist, write in a boke, and sende it vnto the cōgregacions which are in Asia, vnto Ephesus and vnto Smyrna, and vnto Pargamos, and vnto Thiatira, and vnto Sardis, and vnto Philadelphia, and vnto Laodicia.

And I turned backe to se the voyce that spake to me. And whē I was turned: I sawe seuē goldē candelstyckes, and in the myddes of the candelstyckes, one like vnto the sonne of man clothed with a lynnin garmēt downe to the ground, and gyrd aboute the brest with a golden gyrdle. His heed, and his heares were whyte, as whyte woll, & as snowe: † and his eyes were as a flamme of fyre: and his fete like vnto brasse, as though they brēt in a fornace: and his voyce as the sounde of many waters. And he had in his right honde seuē starres. ** And out of his mouth went a sharpe two edged swerde. And his † face shone euen as the sonne in his strength.

And when I sawe him, I fell at his fete, euen as deed. And he layde his right honde vpon me, sayenge vnto me: feare not. I am

The seuen starres are the angels of the seue⁹ congregacions: And the seuen candelstyckes which thou sawest, are the seuen congregacions.

The ij. Chapter.

VNTO the angell of the congregacion of Ephesus wryte: These thinges sayth he that holdeth the seuen starres in his right honde, and walketh in the myddes of the seuen goldē candelstickes: I knowe thy workes, and thy labour, and thy pacience, ⁊ howe thou cannest not forbearē them which are euell: and examinest them which saye they are Apostles, and are not: ⁊ hast founde thē lyars and hast suffred. And hast paciēce: and for my names sake hast laboured and hast not faynted. Neuerthelesse I haue somewhat agaynst the, for thou hast lefte thy fyrst loue. Remember therfore frō whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the fyrst workes. † Or elles I wyl come vnto the shortly, and wil remoue thy cādelstycke out of his place, excepte thou repent. But this thou hast because thou hatest ⁊ dedes of the † Nicolaitans, which dedes I also hate. Let him ⁊ hath eares, heare, what ⁊ sprete saith vnto the congregacions. To him that ouercommeth, will I ⁊ geue to eate of the tree of life, which is in the myddes of ⁊ paradise of God.

B And vnto the angell of the congregacion of Smyrna wryte: These thinges saith he that is fyrst, and the last, which was deed, and is alīue: I knowe thy workes and tribulacion and pouerte, but thou art ryche: And I knowe the blasphemy of them which call them selues Iewes and are not: but are the cōgregacion of Sathan. Feare none of tho thinges which thou shalt soffre. Beholde, ⁊ deuell shal cast of you in to preson, to tempte you, and ye shal haue tribulacion x. dayes. Be faithfull vnto the deeth, and I wil geue ⁊ a crowne of life. Let him that hath eares, heare, what the sprete saith to the congregacions: He that ouer cōmeth, shal not be hurte of the seconde deeth.

And to the angell of the congregacion in Pergamos wryte: This sayth he which ⁊ hath the sharpe swerde with two edges: I knowe thy workes, and where thou dwellest, euen where Sathans seat is, and thou kepest my name, ⁊ hast not denyed my faith. And in my dayes Antipas was a faithfull wīnes of myne, which was slayne amonge you, where Sathan dwelleth. But I haue a fewe thinges agaynst the: that thou hast there, thē that mayntayne the doctryne of ** Balaam, which taught in Balak, to put occasion of syn before the children of Israell, that they shulde eate of meate dedicat vnto ydoles, and to commyt fornicacion. Euen so hast thou them that mayntayne ⁊ doctryne of the Nicolaytans, which thinge I hate. But be cōuerted, or elles I wil come vnto the shortly, and wil fight agaynste thē with the swerde of my mouth. And vnto the angell of the cōgregacion of Theaira write: This saith the sonne of God, “which hath his eyes lyke vnto a flame of fyre, whose fete are like brasse: I knowe thy workes and thy loue, seruice, and faith and thy pacience, and thy dedes, which are mo at the last then at the fyrste. I was in the sprete: ⁊ beholde, a seate was set in heauen, and one sat on the seate. And he that sat, was to loke vpon like vnto a iasper stone, and a sardyne stone: And there was a rayne bowe aboute the seate, in syght like to a smaragde. * And aboute the seate were xxiiij. seates. And vpon the seates xxiiij. elders syttinge clothed in whyte rayment, and had on their heades crownes of golde.

33 And out of ʒ seate proceded lightnynges, and thundrynges, ⁊ voyces, and there wer seuen lāpes of fyre, burninge before the seate, which are the seuen spretes of God. And before the seate there was a see of glasse like vnto crystall, and in the mydes off the seate, and rounde aboute the seate, were foure beastes full of eyes before and behynde. And the first beest was like a lion, the seconde beest like a calfe, and the thyrde beest had a face as a man and the fourth beest was like a flyenge egle. And the foure beestes had eche one off them vj. wynges aboute him, and they were full of eyes with in. And they had no rest daye nether night, sayenge: † holy, holy, holy, is the LORDE God almyghty, which was, and is, and is to come.

And when those beestes gaue glory and honour and thanks to him that sat on the seate, which lyueth for euer and euer: ʒ xxiiij. elders fell downe before him that sat on the trone, and worshipped him ʒ lyueth for euer, and cast their crounes before ʒ trone, sayenge: thou art worthy LORDE to receaue glory, and honour, and power, for thou hast created all thinges, and for thy willes sake they are, and were created.

The v. Chapter.

34 AND I sawe in the righte hōde of him, ⁊ that sat in the trone, a boke wrytten with in ⁊ on the backside, sealed with seuē seales. And I sawe a strōge angell preachinge with a loude voyce: Who is worthy to open the boke, and to loose the seales therof? And no mā in heauē ner in earth, nether vnder ʒ earth, was able to opē ʒ boke, nether to lōke thereon. And I wepte moch, because no man was founde worthy to open and to rede the boke, nether to lōke thereon.

And one of the elders sayde vnto me: wepe not: § Beholde, the lyon which is off the trybe of Iuda, ʒ rote of Dauid, hath obtayned to opē the boke, and to lowse the seuē seales therof. And I behelde, ⁊ lo, in the myddes of the seate, and of ʒ foure beastes, and in the myddes of ʒ elders, stode a lambe as though he had bene kylled, which had seuen hornes and seuē eyes, which are the seuē spretes of God, sent in to all the worlde. And he came and toke the boke out of the right hōde of him that sat vpon the seate.

35 And when he had taken the boke, the foure beestes and the xxiiij. elders fell downe before the lambe, hauinge harpes and golden vialles full of odoures (which are ʒ prayers of the sayntes) and they songe a newe songe saynge: thou art worthy to take the boke ⁊ to opē the seales therof: for thou wast kylled, and hast redemed vs by thy bloud, out of all kynredes, and tōges, and people, and nacions, ⁊ hast made vs vnto oure God, kynges and prestes, and we shal raygne on ʒ earth.

¶ And I behelde, and I herd the voyce of many angilles aboute the trone, and aboute the beestes and ʒ elders, and I herde thousandes sayenge with a loude voyce: Worthy is the lambe that was killed, to receaue power, and riches ⁊ wisdom, and strength, and honour and glory, and blessinge. And all creatures, which are in heauē, ⁊ on the earth, ⁊ vnder the earth, ⁊ in the see, ⁊ all ʒ are in thē, herd I sayenge: blessinge, honour, glory, ⁊ power, be vnto him, ʒ sytteth vpō the seate, and vnto the lābe for euermore. And when he opened the thyrd seale, I herde the thyrd beeste saye: come & se. And I behelde, and lo, a blacke horse: and he that sate on him, had a payre of balances in his honde. And I herde a voyce in the myddes of the foure beastes saye: a measure of whete for a peny, and thre measures of barley for a peny: and oyle and wyne se thou hurte not.

And when he opened the fourth seale, I herde the voyce of the fourth beeste saye: come and se. And I looked, and behelde a pale horse, and his name that sat on him was deeth, and hell folowed after him, & power was geue vnto them ouer the fourth parte of the earth, to kyll with swerde, and with hunger, and with deeth, of the vermen of the earth.

And when he opened the fyfte seale, I sawe vnder the aultre, the soules of them that were kyllid for the worde of God, and for testimony which they had, and they cryed with a lowde voyce sayenge: How longe tariest thou *LORDE holy and true, to iudge & to auenge oure bloude on them that dwell on the earth? AND after that sawe I foure angels holdinge y foure wyndes of y earth, y y wyndes shulde not blowe on y earth, nether on y see, nether on eny tree. And I sawe another angel ascende fro the rysinge of the sonne: which had the seale of y lyuinge God and he cryed with a loude voyce to the foure angelles (to whom power was geuen to hurt the earth and the see) sayenge: y Hurt not the earth nether the see, nether the trees, till we haue sealed the seruantes of oure God in their forheddes.

And I herde the nombre of them which were sealed, and there were sealed an c. and xliij. M. of all the trybes of the children of Israell. Of y trybe of Iuda were sealed xij. M. ## The viij. Chaptr.

AND when he had opened the senenth seale, there was silēce in heauen aboute the space of halfe an houre. And I sawe seuē angels stondinge before God, and to them were geuen seven trompettes. And another angell cam and stode before the aultre, hauyng a golden senser, and moch of odoures was geuen vnto him, that he shulde offre of the prayers of all sayntes vpon the golden aultre, which was before the seate. <sup>a</sup> And the smoke of the odoures which came of the prayers of all sayntes, ascended vppe before God out of the angelles honde. And the angell toke the senser, and fylled it with fyre of the aultre, and caste it into the earth, and voyces were made, and thōdrynges and lightuynge, and earthquake.

B And the seven angels which had the seven trompettes, prepared them selues to blowe. The first angel blew, and there was made hayle and fyre, which were myngled with bloud, and they were cast in to the earth: and the thyrd parte of trees was burnt, and all grene grasse was brent. And the seconde angell blew: and as it were a greате mountayne burnyng with fyre was cast in to the see, and the thyrd parte of the see turned to bloud, and the thyrd parte of the creatures which had life, dyed, and the thyrd part of shippes were destroyed.

C And the thyrd angell blew, and there fell a greате starre from heauen, burnyng as it were a lampe, and it fell in to the thyrd parte of the ryuers, and in to fountaynes of waters, and the name of the starre is called Wormwod. And the thyrd parte of the waters was turned to Wormwod. And many men dyed of the waters, because they were made bytter. And the fourth angel blew, and the thyrd parte of y Sonne was smytten, and y thyrd parte of the mone, and the thyrd parte of starres: so that the thyrd parte of them was darked. And the daye was smyttē, that the thyrd parte of it shulde not shyne, and lyke wyse the nyght. And I behelde, and herde an angel flyenge thorowe the myddes of heauē, and sayēge with a lowde voyce: Wo, wo, wo to the inhabitants of the earth, because of the voyces to come of the trompe of the thre angels which were yet to blowe.

The ix. Chaptr.

AND the fyfte angell blew, and I sawe a starre fall from heauē vnto y earth. And to him was genē the kaye of the bottomlesse pytt. And he opened the bottomlesse pytt, and there arose the smoke of a greате forname. And the sunne and y ayer were darkned by the reason of the smoke of the pytt. And there came out of the smoke locustes vpon the earth: and vnto thē was geuen power as the scorpions of the earth haue power. And it was sayde vnto them, that they shulde not hurt the grasse of the earth: nether eny grene thinge: nether eny tre: but onely those men which haue not the seale in their forehedges, and to them was cōmaunded, that they shulde not kyll thē, but that they shulde be vexed fyue monethes, and their payne was as the payne that cōmeth of a scorpion, when he hath stonge a man. And in those dayes shal mē seke deeth, and shal not fynde it: and shal desyre to dye, and death shal flye from them.

And the similitude of the locustes was lyke vnto horses prepared vnto battayll, and on their heades were as it were crownes, lyke vnto golde: and their faces were as it had bene the faces of men. And they had here as the heere of women. And their tethe were as the tethe of lyons. And they had habbergions, as it were habbergions of yron. And the sounde of their wynges, was as y sounde of charettes whē many horssees runne together to battayle. And they had tayles lyke vnto scorpions, and there were stynges in their tayles. And their power was to hurt mē fyue monethes. And they had a kinge ouer them, which is the angel of the bottomlesse pyt, whose name in the hebrew tonge, is Abaddon:

And fy foure angels were lowsed, which were prepared for an houre, for a daye, for a moneth, and for a yeaere, for to slee the thyrd parte of men. And the nombre of horsmen of warre, were twenty tymes x M. And I herde fy nombre of them. And thus I sawe the horses in a vision, and them that sat on the bauynge fyry habbergions of a yalowe and brymstony coloure, and the heades of fy horses werre as the heades of Lyons. And out of their mouthes went forth fyre, and smoke, and brymstone. Also they repented not of their murthur, and of their witchcraft, nether of their whordome, nether of their theftē.

The i. Chapter.

AND I sawe another mightye angell come doune frō heauen, clothed with a cloude, and the rayne bowe vpon his heed. And his face as it were fy Sonne, and his fete as it were pyllars of fyre: and he had in his honde a lytell boke opyn: and he put his right fote vpon fy see, and his lifte fote on fy earth. And cryed with a lowde voyce, as when a lyon roreth. And when he had cryed, seue thondres spake their voyces. And when the seue thōdres had spokē their voyces, I was aboute to wryte. And I herde a voyce from heauen sayenge vnto me: seale vp those wrytes which the seuen thondres spake, and wryte them not.

the see, and vpon the earth, lifte vpe his honde to heauen, and swore by him that liueth for euernore, which created heauen, and the thinges that there in are, and fy see, and the thinges which are therein: that there shalbe nomore tyme: but in the dayes of the voyce of the seueñ angel, when he shal begynne to blowe, the mistery of God shalbe fynishzed, as he preached by his seruantes the prophetes.

And the voyce which I herde from heauē, B spake vnto me agayne, and sayde: go and take the lytle boke which is open in the honde of the angel, which stondest vpō the see, and vpon the earth. And I went vnto the angel, and sayde vnto him: geue me the lytle boke. And he sayde vnto me: *Take it, and eate it vp, and it shal make thy belly bytter, but it shalbe in thy mouth as swete as hony. And I toke the lytle boke out of his honde, and ate it vp, and it was in my mouth as swete as hony, and as sone as I had eaten it, my belly was bytter. And he sayde vnto me: thou muste prophesy agayne vnto the people, and to the Heythen, and tonges, and to many kynges.

The xi. Chapter.

AND there was geuen me a rede lyke A vnto a rodd, and it was sayde vnto me: Ryse and mete the tēple of God, and the aultre, and them that worshippe therein: and the quyre which is within the temple, cast out, and mete it not: for it is geuen vnto the Gentyles, and fy holy cite shal they treade vnderfote xliij. monethes. And I wil geue power vnto my two wytnesses, and they shal prophesy M. ij. c. and lx. dayes clothed in sacke cloth. <sup>a</sup> These are two olyue trees, and two candelstyckes, stondinge before the God of the earth.

And some of the people and kynredes, and tonges, ⁊ of the naciōs, shal se their bodies, thre dayes, and an halfe, and shal not suffre their bodies to be put in graues. And they that dwell vpō the earth, shal reioyce ouer them and be glad, and shal send giftes one to another: for these two prophetes vexed them that dwelt on the earth.

* And after thre dayes and an halfe the sprete of life from God, entred in to them. And they stode vp vpon their fete: ⁊ †greate feare came vpon them which sawe them. AND the seuenth angel blewē, and ther were made greate voyces in heauen, saye: the kyngdoms of this worlde are oure LORDES and his Christes, and he shal reigne for euermore. And the foure and twenty Elders, which sat before God on their seatts, fell vpon their faces, and worshipped God sayenge: we geue the thankes LORDE God allmyghte: which art and wast, and art to come, for thou hast receaued thy greate night, and hast raygned. And the Heythen were angry, ⁊ thy wrath is come, and the tyme of the deed that they shulde be iudged, and that thou shuldest geue rewarde vnto thy seruaites the prophettes and saynctes, and to thē that feare thy name, small ⁊ greate: and shuldest destroye them which destroye the earth. And the temple of God was opened in heauen, and there was sene in his temple the arke of his testament: and there folowed lightnynges, and voyces, and thondrynges and earth quake, and a greate hayle.

And there appeared a greate token in heauen. A woman clothed with the Sonne, and the mone vnder her fete, and vpon her heed a crowne of twolue starres. And she was with childe, and cryed trauaillinge in byrth, and payned redy to be deluyered. And there appeared another token in heauen, and beholde a greate reed dragon, hauinge seuē heades, and ten hornes and seuē crownes vpō his heades: and his tayle drue the thyrde parte of the starres, and cast them to the earth.

And the dragon stode before the womā, which was ready to be deluyered: for to deuoure ner childe as sone as it were borne. And she brought forth a man childe, which shulde rule all naciōs with a rod of yron. And her sonne was taken vp vnto God, and to his seate. † And the woman fled in to wyldernes, where she had a place prepared off God, that they shulde fede her there a M. ij. C. and lx. dayes.

And there was a greate batayll in heauē. Michael and his angels foughte with the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels, and preuayled not, nether was their place founde eny more in heauen. And the greate dragon that olde serpent (called the deuell and Sathanas) was cast out. Which disceaued all the worlde. † And he was cast in to the earth, and his angelles were cast out with him also.

And I harde a lowde voyce, which sayde in heauen: Now is saluacion, and strength and the kyngdome become oure Gods, and ꝑ power his Christes: For he is cast downe, which accused them before God daye and night. And they ouercame him by the bloude of the lambe, and by the worde of their testimony, and they loued not their lyues vnto the deeth. Therefore reioyce ye heauens, and ye that dwell in them. Wo to the inhabitors of the earth, and of the see: for the deuell is come downe vnto you, which hath greate wrath, because he knoweth, that he hath but a short tyme.

And when the dragon sawe, that he was cast vnto the earth, he persecuted the woman, which brought forth the man childe. And to the woman were geuē two wynges of a greate egle ⁊ that she might flye in to the wyldernes, in to her place, where she is noryszhed

The riiij. Chapter.

AND I sawe a beest rise out of the see, hauinge seven heades, and x. hornes, and vpon his hornes x. crownes, and vpō his heed, the names of blasphemie. <sup>b</sup>And the beest which I sawe was lyke a catt of the mountayne, and his fete were as the fete of a bear, <sup>c</sup>and his mouth as the mouthe of a lyon. And ſy dragō gaue him his power and his seate, and greate auctorite: and I sawe one of his heades as it were wounded to death, and his dedly wounde was healed. And all the worlde wōdred at the beest, and they worshipped the dragon which gaue power vnto the beest, and they worshipped the beest, sayenge: who is like vnto the beest? who is able to warre with him?

And there was geuen vnto him a mouth to speake greate thinges ⁊ blasphemies, and power was geuen vnto him, to do xliij. monethes. And he opened his mouth vnto blasphemy agaynst God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle and them that dwell in heauen. <sup>d</sup>And it was geuen vnto him to make warre with the sayntes, and to ouercome them. And power was geuen him ouer all kynred, tonge, and nacion: <sup>e</sup>and all that dwell vpon the earth worship him: whose names are not wrytten in the boke of life of the lambe, which was kylled from the beginnyng of the worlde. And I behelde another beest comynge vp out of the earth, and he had two hornes like a lambe, and he spake as dyd the dragō. And he dyd all that the first beest coule do in his presence, and he caused the earth, and them which dwell therin, to worshippe the fyrst beest, whose deedly wōde was healed. <sup>h</sup>And he dyd greate wonders, so that he made fyre come downe from heauē in the sight of men. And deceaued them that dwelt on the earth by ſy meanes of those signes which he had power to do in the sight of the beest, sayenge to them that dwelt on the earth: that they shulde make an ymage vnto the beest, which had the wounde of a swerde and dyd liue.

And he had power to geue a sprete vnto the ymage of the beest, and that the ymage of the beest shulde speake, and shulde cause, that as many as wolde not worshippe the ymage of the beest, shulde be kylled. And he made all bothe smale and greate, ryche and poore, fre and bond, to receaue a marke in their right hondes, or in their forheades. And that no man might by or sell, saue he ſy had ſy marke, or the name of the beest, ether the nombre of his name. Here is wiszdome. Let him that hath wyt, count the nombre of the beest. For it is the nombre of a man, and his nombre is sixe hundred, thre score and sixe.

And I herde a voyce from heauen, as the sounde of many waters, and as the voyce of a greate thondre. And the voyce that I herde, was as the harpers that playe vpon their harpers. And they songe as it were a newe songe, before the seate, ⁊ before ſy foure beestes, and the elders, and no man coule learne ſy songe, but the hondred and xliij. M. which were redemed from the earth. These are they, which were not defyled with women, for they are virgyns. These folowe the lambe whither soeuer he goeth. <sup>i</sup>These were redemed from men, beyng the fyrst frutes vnto God and to the lambe, and in their mouthes was founde no gyle. sharpe syckle, and gather the clusters of ſ̄ earth, for hir grapes are ripe. And the angell thrust in his syckle on the erthe, and cut downe the grapes of the vynyarde of the earth, and cast them in to the greate wynefat of ſ̄ wrath of God: † the wynefat was trodden without the cite, and bloude came out of the fat, euen vnto the horsse brydles by the space of a thousande and sixe hundreth furlonges.

The xv. Chapter.

AND I sawe another signe in heuen grett A † mervellous, vii. angells hauinge the seven laste plagies, for in thē is fulfilled the wrath of god. And I sawe as it were a glassye see, mingled with fyre, and them that had gotten victory of the beest, and of his ymage, and of his marke, and of the nombre of his name, stonde on the glassye see, hauinge ſ̄ harpes of God: and they songe the songe of Moses the seruaunt of God, and the songe of the lambe, saynge: Greate and maruellous are thy workes LORDE God almyghty, iust and true are thy wayes, thou kynge of sayntes. § Who shal not feare the O LORDE and glorifye thy name? For thou only art holy, for all gētiles shall come and worshippe before the, for thy iudgmentes are made manifest.

And after that, I loked, and beholde, the temple of the Tabernacle of testimony was open in heauen, and the seven angelles came out of the temple, which had the seven plagies, clothed in pure and bryght lynnē, and hauynge their brestes gyrded with golden gerdelles. And one of the foure beestes gaue vnto the seven angelles seven golden vialles, full of the wrath of God which liueth for euermore. || And the temple was full of smoke for the glory off God, and for his power, and no man was able to entre in to the temple, tyll the seven plagies of the seuē angels were fulfilled.

The xvi. Chapter.

AND I herde a greate voyce out of the A temple, sayenge to the seven angels: go youre wayes, poure out youre vialles of wrath vpon the earth. vpō them that worshipped his ymage. And the seconde angel shed out his viall vpō the see, and it turned as it were in to the bloud of a deed man: and euery lyuinge thinge dyed in the see, And the thyrde angel shed out his vyall vpon the ryuers and fountaynes of waters, and they turned to bloude. And I herde an angel saye: LORDE which art and wast, thou art righteous and holy, because thou hast geuē soche iudgmentes, for they shed the bloude of sayntes, and prophetes, and therefore hast thou geuen them bloude to drynke: for they are worthy. And I herde another angell out of the aulter, saye: euen so LORDE God almighty, true and righteous are thy iudgmentes.

B And the fourth angell poured out his viall on the Sonne, and power was geuen vnto him to vexe men with heate of fyre. And the men raged in gret heate, and spake euell of the name of God, which had power ouer those plagues, and they repented not, to geue him glory. And the fyfte angell poured out his vyall vpon the seate of the beest, and his kyngdome waxed derke, and they gnawe their tonges for sorowe, and blasphemed the God of heauē for sorowe, and payne of their sores, and repented not of their dedes.

C And the sixte angell poured out his vyall vpon the gret ryuer Euphrates, and the water dried vp, that the waye of the kynges of the Easte shulde be prepared. And I sawe thre vncleane spretes like frogges come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out off the mouth off the beest, and out off the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spretes of deuels workynge myracles, to go out vnto the kynges of the earth and of the whole worlde, to gaddre them to the battayle of that gret daye of God almighty. * Beholde, I come as a thefe. Happy is he that watcheth and kepeth his garmentes, lest he be founde naked, and men se his filthynges. And he gaddered them toggeder in to a place, called in the hebrue tonge, Armagedon.

D And the seuenth angell poured out his viall in to the ayre. And there came a greate voyce out of heauen from the seate, sayenge: It is done. And there folowed voyces, thondrynges, and lightnynges, and there was a gret earthquake, such as was not sence mē were vpon the earth, so myghty an earthquake and so greate. And the greate cite was deuyded in to thre parties. And the cities of nacions fell. And greate Babilon came in remembraunce before God, to geue vnto hyr the cuppe of wyne of the fearcenes of his wrath. And euery yle fled awaye, and the mountaynes were not founde. And there fell a greate hayle, as it had bene talentes, out of heauē vpon the men, and the men blasphemed God, because of the plage of the hayle, for it was greate, and the plage of it sore.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND there cam one of the seuē angels, A which had the seven vialles, and talked with me, sayenge vnto me: Come, I wil shewe the the iudgment of the greate whore, that sytteth vpon many waters, with whom the kynges of the earth haue commytted whordome, and the inhabiters of the earth are dronken with the wyne of her fornicacion. And he caryed me awaye into the wildernes in fy sprete. And I sawe a woman syt vpon a rose colored beest, full of names of blasphemie, which had seuē heades & ten hornes. And fy woman was arrayed in purple and rose color, and decked with golde, precious stone, and pearles, and had a cupp of golde in her honde, full of abhominacions, and fylthines of her wordome. And in her forhed was a name wryttē, a mistery: greate Babilon the mother of whordome, and abominaciōs of the earth. And I sawe the wyfe dronkē with the bloude of sayntes, and with the bloud of the witnessnes of Iesu. And when I sawe her, I wondred with greate mervayle.

And the angell sayde vnto me: wherfore meruayllest thou? I wyl shewe the the mistery of the woman, and of the beest that beerith her, which hath seven heades, and ten hornes. The beest that thou seest, was, and is not, and shall ascende out of the bottomlesse pytt, and shal go in to perdition, and they that dwell on the earth shal wondre (whose names are not wrytten in the boke of life from the begynnyng of the worlde) when they beholde the beest that was, and is not. And here is a mynde, that hath wiszdome.

C The seven heades are seven mountanes, on which the woman sytteth: they are also seven kynges. Fyue are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come. When he commeth, he muste continue a space. And the beest that was, and is not, is euē the eyght, and is of the seuen, and shal go in to destruccion. * And þ̄ ten hornes which thou sawest, are ten kynges, which haue not yet receaued the kyngdome, but shal receaue power as kynges at one houre with þ̄ beest. These haue one mynde, and shal geue their power and strēgth vnto þ̄ beeste. These shal fyght with the lambe, and the lībe shal ouercome them: For he is † LORDE of all lordes, and kinge of all kynges: and they that are on his syde, are called, and chosen and faithfull.

And he saide vnto me: The † waters which thou sawest, where þ̄ whore sytteth, are people, and folke, and nacions, and tonges. And the ten hornes, which thou sawest vpon the beest, are they that shal hate the whore, and shal make her desolate, and naked, and shall eate hir fleshe, and burne her with fyre. For God hath put in their hertes, to fulfill his wyll, and to do with one consent, for to geue hir kyngdome vnto the beest, vntill the wordes of God be fulfilled. And the womā which thou sawest, is that greate cite, which raigeth ouer the kynges of the earth.

The xliij. Chapter.

AND after that I sawe another angel come downe frō heauē, hauinge greate power, and þ̄ earth was lyghtned with his brightnes. And he cryed mightely with a stronge voyce, sayenge: She is fallen, she is fallen, euen greate Babilon, and is become the habitacion of deuels, and þ̄ holde of all fowle sprete, and a cage of all vnclane and hatefull byrdes: for all naciōs haue dronken of the wyne of the wrath of her whordome. And the kynges of the earth haue committed fornicacion with her, and her marchauntes are wexed ryche of the abundaunce of her pleasures.

And I herde another voyce from heauen saye: Come away from her my people, that ye be not partakers of her synnes, lest ye receaue of her plages. For her synnes are gone vp to heauen, and the LORDE hath remembered her wyckednes. Rewarde her euen as she rewarded you, and geue her dubble acordinge to her workes. And poure in dubble to her in the same cuppe, which she fylled vnto you. And as moche as she glorified her selfe and lyued wantanly, so moche poure ye in for her of punyszhmēt, and sorowe, for she sayeth in her herte: ¶ I syt beynge a quene, and am no wyddowe, and shall se no sorowe. Therfore shal her plages come at one daye, death, and sorowe, and hunger, and she shalbe brēt with fyre: for stronge is the LORDE God which shal iudge her.

And the kynges of the earth shal bewepe her and wayle ouer her, which haue committed fornicacion and lyued wantanly with her, when they shal se the smoke of her burnynge, and shal stonde a farre of for feare of her punyszhment, sayenge: Alas, Alas, that greate cite Babylon, that mighty cite: For at one houre is thy iudgment come. And the marchauntes off the earth shall wepe and wayle in them selues, because no man will bye their ware eny more, the ware of golde, and syluer, and of precious stones, off pearle, & sylke, and purple, and skarlet, & all Thynen wod, and all manner vessels of yuery, and all manner vessels of most precious wod, and of brasse, and of yron, & synomom and odours, and oyntmentes, and frankynsence, and wyne, and oyle, and fyne floure, and wheate, and catell, and shepe, and horses, and charrettes, and bodies and soules of men.

And the apples that thy soule lusted after, are departed from the. And all thynges which were deyntie, and had in pryce, are departed from the, and thou shalt fynde them no more. The marchauntes of these thynges which were wexed ryche by her, shall stonde as farre of for feare of the punyszhment of her, wepyng and waylinge, and sayenge: alas alas, that greate cite, that was clothed in sylke, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with golde, and precious stone, and pearles: for at one houre so greate ryches is come to naught.

And euery shippe gouerner, and all they that occupie shippes, and shippmen which worke in the see, stode a farre of, and cryed, when they sawe the smoke of her burnynge, and sayde: what cite is like vnto this greate cite? And they cast dust on their heades, and cryed wepyng, and waylinge, and sayde: Alas, Alas the greate cite, wherin were made ryche all that had shippes in the see, by the reason of her wares: for at one houre is she made desolate.

The xix. Chapter.

AND after that, I herde the voyce of moch people in heauen, sayenge: Alleluia. Saluacion and glory and honour, and power be ascribed to the LORDE oure God, for true and righteous are his iudgmentes, because he hath iudged the greate whore (which did corrupt y earth with her fornicacion) and hath auenged the bloud of his seruantes of her hond. And agayne they sayde: Alleluia. * And smoke rose vp for euermore. And y xxiiij: elders, ⁊ the foure beestes fell downe, and worshipped God that sat on the seate, sayenge: Amen: Alleluia. And a voice came out of the seate, sayenge: prayse oure LORDE God all ye that are his seruantes, ⁊ ye that feare him both small and greate.

And I herde the voyce of moch people, euē as y voyce of many waters, ⁊ as y voyce of stronge thondrynges, sayenge: Alleluia, for God omnipotent raigneth. Let vs be glad and reioyce, and geue honour to him: for the mariage of the lābe is come, and his wife made her selfe ready. And to her was graunted, that she shulde be arayed with pure and goodly sylke. (As for the sylke, it is the rightwesnes of sayntes.) And he sayde vnto me: † Blessed are they which are called vnto the Lambes supper. And he sayde vnto me:

these are the true sayenges of God. And I fell at his fete, to worshippinge him. And he sayde vnto me: ‡ Se thou do it not. For I am thy fellowe seruant, and one of thy brethren, and of them that haue the testimony of Iesus. Worshippinge God. For the testimony of Iesus is y sprete of prophesie. And I sawe heauē open, ⁊ beholde, a whyte horse and he y sat vpon him, was called faithfull and true, ⁊ in rightwesnes dyd iudge and make battayle. His eyes y were as a flame of fyre, and on his heade were many crownes: ⁊ he had a name written, that noman knewe but him selfe. ¶ And he was clothed with a vesture dipt in bloude, and his name is called, y worde of God. And y warriers which were in heauen, folowed him vpon whyte horsse, clothed with whyte and pure sylke and ¶ out of his mouthe wente a sharppe swerde, that with it he shulde smyte the Heithen: ** And he shall rule them with a rodde of yron, and he trode the wynefatte of the fearcenesse and wrath of all-mighty God. And hath on his vesture and on his thyghe a name written: †† Kyng of all kinges, and LORDE of all lordes.

And I sawe an angell stonde in the Sonne, and he cryed with a lowde voyce, sayenge to all the fowles that flye by the myddes vnder the heauen: Come and gaddre youre selues togedder vnto the supper of the gret God, that ye maye eate the †† fleszhe of kynges, and of hye captaynes, and the fleszhe of mighty men, and the fleszhe of horsse, and of the that syt on them, and the fleszhe of all free men and bond men, both of small and greate. And I sawe the beeste and the kynges of y earth, and their warriers gaddred togedder, to make battayle agaynste him that sat vpon the horsse, and agaynst his souldiers.

And the beeste was taken, and with him that false prophet that wrought myracles before him, with which he disceaued them that receaued th. beestes marke, and them that worszhipped his ymage. §§ These both were cast in to a ponde of fyre burnyng with brynstone: and the remnaunte were slayne with the ¶ swerde of him that sat vpon the horsse, which swerde proceded out of his mouth, and all the foules were filled with their fleszhe.

The xi. Chapter.

AND I sawe an angell come downe from heauen, hauinge the keye of the bottomlesse pyt, and a gret chayne in his honde. *And he toke the dragon that olde serpent (which is the deuell and Satanas) and he bounde him a thousand yeares: and cast him in to the bottomlesse pyt, and he bounde him, and set a seale on him, that he shuld disceaue the people nomoare, tyll the thousand yeares were fulfilled. And after that muste he be loused for a littell season.

†And I sawe seates, and they sat vpon them, and the iudgement was geuen vnto them: and I sawe the soules of them that were beheaded for the witnes of Iesu, and for the worde of God: which had not worshipped the beest, nether his ymage, nether had taken his marke vpon their foreheades, or on their hondes: and they lyued, and raygned with Christ a thousand yeare: but the other of the deed men lyued not agayne, vntill the thousand yeare were fynished. This is that fyrst resurreccion. Blessed and holy is he that hath parte in the fyrst resurreccion. On soch hath the seconde deeth no power, but they shalbe the prestes of God and of Christ, and shall raygne with him a thousande yeare.

And when the thousand yeares are expyred, Sathan shalbe loused out of his preson, and shal go out to deceaue the people which are in the foure quarters of the earth. †Gog and Magog, to gadder them togedder to batayle, whose nombre is as the soude off the see: and they went vp on the playne of the earth, and compased the tentes of the sayntes aboute, and the beloued cite. And fyre cam doune from God out of heauen, and deuoured them: § and the deuell that disceaue them, was cast in to a lake of fyre and brymstone, where the beest and the false prophet were, and shalbe tormented daye and night for euermore.

And I sawe a gret whyte seate, and him that sat on it, from whose face fled awaye both the earth and heauen, and their place was nomore founde. ¶ And I sawe the deed, both gret and small stonde before God: And the bokes were opened, and another boke was opened, which is (the boke) of life, and the deed were iudged of tho thinges which were wrytten in the bokes accordinge to their dedes: and the see gaue vp her deed, which were in her, and deeth and hell delyuered vp the deed, which were in them: and they were iudged euery man accordynge to his dedes. And deth and hell were cast in to the lake of fyre. This is that second deeth. And whosoever was not founde wrytten in the boke off life, was cast in to the lake of fyre.

The xii. Chapter.

AND I sawe a newe heauen and a newe earth. For the fyrst heauen, and the fyrst earth were vanished awaye, and there was nomore See. And I Ihon sawe that holy cite newe Ierusalem come downe from God out of heauen, prepared as a bryde garnished for hyr huszband. And I herde a greате voyce from the seate, sayenge: beholde, the tabernacle of God ** is with men, and he wil dwell with them. And they shalbe his people, and God himselfe shalbe with the, and shalbe their God.† And God shal wipe awaye all teares from their eyes. And there shalbe nomore deeth, nether sorowe, nether shal there be eny more payne, for § olde thinges are gone. And he that sat vpon the seate, sayde: ‡ Beholde, I make all thinges newe. And he sayde vnto me: wryte for these wordes are faithfull and true.

And he sayde vnto me: it is done. § I am Alpha and Omega, the begynnynge, and the ende. I wil geue to him that is a thyrst of the well of the water of life fre. He that ouercommeth, shal inheret all thinges ¶ I wil be his God, and he shalbe my sonne. But the fearefull and vnbeleuynge, and the abhominable, and murthurers, and whormongers, and sorcerers, and ydolaters, and all lyars, shal haue their parte in the lake, that burneth with fyre and brymstone, which is the seconde death.

And there came vnto me one of the seven angels, which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagies: and talked with me, sayenge: come hydder, I wil shewe the the bryde, § lābes wyfe. And he caryed me awaye in § sprete to a greate and an hye mountayne, and he shewed me the greate cite, holy Ierusalē descendinge out of heauen from God, hauynge the brightnes of God. And her shynynge was lyke vnto a stone most precious, euen a Iaspar cleare as cristall: ⁊ had greate and hye walles, and had twolue gates, and at ƿ gates twolue angels: and names wrytten, which are the twolue trybes of Israel: on the est parte three gates, and on the north syde thre gates, and towarde the south thre gates, and from the west thre gates: and the wall of the cite had twolue foundaciōs, and in them the names of the lambes twolue Apostles.

C * And he that talked with me, had a golden rede to measure the cite with all, and the gates therof, and the wall therof. And the cite was bylt foure square, and the length was as large as the bredth of it, and he measured the cite with the rede twolue M. furlonges: and the length and the bredth, and ƿ heyth of it, were equal. And he measured the wall therof, an exliiij. cubittes, after ƿ measure of a man, which the angel had. And the buyldinge of the wall of it was of Iaspar. And the cite was of pure golde, like vnto cleare glasse: and ƿ foundaciōs of the walles and of ƿ cite were garnyszed with all maner of precious stones. The fyrst foundacion was a Iasper, the seconde a Saphyre, ƿ thyrde a Calcedony, the fourth a Smaragde: the fyft a Sardonix: the sixt a Sardes: the seuenth a Crysolite, the eyght berall: the nynt a Topas: the tenth a Crysoptasos: the eleuēth a Iacynete: the twelfte an Amatist.

D And the twolue gates were twolue pearles, and euery gate was of one pearle, and ƿ strete of the cite was pure golde, as a thorow-shynynge glasse. And I sawe no temple therin. For the LORDE God almighty and the lambe is the temple of it, and the cite hath no nede of the Sonne, nether of the mone to lighten it. For the bryghtnes of God doth light it: and the lambe is the lyght of it. And ƿ people which are saued, shal walke in the light of it: and the kynges of the earth shal brynge their glory vnto it. † And the gates of it shal not be shut by daye. For there shalbe no nyght there. And there shal entre in to it none vnclane thinge: nether what soeuer worketh abhominacion: or maketh lyes: but they which are wrytten in the lambes boke of life.

The xxiij. Chapter.

A ND he shewed me a pure ryuer of water A of life cleare as cristall: † proceedinge out of the seate of God and of ƿ lambe in the myddes of the strete of it, and of ether syde of the ryuer was there wod of life: which bare twolue māner of frutes: and gaue frute euery moneth: and the leaues of the wodd serued to heale the people with all.

And there shalbe no more curse, but the seate of God and ƿ lābe shalbe in it: and his seruantes shal serue him: And shal se his face, and his name shalbe in their for heades. ‡ And there shalbe no night there, and they nede no candle, nether light of the Sonne: for the LORDE God geueth thē light, and they shal reygne for euermore.

And he sayde vnto me: these sayenges are faithfull, and true. And the LORDE God of the holy prophetes sent his angell to shewe vnto his seruantes, the thinges which muste shortly be fulfilled. Beholde, I come shortly. § Happy is he ƿ kepeth ƿ sayēge of ƿ prophesy of this boke. I am Ihon, which sawe these thinges and herde them. And whē I had herde and sene thē, I fell downe to worshippe before the fete of the angell which shewed me these thinges. And he saide vnto me: ‖ se thou do it not, for I am thy felowe seruauant and the felowe seruaūt of thy brethern the prophetes, and of them, which kepe the sayenges of this boke. Worshippe God.

And he sayde vnto me: seale not the sayenges of the prophesy of this boke. For the tyme is at hōde. ¶ He that doeth euell, let him do euell styll: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy styll: and he that is righteous, let him be more righteous: and he that is holy, let him be more holy. And beholde, I come shortly, and my rewarde with me, to geue euery mā acordinge as his dedes shalbe.
